He looked down at the little girl, who still cried. Even in that glance he saw her mother's prettiness, her pink and white daintiness, and the yellow shine of her hair.

"Her mother, then,—quick!"

The boy pointed ahead.

"Up there—she told me to take care of Prudence, and when the Indians come out she made me run back here to look for him." He pointed to the still figure on the ground before them. And then, making a brave effort to keep back the tears:

"If I had a gun I'd shoot some Indians!—I'd shoot you, too—you killed him. When I grow up to be a man, I'll have a gun and come here—"

He had the child in his arms, and called to the boy:

"Come, fast now! Go as near as you can to where you left her."

They ran forward through the gray smoke, stepping over and around bodies as they went. When they reached the first of the women he would have stopped to search, but the boy lead him on, pointing. And then, half-way up the line, a little to the right of the road, at the edge of the cedars, his eye caught the glimpse of a great mass of yellow hair on the ground. She seemed to have been only wounded, for, as he looked, she was up on her knees striving to stand.

He ran faster, leaving the boy behind now, but while he was still far off, he saw an Indian, knife in hand, run to her and strike her down. Then before he had divined the intent, the savage had gathered the long hair into his left hand, made a swift circling of the knife with his right,—and the thing was done before his eyes. He screamed in terror as he ran, and now he was near enough to be heard. The Indian at his cry arose and for one long second shook, almost in his face as he came running up, the long, shining, yellow hair with the gory patch at the end. Before his staring eyes, the hair was twisting, writhing, and undulating,—like a golden flame licking the bronzed arm that held it. And then, as he reached the spot, the Indian, with a long yell of delight and a final flourish of his trophy, ran off to other prizes.

He stood a moment, breathless and faint, looking with fearful eyes down at the little, limp, still figure at his feet. One slender, bare arm was flung out as if she had grasped at the whole big earth in her last agony.

The spell of fear was broken by the boy, who came trotting up. He had given way to his tears now, and was crying loudly from fright. Joel made him take the little girl and sit under a cedar out of sight of the spot.

He was never able to recall the events of that day, or of the months following, in anything like their proper sequence. The effort to do so brought a pain shooting through his head. Up to the moment when the yellow hair had waved in his face, everything had kept a ghastly distinctness. He remembered each instant and each emotion. After that all was dark confusion, with only here and there a detached, inconsequent memory of appalling vividness.

He could remember that he had buried her on the other side of the hill where a gnarled cedar grew at the foot of a ledge of sandstone, using a spade that an Indian had brought him from a deserted camp. By her side he had found the scattered contents of the little bundle she had carried,—a small Bible, a locket, a worn gold bracelet, and a picture of herself as he had known her, a half-faded daguerreotype set in a gilt oval, in a square rubber case that shut with a snap. The little limp-backed Bible had lain flung open on the ground in the midst of the other trinkets. He remembered picking these things up and retying them in the blue silk handkerchief, and then he had twice driven away an Indian who, finding no other life, came up to kill the two children huddled at the foot of the cedar.

Some of the men had camped on the spot. Others had gone to Hamblin's ranch, near the Meadows, where the children were taken. He had sent the boy there with them, and he could recall distinctly the struggle he had with the little fellow; for the boy had wished not to be taken from the girl, and had fought valiantly with fists and feet and his sharp little teeth. The little girl with her mother's bundle he had taken to another ranch farther south in the Pine mountains. He told the woman the child was his own, and that she was to be kept until he came again.

He Defended Himself Easily, Feeling His Assailant's Strength Already Waning.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Host of Israel Goes Forth to Battle.

He went north in answer to the call for soldiers. He went gladly. It promised activity—and company.

The day he reached Salt Lake City, Joel Rae was made major of militia. The following day, he attended the meeting at the tabernacle. He needed, for reasons he did not fully explain to himself, to receive fresh assurance of Brigham's infallibility, of his touch with the Holy Ghost, of his goodness as well as his might; to be caught once more by the compelling magnetism of his presence, the flash of his eye, and the inciting tones of his voice. All this he found.

Joel Rae was again under the sway of his old warlike feelings. Brigham had revived his fainting faith. He went out into the noise and hurry of war preparations in a sort of intoxication. Underneath he never ceased to be conscious of the dreadful specter that would not be gone—that stood impassive and immovable as one of the mountains about him, waiting for him to come to it and face it and live his day of reckoning,—the day of his own judgment upon himself. But he drank thirstily of the martial draught and lived the time in a fever of tumultuous drunkenness to the awful truth.

Forces were sent into Echo canyon, the narrow defile between the mountains through which an army would have to pass. On the east side men were put to building stone ramparts as a protection for riflemen. On the west, where the side was sloping, they dug pits for the same purpose. They also built dams to throw large bodies of water along the west side of the canyon so that an army would be forced to the east side; and here at the top of the cliff, great quantities of boulders were placed so that a slight leverage would suffice to hail them down upon the army as it marched below.

When word came that the invaders had crossed the Utah line, Brigham sent forward a copy of his proclamation and a friendly note of warning to the officer in command. In this he directed that officer to retire from the Territory by the same route he had entered it; adding, however, "should you deem this impracticable and prefer to remain until spring in the vicinity of your present position at Black's fork or Green river, you can do so in peace and unmolested on condition that you deposit your arms and ammunition with Lewis Robinson, quartermaster general of the Territory, and leave as soon in the spring as the roads will permit you to march. And should you fall short of provisions they will be furnished you upon making the proper application." The officer who received this note had replied somewhat curtly that the forces he commanded were in Utah by order of the President of the United States and that their future movements would depend wholly upon orders issued by competent military authority. Thus the issue was forced.

In addition to the defense of Echo canyon, certain agressive moves were made. To Joel Rae was allotted command of one of these. His orders promised all he could wish of action. He read them and felt something like his old truculent enthusiasm.

> "You will proceed with all possible dispatch, without injuring your animals, to the Oregon road near the bend of Bear river, north by east of this place. When you approach the road, send scouts ahead to ascertain if the invading troops have passed that way. Should they have passed, take a concealed route and get ahead of them. On ascertaining the locality of the troops, proceed at once to annoy them in every possible way. Use every exertion to stampede their animals and set fire to their trains. Burn the whole country before them and on their flanks. Keep them from sleeping, by night surprises; blockade the road by felling trees, or destroying river fords where you can. Watch for opportunities to set fire to the grass on their windward, so as to envelop their trains if possible. Leave no grass before them that can be burned. Keep your men concealed as much as possible, and guard against surprise. God bless you and give you success.
>
> "YOUR BROTHER IN CHRIST."

Forty-four men were placed under his command to perform this work, and all of them were soon impressed, even to alarm, by the very evident reliance of their leader upon the God of Israel rather than upon any merely human wisdom of his own.

The first capture was not difficult. After an all-night ride they came up with a supply-train of 25 wagons drawn by oxen. The captain of this train was ordered to "go the other way" until he reached the states. He started; but as he retraced his steps as often as they moved away, they at length burned his train and left him.

And so the campaign went forward. As the winter came on colder, the scouts brought in moving tales of the enemy's discomfiture. Colonel Alexander of the Federal forces, deciding that the canyons could be defended by the Saints, planned to approach Salt Lake City over a roundabout route to the north. He started in heavy snow, cutting a road through the greasewood and sage brush. Often his men made but three miles a day, and his supply-train was so long that sometimes half of it would be camped for the night before the rear wagons had moved. As there was no cavalry in the force the hosts of Israel harassed them sorely on this march, on one day consecrating 800 head of their oxen and driving them to Salt Lake.

Albert Sidney Johnston, commanding the expedition, had also suffered greatly with his forces. The early snows deprived his stock of forage, and the unusual cold froze many oxen and mules.

Lieut. Col. Cooke of the Second Dragoons, with whom traveled the newly appointed governor, was another to suffer. At Fort Laramie so many of his animals had dropped out that numbers of his men were dismounted, and the ambulances used to carry grain. Night after night they huddled at the base of cliffs in the fearful eddies of the snow, and heard above the blast the piteous cries of their famished and freezing stock. Day after day they pushed against the keen blades of the wind, toiling through frozen clouds and stinging ice blasts. The last 35 miles to Fort Bridger had required 15 days, and at one camp on Black's fork, which they called the "camp of Death," 500 animals perished in a night.

Nor did the hardships of the troops end when they had all reached what was to be their winter quarters. Still a hundred and fifteen miles from the City of the Saints, they were poorly housed against the bitter cold, poorly fed, and insufficiently clothed, for the burning of the trains by the Lord's hosts had reduced all supplies.

Reports of this distress were duly carried to Brigham and published to the Saints. Their soldiers had made good their resolve to prevent the Federal army from passing the Wasatch mountains. Aggressive operations ceased for the winter, and the greater part of the militia returned to their homes. A small outpost of 50 men under the command of Major Joel Rae—who had earnestly requested this assignment—was left to guard the narrows of Echo canyon and to keep watch over the enemy during the winter. This officer was now persuaded that the Lord's hand was with them. For the enemy had been wasted away even by the elements from the time he had crossed the forbidden line.

In Salt Lake City that winter, the same opinion prevailed. They were henceforth to be the free and independent State of Deseret.

"Do you want to know," asked Brigham, in the tabernacle, "what is to be done with the enemy now on our borders? As soon as they start to come into our settlements, let sleep depart from their eyes until they sleep in death! Men shall be secreted along the route and shall waste them away in the name of the God of Battles. The United States will have to make peace with us. Never again shall we make peace with them."

CHAPTER XVIII.

How the Lion of the Lord Roared Soft.

But with the coming of spring some fever that had burned in the blood of the Saints from high to low was felt to be losing its heat. They had held the Gentile army at bay during the winter—with the winter's help. But spring was now melting the snows. Reports from Washington, moreover, indicated that a perverse generation in the states had declined to accept the decrees of Israel's God without further proofs of their authenticity.

With a view to determining this issue, Congress had voted more money for troops. Three thousand men were to march to the reinforcement of the army of Johnston on Black's fork; forty-five hundred wagons were to transport their supplies; and 50,000 oxen and 4,000 mules were to pull these wagons. War, in short, was to be waged upon this Israel hidden in the chamber of the mountains. To Major Rae, watching on the outposts of Zion from behind the icy ramparts of Echo canyon, the news was welcome, even enlivening. The more glory there would be in that ultimate triumph which the Lord was about to secure for them.

In Brigham and the other leaders, however, this report induced deep thought. And finally, on a day, they let it be known that there could no longer be any thought of actual war with the armies of the Gentile.

When he heard that the new governor, who had been in the snow with Johnston's army all winter, was to enter Salt Lake City and take his office—a Gentile officer to sit on the throne of Brigham—he felt that the Ark of the Covenant had been thrown down. "Let us not," he implored Brigham in a letter sent him from Echo canyon, "be again dragooned into servile obedience to any one less than the Christ of God!"

But Brigham's reply was an order to pass the new governor through Echo canyon. According to the terms of this order he was escorted through at night, in a manner to convince him that he was passing between the lines of a mighty and far-flung host. Fires were kindled along the heights and the small force attending him was cunningly distributed and duplicated, a few of its numbers going ahead from time to time, halting the rest of the party and demanding the countersign.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Beekeepers End Meeting.

Winona—The annual meeting of the Southeastern Minnesota and Western Wisconsin Beekeepers' association, adjourned after the election of the following officers:

President, W. K. Bates of Stockton; secretary, Ozro Holland, Winona; treasurer, Mrs. Fannie Berthe, Winona; executive board, Mrs. Fannie Berthe, L. A. Stickney, Minnesota City, and Philip Gardiner of Homer; vice presidents, John Turnbull, La Crescent; L. A. Stickney, Minnesota City; Fred Cech, Wilson; Joseph Reitz, Fountain City, Wis., and Philip Gardiner, Homer.

The attendance at the convention was the largest in the history of the association and the program of papers and discussions was the most helpful. The principal address was by William Russell of Minnehaha Falls, state bee inspector, who gave instructions as to how foul breed may be stamped out.

Road Funds Apportioned.

St. Paul—The state highway commission has effected the distribution of the state highway fund. The attorney general has decided that no appropriation can be made by the commission except for expenditure on state highways designated as such by county boards. Counties which have not complied with the law providing for designation of state roads in the apportionment received only the minimum, and this is held in trust for them until they shall designate a state highway. The number of counties failing to designate state highways is 35, which have received the minimum of $300 each. The other counties received amounts varying from $600 to the maximum of $1,600. In making the distribution, the areas of each county and the expense of road construction incident to development of new territory is given full weight.

Man is Badly Burned.

Rochester—Fire at midnight in the residence of D. T. Johnson, in Pleasant Grove township, nearly cost the lives of Mr. Johnson and his daughter, who first were warned of their peril by the bursting of the flames into their rooms. The girl escaped by jumping through a window, but the father, after he had reached the air, smashing through his bedroom window, remembered that there were some papers of importance in the house. Regardless of the risk he took, he plunged back into the dwelling. In was thought that he had perished in the flames, but finally he emerged with the papers, though he was terribly burned about the face, hands and feet. The hair was burned from his head and his finger nails dropped off when his hands were dressed.

Upset is Fatal.

Moorhead—A. H. Knudson is dead in the hospital here as a result of injuries received in an accident. Knudson and C. A. Nyborg were driving from Sabin to this city when their sleigh was overturned and both men were thrown out. Nyborg says that Knudson fell on top of him. But in falling Knudson must have struck his head against a piece of ice for he sustained a fracture of the skull. Nyborg managed to hang to the reins and stopped the horses, which had started to run away. He righted the sleigh and placing Knudson in it drove to this city. The injured man did not regain consciousness.

Burned by Phosphorus.

Little Falls—While conducting a series of experiments in the chemical laboratory at the high school, Miss Helen Potter, a student, was seriously burned about the right hand by phosphorus.

She was experimenting with a compound to which phosphorus had been added, and part of the chemical dropped upon the table and was ignited by the rays of the sun. Thinking to extinguish it she struck the burning phosphorus with her bare hand. Instead of being extinguished, the phosphorus, burning fiercely, stuck to her hand like glue and she was badly burned.

"Germany" Schacht Dead.

Minneapolis—Dr. Fred Schacht, a former star tackle on the Minnesota foot ball team, died at Seattle, Wash., of Bright's disease. Dr. Schacht was known all over the northwest as "Germany." His home was in Elizabeth, Minn., and he practiced at Fergus Falls for a short time after graduating.

Erect Big Flour Mill.

Minneapolis—One of the largest mills in the northwest is to be built here this spring by the Russell-Miller Milling company. The new mill will cost $400,000 and according to the officials of the company, will be the most modern structure of its kind in the United States. It will have a daily capacity of 2,500 barrels.

Workman in Wreck; One Dead.

Hibbing—A flat car on which thirty workmen were riding left the rails on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road. F. Snyder received injuries from which he died a short time after. Andrew Cass, Ole Hanson and Joseph Berg are injured so that they may die, while a dozen others received minor injuries.

Must Be Speared.

St. Paul—Pickerel killed with a spear may be sold in Minnesota at any time, whether in the closed season or not. This is the ruling made by Carlos Avery, executive agent of the game and fish commission, in reply to a question from a Minneapolis dealer. He says that all hook and line fishing is prohibited during the closed season, and that pickerel caught with hook and line may not be sold at this time. They would be illegally taken and therefore cannot be sold, but there is no law or ruling against spearing pickerel and selling them at any season.

Synod Elects Officers.

Minneapolis—At the final session of the Augustana synod at the Augustana church, officers and committees for the year were elected.

Prof. Frank Nelson, Lindsborg, Kan., was unanimously elected president of Minnesota college. Rev. L. P. Bergstrom, Winthrop, was selected as superintendent of Canadian missions.

The directors of Gustavus Adolphus college for the year will be Andrew Lundgren, Red Wing; C. J. Swanson, St. James; Dr. E. J. Werner, Rush City, and Rev. C. B. L. Boman.

The executive committee of the synod will consist of Rev. J. D. Nelsenius, Two Harbors; Dr. C. J. Petri, Minneapolis; G. Hultquist, Center City; John Peterson, St. Paul, and A. J. Brown.

The report of the orphan's home at Vasa, Minn., showed a surplus on hand of $5,000. A committee will report next year on the advisability of establishing another orphanage in the conference.

Giant Now a Soldier.

Minneapolis—Records were broken at the local army recruiting office when Fred Schrader of Hamburg, Minn., 6 feet 6 inches in height and weighing 230 pounds, applied for service in the army. The local recruiting officers fairly scrambled in their haste to procure so desirable a candidate, and almost before he knew it Schrader had become a soldier. Later in the day the giant was taken out to Fort Snelling in charge of Private James Smith, who stands just 5 feet 1 inch in his shoes.

Its Work Done.

St. Paul—The work of the capitol commission is practically finished and at a meeting held by the commission wound up affairs preparatory to turning over the building to the governor at the next meeting. The erection and maintenance of the building have been in the hands of the commission since 1893.

Boost for Belle Plaine.

Belle Plaine—The Minnesota Canning company has decided to make Belle Plaine headquarters. The country around Belle Plaine is adapted to the raising of all kinds of vegetables, and the company intends to can nearly all kinds instead of only corn as before. New machinery will soon be installed.

NEWS NOTES.

Stewartville—The first State Bank of this place, owned by J. P. Myers, has been sold to John M. Haven of Big Lake, Minn.

Chisholm—Frank Seddiesock was killed by a cave-in while working in a drift at the Chisholm mine. He is survived by his wife and several children.

Mankato—Five "blind pigs" have been put out of business at Delavan and one at Winnebago. The Winnebago man pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and costs.

Duluth—But for the timely arrival of neighbors two young children of Joseph Chareau would have been burned to death in a fire which destroyed their dwelling house.

Winona—Company C, Second regiment, has received equipment from the adjutant general which will enable it to take the field at any time. The supplies include overcoats, blouses, guns, bayonets, belts, etc.

Stewartville—The dwelling of Dan Johnson of Pleasant Grove village was burned. The loss was $1,500, with no insurance. The family barely escaped with their lives. Mr. Johnson was badly burned about the face and hands and is in a critical condition.

Mankato—The Catholic people of Walnut Grove are preparing to build a church and have prepared articles of incorporation. Archbishop Ireland has made a donation of $200, and the work of construction will be pushed as rapidly as possible, so that the building may be ready in a few months.

Faribault—Cora Sellers, aged sixteen, and Gertrude Emmiott, aged twelve years, both living in Northfield, were brought before Judge Buckham in this city, charged with stealing a gold watch from a lady's room in Northfield. They pleaded guilty and both were sentenced to the state training school at Red Wing.

Minneapolis—On a charge of destroying a government mail box, Valentine Jaskowiak, of Silver Lake, Minn., was brought before United States Commissioner Howard S. Abbott today. The arrest was made by Deputy Marshal W. W. Rich on the complaint of James Pesek, who alleged that Jaskowiak had torn down his mail box. Jaskowiak denied heatedly that he had committed the offense, and intimated that Pesek had other motives at the bottom of his complaint. The prisoner, who is a married man with a family of seven children, pleaded not guilty, and is held for the April term of the superior court under bonds of $100.

Minneapolis—Mrs. Sarah Schaefer, police matron, is caring for a baby boy who was picked up by Police Officer Malboef of the North Side station, as he was walking his beat. The identity of the little one is not known. The child was left in a basket at the patrol box at Sixth avenue north and Lyndale avenue.

Mankato—If it can be shown that peat of good quality exists in the extensive marshes near Swan and Timber lakes, twenty miles northwest of Mankato, a company is to be organized this spring to build a factory there, having a daily capacity of sixty to eighty tons.

St. Paul—State land sales will be held this spring in Marshall, Roseau and Kittson counties. The dates have not yet been definitely decided.

Faribault—George Ames, a brakeman on the Faribault-Zumbrota branch of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, was seriously injured while switching in this city.

Current School Fund

RECEIPTS

Credit balance Jan. 2, 1906	$ 837 25
State apportionment	14752 03
Interest penalties and costs	1424 22
Tax collections	663 03
Fines	80 00
Total	$ 17756 53

DISBURSEMENTS.

Apportionment to school districts	$ 16495 39
Credit balance Jan 2, 1907	1261 14
Total	$ 17756 53

Taxes and Penalties Account.

RECEIPTS.

Credit balance, Jan. 2, 1906	$10280 45
Current tax collections	114365 72
Delinquent tax collections	14024 12
Interest, penalties and costs on current taxes	1285 98
Total	$139956 27

DISBURSEMENTS.

Taxes and penalties distributed	$139264 97
Refunding orders	34 04
Balance undistributed	657 26
Total	$139956 27

Warrants Account.

RECEIPTS.

Warrants outstanding Jan. 2 1906	$ 784 70
Warrants issued in 1906	175007 81
Total	$175792 51

DISBURSEMENTS.

Warrants redeemed in 1906	$171701 35
Warrants outstanding December 31 1906	4091 16
Total	$175792 51

State Revenue and School Fund

RECEIPTS

Tax collections	7821 2[illegible]
[illegible]	130 50
[illegible] drawn	1 70
Total	$8053 [illegible]

DISBURSEMENTS

Debit balance, Jan 2, 1906	$ 1 81
Warrants issued	8046 34
Refunding orders	5 34
Total	$8053 49

Warrants Issued.

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
[illegible]	State of Minnesota	$ 92 51
[illegible]	"	2880 17
[illegible]	"	130 59
[illegible]	"	4024 08
[illegible]	"	1909 05
	Total	$8046 34

State Lands and Interest Fund.

RECEIPTS

Credit balance, Jan. 2, 1906	$ 362 16
Collections	7868 08
Total	$ 8230 24

DISBURSEMENTS

Warrants issued	$ 7875 42
Credit balance, Jan 2, 1907	354 82
Total	$ 8230 24

Warrants Issued

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
[illegible]	State of Minnesota	$ 7009 94
10121	"	473 49
[illegible]	"	391 99
	Total	$ 7875 42

Refunding Account.

RECEIPTS.

Amount charged back	$ 117 28
Balance warrants outstanding	12 85
Total	$ 130 13

DISBURSEMENTS.

Warrants issued	$ 119 98
Credit balance Jan 2 1907	10 15
Total	$ 130 13

Warrants Issued.

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
[illegible]	John Berry	$ 7 36
[illegible]	Henry Boise	8 40
[illegible]	W W Prichard	2 47
[illegible]	C H Wellcome	12 84
[illegible]	"	9 82
[illegible]	Mrs M Walters	1 40
[illegible]	F B F Lmbr Co	5 46
[illegible]	M L Bjork	19 96
[illegible]	Emery Dion	10 39
[illegible]	W W Prichard	9 93
[illegible]	Gunder H Hegland	11 53
[illegible]	Matt Skala	14 54
[illegible]	Dennis Cyr	5 80
	Total	$ 119 98

School Districts Fund

Warrants Issued.

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
[illegible]	Peter Thune	$ 21 94
[illegible]	Chas G Sall	162 62
[illegible]	Andrew Soderberg	24 85
[illegible]	Jacob Boutain	94 21
[illegible]	Ellef Gravlie	136 51
[illegible]	T A Crompe	1200 10
[illegible]	Chas Seeger	68 68
[illegible]	Ed Enright	55 41
[illegible]	Carl Gerlach	89 16
[illegible]	H Haupt	111 91
[illegible]	George Charest	250 65
[illegible]	R O Gorden	26 16
[illegible]	Fred Brunelle	51 56
[illegible]	L C Cadieux	180 25
[illegible]	Amelia Miller	89 19
[illegible]	Carl Gerlach	142 01
[illegible]	Marius Miller	91 09
[illegible]	Michael Kees	32 53
[illegible]	Emil E Zeh	596 09
[illegible]	Otto L Bakken	78 01
[illegible]	K K Sannes	118 20
[illegible]	John Powers	57 71
[illegible]	Andrew Soderberg	38 29
[illegible]	E M Hoff	1166 87
[illegible]	T A Crompe	982 08
[illegible]	J A Reinschmidt	111 97
[illegible]	A S Anderson	45 07
[illegible]	C F Elvidge	221 05

SCHOOL DISTRICTS FUND.

WARRANTS ISSUED—Continued

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
9127	Frank Hagl	65 68
9128	Henry Granum	166 03
9130	M Winberg	158 64
9131	Max Perras	142 42
9147	Eli Lasha	66 47
9149	M P Bakken	144 34
9151	Lars P Braadrud	162 24
9159	Jacob Boutain	112 43
9184	Max Perras	50 00
9185	B C Haga	108 13
9188	Chas G Sall	329 63
9190	A J Hemstad	141 89
9191	Emil Zeh	1656 00
9194	T A Crompe	1092 00
9195	Charles Perrault	160 68
9196	C F Elvidge	36 00
9197	John A Reinschmidt	24 00
9199	Ludvig Weiss	54 77
9211	August Nordlund	148 79
9212	Rasmus I Aaseby	105 92
9213	Swan Walhaug	157 58
9216	Michael Kees	58 00
9217	Ole F Helgeland	45 42
9224	Bengt Swenson	103 71
9225	August Soderberg	112 65
9226	C F Stenhammer	115 59
9267	Joseph Robideaux	76 57
9268	Narcisse Robideaux	328 37
9276	Joseph Laurent	191 11
9287	Geo Marchildon	70 71
9289	J F Mathews	170 42
9290	Martin Foldoe	109 80
9291	Joseph Pigeon	242 64
9295	Emery Dion	63 58
9296	Ole Larson	266 30
9298	Arthur Archambeault	91 51
9300	August Swenson	96 61
9302	Ferd Gother	137 26
9306	Amelia Miller	66 00
9307	Otto L Bakken	72 06
9309	K K Sannes	48 00
9312	Ole O Lee	111 92
9313	Regis Gagnon	214 68
9314	John Powers	34 00
9317	A E Anderson	58 66
9319	O M Peterson	144 12
9320	Anton Peterson	166 97
9321	Andrew Anderson	165 82
9322	Sam Person	104 65
9326	John Jacobson	82 39
9328	Raphael Trudeau	49 13
9336	A O Davidson	191 95
9337	Joseph Brohman	198 67
9349	Carl Gerlach	48 00
9355	Alfred Dahlstrom	85 45
9356	Chas Seeger	92 85
9357	Louis Falardeau	462 60
9360	Annie Carriere	24 27
9367	Alfred Brunelle	34 00
9370	Peter Thune	112 09
9373	Ellef Gravlie	155 59
9377	Andrew Soderberg	70 00
9457	John A Reinschmidt	60 00
9458	Fred Anderson	188 75
9484	Thomas Crompe	1000 00
9490	A Welo	123 05
9497	G Swenson	107 84
9498	Gust Bergren	35 57
9501	Ludwig Weiss	50 00
9508	Ole O Slettvold	58 38
9514	John Kelberg	71 91
9515	Joseph Martell	127 22
9519	Joseph Laurent	191 57
9522	B C Haga	102 00
9523	Martin Foldoe	138 31
9526	Emil E Zeh	5501 28
9527	Octave Beauchene	265 99
9532	Narcisse Robideaux	289 10
9533	Jacob Boutain	187 92
9536	Michael Kees	164 10
9537	John A Reinschmidt	128 73
9541	Aug Soderberg	171 01
9542	Fred Anderson	146 01
9543	Emery Dion	108 86
9544	Andrew Soderberg	103 21
9545	A Welo	151 60
9546	Eli Lasha	132 35
9548	C F Stenhammer	167 98
9549	Frank Hagl	169 78
9550	A E Anderson	105 80
9552	Max Perras	168 82
9554	Arthur Archambeault	157 20
9555	Amelia Miller	176 05
9556	Thomas Crompe	1509 53
9559	L C Cadieux	489 37
9561	Henry Granum	256 07
9562	Andrew Boden	164 83
9566	Geo Marchildon	89 10
9575	George Charest	231 18
9581	O M Peterson	118 28
9584	Chas G Sall	261 33
9588	Joseph Robideaux	119 02
9587	Ole Larson	142 91
9592	M Winberg	201 07
9595	State of Minnesota	803 02
9597	Regis Gagnon	194 29
9602	Louis Weiss	43 28
9603	Charles Perrault	101 20
9610	H Haupt	211 65
9611	R I Aaseby	135 47
9612	Otto L Bakken	128 28
9618	Lars P Braadrud	148 44
9622	August Swenson	184 63
9623	Joseph Brohmann	149 01
9626	John Power	91 52
9629	A J Hemstad	85 03
9632	Bengt Swenson	72 06
9637	Louis Falardeau	224 37
9644	Lionel Gauthier	316 93
9649	C F Elvidge	67 29
9672	K K Sannes	125 90
9721	A S Anderson	159 98
9727	Alfred Brunelle	92 86
9746	Swan Walhaug	128 46
9770	Ferd Gother	102 45
9773	L P Thyren	155 09
9775	Chas Seeger	122 24
9778	E M Hoff	1091 11
9786	Marius Miller	251 81
9787	J F Mathews	152 98
9788	A A Odegaard	268 89
9789	August Nordlund	137 01
9882	John Johnson	51 78
9906	John Jacobson	146 23
9908	Carl Gerlach	201 53
9910	Emil E Zeh	1000 00
9916	John S Hanson	285 64
9920	J F Mathews	28 00
9943	John A Reinschmidt	50 00
9945	G Swenson	146 36
9947	Ellef Gravlie	96 44
9953	P O Gorden	59 00
9957	Alfred Dahlstrom	110 70
9958	Joseph Pigeon	108 92
9959	James Jones	131 10
9960	Ole Overum	4 88
9970	Joseph Laurent	100 00
9988	Thomas A Crompe	1100 00
9989	Michael Kees	30 00
9996	Andrew T Nelson	69 16
9999	A J Hemstad	51 57
10000	J F Mathews	154 04
10001	A E Anderson	34 58
10002	Sam Person	160 36
10003	T A Crompe	1241 88
10004	Michael Kees	79 04
10005	Eli Lasha	57 17
10006	Raphael Trudeau	79 46
10009	Emil E Zeh	2357 58
10010	H J Hastvet	101 21
10011	Amelia Miller	106 57
10013	Anton Petterson	119 24
10014	B C Haga	24 70
10016	Arthur Archambeault	32 11
10017	Max Perras	74 10
10018	"	144 83
10020	Thomas A Crompe	1060 00
10021	John A Reinschmidt	106 63
10030	M P Bakken	242 30
10032	A S Anderson	134 63
10033	Joseph Pigeon	101 74
10037	Chas Perrault	181 68
10038	Regis Gagnon	132 81
10039	Jos Laurent	391 21
10040	Octave Beauchene	161 13
10051	Chas Seeger	121 76
10052	Andrew Soderberg	329 37
10054	Fred Anderson	265 16
10055	C F Stenhammer	192 87
10057	A E Anderson	30 55
10058	Arthur Archambeault	90 65
10060	Ole O Lee	218 63
10061	Alfred Dahlstrom	76 63
10062	Emery Dion	68 75
10064	L C Cadieux	601 31
10066	Rasmus Aaseby	37 40
10067	Gust Berggren	30 70
10068	P O Sorlom	29 64
10069	H J Hastvet	16 84
10071	Thor Skaar	79 04
10072	Otto L Bakken	132 42
10073	Joseph Brohman	111 40
10074	M Winberg	225 91
10075	R O Gorden	69 16
10076	Lars P Braadrud	112 74
10078	John Power	93 73
10079	Aug Soderberg	174 10
10080	T G Helle	71 03
10081	O H Langlie	76 57
10082	Edward Singer	124 11
10083	Henry Granum	229 57
10085	Narcisse Robidoux	321 73
10086	O M Pederson	54 31
10087	Ole O Slettevold	124 32
10089	Ellef Gravlie	125 10
10091	Ole S Hegland	54 34
10092	Knut O Krussen	178 95
10093	John Kellberg	57 01
10094	Ferd Gother	212 81
10095	K K Sannes	74 22
10098	Bengt Swenson	101 41
10110	T A Crompe	822 79
10112	August Swenson	119 73
10115	Alfred Brunelle	78 10
10117	George Marchildon	91 53
10118	Joseph Robidoux	75 11
10120	John Sorenson	161 75
10122	Ole Larson	81 34
10123	Nick Elstein	188 20
10128	Michael Kees	53 27
10129	Anne Carriere	24 70
10131	Ole Overum	76 57
10138	B C Haga	55 68
10142	Carl Gerlach	165 65
10143	Eli Lasha	18 61
10144	Amelia Miller	99 89
10145	John Johnson	50 35
10346	George Charist	194 95

SCHOOL DISTRICTS FUND.

WARRANTS ISSUED—Continued

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
10350	A J Hemstad	$ 42 39
10351	Louis Weiss	58 88
10354	Swan E Walhaug	101 46
10369	Chas G Sall	213 26
	Total	$ 60715 30

Town, City and Village Fund.

Warrants Issued.

No. of warrant	In whose favor drawn	Amount
8785	Merchant State Bank of Red Lake Falls	$ 90 00
8786	Merchant State Bank of Red Lake Falls	30 00
8791	Louis Falardeau	271 99
8806	Leonard Holmes	156 49
8880	Merchant State Bank of Red Lake Falls	150 00
8884	Joseph Marcotte	186 68
8887	Elias P Joringdal	74 58
8908	Aug Soderberg	193 29
8942	Albert Anderson	72 25
8943	R C Jefferson	60 00
8958	Wm Sharper	255 85
9044	L C Cadieux	351 33
9116	John G Hagen	146 59
9119	Leonard Holmes	1631 89
9192	Ovide Emard	2418 44
9214	Cyrille Lussier	246 55
9271	J W Wallin	2732 79
9272	O L Larson	180 08
9273	Nels O Nora	175 02
9274	R C Jefferson	60 00
9275	"	210 00
9280	Henry J Enderle	359 01
9282	John Linnertz	242 92
9283	Edward E Havik	319 16
9284	Aug Soderberg	66 42
9286	Wm Scharper	207 22
9291	Ed A Aubol	331 31
9301	August Swenson	215 49
9310	O G Skreland	263 13
9311	Elias Joringdal	103 78
9316	Albert Anderson	126 00
9318	A E Anderson	281 84
9344	Christ Larson	85 81
9348	H P Kolseth	121 64
9358	Louis Falardeau	430 78
9365	Chas P Quist	81 20
9368	Joseph Marcotte	380 11
9459	P E Smidesang	376 91
9540	Albert Anderson	344 82
9547	Cyrille Lussier	433 14
9551	A E Anderson	623 16
9557	Aug Soderberg	190 91
9558	Oscar G Skreland	432 19
9564	George Orr	747 06
9565	Ovide Emard	2158 72
9579	R C Jefferson	60 00
9580	"	90 00
9581	Leonard Holmes	830 48
9589	O L Larson	471 48
9596	J W Wallin	4564 87
9601	Wm Scharper	542 46
9620	Edward E Havik	424 65
9621	August Swenson	499 06
9631	Henry J Enderle	224 39
9636	Louis Falardeau	814 51
9638	"	250 00
9643	H R Kolseth	243 97
9662	Nils Nora	422 32
9721	Christ Larson	55 08
9726	John G Hagen	533 95
9769	John Linnertz	455 58
9774	E A Aubol	678 46
9776	L C Cadieux	787 38
9872	Joseph Marcotte	511 81
9987	P E Smidesang	398 47
10005	Cyrille Lussier	169 68
10041	J W Wallin	2660 32
10056	A E Anderson	150 55
10065	L C Cadieux	418 57
10070	Albert Anderson	148 25
10077	H R Kolseth	104 40
10088	Nels O Nora	193 46
10090	Edward E Havik	170 54
10097	O L Larson	88 86
10098	Leonard Holmes	111 21
10114	August Swenson	170 10
10126	Henry J Enderle	41 80
10327	John G Hagen	168 26
10330	Aug Soderberg	63 08
10332	Ovide Emard	1382 19
10348	Oscar G Skrelund	84 78
9122	George Orr	258 97
9624	Elias P Joringdal	419 70
	Total	$ 38480 96

Financial Condition of Red Lake County, December 31, 1906.

ASSETS.

Taxes of 1905 and prior years, county funds	$ 12366 36
Taxes for 1906 county funds	37311 88
Cash in treasury	9543 79
Total	$ 59252 03

LIABILITIES.

Warrants outstanding, county funds	$ 3231 03
Excess of assets over liabilities	56021 00
Total	$ 59252 03

ASSESSED VALUATION OF RED LAKE COUNTY FOR 1906.

Real estate	$2690462 00
Personal property	817032 00
Total	$3507494 00

INVENTORY OF COUNTY PROPERTY.

Lots 9, 10, 11 and 12, block 3 of Champagne & Dow's addition, and lots 13 and 14, blk 1, Longevin's subdivision of church block in Red Lake Falls	$ 9600 00
Furniture and Fixtures	4000 00
Total	$ 13600 00

BONDED DEBT OF RED LAKE COUNTY.

6 per cent Funding Bonds	$ 16000 00
4 per cent " "	20000 00
4½ per cent " "	14000 00
4 per cent Jail Bonds	3000 00
Polk County Bonds	9339 13
Total	$ 56339 13
DRAINAGE BONDS OF RED LAKE COUNTY	$ 107500 00

5,000 Rifles FREE TO BOYS

SEND NO MONEY

Just send us your name and address so that we may tell you how to get this fine rifle Absolutely FREE.

YOU CAN HAVE ONE

As we are going to give away 5,000 of them. We mean it, every word, and this is an honest, straightforward offer, made by an upright business firm who always do exactly as they agree. All we ask is that you do a few minutes work for us. It is so very easy that you will be surprised. This Handsome Rifle is not a toy air rifle, but is a genuine steel, blue barrel, hunting rifle, that is strong, accurate and safe and carries a 22 calibre long or short cartridge. If you want a fine little hunting rifle, just write and ask us for particulars. They are free and you will surely say it's the best offer you ever saw or heard of.

BE SURE and WRITE AT ONCE before the 5,000 rifles are all gone, as the boys are taking them fast. Address

Peoples Popular Monthly,
567 Arcade Building,
DES MOINES, IOWA.

RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS OF CITY, TOWN AND VILLAGE FUNDS.

CITY, TOWN AND VILLAGE	Credit balance Jan. 2, 1906	Receipts from all tax collections and licenses	TOTAL	Payments to Treasurers	Refunded	Debit balance January 2, 1906	Credit balance Jan. 2, 1907
Numedal	74 58	615 52	690 10	598 01			92 09
Norden		792 39	792 39	792 39
North	193 29	386 87	580 16	513 70			66 46
Bray	139 37	916 18	1055 55	1055 55
Sanders	97 84	824 72	922 56	741 23			181 33
Rocksbury	82 25	1445 90	1528 15	1009 77			518 38
Polk Center	145 65	849 71	995 36	775 38			219 98
Black River	72 25	619 07	691 32	691 32
River Falls	15 96	869 57	885 53	885 53
Wyandotte	200 67	532 36	733 03	470 01			263 02
Louisville	186 68	1230 72	1417 40	1078 60			338 80
Red Lake Falls twp.	174 50	999 14	1173 64	938 50			235 14
Gervais	513 84	1361 86	1875 70	1006 03			869 67
Emardville		848 80	848 80	848 80
Garnes	134 53	745 11	879 64	780 10			99 54
Equality		914 35	914 35	916 47		2 12
Lake Pleasant	313 01	1112 70	1425 71	1005 53			420 18
Torrubonne	33 58	1527 11	1560 69	1560 69
Poplar River		1349 19	1349 19	1351 07		1 88
Lambert	271 99	1916 60	2188 59	1767 20			421 39
St. Hilaire village	156 49	2581 58	2738 07	2738 07
Thief River Falls cty	478 16	10133 24	10611 40	9657 98			953 42
Red Lake Falls city	144 86	6443 20	6588 06	6477 24			110 82
Silverton		81 70	81 70	81 20			50
Smiley		165 28	165 28	140 89			24 39
Vil. of Plummer		625 20	625 20	625 20
Total	$3429 52	$39888 07	$43317 59	$38506 48		$4 00	$4815 11

RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS OF SCHOOL DISTRICT FUNDS

Number of District	Credit balance Jan. 1, 1906	Received from state apportionment and tax collections	TOTAL	Payments to Treasurers	Payment to State Treasurer on account of State School Fund	Debit balance Jan. 2 1907	Credit balance Jan. 2, 1907
1		380 15	380 15	380 15
2	46 85	342 31	389 16	285 80			103 36
3	55 82	237 26	293 08	155 09		8 01	129 98
4		206 93	206 93	206 93
5	63 68	140 67	204 35	164 83			39 52
6	24 57	301 06	325 63	286 21			39 42
7	10	241 09	241 19	244 44		3 25
8	21 82	336 81	358 63	285 64			72 99
9	250 95	550 69	801 64	701 08	8 75		91 81
10	193 02	804 22	997 24	997 24
11		417 80	417 80	413 44			4 36
12	10 47	441 23	451 70	327 34			124 36
13		344 77	344 77	348 93		4 16
14		270 70	270 70	270 70
15		10613 00	10613 00	10622 10		9 10
16		651 67	651 67	651 67
17	94 21	548 54	642 75	394 50	60 00		188 19
18		19887 24	19887 24	16122 07			3765 17
19		330 55	330 55	330 55
20	25 56	348 62	374 18	366 38	5 60		2 20
21	163 76	106 23	269 99				269 99
22	50	633 66	634 16	529 44			104 72
23		394 61	394 61	394 79		18
24	29 26	306 13	335 39	228 62			106 77
25		458 45	458 45	458 45
26		102 13	102 13	102 13
27	124 00	586 24	710 24	561 78	60 00		88 46
32	01	443 55	443 56	443 56
36	115 66	389 53	505 19	358 32			146 87
40		174 60	174 60	174 60
43		277 96	277 96	276 96			1 00
45		48 97	48 97	48 97
48		73 06	73 06	73 06
49		331 90	331 90	235 46			96 44
54	24 85	361 70	386 55	565 72		179 17
63	89 16	587 22	676 38	676 38
73		397 69	397 69	274 65			123 04
76	189 10	819 40	1008 50	686 97			321 53
79	68 16	1390 27	1458 43	1275 91	92 80		89 72
80		482 96	482 96	482 96
81		931 17	931 17	873 89			57 28
88	68 08	336 85	404 93	404 93
94		528 41	528 41	345 90			182 51
99		303 68	303 68	265 01			38 67
102	14 88	4081 50	4096 38	2265 66	40 00		1790 72
103		737 22	737 22	720 17			17 05
106		300 47	300 47	292 78			7 69
108	55 41	65 44	120 85	55 41			65 44
112	4 41	555 02	559 43	561 70		2 27
115	47 67	365 18	412 85	342 51			70 34
124		350 07	350 07	452 52		102 45
125	66 07	357 35	423 42	423 42
126		941 70	941 70	941 70
127	135 51	377 13	512 64	512 64
130		256 52	256 52	256 52
133		342 77	342 77	340 57			2 20
135		431 31	431 31	431 31
141	99 71	478 35	578 06	455 30	54 00		68 76
147	68 16	539 90	608 06	585 62	20 00		2 44
148	43 72	463 28	507 00	599 95	14 00	106 95
149	16 22	282 57	298 79	298 79
151	49 04	481 12	530 16	459 08	27 00		44 08
153	41 40	385 81	427 21	427 12			09
154	15 45	391 56	407 01	268 89			138 12
165	96 53	377 94	474 47	386 64	26 88		60 95
166	157 92	335 06	492 98	492 98
167	08	353 55	353 63	347 93			5 70
178		400 37	400 37	400 37
180		229 59	229 59	229 59
191		144 58	144 58	128 59			15 99
194	28 61	337 92	366 53	279 18	54 00		33 35
204		182 70	182 70	182 70
208		476 44	476 44	476 44
210	62 48	456 50	518 98	254 20	162 00		102 78
214		321 18	321 18	321 18
216		255 34	255 34	255 34
219	49 39	77 53	126 92	126 92
221	21 94	230 14	252 08	252 08
225	111 91	432 62	544 53	322 96			221 57
228	114 82	361 01	475 83	316 93	15 75		143 15
233		377 37	377 37	377 37
173	22 65	13 75	36 40				36 40
31		216 74	216 74	216 74
33		153 32	153 32	153 32
28		66 27	66 27	66 27
30		99 76	99 76	99 76
34		124 11	124 11	124 11
35		15 44	15 44				15 44
37		81 45	81 45	81 45
29		19 79	19 76				19 76
38		49 40	49 40				49 40
39		49 40	49 40				49 40
41		76 57	76 57	76 57
42		29 64	29 64	29 64
44		54 34	54 34				54 34
46		79 04	79 04	79 04
47		69 16	69 16	69 16
	$2983 57	$66593 94	$69577 51	$60140 74	$640 78	$407 53	$8203 52

The foregoing statement prepared by the County Auditor is approved by the Board, and respectfully submitted to the taxpayers of Red Lake County.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., this 26th day of February, A. D. 1907.

C. A. LINDQUIST,
ED. A. AUBOL,
DANIEL SHAW,
WM. C. L. DEMANN,
JOSEPH PIGEON,
Board of County Commissioners,
Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Attest:
JOHN B. O'BRIEN,
(Seal) County Auditor

Going for the Doctor

through the storm and darkness while the suffering one at home is in danger, perhaps of death, is a terrible trip. Why not have a good, sure family remedy in the house? One that has proven a life saver in thousands of cases during the last forty years.

Watkins' Vegetable Anodyne Liniment.

Think what a world of terror and anxiety was saved this man.

DISPENSES WITH DOCTORS.

Middle Grove, Illinois, June 4, 1905.
We have used Watkins' Vegetable Anodyne Liniment in severe cases of flatulent colic; have employed veterinary surgeons before, but rely entirely on Watkins' Liniment now, for family use as well as for stock.
WALTER DIKEMAN.

Watkins' Liniment is not only a great thing in cases of sudden injury through accident, but is always helpful in cases of Cold, Colic, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Indigestion, Cuts, Burns, etc. It is equally good for man or beast.

Made only by
The J. R. Watkins Medical Company
WINONA, MINN., U. S. A.

For sale by our traveling salesman whose name and address appear below. Drop him a line and he will look you up and give you a chance for a free trial of Watkins' Remedies.

J.R. Watkins

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water caves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open wall. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (Pescado cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

The Italian Baby.

No infant receives a warmer welcome to the world or is more happily born than the Italian baby. No infant is the object of more caresses or is more fondly admired. Indeed, no matter how poor the mother and father may be, no matter how large the family, they have very merry times when another son or daughter comes to them. The neighbors are invited in, a feast is prepared, a gallon or two of cheap wine is procured, and the merriment sometimes lasts several days. The Italian considers there are only three great events in the life of man—namely, his birth, marriage and death. These three events never pass without a gorgeous and elaborate celebration. In this simple way they strive to carry out the tender life lesson: "When you were born you wept while those around you smiled. So live that when you die you alone may smile and those around you weep." And so they laugh and drink wine and sing, for they believe it will have an effect upon the life of the quivering form soon to take its place among them.—London Standard.

Machinery of Memory.

The machinery of memory was thus interestingly described by an authority on the brain: "The act of remembering something," he said, "involves a distinct change in the brain substance. The thing to be remembered is recorded by a little nerve cell. The first time the cell does its work an impression is made upon it. But that impression is apt to wear off unless the action of the cell is repeated, and the oftener this is the case the more fixed becomes the impression, or 'cell memory,' as it is called. Suppose that the work of this particular cell is to enable you to recognize a certain smell. If the impression is made but once, the cell may fail to retain it, but if it is repeated several times a lasting impression will be made, and you will recognize the particular odor when you meet with it again."

Southern Wit.

In the early days of the civil war, says Mrs. D. G. Wright in "A Southern Girl In '61," many northern senators were especially violent in their denunciations of the seceding states, occasionally much to the amusement of their listeners.

On one occasion a western senator ended a speech by declaring that were certain threatened events to occur be would "leave this country and join some other nation. Even the Comanches he would prefer to this government in such a case."

Senator Wigfall of Texas rose in answer and stated in a tone of grave remonstrance that he trusted the senator would consider well before he took such a step, "for the Comanches had already suffered too much from contact with the whites."

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Of The Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
Feb. 26th, 1907.

Pursuant to call, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met at the office of the county auditor, at the court house, at ten o'clock a. m.

Commissioners present, C. A. Lindquist, Wm. C. L. Demann, Daniel Shaw, Ed. A. Aubol and Joseph Pigeon.

Minutes of meeting of January 8th were read and on motion duly carried.

The resolution paying the one thousand dollars mortgage on the court house property corrected to read that the warrants for the balance of mortgage be drawn on the county revenue fund.

On motion duly carried the minutes of the meeting of January 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1907, be accepted as corrected.

On motion duly carried the financial statement as prepared by the county auditor was approved.

The petition of Joseph Johnson and others for the organization of township 153, north of range 39, west in Red Lake county, Minnesota, was read and on motion carried unanimously the following order organizing said town was made,

State of Minnesota } ss.
County of Red Lake. }

Upon receiving a petition of a majority of the legal voters of congressional township number one hundred fifty three (153), north of range number thirty-nine (39) west, in said county, asking that the same be organized as a new town under the township organization law, to be named "Star," We, the county commissioners of said county, did on the 26th day of February, A. D., 1907, proceed to fix and determine the boundaries of such new town, and to name the same "Star," in accordance with said petition, and designated, as the place to hold the first town meeting, the home of Joseph Jensen on Section 20, in said town, to be held on the 16th day of March A. D. 1907. The boundaries of said town of "Star", as fixed and established by us, are as follows: All the [illegible] comprised in township number one hundred fifty three (153), north of range thirty-nine (39) west in [illegible] county of said.

[illegible] this 26th day of February, A. D. 1907.

C. A. Lindquist,
(Seal) Chairman, Board of County Commissioners, Red Lake county, Minn.
Attest: John B. O'Brien,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

On motion duly carried the board took a recess until one o'clock p. m.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at one o'clock, p. m. All members present.

On motion duly carried a day of hearing was set for the hearing of the petition of Fred Ptacek and Joseph Johnson for new districts in this county, the same to be held on May 27th, 1907, at 1 o'clock p. m.

On motion duly carried the petition of B. Henry Costello, and others for the formation of a new school district was rejected.

On motion duly carried the petition of H. B. Boackey was granted and the following order was made:

Whereas, A petition signed and duly acknowledged by a majority of the freeholders who are entitled to vote at school meetings in their respective districts, residing within the territory of the proposed new school district, asking for the formation of a new school district which shall embrace the territory hereinafter described was presented to the county board of this county at a session of said board held on the 10th day of January, A. D. 1907, for the action of said board thereon:

And, Whereas, It was then ordered by said board that a hearing should be had on said petition at a session of said board commencing on the 26th day of February, A. D. 1907, at the office of the county auditor at the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, in said county.

And, Whereas, Due notice of the time and place of such hearing has been given by posting a copy of said notice in [illegible] of the most public places in each of the school districts to be affected by said petition ten days prior to the day of such hearing, and by mailing to the clerk of each school district so affected thereby a [illegible] notice at least ten days before the time appointed for such hearing, and by the publication thereof [illegible] for two weeks in the [illegible] newspaper printed and published [illegible] Red Lake county, to-wit: The St. Hilaire Spectator, which said newspaper first mentioned is printed and published in said county and was duly designated by said County Board for the publishing of the same; and due proofs of the posting and service and publication of said notice of hearing having been made and filed by the affidavit of H. B. Brackey who posted said notice and by the certificate of the county auditor of said county who served said notice upon each of the clerks of said districts so affected thereby and by the affidavit of the publisher of said newspaper in which the same was published, respectively:

And, Whereas, at the session of said county board commencing on said 8th day of January, A. D., 1907, said petition was publicly read and considered and arguments of all persons interested therein for and against the organization of said proposed new district duly heard and considered.

It is hereby ordered and determined, that said petition be granted and the following described territory, to-wit:

The south half of sections 22, 23 and 24 and the whole of sections 25, 26, 27, 34, 35 and 36, township 151, range 42, be and the same is hereby organized and constituted a school district and shall be hereafter designated and known as Common School District No. 53 of the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota.

It is further ordered and determined, That the 16th day of March A. D., 1907, at two o'clock in the afternoon at the house of Charles P. Quist in said district be and the same is fixed as the time and place when and where the first meeting of the electors of said district who are qualified to vote at school meetings will be held to organize said district and that the County auditor cause ten days posted notice to be given of the time and place of such meeting as required by law. The county auditor will mail to the clerk of each of the districts affected by this order a true copy hereof.

By order of the board of Red Lake county, Minnesota.

Chas. A. Lindquist,
(Seal) Chairman of Board.
Attest: John B. O'Brien,
County Auditor of said Red Lake county, Minnesota.

Dated this 26th day of February, 1907.

The petition of Erick J. Lom asking to be set off with his land from school district No. 51 to school district No. 30 was presented to the board and on motion duly carried a day of hearing on same was set for May 27th, 1907, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The petition of Stephen Jacobson asking to be set off with his land from school district No. 51 to school district No. 30 was presented to the board and on motion duly carried a day of hearing on same was set for May 27th, 1907, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The petition of Ole J. Valsvik asking to be set off with his land from school district No. 51 to school district No. 30 was presented to the board and on motion duly carried a day of hearing on same was set for May 27th, 1907, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The petition of Anlin Torkelson asking to be set off with his land from school district No. 51 to school district No. 221 was presented to the board and on motion duly carried a day of hearing on same was set for May 27th, 1907, at 2 o'clock p. m.

On motion duly carried an auctioneer's license was granted to H. K. Homme.

Resolved, that the sum of $50.00 be and is hereby appropriated from the county road and bridge fund to aid township 153 north of range 39 west in repairing the road between sections 28 and 33 in said town.

On motion made by Commissioner Shaw and seconded by Commissioner Aubol the bond of E. G. Buse, as official abstracter was accepted.

Resolved that the sum of $200.00 be and is hereby appropriated from the county road and bridge fund to aid the town of Terrebonne in repairing a bridge across the Clearwater river at a place known as the Ohm and Kankel dam in the northwest quarter of Section 2 in said town.

Moved by Commissioner Shaw, seconded by Commissioner Aubol, that the bond of Ernest L. Quist as Register of Deeds be accepted: motion carried unanimously.

On motion a recess was taken until 7 o'clock p. m.

Meeting called to order by chairman at 7 o'clock p. m.

All members present.

Moved by Commissioner Demann, seconded by Commissioner Pigeon that the bill of L. A. Kaufer, appellant, vs James E. Ford as County Auditor of Red Lake County, Minnesota, respondent, amounting to $163.65 be allowed and ordered paid; motion carried.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Demann, who moved its adoption, and duly seconded by Commissioner Pigeon:

"Whereas it has been made to appear to this Board that judgment in the case of State of Minnesota Ex Rel William Erb, Relator, and Alex A. Sweaas and Charles M. Evenson, Intervenor, against Ole J. Johnson, P. A. Ekstrom, Wm. C. L. Demann, Louis E. Falardeau and Daniel Shaw, as County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, Respondents, was erroneously entered on the 18th day of May, A. D. 1906, in favor of the relator and intervenors and against the Respondents, as such Board of County Commissioners of said County:

Be It Resolved, By the Board of County Commissioners of said Red Lake county, Minnesota, that F. A. Grady and Charles E. Boughton, attorneys at law, are hereby retained and authorized by said Board of County Commissioners, to take any step or steps, proceedings or action in their judgment deemed best to have said judgment above mentioned, vacated, and set aside, and interpose an answer in said case."

Commissioners voting aye, are Wm. C. L. Demann, Joseph Pigeon and Charles A. Lindquist.

Commissioners nay, are Daniel Shaw and Ed. A. Aubol.

Resolved, that the sum of $350.00 be and is hereby appropriated from the county road and bridge fund to aid the City of Thief River Falls in repairing the road on the section line between sections 25 and 36 in the Town of North.

The application of Alex F. Lattimore and others for an appropriation from the county road and bridge fund was on motion duly carried, rejected.

On motion carried unanimously the applications of Joseph Lachance and Frank Brouillet for abatement of taxes for the year 1906 on certain lots in the City of Red Lake Falls, was granted subject to the approval of the State Auditor.

On motion duly carried the applications of Dan J. Doran, clerk Camp No. 3486 M. W. of A., and Mrs. Conrad Lajambe, for correction of assessment and abatement of taxes, the same were laid over for reconsideration at the next meeting of the board.

The applications of Octave Morisette, Carrie Pirath and S. L. Ely for correction of assessment and abatement of taxes were on motion duly carried, rejected.

On motion duly carried the following bills were allowed:

Miller-Davis Ptg Co., supplies for county offices	$11 25
Miller-Davis Ptg Co., supplies for county offices	15 25
E. L. Quist, postage for Register of Deeds	32 25
E. L. Quist, recording bonds of county officers and list of real estate property, transferred by Sheriff's sale	15 25
Robert A Lee, fees as deputy sheriff	8 00
Louis A Nelson, posting notices at Louisville bridge for bids on ice breakers	2 60
Louis A Nelson, one day drawing petit jurors	3 00
Lewis A Nelson, sheriff's fees in case of State vs. Charley Clause and mileage	5 53
Frank Hoveld, two men and team ½ day clearing away snow	3 00
Morisette and Sleff, livery for county surveyor	5 25
Swan Akonson, thirty cords of wood for county buildings	82 50
H R Hanson, witness fees and mileage State vs. Kemp	1 12
Mrs H R Hanson, witness fees and mileage State vs Kemp	1 12
C W Johnson, postage and express Clerk of Court's office	4 50
A D Reopelle, fourteen cords of wood for county buildings	38 50
Bethany Hospital, nursing Mrs Nels Crue, operation and medicine	12 00
John B O'Brien, postage and express, County Auditor's office	25 27
C W Johnson, misc. district court fees	6 20
O T Tandberg, postage in County Treasurer's office	10 60
Y M Higinbotham, fire ins. policy on court house property	13 75
George Jarman, deputy sheriff's fees	9 40
Thomas Germo, long distance telephone calls	5 50
Northwestern School Supply Co., two reams Exm paper	5 50
Bank of Red Lake Falls, int. and exchange on $1,000 mortgage against court house property	17 50
S A Swanson, drawing petit jurors one day and mileage	3 20
First State Bank of Red Lake Falls typewriter for Judge of Probate's office	40 00
G O Johnson, expense in the insanity of Mrs. G Aaknes	42 55
Dr J F Carmen, medical service and care of A Amundson	35 00
Tennis Lerone, board and care of A Amundson 3 days	16 00
E G Buse, int. on $642.00 mortgage against court house property, from Jan. 4 to Feb. 4, 07	3 75
Chas Hout, livery for road and bridge committee	3 50
Newbury & Bulman, livery hire for Co Surveyor on county ditch No 26	7 00
Pioneer Press Co., supplies for county offices	27 00
St. Hilaire Spectator, miscellaneous publication	319 35
Red Lake Falls Gazette, stationery for county offices	57 50
Red Lake Falls Gazette, stationery for county supt of schools	13 25
Red Lake Courier, stationery for county offices	9 75
John W Eastman, stationery for county offices	16 50
Free Press Ptg Co., stationery for county offices	24 75
Brown, Treacy & Sperry Co., stationery for county offices	11 25
Minneapolis Stamp and Pencil Co., rubber stamp for county offices	2 20
Ed Iverson, carrying general election returns, town of Clover Leaf	3 85
Henry Hanson, carrying general election returns, town of Silverton	3 00
William Luxemburger, taking care of James Nelson two days insane	4 00
Paul Schoenauer, taking care of James Nelson, and livery to Red Lake Falls	6 00
Wm C L Demann, taking care of James Nelson and livery to Red Lake Falls	1 00
Joseph Pigeon, mileage attending commissioners meeting	3 20
Ed A Aubol, mileage attending commissioners meeting	3 00
C A Lindquist, mileage attending commissioners meeting	4 00
Wm C L Demann, mileage attending comissioners meeting	1 49
Daniel Shaw, mileage attending commissioners meetings, Jan. 8th and Feb. 26th, 1907	8 00
Daniel Shaw, long distance telephone calls	75

On motion, duly carried the following bills were laid over:

James K Wood, engineers fees and expense on county ditch No 24 and 28	11 10
Harry Schockley, to serving citation on Anna Anderson for nonpayment of personal property tax	4 20
Orin Daniels, in the matter of the insanity of Clara Erickson for conveying her to state hospital for insane at Fergus Falls	39 75
Fred Zalser, service as viewer on co ditch No. 28	4 00
Red Lake Falls Electric Co. to lighting court house and jail Dec. 1906 and Jan. 1907	28 85
Daniel Linnihan, office rent for the years 1904 and 1905	180 00

On motion, duly carried, the following bills were rejected:

John Carlson, service on county ditch No. 25	27 22
Leonch Gauthier, service on county ditch No. 27	11 09
Red Lake Falls Gazette, publishing notices for teachers exams	4 35

On motion duly carried a recess was taken until 8 o'clock a. m., February 27, 1907.

February 27, 1907.

Meeting called to order by the chairman.

All members present.

On motion duly carried the county treasurer was allowed $150.00 or such part thereof as is necessary for clerk hire in said treasurer's office for the year 1907.

On motion duly carried, Commissioners Lindquist, Pigeon and Demann be a committee to examine and decide on the necessary protection for the Louisville bridge.

On motion duly carried the following bills were allowed:

Hunt and Kankel, supplies for court house	$9 98
Joseph Perrault, clerk of court fees	52 05

On motion, carried unanimously, the Board adjourned sine die.

(Seal) —C. A. Lindquist,
Attest: Chairman County Board.
—John B. O'Brien,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by L. A. Dautremont and Laura E. Dautremont, his wife, mortgagors, to Phil A. Kaufer, mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota on 12th day of September, 1903, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., in book 21, of mortgages on page 168, by the terms of which mortgage the following described premises were described in, mortgaged and conveyed to said mortgagee, to wit: Lots nine (9), ten (10), and the north ten (10) feet of lot eleven (11), in block seven (7) in Champagne and Dow's addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the corrected plat thereof, being in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 9th day of September in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note: by failure to pay the $1000 falling due on the 9th day of September, 1904 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the year 1905, and whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay said note or any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable:

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon to the date hereof the sum of one thousand one hundred eighteen dollars, ($1118.00.)

And Whereas, because of said defaults and each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the west front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls, in said county, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1907, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the attorney's fees of $25.00 and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Dated Feb. 26, 1907.

—Phil A. Kaufer,
Mortgagee.

Chas. E. Boughton,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls. f28-a4

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of seven hundred one and 98-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Rudolf Warberg and Katharina Warberg, his wife, mortgagors, to Ralph Rogers mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of April 1903, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, on the 18th day of April, A. D. 1903, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., in book 29 of mortgages, on page 29

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Ralph Rogers mortgagee, to G. B. Ward by written assignment dated the 15th day of October 1906, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 13th day of November 1906, at 1:00 o'clock P. M.; in book 32 of mortgages on page 391.

Which said mortgage, together with said debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said G. B. Ward, the assignee and holder thereof, to Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, a corporation, by written assignment dated the 13th day of November, 1906, and recorded on the 22nd day of November, 1906, at 3:10 o'clock P. M., in book 15 mortgages page 339, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

North east quarter of section numbered twenty-eight (28), in township numbered one hundred fifty (150), north of range forty-one (41), west of the 5th P. M. in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county and state, on the 23rd day of March, 1907, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of seven hundred one and 98-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty and no-100 dollars, attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated, February 6th, 1907.

Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls,
Assignee of Mortgagee.

F. A. Grady, Attorney for
Assignee of Mortgagee, f7-m21
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.

I want to make your spring suit. I want to show you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than you can get at your local tailors for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00.

My Spring goods have now arrived, and they are the most beautiful fabrics I ever saw.

Write me today for samples and tell me about the kind of clothes you are thinking of getting. By return mail I'll send you a bunch to select from, also self-measurement blanks.

Remember, I have the largest tailoring establishment in the world, that I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money; and I pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave Minneapolis, Minn.

SHIP YOUR GRAIN. We are the only firm in this city dealing exclusively with the farmer. All Millers know that our cars are of one grade and not elevator mixed, which explains why our service is more satisfactory than any other concern. Submit us samples for grades, etc.
COOPER COMMISSION CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Tell Your Friends About It.

You may have friends in the east, who would be gald to move to the west, if they knew what opportunities are here. Send us their names, we will be glad to send them a bulletin on Montana and North Dakota.

One Way Colonists Rates: Mch. 1 to April 30, 1907. To Chinook, Havre, Great Falls, Shelby, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Kalispell and Whitefish, Mont, $20.00. Good for stop-over west of Minot.

One Way Settlers' Rates:
To Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Manitoba, Western Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta.
Tickets on sale March 5, 12, 19 and 26, April 2, 9, 16 23 and 30, 1907.

MAY WE HELP YOU PLAN YOUR TRIP?
Two trains daily. Standards and Tourist Sleepers.
THE ORIENTAL LIMITED. THE FAST MAIL.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather. the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.
It's All The What
That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.
Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats
Fish and Game in Season.
Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.
TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY
Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City
W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MARCH 21, 1907 No 25

COURT SETS MONDAY

Red Lake County Court Mill Will Start On A Several Days Grind.

The March term of the District Court for Red Lake county will convene at the court house in this city Monday of next week, with the Hon. Judge Watts on the bench.

The calendar for this term is not a very extensive one, but there are enough cases on hand to be tried to keep the mill grinding for a week or more at least.

The grand jury will probably get together on that day, also, but what will be the result of their deliberations is not even hinted at. There is but one minor criminal case on the calendar, but perhaps some can be found if the jury is thus inclined.

There are no sensational or really important cases listed on the civil calendar, but there will be several jury cases, and the session will likely last a week or more.

Joachim Rose Dies.

Joachim Rose, an old and highly respected resident of this part of the county, died at his home east of town Tuesday, after a several weeks illness with paralysis. Mr. Rose was well advanced in years, but prior to the time he was stricken with his final illness had always enjoyed good health. He has been a resident of southern Red Lake county for a great many years, and has several grown sons and daughters residing in this neighborhood. The funeral was held from St. Joseph's church this morning, a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends following the remains to their final place of rest in the Catholic cemetery east of the city. A more extended obituary will be printed next week.

See Salley for your hard and soft coal. Large stock on hand and delivery made promptly.

THE ROSEAU EXTENSION.

Great Northern Announces There Will Be No Further Delays.

A report was received this week direct from a Great Northern official high in authority, says the Roseau Region, to the effect that the extension from Greenbush to Roseau and Warroad, the grade for which was practically completed last fall and, during the winter in the more swampy sections, will be rushed to completion at the earliest possible moment. The rails are available as are the ties, and the delays that have disappointed the people of Roseau and other towns along the poposed line are at an end.

The Great Northern proposes to have trains running on the extension early in the summer.

Old Mr. Draper Gone.

Thief River Press: Jeddah Draper died in his home in this city Monday morning, March 11th, at age of 84 years. The old gentleman had been confined to his bed for many months and death had been slowly but surely approaching its victim since he became bedridden. The funeral was conducted from the M. E. church Wednesday afternoon by Rev. Chas. Flesher.

The deceased is survived by his wife and two sons, one of whom, Hank, lives in this city. He was born in Connecticut in 1822, later moved to Pennsylvania, then to New York and afterward to Wisconsin. In the spring of 1884 he came to Red Lake Falls. Nine years ago the family moved to this city where they have since made their home.

KODOL digests what you eat and quickly overcomes Indigestion, which is a forerunner of Dyspepsia. It is made in strict conformity to the National Pure Food and Drugs Law and is sold on a guarantee relief plan. Sold by all druggists.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

JOHN S. HAMILTON.

Who will conduct the Revival Meetings at the Presbyterian Church.

REVIVALS NEXT WEEK

Rev. John S. Hamilton and Prof. Bursk Will Conduct Two Weeks Services In This City.

Rev. John S. Hamilton, an evangelist of note, and Prof. John R. Bursk, a singer and musician, will open a series of revival meetings at the Presbyterian church here on Tuesday evening of next week, the 26th inst.

The meetings will continue every evening for two weeks, and the public is invited out to hear these talented gentlemen.

Rev. Hamilton has just conducted a series of meetings at Blackduck and his work is spoken of in the highest terms by the press and people of that place. He is an eloquent, forceful talker, and his subjects are all well handled.

Mr. Bursk is an excellent singer and choir leader, and during the meetings here will have able assistance by the regular church choir.

The meetings will be well worth attending, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

A Happy Wedding.

Mapelton Enterprise: In the neighborhood of eighty-five relatives gathered at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Atcherson, of Medo, on Tuesday of this week, March 12, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Miss Clara, to Mr. Fremont Severson.

At precisely two o'clock p. m., Miss Olson played the wedding march while the bridal party proceeded to the parlor and there, in the presence of their many friends, they were united for life. Rev. Olson, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church of Medo, read the marriage ceremony which in accordance with the rites of the church is both beautiful and impressive.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white and carried a boquet of roses, and the groom was neatly attired in a suit of black. They were accompanied by Miss Cleo Atcherson as brides maid and Mr. Bertie Severson acting as best man. Miss Clara is the second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Atcherson of Medo, and is a young lady of culture and refinment. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lars Severson and is a very industrious young man who is honest and straghtforward in all his dealings.

Following the marriage service the company sat down to partake of a sumptuous wedding banquet. The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Severson will make their future home near Red Lake Falls, this state, where the groom owns a fine farm. In leaving the community where they have lived so long they carry to their new home the best wishes of a host of friends.

You should be very careful of your bowels when you have a cold. Nearly all other cough syrups are constipating, especially those containing opiates. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup moves the bowels—contains NO opiates. Conforms to National Pure Food and Drugs Law. Bears the endorsement of mothers everywhere. Children like its pleasant taste. Sold by all druggists.

HEARING ON DITCH NO.5

Much Argued Ditch Affair Will Be Heard At Erskine Saturday, March 23rd.

On Saturday of this week Judge Watts, Clerk of Court Lanctot and Surveyor Ralph will hold a hearing on proposed Judicial Ditch No. 5 at Erskine, when the matter of the oppposition to the construction of the waterway will be taken up and considered finally.

The first hearing in this ditch matter was held in March 1906, when the matter was heard at Erskine. The opposition to the waterway at that time hired a St. Paul attorney to fight their side of the case, and the result was that the matter was indefinately postponed.

It is stated now, however, that many who opposed the construction of the waterway at that time have become convinced that the ditch would be greatly beneficial to the people along the route, and at the hearing Saturday their opposition will be withdrawn. There are still some who oppose the plan, however, but it is thought that they will be largely in the minority at the hearing Saturday of this week.

Ditch No. 5 will start at a point in Polk county and run in a northerly and westerly direction emptying into Terrebonne ditch No. 1 in this county, the water finally being emptied into the Clearwater. The section of the country to be drained by this ditch is said to be badly in need of just such a waterway, and the majority of the people whose land it will touch are said now to favor its construction.

Wanted—30 cords of green poplar cord wood to be deliuered at the Red Lake Falls creamery. For further particulars inquire of G. F. Hennings, Secretary. tf

Best confectionery in the city at Freund's.

BERTHON & ARMSTRONG

Leading Men and Boys Clothing Outfitters

HERE'S NEWS

Spring Styles in All Their Brightness and Sprightliness

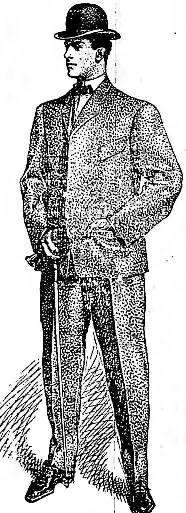
We announce the arrival of our complete new stock of Men's and Young Men's "READY-FOR-SERVICE" clothes which will be generally accepted as the Stytes for the Spring and Summer of the year 1907. All the Models are original creations and will not be seen or offered for sale elsewhere.

The Patterns are such as has made this shop, in former seasons, well known among THE BOYS WHO KNOW FINE CLOTHES.

NEW HABERDASHERY

The nobbiest and nifftiest ideas in Hats and Shoes Shirts, Neckwear, Fancy Waistcoats, Suspenders and Hosiery, just a little different than everybody else's---that's all---and from the homes of "Haberdashery of Class."

JIM & PAUL



Red Lake Falls Gazette.
[illegible] & Cregiow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT HOME TOLD IN CONDENSED FORM.

LATE FOREIGN DISPATCHES

Interesting Items of News Gathered from All Parts of the Globe and Outlined in the Briefest Manner Possible.

RESUME OF THAW TRIAL.

[illegible] Harry K. Thaw stripped off [illegible] Nesbit's clothes and flogged [illegible] before she was married to [illegible] she "would not tell lies [illegible] Stanford White," was argued by [illegible] Attorney Jerome in court. The [illegible] was telling, in the hearing of the jury, what he intended to prove by the testimony of Abraham Hummel, the disbarred and indicted lawyer, his arguments serving the same purpose as would the testimony, should Justice Fitzgerald overrule Mr. Delmas' objections and permit it to be given.

District Attorney Jerome scored on the defense in the Thaw trial by securing the admission of testimony by James Clinch Smith, brother-in-law of Stanford White, who said he talked with Thaw just before the killing and he seemed entirely sane. The attorneys made tentative plans for the closing stages of the trial.

District Attorney Jerome attempted to introduce testimony to disprove the story told by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, but was completely blocked by the objections of Attorney Delmas and the renewed ruling of Justice Fitzgerald that [illegible] Mrs. Thaw's story was admissible only as tending to show the effect it might have had in unbalancing the defendant's mind, and that its truth or falsity is not material.

The defense in the Thaw case having rested, the trial was adjourned to give Jerome a chance to arrange his testimony in rebuttal. Mrs. Evelyn Thaw was subpoenaed to bring into court letters from Stanford White. May Mackenzie and Howard Nesbit also will be called on to testify. It was reported that if Thaw is acquitted his family will seek to separate him and Mrs. Thaw.

Harry Thaw received a long communication from Delphin M. Delmas, his senior counsel, and Prosecuting Attorney Jerome and his experts framed a hypothetical question.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Death to a number of persons and great damage to property was done by floods in the vicinity of Pittsburg and all down the Ohio river valley.

Quartermaster Sergeant Osborn told the senate committee on Brownsville that cast off khaki uniforms and ammunition were left at Fort Brown by the Twenty-sixth infantry where citizens of Brownsville might easily have picked them up.

Conferences arranged by the business interests of Louisville seemed likely to bring the strike of street car employes to an early end. There were two rather serious outbreaks of violence.

The San Francisco board of education adopted resolutions agreed upon at the conference with President Roosevelt at Washington, rescinding its action in segregating Japanese pupils in the public schools. It is understood the board will abide by this action, provided the president retains his attitude regarding the limitation of Japanese immigration.

James Hahnel, known to the world as Brother Martin, the oldest member of the Xaverian Brotherhood in the United States, died at Louisville, Ky., of senility. He was born in Cologne, Germany, in 1824.

H. L. Kerrick, one of the wealthiest farmers of central Illinois, was found dead in bed at Bloomington, Ill. He had just been elected president of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois.

Emma Kubicek, a student at the Illinois state school for the blind at Jacksonville, died of pneumonia. She was known as a second Helen Keller and had been deaf, dumb and blind since birth.

Twenty-three cadets of the Missouri Military academy at Mexico, Mo., many of them members of prominent families, were expelled from the academy for hazing Cadet Czane, of Peoria, Ill.

James K. Burnham, head of a large wholesale dry goods firm at Kansas City, Mo., and formerly of Detroit, where he retained large financial interests, died, aged 64 years.

Believing herself abandoned by a man who had brought her to Chicago from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Miss Frances Ricollet, 24 years old, shot herself in the right temple and died.

Word reached Naples that an Italian had left the United States to kill King Victor Emmanuel.

The California supreme court denied the application made by the attorneys for Abraham Ruef for a writ of prohibition to prevent Judge Dunne from proceeding with the trial pending the disposition of the writ of error to the United States supreme court by Judge Hebbard.

The powder magazines on board the French battleship Iena blew up at Toulon and as a result Capt. Adigard, the commander of the battleship; Capt. Vertier, chief of staff of the Mediterranean squadron, and from 70 to 80 bluejackets were killed and Rear Admiral Manceron and hundreds of other men were injured.

Trinity college, a school for negroes, located at Athens, Ala., and owned by the Congregational Society of New York, was destroyed by fire.

Roll calls show that the probable number of deaths resulting from the explosion on the French battleship Iena at Toulon is 120.

Pat Egee, an insane farmer who lived near Hill City, Kan., shot and killed J. J. Plumb, a neighbor, and then forced another neighbor to hand him some poison, with which he committed suicide.

Mrs. S. N. Castle, an early missionary in the Hawaiian islands, died at Honolulu, aged 90 years.

Harry H. Blake, a well known English actor who had been leading man with Crane, Gillette and Nat Goodwin, died at Colorado Springs, Col., of tuberculosis.

J. S. Nixon, president of a wholesale grocery firm and one of the most prominent men in Augusta, Ga., was arrested on a charge of violating the bankruptcy laws by accepting more than the ten per cent. that was due him.

Engineer Kellogg and his fireman were killed in a wreck on the Chicago Great Western railroad at Dubuque.

Fifteen persons were crushed when a Southern Pacific freight engine crashed into a Maple avenue street car at a crossing near Ascot park in Los Angeles, Cal.

The supreme court at Columbus, O., affirmed the decision of the Lucus county circuit court. The law, which is sustained by this decision, gives local option to cities by petition instead of by election.

The government is investigating land entries in Idaho which, it is said, will disclose the greatest frauds ever perpetrated in this country.

Horace G. McDowell, president of the Farmers' bank of Canton, O., shot and killed himself.

Adolph Huntemann, who died in the general hospital, in Kansas City, Mo., leaving an estate valued at $400,000, has no heirs, as far as the public administrator can learn.

The big wall paper factory of Janeway & Carpenter at New Brunswick, N. J., was badly damaged by fire. Many of the women employed were overcome by fright and were carried from the building in a fainting condition.

Two thousand persons were made homeless by a fire that destroyed most of the town of Borseno, Italy.

John Arbuckle's "P. O." ranch of 55,000 acres and its stock, near Cheyenne, Wyo., were put on the market.

Secretary Taft has given orders to the engineer officers of the war department to enforce to the letter the language of the eight-hour law as applied to public works under their direction.

The Union Pacific railroad announced that work on the Athol Hill cut-off near Cheyenne, Wyo., would be discontinued because of adverse legislation towards that road ending in a cut of rates.

Seven nephews and nieces of the late Count John Creighton of Omaha are planning to contest his will.

The British tramp steamer Gownnburn went ashore off Blue Point on the south shore of Long Island.

Conditions in general in the Panama canal zone are declared to be extremely favorable for completion of the canal within the eight years ending January 1, 1915, as estimated by the engineers in charge of the work, in the opinion of the committees from commercial clubs in Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis, who arrived at Charleston, S. C., after a visit to the isthmus.

Three members of the board of public service of Columbus, O., two city employes, the president of the Cleveland-Trinidad Paving company and two of its employes, and the Columbus manager of the American Sewer Pipe company were indicted by the grand jury as the result of an investigation of charges of bribery in connection with the contract for paving East Broad street, the most fashionable residence street of the city.

Col. John Temple Graves, editor of the Georgian, was assaulted in the street at Atlanta, Ga., by J. H. Crutchfield, who recently was tried for attempted assassination of Mrs. Crutchfield.

Eight hundred boilermakers employed by the Chicago Shipbuilding company in the South Chicago plant voted to strike. The action will result in a complete tie-up of the plant, in which are employed nearly 1,500 workmen.

The wireless station at Point Loma, near San Diego, Cal., was in communication with Pensacola, Washington, and the battleship Connecticut at New York.

Two indictments against the school desk and furniture combine were returned by the federal grand jury sitting in Chicago.

The state militia was called to Manchester, Ia., to guard two men arrested for blowing up the bank at Masonville March 6, from mob violence.

At the request of President Roosevelt the California legislature decided not to pass any anti-Japanese measures at the present session.

Fred W. Baker, second cousin of Mrs. Eddy, and Dr. E. J. Foster-Eddy, her adopted son, have become parties plaintiff to the suit against Christian Science officials.

The new Ransford hotel at Brainerd, Minn., was burned, the loss being $260,000.

A continuation of disorders, the suspension of service at three o'clock in the afternoon after an intermittent and ineffectual service, and the first move towards intervention by the commercial interests of the city marked the third day of the street car strike in Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Russell Sage has set aside the sum of $10,000,000, to be known as the Sage foundation and to be devoted to the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States.

While insane, Irving T. Peckham, superintendent of the Glenark Knitting mills, of Woonsocket, shot and seriously injured his father, Samuel O. Peckham, at Auburn, R. I., and afterwards committed suicide.

A dispatch from Hongkong reports that the British China squadron has achieved a world's record in light quick-firing practice. The cruiser King Alfred made 20 hits in 38 rounds from three-pounders and 100 hits in 143 rounds from 12-pounders.

Election results in Maine were surprising, the Republicans regaining control of Bangor while the Democrats took Augusta and Belfast, as usual, and routed the citizens' party in Biddeford. Brewer went solidly Republican, no opposition being offered.

Knoxville, Tenn., by a majority of nearly 2,000 votes, decided that the saloons must go. Six months' time will be allowed them to close.

President Roosevelt stated that, so far from granting a pardon to former Senator Burton of Kansas, he would lengthen his term of imprisonment if he could.

Col. Henry G. Shaw, 65 years old, a former newspaper man, recently connected with the customs house in San Francisco, is dead. Col. Shaw was a veteran of the civil war.

William C. Salisbury, who was a pioneer judge in Ogle county, Illinois, died at Legrand, Ia. He was 97 years old. On his way west from Pennsylvania he passed a settlement of three log cabins, now the city of Chicago.

Chief of Police George G. Sheets, of Salt Lake City, Utah, charged with conspiracy to defraud tourists passing through Salt Lake City, was held by Judge Whittaker to answer to the criminal division of the district court.

The Iroquois hotel in the Michigan Soo was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $200,000. It was one of the finest hotels in northern Michigan, and did a large tourist business.

Capt. Von Behrens was fatally wounded in a duel near Berlin with a personage of high rank whose identity was concealed.

A huge icicle fell from the Niagara gorge cliffs onto a trolley car, killing the motorman.

M. Casimir-Perrier, ex-president of France, died suddenly of embolism of the heart at his residence in Paris.

Henry Kaatz shot and seriously wounded his friend, Martin Kunz, at Fairfax, Minn., and then killed himself.

Lawson Emerson, former clerk of the supreme court of Ohio, was indicted for embezzlement.

Gov. Deneen of Illinois designated Friday, April 26, as "Bird and Arbor day."

President James J. Hill told a Minnesota legislative committee that he would be glad to have the government take the Great Northern railroad off his hands.

Violence resulting in injuries more or less severe to nearly a dozen persons; the feeble and spasmodic operation of less than 100 cars for a few hours under inadequate and lukewarm police protection, and the development of an apparently general pro-union feeling on the part of the general public marked the second day of the strike of the union employes of the Louisville Railway company.

J. Pierpont Morgan conferred with President Roosevelt for an hour and a half on the railroad problems of the country. President Roosevelt agreed to the suggestion made by Mr. Morgan that he meet to discuss general railroad affairs as affected by the railway rate law with President McCrea of the Pennsylvania system, President Newman of the New York Central, President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, President Hughitt of the Chicago & Northwestern, and probably President Harriman of the "Harriman lines."

M. Petkoff, premier of Bulgaria, was assassinated by a discharged employe of the Agricultural bank at Sofia.

President Roosevelt will sign an order restoring to the public domain approximately 30,000,000 acres of land recently withdrawn as coal lands.

A man in Dresden killed five of his children, his wife and himself because food was scarce.

William F. Sands, secretary of the American legation at Panama, resenting a slur on Secretary Root, arranged to fight a duel with M. Rosenthal, a French resident.

The post office department will not draw the color line in the matter of white and negro mail clerks working together on the same runs, as the white clerks of the middle west had planned to ask.

Bert Curtis was arraigned in New York charged with having entered the Misses Lockwoods' school for girls at Scarsdale, N. Y., and stolen $6,000 worth of gems.

A bomb was exploded in Barcelona, Spain, injuring the man who was carrying it. Another bomb was discovered near the palace of Marquise Comilla, owner of the Spanish Transatlantic company.

The first all-steel fireproof mail car in service was put on the road by the Pennsylvania between New York and Washington.

Princes Edward and Albert, the eldest sons of the prince of Wales, will tour the world shortly in a battleship.

Three men were killed by the explosion of a locomotive boiler at Metuchen, N. J.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, March 11—The house held a short session Saturday, considered a few bills on general orders, advanced some to the calendar, then adjourned till Wednesday morning. This was because many members desired to be at their homes Tuesday when town elections take place throughout the state. The senate, however, will convene Monday evening.

The two committees on appropriations have decided that appropriations for state institutions, which will come close to $4,000,000, will have to be raised by an adjustment of the state tax levy. Because of the fact that the tax amendment which was apparently carried at the last election may be defeated by a recount being demanded at Duluth, the finance committees of both branches of the legislature are fearful of trusting to raising money to run the state institutions thru special bills which depend on the legality of the constitutional amendment. It is possible the half mill which State Auditor S. G. Iverson estimated would be all that was necessary for a rate, may be increased to one mill.

There is indication that the railroad bill hearings which have been going on for some weeks, may be drawn out a much longer time. Friday, the whole afternoon was taken up in the senate chamber with a hearing on the Cashman distance tariff bill. A number of delegations which desired to be heard, especially one from Duluth, didn't get a chance to "get in a word edgeways," so will be given a chance later, the committee agreeing not to take action on the bill till these people are heard. The great objection urged against the Cashman measure is the demand of an equality in the "rate per ton, per mile," and it is possible the measure may have this section cut out.

St. Paul, March 12—The senate was in session but twenty minutes tonight; just long enough for the introduction of half a dozen bills, the reporting of two or three committees, and for Senator George P. Wilson of Minneapolis, the most sedate member of the upper house, to crack a joke.

The most important action of the evening was the approval of a report of the committee on grain and warehouse, recommending for passage several bills for stricter regulation of of the grain trade, S. F. 137, fixing a uniform method of buying and selling grain and to prevent combinations to control prices; H. F. 125, relating to storage and shipment of grain; H. F. 115, providing against fraud in the issuance of receipts or certificates for grain, hay or straw weighed; H. F. 116, authorizing the railroad and warehouse commission to fix the time when local warehousemen shall keep their houses open for business.

Another bill aimed at the abolishment of the saloons in the vicinity of Fort Snelling made its appearance in S. F. 552, Thorpe, providing that the sale of rum shall not take place within one mile of a government reservation. Senator Hanson introduced S. F. 554 aimed at preventing one telephone company from freezing out another. It prohibits any unreasonable cut in telephone prices for this purpose. Violation is made punishable by a fine of $100 to $500. A bill aimed at compelling railroads to continually keep in use all tracks and sidetracks within this state, and prohibiting abandonment or tearing up of any trackage, was introduced in S. F. 553 by Clague.

Senate Wilson got in his joke when the house bill, backed by the superintendent of the Children's Aid society, and making it compulsory for mothers to nurse their children, was read. The bill was referred to the committee on health. "That a mistake", he told the chair. "The bill should go to the committee on drainage." And "Rome howled."

St. Paul, March 12—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern road, was a witness all this afternoon before the Sundberg committee of the state senate which is investigating the general subject of railroads. Mr. Hill talked very freely, giving out much information which he has oft before repeated. He was asked as to whether he would be willing to let the government operate his road.

"I'd be glad to sell it to them at what it represents as an investment, $60,000 a mile," he replied, "but I think before long the government would feel like the man who drew an elephant at a lottery; that he would have to get up another lottery to get rid of the thing."

Mr. Hill denied that Minnesota shippers are compelled to pay any of the heavy expenses of operating his road over the Rockies. "On the contrary," he said, "if it were not for the business our line gets outside of of Minnesota, shippers in this state would have to pay 30 to 40 per cent higher rates to keep the road going."

The senate today passed the house 2-cent railroad fare bill. The measure was amended, however, so as to be a duplicate of the Peterson senate bill. It will now have to go to the house for that body's approval of the amendments. It looks as though this approval would not be at once forthcoming, and that a conference committee of members of both bodies will have to meet to adjust the matter and perhaps draft a new bill. Procrastination is getting to be the great bane of this session on all important measures. The vote on the passage of the bill today in the senate was 43 for, and but 5 against it.

The senate today also passed the house bill calling for establishment of a farm machinery plant at the state prison. There were 10 votes against the bill. There is every probability that this bill will now become a law.

On motion of Senator D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids, the senate adopted a resolution for the appointment of two senators and three representatives for another legislative investigation. This one is to look into the advisibility of the establishment in Minnesota of the indeterminate sentence for the punishment of all crimes, criminals to be sentenced on the reformatory plan. Legislative investigation committees are now so numerous, that if they were all to convene at the same time during a session, there would be little left of either body for the transaction of regular business. So far none of the investigations has developed anything startling.

The committee to investigate the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce held a session today, but accomplished the usual "little." L. T. Jamme, secretary, was the witness. He told that the object of the chamber was for the better handling of various products for all parties interested in such transactions. The membership is now limited to 550. Forty one members are located at points outside of Minneapolis, and not all in the grain business. He said the reason the Farmers' Exchange was not admitted as a member, was that it had withdrawn an application it had filed for membership and never renewed it though invited to do so. He emphatically denied that the chamber is in any way a monopoly of the grain business, or fixes prices.

The house held no session today, but will convene tomorrow.

St. Paul, March 13—As predicted, the house today refused to concur in the senate amendments to the Spooner two-cent railroad fare bill, and the author of the house file, L. C. Spooner asked for a conference committee of five. Spooner, Thayer, Wells, Handlan, and Morse, were named. They will confer with a like number from the senate, yet to be appointed. The drafting of a new bill as a result of this conference is not unlikely.

R. J. Wells of Breckenridge, offered a bill in the house today for the taxation of public utilities on a gross earnings basis. Earnings of $500,000 are to pay 3½ per cent; up to $1,000,000, 4 per cent; in excess of $1,500,000, 5½ per cent. Street car, gas, water, all conduit and subway systems, come under this classification for taxation.

Senator Henry McColl of St. Paul, introduced an important measure in the upper house today. It provides for election of United States senators on the plan of the Oregon law; that they be nominated at a state primary, and later go on the general election ballots to be voted upon for election by the people.

The semi-centennial exposition bill was awakened from a long nap in the senate today by its author, J. M. Hackney, and several amendments attached. The most important was one adding the names of the original commission which reported on the advisibility of the exposition to the governor, to the board of managers for the show. These are Jos. T. Mannix of Minneapolis, who two years ago originated the semi-centennial celebration idea when a house member; F. B. Lynch, of St. Paul; M. B. Cullom of Duluth; Chas. C. Whitney of Marshall; and C. H. Kohler of Minneapolis.

Something of a surprise came in the senate today when the judiciary committee recommended for passage the bill calling for a constitutional amendment to allow woman suffrage on an equality with men. The bill will next come up in committee of the whole for debate.

Harrison White, a house member, has thought of another way the legislature can spend a bunch of money, and incorporated it in a bill. The measure provides for investment of $10,000 in a statue of "Peace" for the new capitol, to be copied after the Minnesota memorial in the Vicksburg military park.

James J. Hill was before the Sundberg committee of the senate again today. This is the committee which is stirring up the general subject of railroads. Mr. Hill told the committee that the time is near when western rates will all have to be raised by the railroads. He admitted his road had never missed a dividend period, but contended that if his road gave good service at existing low rates, the company is entitled to earn whatever profits it can.

Dies Under Load Of Hay

Hardwick—John Brown, sixty-two years old, a farmer living north of here, was instantly killed on Saturday by the overturning of a load of hay. Brown and a young man were hauling hay and as they crossed the railroad track there was a sudden lurch; Brown was thrown heavily to the ground and the load of hay tipped over upon him. His companion escaped uninjured and hastened to dig Brown from beneath the avalanche of hay. When he was taken out he was dead, his neck being broken.

Theft Victim Profits

St. Cloud—"This is in payment for the goods stolen," was the burden of a note wrapped about $75 in currency which was found at the Hillebrand grocery store when it was opened in the morning. Hillebrand does not know where the money came from nor who is the sender. About a week ago a thief broke into the grocery store and stole goods amounting to about $25. The matter at once was placed in the hands of the police, but they never succeeded in finding any clue to the robber.

HARKER ACTED IN HASTE.

Man Who Came to "Start Something" Was All Right.

Harker was in a fierce humor the other morning when the front door opened and in walked a stranger unannounced.

"I came," began the stranger, taking off his coat and rolling up his sleeves.

"What!" thundered Harker. "You didn't come in here to start anything, did you?"

"I did," replied the stranger, coolly, "I—"

But he got no further. With a savage whoop Harker grabbed the intruder around the waist and deposited him on the sidewalk. Two hours later his wife returned.

"William," said she, "was there anyone here during my absence?"

"Yes," snorted Harker, "there was some lunatic here who said he came to start something, but I just hundled him out on the sidewalk before he had time to make a move."

"William, you are the biggest goose in town!"

"In what way?"

"Why, the man came to start the clock that hasn't been running for a week. He is a clocksmith."

CASE OF BEFORE AND AFTER.

Or, What Happens to Voters Who Bother Congressmen.

"Certainly, old man," said the candidate, as he slapped the voter on the back, "you see that the boys send me to Washington and then come down and look for an office."

So in due time the candidate reached congress and the voter arrived with his card.

"I have come down to look for an office," announced the voter.

"Oh, you are looking for an office," exclaimed the congressman, as he glanced up from a mountain of documents. "Well, my dear man, what kind of an office are you looking for? The post office, the patent office, the weather office, the—"

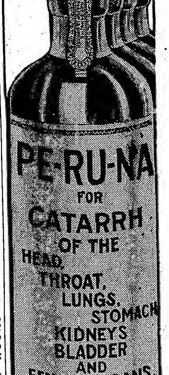
"No, I—"

"Oh, well, sir, if it is none of those offices I really haven't the time to direct you. In fact, sir, I would have you understand that I am no guide to Washington, anyway. Go out and ask a policeman."

And then the busy congressman closed the door and proceeded to forget the voter until election day.—Chicago Daily News.

Obituaries of Noted Men.

Interesting comparisons are supplied by a clipping bureau regarding the articles printed in the newspapers about the deaths of prominent men. No other man in America had so much printed about his death in the newspapers as McKinley. Carl Schurz has received thus far 12,000 obituary notices, more than any other man since McKinley. John Hay and Joseph Jefferson had 10,000 each and Mark Hanna 8,000.



W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, Martin, Ga., writes:

"My wife lost in weight from 130 to 68 pounds. We saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton, so we consulted an old physician. He told her to try Peruna.

"She gradually commenced improving and getting a little strength. She now weighs 106 pounds. She is gaining every day, and does her own housework and cooking."

READERS of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Shoots Friend, Then Himself.

Fairfax.—The plot of a desperate man to murder his friend and to kill himself was only partly carried out here, when Henry Kaatz, aged thirty-five, shot Martin Kunz, a barkeeper, aged forty, in the back of the head and then turned the weapon upon himself, inflicting a wound in his own head from which he died immediately.

The shooting occurred in Joseph Dickmeyer's saloon, in which Kunz had worked as a barkeeper for a dozen years. Kaatz went to Kunz's rooms and asked him to go to the saloon with him. Arriving at the saloon both took a drink, and Kunz leaned back in a chair while Kaatz sat upon a billiard table and carried on what appeared to be a mutually agreeable conversation.

Suddenly Kaatz strode from the table to a position close beside his friend, and taking a revolver from his pocket fired a bullet at close range into the back of Kunz's head. Kunz dropped like a log, and everybody in the saloon thought he was dying. Without a second's delay Kaatz raised the gun to his own forehead and blew out his brains.

Kunz was seen to be breathing and was taken to the office of a physician, where it was found he was merely stunned, the bullet having flattened against a bone just below the left ear. The bullet was removed and he is now recovering.

Kunz declares there was no provocation for the attempt upon his life and no motive for the suicide of Kaatz, unless it be that the latter had grown tired of his reckless and unsatisfactory way of living and had plotted his own death and that of his inseparable friend so that the two might be joined in death.

Fires at Brainerd.

Brainerd.—Brainerd was visited by two dangerous fires at the same time. Mrs. Thomas H. Beare, wife of the proprietor of the Rainsford hotel, dropped a candle in the closet of her apartments, setting fire to the clothing. The alarm was promptly given and the contents of six hand fire extinguishers was used without effect. The department succeeded in finally extinguishing the flames after a stubborn fight of over two hours. The [illegible] the east wing of the hotel [illegible] total loss and the rooms on the [illegible] floor practically ruined. The [illegible] floor was deluged with water, [illegible] the contents of the stores on [illegible] floor. There were no fatalities [illegible] though several firemen and volunteers were nearly overcome with [illegible]

While the fire was at its worst W. E. [illegible] agricultural machinery warehouse [illegible] discovered wrapped in [illegible] It was a total loss.

Will Inspect Wheat.

Minneapolis.—Word was received that the government would establish grain laboratories in Minneapolis, Duluth and St. Louis for grading wheat. This announcement is looked upon with favor by many of the grain men, who believe in federal inspection rather than state inspection. There are similar laboratories for inspection in New York and Baltimore, and the location of three in the West is believed to be a step in advance. The different systems of grading prevailing in different states often causes grain men much inconvenience and trouble, and under a general federal grading they believe much of this difficulty would be eliminated. Local firms now have their own laboratories, but the federal inspection will be on a much broader scale and the work will be in charge of government experts.

Bull Gores Aged Man.

Wadena.—J. G. Anderson, seventy years old, living at Compton, west of here, was seriously injured by a bull which he had gone into the barn to feed. While he was arranging hay for the animal, it suddenly attacked him, pinning him against the wall of the barn. The fact that the bull had been dehorned is all that saved Mr. Anderson's life. The bull's attention was distracted for a moment and the aged man managed to crawl partially outside the barn door. His legs remained inside, and these the bull stamped with his feet and probably would have fatally hurt the old man had his son not discovered his predicament and rescued him.

Ask John D. to Help.

St. Paul—Governor John A. Johnson has asked John D. Rockerfeller, the Standard Oil magnate, to aid in creating an endowment fund for Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter.

Directors of the college for some time have been endeavoring to raise a new building and endowment fund for $250,000. So far, the subscriptions have only reached $40,000, and they decided to appeal to the man of millions to help one of the leading educational institutions of the state. The directors asked Governor Johnson, who for the most of his life has lived at St. Peter, where the college is located, to write the letter, and the governor willingly consented.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—Robert Bellaire, a farmer living near Mankato, was robbed of $350 by a pickpocket on a Washington avenue south car in Minneapolis. The robber has not been found.

St. Paul.—The annual drill-down for privates and non-commissioned officers was held at the state farm school. A. P. O'Brien won the contest for privates and H. A. Fallingsted carried off the honors among the non-commissioned officers. Capt. Sigerfoos, commandant of the university battalion, awarded the medals to the winners.

Mankato.—The movement against dogs is spreading in Southern Minnesota. The Lanesboro and Brownton councils are the latest to order all dogs muzzled.

Lake Benton.—The creamery last year distributed $65,000 to its patrons for milk and cream.

Woodmen Elect Officers.

Minneapolis—William N. Brown of Minneapolis was elected head consul of jurisdiction D of the Woodmen of the World at the biennial election held by the convention at the Hotel Nicollet. Other officers were elected for two years as follows: Advisor lieutenant, William Watson, Detroit, Mich.; head banker, N. T. Hagen, Minneapolis; head clerk, Carl Skow, Racine, Wis.; head escort, S. R. Hayes, Beloit, Wis.; head watchman, H. C. Wellner, Superior, Wis.; head sentry, F. W. Denton, Winona; head managers (five), G. W. Stanley, Soo, Mich; H. E. White, Waukesha, Wis.; Jacob Quesnell, St. Paul; Thomas Quesnelly, Mendota; R. J. Lynch, Wyandotte, Mich. Delegates to the sovereign grand camp convention at Norfolk, Va., in May, Ed. Campbell, Port Huron, Mich.; William L. Howes, Tomah, Wis. Delegate-at-large, H. Widrig, Mount Clemens, Mich. A class of 500 candidates was initiated at the Masonic Temple. The degree team of the St. Paul Woodmen exemplified the ritual. The initiation marked the close of the two days convention.

Upholds the Law.

Duluth—Although two United States judges, McCall of Tennessee and Evans of Kentucky, have declared the federal employers' liability bill unconstitutional, Judge Page Morris, in a decision here, upholds it.

The decision was handed down in the suit of John Kelley against the Great Northern railroad, seeking to recover damages for injuries sustained through the alleged negligence of a fellow employee, this being made a cause for liability of the employer under the federal statute. The railroad company filed a demurrer in which the constitutionality of the law was attacked.

In his decision Judge Morris maintains that the law is constitutional as a matter of common justice. An appeal will be taken.

Prisoner Takes Own Life.

Duluth.—Despondent over the death of his mother, whom he shot in a drunken frenzy on their homestead near Tivoli, this county, Feb. 3, Daniel Aho, a Finnish boy, aged about twenty-one years, hanged himself in his cell in the county jail. When the body was discovered, stiff and cold, the indications were that the prisoner committed suicide shortly after midnight. Aho used his suspenders for a rope. His body reclined as if he had thrown himself in the bunk to sleep. One end of the braces, which was made of strong web, was tied to the iron bars attached to the bunk and the other end was knotted together about the boy's neck. The noose was drawn so tightly that it made a deep mark in the throat.

Girl Wins First Prize.

Minneapolis.—Miss Vivian Colgrove won first place in the Pillsbury oratorical contest at the university chapel with her oration entitled "The Press and the Public Conscience." The second prize of $50 was awarded to Louis Schwartz, and Algernon Colburn took the third prize, $25. To the winner of first place goes not only the $100 prize, but also the honor of representing Minnesota in the intercollegiate contest of the Northern Oratorical league.

This is the first time in the history of the university that a girl has won first honors. Two years ago was the first time a girl entered the contest, Miss Fanny Fligelman at that time winning second place.

Carleton Orator Wears the Laurel.

Northfield.—The annual contest of the Intercollegiate Oratorical Association of Minnesota was held at Northfield, Carleton college being the scene.

First place was won by Carleton, her representative being Myron J. Haig, of Devils Lake, N. D. Second place was awarded to Howard Robinson, of Redwood Falls, representing Hamline university, and third to C. J. Olson, of Minneapolis, representing Gustavus Adolphus college.

Kills Self in Sleigh.

Thief River Falls—While driving in from Kratka to Thief River Falls, Lars Brandon was shot and killed by the discharge of his gun. A neighbor, with several companions riding with him, was driving less than 300 feet in advance of Brandon's sleigh at the time of the occurrence. Circumstances cause suspicion of suicide.

NEWS NOTES.

Deer River—While playing about a well, the curb of which was coated with ice, the oldest son of Paul Wall of Marcel, slipped and fell headforemost into the well. The hole through the ice being too small to permit him to turn, the boy drowned before help could reach him.

St. Paul—According to a report issued by Dr. H. M. Bracken of the state board of health, there were 300 cases of smallpox reported in the state from the week ending Feb. 4, including the week ending March 11. This is no unusual number of cases, in fact the number of cases of this disease has been gradually decreasing since 1902 and 1903.

Elmore.—While seated at a sewing machine, Mrs. William H. Leaks was stricken with apoplexy and fell to the floor. Five minutes later she was dead. Her daughter, aged ten years, was alone with her at the time.

Morton—The oratorical silver medal contest in this village was won by Miss Florence Penhall. She will contest with speakers of other towns for the gold medal to be given at the W. C. T. U. county convention to be held in Morton in June.

Minneapolis—W. C. Burns, a switchman for the Milwaukee road, fell or was pushed down stairs in Ernest Krause's saloon, 921 Cedar avenue, and died instantly.

Mankato—A young woman at Lakefield was operated upon for appendicitis and a small feather that she accidentally swallowed two years ago was found in her appendix.

THE INVESTMENT OF SURPLUS FUNDS DEMANDS MUCH CARE

Business Women Should Secure a Competent Legal Adviser Before Loaning Money with Mortgage Security—To Insure the Validity of a Deed.

BY KATHERINE LOUISE SMITH.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Closely pertaining to banks and kindred business is the investment of surplus funds. Often a woman has money that she feels ought to be safely placed where it will bring a good rate of interest. Possibly she has had some bitter experiences in losing money, but she feels it ought not to remain idle. If she puts it in a savings bank she will get only a small rate of interest. If it is in a national or state bank she will get none at all unless she buys a certificate of deposit. Many times it seems as if all around there were chances to make money, but she does not know how trustworthy these investments are. "Look before you leap," is a safe motto in this case, for it is better to get no interest or a very small per cent. than to run the risk of losing one's principal.

It goes without saying that the fundamental principle regarding the management of property is to abstain from the various forms of speculation and to deal entirely with established forms of investment. This is essentially so in the case of women. A man can often retrieve his fortune if he has lost it in some wildcat scheme, but women seldom make more than a living at the best, and, often, if money is inherited, are utterly unable to replace it. Concerning any investment two considerations are necessary. The first and important one is safety. The second is the amount of interest paid for the money.

Broadly speaking, investments can be divided into two classes, those including real estate and bonds and those in which money is advanced upon the promise that it will be returned with interest. In this case security is given. In regard to the first class of investment, the general rule is that United States bonds are safe securities. These are closely followed by bonds of states, counties, towns and villages. In this last case, the past and present financial history of the state and country is to be taken into account, and the character of the people residing therein. United States bonds draw a small per cent. The per cent. on state and other bonds varies. Bonds which draw small interest can be classed with savings banks as a safe and good place to let money lie until an equally reliable investment presents itself at a high rate of interest.

In loaning money the rate of interest is agreed upon by the lender and borrower of the money. Every state has a certain fixed rate and interest above that is liable to be called usury, but in some states there is a certain rate allowed by contract. Montana is the only state at present where the legal rate of interest is ten per cent. The average rate is six and seven per cent. The following simple table of interest calculation often helps in computing interest on a loan.

Rule.—Multiply the principle by as many one-hundredths as there are days, and divide as follows:

Per cent.....	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	12
Divide by.....	90	72	60	52	45	40	36	30

For example, interest on $100 for 50 days at six per cent. will be 100x50, or 500. Dividing this by 60 equals 83; in other words, 83 and a fraction cents.

* * *

When a woman desires to loan money with mortgage security, a safe rule to follow is never to loan over one-third to one-half of the value of the property. Personal inspection of the premises is desirable and precaution should be taken to find out if the title is clear. Some women are capable of investigating the records, but the majority will do well to apply to a lawyer or corporation whose business is to examine real estate and abstracts. Many of these companies guarantee that if the title shall prove defective they will make good the loss. All deeds and mortgages should be placed on record in the office established by law, for delay may cause complications.

A mortgage should be acknowledged before a proper officer, should contain a redemption clause and should be signed and sealed. Every correct mortgage describes the proper minutely, tells where it is located and the time when the debt becomes due. If the amount borrowed is not paid the mortgagee at the time specified for payment, or if the interest has not been paid when due, the property can be foreclosed; that is, it can be sold to satisfy the debt, after a certain time allowed for redemption. If the property brings more money than is required to satisfy the debt, unpaid interest and cost of foreclosure, the surplus must be paid to the owner of the property mortgaged.

If the question of investment with no immediate gain is under consideration, real estate may be a good means of safe-guarding money. Before putting money in land, the woman must consider that the value of land fluctuates, that she must meet the yearly taxes and that it may be some time before she can get back the original cost with a fair rate of interest. The same precautions must be employed regarding the title as in lending money on real estate mortgages. No one wants a defective title and the only way to ascertain is to take nothing for granted and to have the papers investigated by a competent person. Many people live for years in one house and never suspect until they try to sell it that the title is defective. To be absolutely sure is the only safe way.

In buying real estate, the instrument by which the property is conveyed from one person to another is called a deed. Certain requisites are necessary to insure its validity, and these should be understood by all parties to the contract. They are that the person should be of proper age and sufficient understanding; that there should be a satisfactory consideration; a thorough knowledge of the contents and proper attestation and delivery. Careful attention to these rules will prevent law suits and this, as well as every other legal paper should be carefully drawn up.

Real estate may be of two kinds, improved and unimproved. As a rule, it is better to invest in improved real estate, because the rental of the building will pay taxes and interest on the money invested if the purchase is carefully made. In investing in improved real estate it is advisable to find out the condition of repair of the building and the amount for which it will rent. Fire insurance should be carried upon the buildings, so that in case of fire the loss will not be complete. This insurance can be obtained for a few dollars a thousand and runs ordinarily from three to five years. Care should be taken that the insurance policy is not allowed to lapse and the premium should be paid promptly.

Farm lands sometimes prove a good investment, but it is difficult for a woman to run a farm personally, although a few have made a success at this work. When a farm is rented the tenant is prone to let the buildings run down and not to cultivate the land properly so that it becomes impoverished. A real estate agent will ordinarily look after repairs of rented houses and collect the rent for a charge of about five per cent. of the amount collected. In selling property a real estate agent will demand a comsion for the sale, which, of course, diminishes the amount received.

THE SEASON'S COLOR SCHEMES.

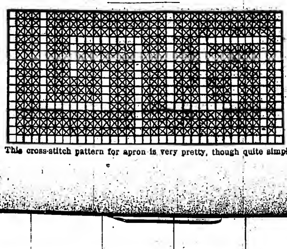
Combinations Are Beautiful When Artistically Blended.

Without doubt the most successful color schemes of the season are those carried out in brownish tints, and this is saying volumes, for all of the combinations are beautiful when artistically blended. Brown consorts amiably with green, pink and blue, being especially cool looking with the latter.

In the shot silks, as well as stripes and plaids, brown is combined with gray and blue with much success. All of the new cotton and linen fabrics show these colors in pretty shades. Among the prettiest are linen, dimity, organdy and the long line of zephyr fabrics. Brown, gray and blue grounds, with small checks and hairline stripes in contrasting colors, trimmed with lace and embroidery, will be en regle for all semi-dressy functions. Very dainty are some of the new cotton crepes and chine fabrics, covered with dots ranging from the size of a pinhead to a silver half dollar. These latter are generally woven in with the material in self colors or merely outlined in a harmonizing shade, the latter idea being the latest.

One of the new shades of brown is called ripe corn, and looks very tempting in a sheer silk fabric. Quite a fascinating design has the skirt trimmed with several rows of narrow satin ribbon divided by a plain portion incrusted with gold thread motifs, a trimming which finds repetition on the bodice, which is softened with a tucker of old lace. In many of the diaphanous gowns of the season elegant simplicity is applied to materials of artistic beauty, with marvelous results for women of fashion.

Simple Cross-Stitch Design



This cross-stitch pattern for apron is very pretty, though quite simple.

WILL DIG BIG DITCH

PANAMA TASK ENTRUSTED TO ARMY ENGINEERS.

Maj. G. W. Goethals of Engineering Corps Chosen as Head of Group of Three—Is a Man of Much Experience.

Washington.—Maj. George W. Goethals, U. S. A., has been selected to head the group of three government engineers who will complete the work on the isthmus. Maj. Goethals is regarded as a most efficient engineer and has had a great deal of experience. The army officers who will have charge of the work will receive more pay than American army officers have ever been given before. Maj. Goethals as engineer in chief will receive $2,000 more than Admiral Dewey. The president has indicated that Maj. Goethal's salary as engineer would probably be fixed at $15,000.

"The wheel horse of the force" is what Maj. Goethals has come to be called in the army engineer corps. He sets the pace for the rest. He is the protege of Secretary of War Taft and the chief of engineers, Gen. McKenzie. The latter admits he likes Goethals, but will not [illegible] that there are not 50 other engineers in his force, all just as good, and he will add if the private engineers are worth $30,000 a year, then these men are worth $50,000.

Maj. Goethals is said to know more about the actual doings in connection with the Panama canal administration and work than any other man in Washington. The reason is that he has been Taft's special agent for the Panama business. He went with the secretary on his trip to the isthmus. Goethals is said to be a six-o'clock-in-the-morning man. He is at it early and late.

Maj. Goethals was appointed to the military academy from New York and was graduated in 1884. Later he graduated from the engineer school at Willet's Point, N. Y. He was for two years on the staff of Gen. Nelson A. Miles as engineer officer of the department of Columbia, where he was engaged on surveys and reconnoissance work, and under Gen. Merrill at Cincinnati, in charge of the construction of dams, dikes and locks. His next duty was at West Point in the department of civil and military engineering, and from the academy he was ordered to duty as engineer in charge of the Mussel Shoals canal, Tennessee river, where he began the construction of the Colvert canals; designing and contracting for the 26-foot lift lock at Riverton. Upon the completion of this duty Maj. Goethals served for four years in the office of the chief of engineers as assistant.

During the war with Spain Maj. Goethals was chief engineer of the first army corps, and later he was instructor of practical engineering at West Point. He was in charge of all engineering work in the Newport district at the time he was selected for duty on the general staff in 1903—an assignment which came to him solely as a result of the recognition of his unusual professional ability.

Associated with Maj. Goethals will be two engineers who were plebes when he graduated from the academy—Majs. D. V. Gaillard and William L. Sibert, who were appointed to the military academy from South Carolina and Alabama respectively, and graduated in 1884. Both officers have had wide engineering experience. Maj. Gaillard was in charge of the breakwaters and dredging at Duluth at the time he was selected for the general staff four years ago. Maj. Sibert has spent the greater part of his service in the construction of locks and dams on the Kentucky river and in supervising the erection or completion of about 30 locks and dams along the Ohio, Allegheny and Monongahela rivers.

MAJ. G. W. GOETHALS.
(Army Officer Who Will Build the Panama Canal.)

The fact that the new chief engineer is in the prime of life was a strong point in favor of his selection. There are older men in the corps of engineers, and some who are perhaps better known, but it is declared that there is no officer of the requisite health, initiative and ability who is the superior of the man President Roosevelt has selected.

HAS STOVE IN HIS MAIL CART

How a Mail Collector in Chicago Defies the Northern Blasts.

Chicago.—There are hundreds of mail collectors' carts in Chicago, but James E. Adams, a collector out of the Ravenswood postal station, claims to have the innovation of the whole lot in Chicago, or, as far as he knows, of the letter-carrying wagons of the nation.

Mail Collector and His Heated Cart.

In all kinds of winter weather Adams keeps his body warm by hauling a hot stove around with him. His cart is especially built to accommodate a heater, and there is a solid wooden door in the rear that closes tight. The collector stands on a step just inside the door. When he steps out to abstract the contents of a mail box he carefully closes the door, so that when he follows his nose back inside his box the little two by four post office is as warm as toast.

Adams has been working in the Chicago postal service for nearly a quarter of a century. He began in 1881 as a carrier, but politics laid him off for two or three years. He has served 16 years as a collector and for that period has kept himself warm by the same stove which consumes a quarter of a ton of hard coal each season.

Superintendent Hogan of the Ravenswood station keeps his clock regulated by this collector's punctuality, and by the well-fired-up heater the latter is able to fight off rheumatism and kindred ailments.

WILL RECEIVE BIG DOWRY.

Charles W. Schwab to Give Sister $2,000,000 as Wedding Present.

Pittsburg.—The wedding of Miss Gertrude Schwab, of Loretta, Pa., and David J. Barry, of Johnstown, is expected to take place some time after Lent, although it may not be until early in June.

Miss Schwab is the favorite sister of Charles M. Schwab, former president of the United States Steel corporation, who, it has been announced, and not denied, will give his sister a dowry of $2,000,000.

MISS GERTRUDE SCHWAB.
(She Will Receive a Dowry of $2,000,000 from Her Brother.)

Since the beginning of Lent Miss Schwab has been living quietly at her home in Loretta. After the period of sackcloth she will be entertained on an elaborate scale by her friends in this city and Johnstown. It is also expected that she will be entertained in New York, where she is known, having spent much of her time in the last few years at the home of her brother there. The wedding will be followed by a European trip, according to present arrangements.

Mr. Barry, while not wealthy, has a good deal of money of his own. He is the cashier of a bank at Johnstown.

The Narrow View.

Congressman Perkins was talking about his bill for a progressive inheritance tax.

"Even a billionaire," he said, "would approve this bill if he looked at it in a broad way. But few billionaires look at such things broadly. Everything to them has but the one narrow, personal aspect.

"They are much like the old lady who, seeing a storm signal, asked what it was. She was told that the weather bureau now studied the weather and telegraphed its forecasts far in advance all over the country. The old lady, looking at this fact in a narrow, personal, billionaire-like way, could see but one advantage in it and she said:

"'Oh, isn't that convenient for the washer-women.'"

Here and Hereafter.

Her Husband—This paper says that men are more cool than women.

His wife—Well perhaps they are in this world, but they won't be in the next.—Chicago Daily News.

Health Insurance at little cost

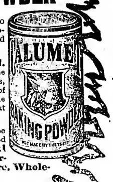
CALUMET
BAKING POWDER



$1,000.00 reward is offered to anyone for any substance injurious to the health found in Calumet Baking Powder.

Purity is a prime essential in food. Calumet is made only of pure, wholesome ingredients combined by skilled chemists, and complies with the pure food laws of all states. It is the only high-grade Baking Powder on the market sold at a moderate price.

Calumet Baking Powder may be freely used with the certainty that food made with it contains no harmful drugs [illegible] chemically correct and makes Pure, Wholesome Food.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

[illegible] weekly, Thursday evening, an[illegible] [illegible] matter in the post [illegible] Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

HOW THE RAILROADS THRIVE UNDER PERSECUTION.

It is amazing to see how the railroads of the United States thrive under persecution. For the past five years they have been under the harrow. The president has been after them continually in the courts and through the interstate commerce commission. Congress has been interfering in their business with restrictive legislation. The state legislatures have been doing their part by passing bills to reduce rates and increase taxation.

One would naturally expect to see some marks of this continual persecution in the business of the railroads. Yet nothing seems to be the matter of them except over-prosperity and the common affliction of a restricted money market. They cannot buy equipment or build track fast enough enough to handle the increased business that is offiered. They cannot borrow enough to make the improvements called for by their enormous traffic.

This is the only complaint they make of the persecution they have suffered, but they seem to be no worse off than others. When a railroad and some other horrower compete in the market, the railroad is apt to get the better of the terms. The Japanese government is paying higher interest on its refunding bonds than the Pennsylvania railroad pays on its foreign loan.

There is no evidences of suffering from persecution in the report of railroad earnings for 1906 just made public. On the contrary the gain of earnings is without parallel in the history of any year in any country. The American railroads have earned $250,000,000 gross and $85,000,000 net more in 1906 than in 1904. The increase in ten years, from 1896, is $1,335,000,000 gross and $424,000,000 net. Only once in ten years was the gross increase over $200,000,000 and then the net increase.

Of course much of the astonishing increase of the last year is due to the growth of traffic that has glutted lines and congested terminals. But is not some part of it due to the increase of net earnings by cutting off freight rebates and free passes? Have not the railroads received directly a larger profit from the same expenditure by the very persecution against which four leading presidents are going to the White House to protest?

St. Hilaire will organize a commercial club. Here's hoping it will do much good for the saintly city.

Roseau Region: The railroad managers in several states declare that if the fare is reduced to 2 cents they'll take off some of the trains. That will have its advantages. There'll be fewer trying to pass on the same track.

The U. S. agricultural department reports that the amount of wheat remaining in farmer's hands on March 1 was 206,644,000 bushels or 28.1 per cent of last years crop as compared with 148,403,000 bushels, or 22.9 per cent of the crop of 1905, on hand March 1, 1906.

The citizens of Thief River Falls don't like the name of their town, and would be glad to have it changed to most any old thing. Thief River Falls does sound rather suggestive and seems to make some of her citizens squirm under the insinuation it carries, but then "a guilty conscience needs no accusing."

The Up-to-date Farmer says that the dairy farmers tributary to New York, are paid for the milk at prices made by the trust, $18,000,000. This same milk is sold to the consumers at prices made by the trust, for $41,000,000, which is two million dollars more than double what the farmers get for producing it.

Sunbeam: The county seat removal proposition is making arrangements for another trip to the supreme court. By the time the supreme court gets through with it the signers of the first petition will all have died off, with old age, so Thief River Falls will have to get up a new petition signed by men who are living at that date.

The following clipped from the Dairy Record is another one of the many good reasons why it pays to stand by the home creamery:

Up at Hinckley, Minn., there was a private local creamery doing a fair business in spite of fierce competition with centralizers in Duluth and in the Twin Cities. The creamery burned down the other day and the very next morning, so Mr. Knickerbrocker, one of the proprietors, tells us, the price of cream dropped three cents per pound of butter fat. Farmers shipping away their cream instead of patronizing their local creamery should stop and consider what is surely coming to them the minute the local creamery shuts its doors. Only by supporting and patronizing the local, preferably co-operative, creamery, can the farmer insure for himself a square deal in the disposal of his dairy products.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish [illegible] mulas of all [illegible]

Old Resident Dies.

Olivea Lagassy, a pioneer resident of Red Lake county, died at the Central Hotel, where he has made his home during the past few years, this morning after an illness of several months with heart trouble. Mr. Lagassy was past 75 years of age, and had lived in this county for nearly thirty years, settling in Poplar River in 1878. The old gentleman had enjoyed the best of health up until a few months ago, when his final illness came on and he failed rapidly until death came to relieve him. Deceased leaves seven sons and three daughters, Mrs. H. Premo, of Poplar River, being the only one residing in this county. Another daughter, Mrs. Clas, of Milwaukee, was with him when he died. The funeral will be held from St. Joseph's church after the arrival of the Great Northern passenger Saturday, and the remains will be interred in the cemetery at Terrebonne, beside those of his wife, who preceeded him to the better land over a quarter of a century ago.

Reminder for Fisherman.

The state game and fish commission has issued a bulletin calling attention to the closed season, March and April, for Minnesota. Bass are protected from March 1 to May 29; pike, muskallonge, crappies, perch, sunfish, sturgeon, catfish and other variety, except pickerel, suckers, red horse, carp and bullheads, from March 1 to May 1, and all trout except lake trout, from Sept. 1 to April 15.

Spearing of pickerel and other rough fish is permitted at all times and a fish house license is good until April 1, providing fish thus taken are not placed on the market and no hook and line fishing is done after March. All fish, except trout and bass, may be sold during the open season, but no game fish may be sold during March and April.

Wants The Whole Bakery.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Rural route No. 1, to start here and run northwest was started last year and we learn that some of the business men of Thief River Falls have started an agitation to induce the patrons of the route to have it changed so as to go out from that city. It is rather dirty work for a neighboring town to try and steal a little thing like that, and if they persist it is more than probable that they will lose many more friends than they will make. We hardly think it will pay Thief River Falls to spread out too thin at present or try too hard to make a hog of themselves.

Blackbirds and wild geese—sure harbingers of glorious spring—have been seen in this neighborhood, which bring with them the hope that perhaps there will soon be the long looked for relief from the "storm king." The past winter has been a "daisy"—but why dwell on its terrors longer? It's a sure thing that we will all join the joyous spring chorus with a fervor not in the least affected.

DOROTHY.

Black birds of the big variety are with us again. Good sign of spring.

N. P. Cassavaunt and his son, William, are very ill with the gripp.

Chas. Nelson visited with his folks last week at Belgrad, Minn.

Louis Seiff and Oliver Belair, of Red Lake Falls, were at Dorothy Monday on business.

J. F. Mathews visited with his father, Paul Mathews, Sunday. The afternoon was spent playing whist.

Fred Mathews and Ohelon Mathews son and daughter of J. F. Mathews, visited their uncle, Napalion Mathews, at Grand Forks Sunday, returning Monday.

Several of the big farmers are kicking on account of there being such a great amount of the great white material this winter.

J. S. Mark of the Mark Drug Co., of Fosston, was a caller with F. J. Bairen, the Dorthy merchant Saturday on business. J. F. Mathews drove him to Red Lake Falls in the afternoon.

Fred Richard, the Dorothy school teacher, visited at Red Lake Falls Friday evening, returning Saturday by the N. P. flyer. Fred had not been to town for three months and reports a good time.

Mascott flour and all kinds of feed at the Dorothy elevator of the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. J. F. Mathews, agent.

The office of J. F Mathews, the Red Lake Falls Milling Co's. wheat buyer at Dorothy, was broken into and some things taken and some medling was done with the ticket book. There is no clue to the offender. J. F. will get the smart guy if there is any way to do it.

You can make better food with

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

Lighter, sweeter, more palatable and wholesome.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO. NEW-YORK.

Belated Town and Village Election Returns.

PLUMMER.

President—H H Flnrow
Trustees—O O Gullingsrud, E B Lanager, John A Rothstein
Recorder—O J Johnson
Treasurer—H J Enderle
Justices—O J Johnson, Otto O Gullingsrud
Constable—Oscar Carlson.
Nineteen votes were cast.

EMARDVILLE.

Supervisors—For 3 years, Andrew Johnson
For 1 year, P S Medchill
Clerk—A J Hemstad
Treasurer—J G Hagen
Assessor—A J Hemstad
Justices—P S Medchill, John Greenwald
Constables—H T Gulbrandson, Alfred Valdal
Road Overseers—Dist. No. 1, P S Medehill
No. 2, A A Momrack
No. 3, D H McOullough
No. 4, A Carpenter.
Twenty-two votes were cast.

SMILEY.

Supervisorss—H A Helgeson, A B Newton
Clerk—Tobias Stene
Treasurer—A G Sorenson
Assessor—O M Pederson
Justices—W E Wood. Tobias Stene
Constables—Anfin Brokke, John A Dahl
Road Overseers—Dist. No. 1, O Helland
No. 2, Ole S Hegoland
No. 3, Christ Pederson
No. 4, E Skredergaarden
No. 5. Chas. Helm.

RIVER FALLS.

Supervisors—I S Ray, A P Sandridge, H O. Haugen
Clerk—Andrew Martinson
Treasuror—Aug. Svenson
Assessor—James Gilbertson
Justices—James Gilbertson. P O Nelson
Constable—Andrew Martinson
Overseers—A E Anderson, Christ Boathman, Henry Reese, E H Stepheas, Peter Hagquist, John Sjoberg.

ROCKSBURY.

Supervisor—Chas. ustafson
Town Clerk—P Engelstad
Treasurer—Ed A Aubol
Justice—P Engelstad
Constable—John Hanson

NORDEN.

Supervisor—O Crestenson, 3 years
Town Clerk—G J Nordhagen
Treasurer—Nils O Nora
Assessor—Lars Lee
Justice of the Peace—G J Nordhagen
Constable—O E Aas.

NORTH.

Supervisor—W O Long
Town Clerk—E J Overlund
Treasurer—August Soderberg
Assessor—G K Haave
Justice—Nels Myrla
Constable—Albert Olson.

ST. HILAIRE.

President—A S Wilson
Trustees—Jens Nelson, E M Hoff. O H Martz
Treasurer—B E Burke
Clerk—Carl Johnson
Assessor—A F Ittner
Justice—O H Peters
Constable—H C Adams

One thing is certain, and that is the Wisconsin Central railroad is not quite as hoggish as the roads that operate in this state. On the first of this month the Central inaugurated a two-cent passenger rate, while the Wisconsin legistatare passed a bill demanding a two and a half cent fare effective June 1. If the Wisconsin Central people can afford to cut its passenger rate voluntarily, the question naturally arises, Why can't the other roads do the same thing?

Use a little KODOL after your meals and it will be found to afford a prompt and efficient relief. KODOL nearly approximates the digestive juices. It digests what you eat. It is sold on a guaranteed relief plan. Sold here by all druggists.

"In 1897 I had a stomach disease. Some physicians said Dyspepsia, some Consumption. One said I would not live until spring. For four years I existed on boiled milk, soda biscuits, and doctors' prescriptions. I could not digest anything I ate; then I picked up one of your Almanacs and it happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty-cent bottle of KODOL and the benefit I received from that bottle all the gold in Georgia could not buy. In two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. May you live long and prosper."—C. N. Cornell, Roding, Ga., 1905. The above is only a sample of the great good that is daily done everywhere by Kodo For Dyspepsia It is sold here by all dealers.

Safety and Convenience

"Safety" is the password in transferring money—"convenience" is also of equal importance.

You have both safety and convenience in money matters when you pay by check.

A checking account is the simplest method for everyone—for you—to emply in financial affairs, because you have a complete record of every transaction.

We welcome small accounts.

All accounts—large and small—receive the same careful attention.

Merchants State Bank
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

FIRST STATE BANK
OF
RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU
PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS	DIRECTORS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President	Theo. Gareeau Frank E Hunt
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President	Chas. N. Bourdon
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier	W. A. Schreiter A. P. Toupin
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.	N. M. Watson Geo. F. Hennings

The Syracuse "Easy" Washer

A Few Reasons Why You ... Should Have One ...

It saves the clothes.

It saves precious time.

It saves physical force.

It saves in cost—no new tubs or boards to buy.

It washes cleaner and rinses better.

It is adapted to both heavy and light clothes.

We Have Sold Hundreds of these machines since we have had the agency—another good reason why you should have one. We wouldn't have sold so many if they weren't right. Remember we put them out on trial and the price is only ....

$8.00

Hunt Hardware Co.

The Local Field---

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Subscribe for The Gazette.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

C. J. Knox came down from Thief River Falls, Wednesday to transact some business at the court house.

State Librarian John E. King came up from St. Paul Tuesday to spend several days looking after business matters here.

Fred Richards was in over Sunday from his school work at Dorothy, and his friends were glad to see him again after his all winter's absence.

Roadmaster E. J. Regan and family were entertained at the home of John Manly Sunday. The day was pleasantly spent, and the fact that it was St. Patrick's Day, the day of days to the sons of old Erin's Isle, made it all the more enjoyable.

Contractor Paul Rogge will commence work this week on a handsome new barn at the farm home of Claus Heinrichs, who lives northeast of the city. The barn will be a large one, modern in all respects, which add greatly to Mr. Heinrichs' already pretty place.

The several committees in charge of the arrangements for the coming firemen's tournament are busy preparing for an active campaign from now on. There is much work ahead but it will be attended to in a systematic manner, and nothing will be left undone that will work to the greater success of the tournament.

Joe Schusser arrived home last week from Stearns county, where he has been working all winter on the new Soo survey, which is being run through that country toward Duluth. On the way home one of Joe's big horses was taken sick and died after an illness of but a few days. This team was by far the finest work team in southern Red Lake county, and tho loss is a heavy one on Mr. Schusser.

We make farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds on hand at all times---First State Bank. Red Lake Falls.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

☞ House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes, The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

Attorney Boughton and Sheriff Nelson attended the Meyer auction sale south of town Tuesday.

For Sale—One lumber wagon, one spring wagon, one cutter and one pair of oobs. Ernest Buse.

Sheriff Nelson was out east the first of the week finishing up his work of summoning the jurors for next week's court term.

Lewis Siell and a crew of men will leave, within the next few days for Lavina, Montana, where they will put in the summer at railroad work.

"Get Right With God" will be the subject of the sermon by the Pastor at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening. Special music will be provided, and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. O. LaFreniere has been quite ill at her home in this city this week, suffering from an attack of heart trouble with which she has been bothered for some years past. She is reported as much improved at the present writing, however.

Editor Anthony LaFreniere came over from Grand Rapids Monday, called here by the illness of his mother, Mrs. O. LaFreniere. "Tony" is prospering at Grand Rapids, and his Independent is fast becoming one of the leading publications of eastern Minnesota. His success is gratifying to Red Lake Falls people.

J. L. Patnode. who has been employed in the Borchers sample room for the past eight years, has resigned his position and will leave next week for Argyle, where he he will engage in the saloon business for himself. Joe is a first-class fellow, and will undoubtedly make a success of his venture His place at Borchers' will be taken by Oliver Belair.

Postoffice box rent rates have been fixed heretofore upon no established basis, with the result that at certain large postoffices rates are lower than at many small offices. In order to remedy these conditions and to provide a definite and satisfactory rule for the collection of box rents, a schedule, based upon the kind and capacity of boxes and gross receipts at postoffices has been adopted. According to the new schedule, call boxes at the postoffice remain 20 cents per quarter, medium locks 45 cents and large locks 60 cents.

E. F. Marshall, P. M.

Going Out of Business At Terrebonne.

Our entire stock of General Merchandise will be disposed of at COST AND BELOW COST in order to move it fast.

Sale will start Monday, March 25th continue for one week. It will be to your advantage to get prices on our goods before buying elsewhere.

DUPONT & BOISSONNEAU,
Proprietors.

.. An ..
Invitation

Every woman who has difficulty in accurately fitting her feet; every woman who's shoes cause her feet to burn or to be otherwise uncomfortable; every woman who appreciates or desires shoes that are absolutely the last word of fashion, and every woman in the least disposed to practice economy is invited to inspect our assortment and be convinced that Queen Quality Shoes offer the solution of all the foot troubles.

Queen Quality Boots, $3, $3.50, $4

Queen Quality Oxfords - $2.50, $3

Let us show you our new styles while the assortment is at its best. Not the slightest obligation to buy.

The Busy Store

Garceau & Zaiser.

Macaroni seed wheat for sale.—L. C. Simons.

Conrad Lajambe is expected home Saturday from the big woods country, and expects to spend the summer here.

Miss Minnie Shannon, of Grafton, North Dakota, was a guest of her sister, Mrs. F. A. Mizen, all of last week.

Dr. Spofford will miss his visits for March and April, to Red Lake Falls. Next visit May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Chas. N. Bourdon went down to Crookston Tuesday evening to spend a couple of days with Mrs. Bourdon's relatives.

Wanted—Person to travel in home territory; salary $3.50 per day and expenses. Address. J. A. Alexander, 125 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

Merchant Theo LaBissoniere arrived home Saturday from his several days' business and pleasure sojourn at different cities in this neighborhood.

Emil Hennings left Monday evening for his home at Warroad, via Winnipeg, after a pleasant visit of a week with his brothers and many friends here.

Ed. Bray is able to be about again after a lay off of over two weeks with with a very serious attack of quinsy; which kept him confined to his home a greater part of the time.

The auction at the Eddie Meyer place south of town was held Tuesday and was well attended. The articles offered were disposed of at good prices. Joseph Belair conducted the sale.

Herman Wolf is moving his family in from Polk Center this week, and will occupy the Krueger house in the southeast part of town. Mr. Wolf expects to go to Montana to do railroad work this summer.

Attorney Ira C. Richardson, Robt. M. McGinn and E. M. Evenson, three prominent Thief Riverites, were here Tuesday in attendance at the session of the board of commissioners which was held that day.

Mrs. N. Pouliot, of Cass Lake, visited a couple of days with her sister and brothers here this week. She had been visiting at the W. P. O'Brien home at Devils Lake for a week or so, and stopped off here on her way home

Joe Gray came home Monday from the woods near Blackduck, having finished his seasons work in that vicinity. While the winter has not been an especially desirable one for logging contracts, nevertheless Mr. Gray is well satisfied with the cut made by his firm.

To remove a cough you must get at the cold which causes the cough. There is nothing so good for this as Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. The liquid cold relief that is most quickly effective, that stills and quiets the cough and drives out the cold. Sold by all druggists.

J. J. Cahill and Wm. Koch, Jr., who have conducted the Courier in this city for the past several months, left yesterday with their families, Mr. Koch going to Duluth and Mr. Cahill to Minneapolis. During their residence here the boys made many friends among the people here, who will trust that they may meet with success in whatever they undertake.

The live stock, machinery, etc., of James Nelson, the unfortunate Lake Pleasant farmer, who died a few weeks ago at the Fergus Falls asylum, were sold at public sale last Thursday. A large crowd was present and the goods were all sold and brought good prices. Sam Nelson, a brother of the deceased, is here settling up the affairs of the family.

Plummer Pioneer: The stockhold- of the Emardville Creamery Association had a lively meeting last Monday afternoon at which the principal item of business transacted was the selecting of a buttermaker. After a long drawn out discussion and some personalites a vote was taken and resulted in the present buttermaker being chosen to serve for the coming year. A meeting of the directors was held afterwards and A. J. Hemstad resigned as treasurer of the association. We understand that Olaf Tande, of Garnes, will fill the position vacated by Mr. Hemstad.

A healthy young blizzard struck this section Monday morning and for a few hours made things look like mid-winter. Considerable snow fell and drifted badly, and the roads were in bad condition for a day or two. The storm played havoc with the train service for a couple of days, and while the passenger got through considerably behind time, freight service was about suspended entirely for three days. Tuesday's passenger got stuck in the Delorme cut on the N. P. line, and two engines from freights behind were called in to push her out. They brought the passenger this far and one went on to St. Hilaire to get the freight that was abandoned Monday, while the other went back to Tilden. The south bound train got through all right Tuesday evening, but the two north bound freights did not get here until nearly midnight and both tied up here until Wednesday morning. The railroad men surely won't be disappointed when glorious spring time arrives—and at that they will be no happier than a lot more of us.

Easter Opening of Fine Kuppenheimer Clothing

Our line of stylish Kuppenheimers for spring is nearly all here. Without any question the finest line of clothing made. The latest styles without being freaky. What any sensible man appreciates.

——— $15.00 TO $25.00 ———

For a second we have the famous S. & L. line of New York—"Spot Cash" Clothing. Woolen goods are high but we can give you as good values as you ever had. All wool Suits at $8 50 to $12; well made.

Our Spring Line of Dress Shirts

Our spring line of Dress Shirts are the best made in American. Wilson Bros., $1.50 to $2.00. Elgin Shirts $1 to $1.50. Flour City, 50c-$1

PALMER CLOAKS AND SKIRTS

Just drop in, ladies and take a look at these beautifully made garments. Made by expert tailors. They look so different from other makes that there is absolutely no comparison. Spring Coats $8 00 to to $13.50. Skirts $3 to $12.00.

SHOES

See our line of Shoes before you buy. St. Cecelia at $3.50; Saranac at $2.50 cannot be duplicated elsewhere. See for yourself; take a pair of ours home with a pair from other stores and compare. Godman's $1.50 to $2.25 are beauties. Have the looks as well as the quality.

GROCERY SPECIALS

Figs, 5c pckg; Monarch Mince Meat, 8c; Minn. Pure Sorghum, 20c qt.; Labrador Herring, 6c; Lute Fisk, 6c; Monarch Jams, 25c, finest on earth; Lemons, 25c doz; 3 gal pail fancy Syrup, $1.25; Crackers, 6c lb., $1.20 box; Corn, 75c doz., Peas, $1.00 doz: 40c Tea, 25c; 8 bars Soap, 25c

It pays to trade at THE BIG STORE The Store of Quality.

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

Orpheus Concert.

The Orpheus Quartette is busy practicing for their grand Easter concert and ball, which occurs on the evening of Monday, April 1. The Orpheus boys are royal entertainers and the public can look forward to an enjoyable time. The program is as follows:

Overture, "Bohemian Girl,"	Balfe
Orchestra.
Serenade	Titl
Quartette.
Waltz, "Daughter of Love,"	Bennett
Orchestra.
Clarinet Solo,	Selected
Prof. E. H. Bruckman.
Grand Fantasia	Weber
Quartette. Introducing excerpts from Weber' smost famous composition: Oberon, Rosamunde, Invitation to the Dance.
Clarinet Duet	Selected
Messrs. Bruckman and Tracy.
"Grossmutterchen,"	Langey
Quartette.
Violincello Solo,	Selected
L. P. Berthon.
Echoes from the Metropolitan Opera House,	Tobani
Quartette. Containing excerpts from the following operas: The Prophet, Aida, Cavalleria Rusticana, Boaldil, Tannhauser, William Tell.

Price of admission $1 00 for both concert and dance. Tickets on sale at Anderson's Jewelry Store Saturday, March 30th.

Little globules of sunshine that drive the clouds away. DeWitt's Little Early Risers will scatter the gloom of sick-headache and biliousness. They do not gripe or sicken. Recommended and sold here by all druggists.

St. Hilaire Spectator: N. E. Norton U. S. postoffice inspector for rural routes arrived here on Thursday and started yesterday over the proposed rural route north and east of here. Upon his report depends whether or not the route is established. Inspector Norton came in last evening and reported that he was well satisfied with the condition of the proposed route. All differences among the patrons was satisfactorily adjusted and Mr. Norton will report favorably on the establishment of the route. It is probable that the route will be established inside of three months.

Spectator: G. W. Hooper, of Crookston, has been here a couple of days this week looking over the prospects of putting in a local telephone system. Mr. Hooper is connected with the Polk County Telephone company and has had considerable experience in the work. It is probable that Mr. Hooper will ask the village council for a franchise at the next meeting.

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.

DENTIST

Offices in LaBissoniere Block. Office hours 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.

At St Hilaire every Wednesday.

Thomas Germo, Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys at-Law

Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

THE GARDEN SPOT OF WESTERN CANADA
LAST MOUNTAIN VALLEY
THE HEART OF THE GREAT SASKATCHEWAN WHEAT PLAINS
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD
NORTHERN BANK BLDG WINNIPEG CANADA

The winds of March have no terror to the user of DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. It quickly heals chapped and cracked skin. Good too, for boils and burns, and undoubtedly the best relief for Piles. Sold here by all druggists.

The Murray Cure

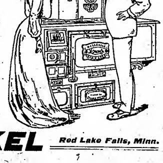
To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1319 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.



Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges . . .

We have just received several of the latest constructed Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges, in which are contained all the features which has made the steel range famous and the latest improvements that are known to the range manufacturers' art. which makes this range the "Monarch" of them all. These ranges are now on exhibition at our store, and we would be pleased to have every housewife in this vicinity call and look them over. The price of the Monarch Malleable Steel Range" is cheaper accordingly than other so called "steel ranges."

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XVIII.—Continued.

Joel Rae found himself believing that he could now have been a fiercer lion of the Lord than Brigham was; for he would have fought, while Brigham was stooping to petty strategies as if God were needing to rely upon deceit.

Late in June the army of Johnston descended Emigration canyon, passed through the streets of the city and camped on the River Jordan. But, to the deep despair of one observer, these invaders committed no depredation or overt act. After resting inoffensively two days on the Jordan, they marched 10 miles south to Cedar valley, where Camp Floyd was established.

Thus, no one fully comprehending how it had come about, peace was seen suddenly to have been restored. The people, from Brigham down, had been offered a free pardon for all past treasons and seditions if they would return to their allegiance to the Federal government; the new officers of the Territory were installed, sons of perdition in the seats of the Lord's mighty; and sermons of wrath against Uncle Sam ceased for the moment to resound in the tabernacle. Early in July, Brigham ordered the people to return to their homes. They had offered these as a sacrifice, even as Abraham had offered Isaac, and the Lord had caught them a timely ram in the thicket.

In the midst of the general rejoicing, Joel Rae was overwhelmed with humiliation and despair.

Off to the south was the desert. There he could be alone; there face God and his own conscience and have his inmost soul declare the truth about himself. In his sadness he would have liked to lead the people with him, lead them away from some evil, some fatality that had crept in about them; he knew not what it was nor how it had come, but Zion had been defiled. Something was gone from the Church, something from Brigham, something from himself,—something, it almost seemed, even from the God of Israel. When the summer waned, his plan was formed to go to one of the southern settlements to live. Brigham had approved. The Church needed new blood there.

He rode out of the city one early morning in September, facing to the south over the rolling valley that lay between the hills now flaming their best autumn colors. He was in haste to go, yet fearful of what he should meet there.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Blood on the Page.

Along the level lane between the mountain ranges he went, a lane that runs almost from Bear creek on the north to the Colorado on the south, with a width of 20 miles or so. But for Joel Rae it became a ride down the valley of lost illusions. Some saving grace of faith was gone from the people. He passed through sturdy little settlements, bowered in gardens and orchards, and girded about by now fertile acres where once had been the bare, gray desert. Slowly, mile by mile, the Saints had pushed down the valley, battling with the Indians and the elements for every acre of land they gained. Yet it seemed to him now that they had achieved but a mere Godless prosperity. They had worked a miracle of abundance in the desert—but of what avail? For the soul of their faith was gone. He felt or heard the proof of it on every hand.

Through Battle Creek, Provo, and Springville he went; through Spanish Fork, Payson, Salt Creek, and Fillmore. He stopped to preach at each place, but he did it perfunctorily, and with shame for himself in his secret heart. Some impalpable essence of spirituality was gone from himself and from the people. He felt himself wickedly agreeing with a pessimistic elder at Fillmore, who remarked: "I tell you what, Brother Rae, it seems like when the Book of Mormon goes agin' the Constitution of the United States, there's sure to be hell to pay, and the Saints allus has to pay it." He could not tell the man in words of fire, as once he would have done, that they had been punished for lack of faith.

The next evening he reached Cedar City. Memories of this locality began to crowd back upon him with torturing clearness; especially of the morning he had left Hamblin's ranch. As he mounted his horse two of the children saved from the wagon-train had stood near him,—a boy of seven and another a little older, the one who had fought so viciously with him when he was separated from the little girl. He remembered that the younger of the two boys had forgotten all but the first of his name. He had told them that it was John Calvin—something; he could not remember what, so great had been his fright; the people at the ranch, because of his forlorn appearance, had thereupon named him John Calvin Sorrow.

These two boys had watched him closely as he mounted his horse, and the older one had called to him, "When I get to be a man, I'm coming back with a gun and kill you till you are dead yourself," and the other, little John Calvin Sorrow, had clenched his fists and echoed the threat, "We'll come back here and kill you! Mormons is worse'n Indians!"

He had ridden quickly away, not noting that some of the men standing by had looked sharply at the boys and then significantly at one another. One of those who had been present, whom he now met, told him of these two boys.

"You see, Elder, the orders from headquarters was to save only them that was too young to give evidence in a court. But these two was very forward and knowing. They shouldn't have been kept in the first place. So two men—no need of naming names—took both of them out one night. They got along all right with the little one they called John Calvin Sorrow—only the little cuss kicked and scrambled so that we both had to see to him for a minute, and when we was ready for the other, there he was at least ten rods away, a-legging it into the scrub oak. Well, they looked and looked and hunted around till daybreak, but he'd got away all right, the moon going under a cloud. They tracked him quite a ways when it come light, till his tracks run into the trail of a big band of Navajos that had been up north trading ponies and was going back south. He was the one that talked so much about you, but you needn't ever have any fear of his talking any more. He'd be done for one way or another."

"You're Not My Papa—Not My Real Papa!"

For the first time in his life that night, he was afraid to pray,—afraid even to give thanks that others were sleeping in the room with him so that he could hear their breathing and know that he was not alone.

He was up betimes to press on to the south, again afraid to pray, and dreading what was still in store for him. For sooner or later he would have to be alone in the night. Thus far since that day in the Meadows he had slept near others, whether in cabins or in camp, in some freighter's wagon or bivouacking in the snows of Echo canyon. Each night he had been conscious, at certain terrible moments of awakening, that others were near him. He heard their breathing, or in the silence a fire's light had shown him a sleeping face, the lines of a form, or an arm tossed out. What would happen on the night he found himself alone, he knew not—death, or the loss of reason.

His way lay through the Meadows, yet he hardly realized this until he was fairly on the ground in the midst of a thousand evil signs of the day. Here, a year after, were skulls and whitening bones, some in heaps, some scattered through the sage-brush where the wolves had left them. Many of the skulls were pierced with bullet holes, shattered as by heavy blows, or cleft as with a sharp-edged weapon. Even more terrifying than these were certain traces caught here and there on the low scrub oaks along the way,—children's sunbonnets; shreds of coarse lace, muslin, and calico; a child's shoe, the tattered sleeve of a woman's dress—all faded, dead, whipped by the wind.

He pressed through it all with set jaws, trying to keep his eyes fixed upon the ground beyond his horse's head; but his ears were at the mercy of the cries that rang from every thicket.

Once out of it, he rode hard, for it must not come yet—his first night alone. By dusk he had reached the new settlement of Amsion, a little off the main road in a valley of the Pine mountains. Here he sought the house where he had left the child. When he had picketed his horse he went in and had her brought to him,—a fresh little flower-like woman-child, with hair and eyes that told of her mother, with reminders of her mother's ways as she stood before him, a waiting poise of the head, a lift of the chin. They looked at each other in the candle-light, the child standing by the woman who had brought her, looking up at him curiously, and he not daring to touch her or go nearer. She became uneasy and frightened at last, under his scrutiny, and when the woman would have held her from running away, began to cry, so that he gave the word to let her go. She ran quickly into the other room of the cabin, from which she called back with tears of indignation in her voice, "You're not my papa—not my real papa!"

When the people were asleep, he sat before the blaze in the big fireplace, on the hearth cleanly swept with its turkey-wing and buffalo-tail. There was to be one more night of his reprieve from solitude. The three women of the house and the man were sleeping around the room in bunks. The child's bed had been placed near him on the floor after she slept, as he had asked it to be. He had no thought of sleep for himself. He was too intensely awake with apprehension. On the floor beside his chair was a little bundle the woman had brought him,—the bundle he had found loosened by her side, that day, with the trinkets scattered about and the limp-backed little Bible lying open where it had fallen.

He picked the bundle up and untied it, touching the contents timidly. He took up the Bible last, and as he did so a memory flooded back upon him that sickened him and left him trembling. It was the book he had given her on her seventeenth birthday, the one she had told him she was keeping when they parted that morning at Nauvoo. He knew the truth before he opened it at the yellowed fly-leaf and read in faded ink, "From Joel to Prudence on this day when she is 17 years old—June 2d, 1843."

In a daze of feeling he turned the pages, trying to clear his mind, glancing at the chapter headings as he turned,—"Abraham is Justified by Faith," "God Instructeth Isaac," "Pharaoh's Heart Is Hardened," "The Laws of Murder," "The Curses for Disobedience." He turned rapidly and at last began to run the leaves from between his thumb and finger, and then, well over in the book something dark caught his eye. He turned the leaves back again to see what it was; but not until the book was opened flat before him and he held the page close to the light did he see what it was his eye had caught. A wash of blood was across the page.

He stared blankly at the reddish, dark stain, as if its spell had been hypnotic. Little by little he began to feel the horror of it, remembering how he picked the book up from where it had fallen before her. Slowly, but with relentless certainty, his mind cleared to what he saw.

Now for the first time he began to notice the words that showed dimly through the stain, began to read them, to puzzle them out, as if they were new to him:—

> "But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you,
>
> "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.
>
> "And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek, offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloke forbid not to take thy coat also.
>
> "Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.
>
> "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

Again and again he read them. They were illumined with a strangely terrible meaning by the blood of her he had loved and sworn to keep himself clean for.

He could no longer fight off the truth. It was facing him now in all its nakedness, monstrous to obscenity, demanding its due measure from his own soul's blood. He aroused himself, shivering, and looked out into the room where the shadows lay heavy, and from whence came the breathing of the sleepers. He picked up the now sputtering candle, set in its hole bored in a block of wood, and held it up for a last look at the little woman-child. He was full of an agony of wonder as he gazed, of piteous questioning why this should be as it was. The child stirred and flung one arm over her eyes as if to hide the light. He put out the candle and set it down. Then stooping over, he kissed the pillow beside the child's head and stepped lightly to the door. He had come to the end of his subterfuge—he could no longer delay his punishment.

Outside the moon was shining, and his horse moved about restlessly. He put on the saddle and rode off to the south, galloping rapidly after he reached the highway. Off there was a kindly desert where a man could take in peace such punishment as his body could bear and his soul decree; and where that soul could then pass on in decent privacy to be judged by its Maker.

CHAPTER XX.

The Picture in the Sky.

If something of the peace of the night silence came to him as he rode, he counted it only the peace of surrender and despair. He knew now that he had been cheated of all his great long-nursed hopes of some superior exaltation. Nor this only; for he had sinned unforgivably and incurred perdition. He who had fasted, prayed, and endured, waiting for his Witness, for the spreading of the heavens and the glory of the open vision, had overreached himself and was cast down.

When at last he slowed his horse to a walk, it was the spring of the day. The moon had gone, and over on his left a soft grayness began to show above the line of the hills. The light grew until it glowed with the fire of opals; through the treetops ran little stirs of wakefulness, and all about him were faint, furtive rustlings and whispers of the new day. Then in this glorified dusk of the dawn a squirrel loosed his bark of alarm, a crested jay screamed in answer, and he knew his hour of atonement was come.

He pressed forward again toward the desert, eager to be on with it. The page with the wash of blood across it seemed to take on a new vividness in the stronger light. Under the stain, the letters of the words were magnified before his mind,—"And as ye would that men should do to you—" It seemed to him that the blood through which they came heated the words so that they burned his eyes.

An hour after daybreak the trail led him down out of the hills by a little watercourse to the edge of the desert. Along the sides of this the chaparral grew thickly, and the spring by which he halted made a little spot of green at the edge of the gray. But out in front of him was the infinite stretch of death, far sweeps of wind-furrowed sand burning under a sun made sullen red by the clouds of fine dust in the air. Sparsely over the dull surface grew the few shrubs that could survive the heat and dryness,—stunted, unlovely things of burr, spine, thorn, or saw-edged leaf,—all bent one ways by the sand blown against them,—bristling cactus and crouching mesquite bushes.

In the vast open of the blue above, a vulture wheeled with sinister alertness; and far out among the dwarfed growing things a coyote skulked knowingly. The weird, phantom-like beauty of it stole upon him, torn as he was, while he looked over the dry, flat reaches. It was a good place to die in, this lifeless waste languishing under an angry sun.

At last he gave his horse water, tied the bridle-rein to the horn of the saddle, headed him back over the trail to the valley and turned him loose. Then, after a long look toward the waving green of the hills, he started off through the yielding sand, his face white and haggard but hard-set. He was already weakening by fasting and loss of sleep, and the heat and dryness soon told upon him as the chill was warmed from the morning air.

When he had walked an hour, he felt he must stop, at least to rest. He looked back to see how far he had come. He was disappointed by the nearness of the hills; they seemed but a stone's throw away. If delirium came now he would probably wander back to the water.

He walked another hour, then turned, and was again disappointed—it was such a little distance; yet he knew now he must be too far out to find his way back when the madness came. So it was with a little sigh of contentment that he lay down to rest or to take what might come.

He was quite broken. Not since the long-gone night on the river-flat across from Nauvoo had tears wet his eyes. But they fell now, and from sheer, helpless grief he wept. And then for the first time in two days he prayed—this time the prayer of the publican:—

"God be merciful to me, a sinner."

Over and over he said the words, chokingly, watering the hot sands with his tears. When the paroxysm had passed, it left him, weak and prone, still faintly crying his prayer into the sand, "O God, be merciful to me, a sinner."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Cure the Kidneys and the Pain Will Never Return.

Only one sure way to cure an aching back. Cure the cause, the kidneys. Thousands tell of cures made by Doan's Kidney Pills. John C. Coleman, a prominent merchant of Swainsboro, Ga., says: "For several years my kidneys were affected, and my back ached day and night. I was languid, nervous and lame in the morning. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me right away, and the great relief that followed has been permanent."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Matrimonial Infelicity.

Divorces are, happily, rare in society circles. Separation by mutual consent, however, grows more frequent every year. Every one has upon his or her visiting list husbands and wives who never meet if they can help it, but between whom there has never been an open breach. Incompatibility of temper is the usual cause, and the reason for that is, one imagines, the still common custom of encouraging the younger generation to marry before they have begun to approach years of discretion.—London Throne.

CASE OF ECZEMA IN SOUTH.

Suffered Three Years—Hands and Eye Most Affected—Now Well and Is Grateful to Cuticura.

"My wife was taken badly with eczema for three years, and she employed a doctor with no effect at all until she employed Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One of her hands and her left eye were badly affected, and when she would stop using Cuticura Soap and Ointment the eczema came back, but very slightly; but it did her a sight of good. Then we complied with the instructions in using the entire set of Cuticura Remedies and my wife is entirely recovered. She thanks Cuticura very much and will recommend it highly in our locality and in every nook and corner of our parish. God bless you for the sake of suffering humanity. I. M. Robert, Hydropolis, La., Jan. 5 and Sept. 1, 1906."

MADE HIS MEANING PLAIN.

Indian's Answer a Real Triumph of Quiet Sarcasm.

George Vaux, Jr., of Philadelphia, has been appointed a member of the board of Indian commissioners. Mr. Vaux told a reporter the other day an Indian story.

"There was a certain commissioner," he said, "who treated the Indians with rude scorn. One day a chief entertained this man in his tepee, telling him over the tobacco many quaint legends.

"One legend concerned a plague of grasshoppers. The chief told eloquently how grasshoppers overran the land, eating the grain, and how the medicine men averted a famine by offering a silver grasshopper to the Great Spirit, whereupon all that deluge of grasshoppers disappeared.

"But the commissioner scoffed at the tale.

"'Are you Indians such fools,' he said, 'as to believe such rubbish?'

"'O, no,' said the chief, gravely, 'or we'd long ago have offered the Great Spirit a silver pale face.'"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Centenarian Enjoys Life.

Mrs. Mary Baraby, 103 years old, is spoken of as "the jolliest woman in Brockton." She is fond of fun, loves young people and likes to recall old corn-husking bees and other good times of her youth. She has had 20 children, 42 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. — Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

THE WHOLE FAMILY.

Mother Finds a Food for Grown-Ups and Children as Well.

Food that can be eaten with relish and benefit by the children as well as the older members of the family, makes a pleasant household commodity.

Such a food is Grape-Nuts. It not only agrees with and builds up children, but older persons who, from bad habits of eating, have become dyspeptic.

A Phila. lady, after being benefited herself persuaded her husband to try Grape-Nuts for stomach trouble. She writes:

"About eight years ago I had a severe attack of congestion of stomach and bowels. From that time on, I had to be careful about eating, as nearly every kind of food then known to me, seemed to cause pain.

"Four years ago I commenced to use Grape-Nuts. I grew stronger and better, and from that time I seldom have been without it; have gained in health and strength and am now heavier than I ever was.

"My husband was also in a bad condition—his stomach became so weak that he could eat hardly anything with comfort. I got him to try Grape-Nuts, and he soon found his stomach trouble had disappeared.

"My girl and boy, 3 and 9 years old, do not want anything else for breakfast but Grape-Nuts, and more healthy children cannot be found." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little booklet, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

A MID-WINTER VERDICT.

"Bright Sunshine All Winter," is What a Western Canada Lady Says.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada,
Feb. 4, 1907.

C. J. Broughton, Esq.,
Canadian Government Agent,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

Being so well pleased with Canada we wish my father and brother to come here. Will you please send them reading matter on Canada.

We have been here nearly a year and are delighted with this country. We have lived in Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan and we find Canada away ahead of any of them. We have had bright sunshine all winter so far, only two nice, easy snow storms. If it was not all right you know I would not want my father and brother to come here, but we think it is grand.

Yours truly,
(Signed) MRS. ED. TROUPE.

Money in Motor Manufacture.

About $60,000,000 is at present invested in England in the manufacture of motor wagons. About 250,000 men are employed in them, or as chauffeurs, etc., and their wages aggregate $75,000,000 a year.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, price 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

No man ever asks a truthful woman what she thinks of him more than once.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.
PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days or money refunded. 50c.

It is hard to form a correct opinion of others on what is said about them.

Especially worthy of notice is Garfield Tea, Nature's remedy for constipation, sick-headache, liver and kidney derangements. It is made wholly of Herbs.

Fault finding eventually results in a disposition toward selfishness.

GENERAL BREAKDOWN

A Condition Which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the Great Blood Tonic, Have Been Curing for Years.

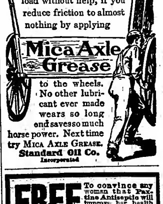
There is no more perplexing trouble for a physician to treat than debility cases, especially in women, in which there is no acute disease but in which the patient every day sinks lower and lower despite changes of medicine and similar experiments.

That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will restore health under these conditions is no speculation but the fact has been proved in hundreds of cases similar to that of Mrs. Sarah Ramsey, of 1008 St. John St., Litchfield, Ill. She says

"I never felt well after my first child was born. I had a gnawing pain in my stomach and could not hold any food down. My head ached a great deal and sometimes the pain went all through my body. I had dizzy spells so that I could not stand and seemed to be half blinded with pain. These spells would often last for over an hour. My blood seemed to be in a very poor condition and my hands and feet were like ice. I seemed to be growing weaker and weaker and could not get around to do my work in the house. I was extremely nervous and the least excitement would bring on a dizzy spell.

"For a number of years I was under a doctor's care but seemed to get no better. I had heard about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I began to take them. I soon felt better and gained in weight and strength. My nerves are strong now and I am a well woman in every way."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. A booklet of valuable information, entitled "Plain Talks to Women," sent free on request.



Don't Push

The horse can draw the load without help, if you reduce friction to almost nothing by applying to the wheels. No other lubricant ever made wears so long and saves so much horse power. Next time try MICA AXLE GREASE.

Mica Axle Grease

Standard Oil Co.
Incorporated

FREE To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.

PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT. THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

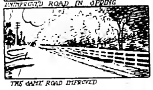
ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

RESTORATION OF HIGHWAYS.

R. H. Fuller Tells How Good Roads Benefit Farmers and Others.

There has been an effort to induce Congress to resume road building where it left off 75 years ago. It is argued in favor of this plan that the rural districts receive a disproportionately small share of the receipts from federal taxation, and the appropriations made for the improvement of rivers and harbors are cited by way of precedent for good road appropriations. It does not seem probable, however, that the national government will relieve the states of the duty of providing good roads, at least in the near future; and meantime the states are showing themselves quite capable of solving the problem. New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York are the pioneers in the work of good road construction on a comprehensive scale. Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Vermont and other states are falling into line, and it is only a question of a few years before every state in the Union will have joined them.

UNIMPROVED ROAD IN SPRING



THE SAME ROAD IMPROVED

The general scheme of road improvement contemplates the construction of macadam or equally serviceable roads between the chief points in each county, so laid out that they will form a continuous network throughout the state. The less important roads are to be improved by methods not so costly. Macadam roads require an outlay for construction of from $5,000 to $10,000 a mile. This heavy initial outlay would be too great a burden for the scattered population of the farming regions to bear unaided. Outside help must be given, and inasmuch as good roads increase the prosperity of the entire state the principle of state aid has been generally accepted as just. It has been adopted in various forms by all the states which have seriously undertaken the improvement of their roads.

Even the portion of the expense which falls upon the localities, is usually too great for them to meet by immediate direct taxation, and here again the state may come to their assistance by lending them its credit so as to enable them to borrow money at a smaller rate of interest than they would otherwise be forced to pay. Naturally, where the state helps to build the roads, their location, construction and maintenance must be under state control through an official or a state commission. This insures the laying out of the roads so that they will form a comprehensive state system, and their maintenance in a condition of efficiency after they have been built.

Another important branch of the good roads movement is the introduction of wide tires on wagons intended to carry heavy loads. Narrow tires are road destroyers, while wide tires are road makers. The narrow tire cuts the road into ruts, the wide tire serves the purpose of a roller in compacting and hardening it. Tests have shown that the same force that is required to move 2,000 pounds on narrow tires will move on broad tires 2,500 pounds on a macadam road, 2,482 on a gravel road, 2,500 on a dirt road and 3,200 on a wet clay road.

Various methods of road improvement have been tried with success in different parts of the country. In California more than 2,500 miles of sandy highways have been made hard and smooth by sprinkling them with crude petroleum, which binds the loose particles of sand together. In Florida phosphate clay has proved to be excellent road material.

Alfalfa Ground.

The alfalfa ground should be put in good condition. Many plow their ground early in April, harrowing thoroughly to make a fine seed-bed, then sow the alfalfa seed with a broadcast seeder. Sow plenty of seed, 18 to 20 pounds per acre. A thin stand gives weeds too good a show while the young alfalfa plants are becoming established.

Why They Fail.

Many fail down on sheep raising because they do not give enough attention to the foundation stock. The ewes must be strong enough and vigorous. These are usually good milkers and they bring strong lambs. Sheep are more financial than cattle or hogs, and they need closer attention.

The Farm Team.

The farm teams should now be exercised daily, and light work will harden them up to the heavy work of late spring. See that the collars and harness fit snugly. It does not take very much now to chaff the shoulders.

VALUABLE FORMULA

WELL-KNOWN AUTHORITY CLAIMS IT IS MOST EFFECTIVE.

Says it Will Break Up a Cold in 24 Hours and Cure Any Cough That is Curable—Inexpensive.

A noted authority on diseases of the throat and lungs, who established a camp for consumptives in the Pine Woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there have attracted great attention from the medical world, says that his entire treatment consisted of fresh air, nourishing food and the Pure Virgin Oil of the White Pine Trees mixed with Whisky and Glycerine, in the following proportions:

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)..½ oz.
Glycerine .... 2 "
Good Whisky .... 8 "

Used in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

It is claimed that the above mixture will heal and strengthen the lungs, break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable.

The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost and can be easily mixed in your own home.

Inquiry at the prescription department of a leading local pharmacy elicited the information that Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is put up only in half-ounce vials for dispensing. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case with engraved wrapper with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure); guaranteed under the Food and Drug Act, June 30, 1906. Prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, O.—plainly printed thereon. Only the cheaper Oils are sold in bulk, but these produce nausea, and never effect the desired results.

Never Overlooked a Chance.

When Bishop Talbot, now of the central Pennsylvania diocese, was "the cowboy bishop" of Idaho and Wyoming he never overlooked an opportunity of securing contributions for the missionary work in which he took such delight. On one occasion, while attending a meeting of church dignitaries in St. Paul, he was chatting with some other clergymen on the steps of his hotel when several hoboes came along. One of them approached and asked for aid. Bishop Talbot took him aside and after a short but earnest conversation the other tramps saw something pass from hand to hand. "What did he give you?" asked the other hoboes when they all started away. "Didn't give me nothing," was the disgusted reply. "I gave him a dollar for his blamed new cathedral in Laramie."

FEW KNOW THIS.

Gives Simple Home Prescription and Directions to Use.

A well-known specialist is authority that Kidney and Bladder Troubles of all kinds are in nearly every instance readily relieved by taking a few doses of the following simple home-made mixture:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

The dose is a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime. These ingredients can be obtained at any good pharmacy, and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle. Victims of Kidney, Bladder and Urinary diseases of any kind should not hesitate to make this prescription up and try it. It comes highly recommended and doesn't cost much to prepare.

Burro Drivers Carry Candles.

In Mexico all vehicles, be they bandcart, automobile, or anything between, must carry a light at night. This rule or law is rigidly enforced. Even the drivers of the poor little burro or mule carts, on their two wheels, must carry a light.

So, rather than buy lanterns, which cost money, they take a dip candle, and wrapping it in a bit of newspaper to shield it from the wind, carry it in their left hand as they drive along homeward from work after evening has fallen. The effect is striking, as the light, falling strongly on the Indian driver, throws the face of the man into strong relief against the darkness.

Worth Knowing About.

If you need a first-class laxative, there is nothing better nor safer than that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills. Each pill contains one grain of solid extract of sarsaparilla, which, with other valuable vegetable products, make it a blood purifier of excellent character. If you are troubled with constipation, one pill at night will afford great relief.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century, and are for sale everywhere, either plain or sugar-coated.

Winston Churchill when he has an important piece of writing before him eats very little meat and cuts his allowance of tobacco in half. He finds that this regime gives unusual clarity to his mind.

Panthers and Grizzly Bears.
Ship Furs Pelts McMillon Fur & Wool Co., Minneapolis, Minn. Write for prices.

Affection consists not in use of carefully prepared utterances.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

All thy virtue dictates, dare to do. —Mason.

Clover & Grass Seeds.

Everybody loves lots and lots of Clover Grasses for hogs, cows, sheep and swine.

We are known as the largest growers of Grasses, Clovers, Oats, Barley, Corn, Potatoes and Farm Seeds in America. Operate over 5,000 acres.

FREE

Our mammoth 148-page catalog is mailed free to all intending buyers; or send

8c IN STAMPS

and receive sample of "perfect balance ration grass seed," together with Fodder Plants, Clover, etc., etc., and big Plant and Seed Catalog free.
John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box W, La Crosse, Wis.

Large Incomes from Pew Rents.
Several London churches receive incomes of $7,500 to $10,000 from pew rents.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.
Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

When doctors disagree it is well for the patient to get up and see if anything really ails him.

Garfield Tea has been famous for years as a remedy for constipation, liver and kidney diseases. Guaranteed under the Pure Food Law.

Satan is willing to let men go to church on Sunday if they work for him the remainder of the week.

ONLY ONE "BROMO QUININE"
That is LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine. Similarly named remedies sometimes deceive. The first and original Cold Tablet is a WHITE PACKAGE with black and red lettering, and bears the signature of E. W. GROVE. 25c.

No cord or cable can draw so forcibly or bind so fast as love can do with a single thread.—Burton.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

Never judge any man's worth by his size. A silver dollar is much larger than a $10 gold piece.

Tone Up With Good Paint

It is good business to keep property "toned up."

A coat of Pure White Lead Paint not only makes things look better and gives them a higher selling value, but it makes things wear better and gives them a higher value for long wear.

Pure White Lead gives an opaque, durable coat that protects and preserves from the ravages of time and weather.

Prospective buyers of Pure White Lead have heretofore been subject to much attempted fraud in adulteration and substitution. You are now protected by the Dutch Boy trade mark which is found on the side of kegs containing only Pure White Lead, made by the Old Dutch Process. Look for the boy.

NATIONAL LEAD CO.

SEND FOR BOOK

"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY
in whichever of the following cities is nearest you:
New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia [John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.] Pittsburgh [National Lead & Oil Co.]

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm
is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once.

It cleanses, soothes, heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts. at Druggists or by mail; Trial size 10 cts. by mail.
Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

PROTECT YOUR IDEAS DON'T DELAY
TO APPLY FOR PATENT
Send for FREE BOOKLET and learn why.
MILO B. STEVENS & CO., 900 14th St., Washington, D. C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. ESTABLISHED 1864.
NO PATENT, NO FEE FOR OUR SERVICES

PARLOR ORGAN ECHOS A choice collection of instrumental and vocal music, for Organ or Piano. Book 1—21 pieces, 25c. Book 2—24 pieces, 25c. Book 3—26 pieces, 25c. To introduce these beautiful collections a copy of either book will be sent postpaid on receipt of 15 cents, stamps or coin. WM. A. POND & CO., 148 5th Ave., New York.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
Largest creamery in the northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die.—Campbell.

We Want Your Cream.
Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Reading furnishes the mind only with materials of knowledge; it is thinking that makes what we read ours.—Locke.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES do not stain the hands or spot the kettle, except green and purple. 10c per package.

Be fit for more than you are now doing.—Garfield.

It Cures While You Walk.
Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Every day in thy life is a leaf in thy history.—Lycurgus.

STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, becomes necessary because of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irregularities, Displacements, Pain in the Side, Dragging Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other one medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in preparing women for child-birth and during the period of Change of Life.

Third, the great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

For more than 30 years has been curing Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and Organic Diseases, and it dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Thus she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health. Write today, don't wait until too late.

SEE THE SOUTHWEST

One great advantage the Southwest has is its equable climate. Here farmwork goes on practically the year round and there is rarely ever a need of providing shelter for stock. The growing season is longer and another crop is frequently grown on the same land after the first has been harvested.

Go Southwest Now

On March 19th, April 2nd and 16th you can see the Southwest very cheaply. Tickets are good 30 days and permit stop-overs. One very desirable feature of the trip via the M. K. & T. Ry. is the diverse route through Oklahoma—you can go through Indian Territory and return through Oklahoma City, or vice versa.

Cheap Trips

Round trip tickets to San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Brownsville, etc., on the first and third Tuesdays of each month:

From Chicago	$25.00
From St. Paul	27.50
From St. Louis	20.00
From Kansas City	20.00

To Oklahoma and Indian Territory the rates are less in many cases.

One way tickets at half the regular rate plus $2.00, e. g., from St. Louis the fare to San Antonio is $15.35; intermediate points in proportion.

Why not investigate the possibilities of this wonderful land? Take a trip in the next excursion and see for yourself. Write me to-day for full information, and ask for a copy of "The Coming Country."

W. S. ST. GEORGE
General Passenger Agent, M. K. & T. Ry.
Wainwright Building Saint Louis, Mo.
W. P. LINDSEY, District Passenger Agent, M. K. & T. Ry., 376 Roberts Street, St. Paul, Minn.
Your nearest railway agent will quote you the rates.

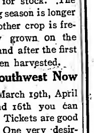
We Are Experts in Making
HOUSE PAINTS

We have been constantly at it for sixty-five years and we know that we make the best and most economical house paints in the world. They have been tested in every conceivable manner for sixty-five years and have never failed.

They last the longest and have greater preservative qualities than other paints. For these reasons, combined with the fact that they cover a greater surface per gallon than other paints, they are by far the cheapest in the end. It is the part of wisdom to demand

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINTS
MANUFACTURED BY
JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD



W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

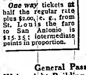
34 YEARS SELLING DIRECT



Our vehicles and harness have been sold direct from our factory to user for a third of a century. We ship for examination and approval and guarantee safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied as to style, quality and price.

We are the Largest Manufacturers in the World selling to the consumer exclusively. We make 200 styles of Vehicles, 65 styles of Harness. Send for large, free catalogue.

No. 654. Top Buggy with Late Automobile Style Seat, Bike Gear and 7/8 in. Guaranteed Rubber Tires. Price, $68.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., Elkhart, Indiana

No. 316. Light, One Horse, Canopy Top Surrey. Price complete, $69.50.

1,000 WIVES WANTED at ONCE or their husbands in every State and Territory to sell QUICK MEAL OIL-GAS-AIR BURNER. 100,000 sold. Just show it to your neighbor and a sale is made. Big profits, easy work. Write to-day for full particulars FREE. EWING MARVIN MANUFACTURING CO., 50 Lagrange, Ill.

MILLIONS USE

Cuticura
SOAP
MEDICINAL AND TOILET
PRICE 25 CENTS
EMOLLIENT, SANATIVE, ANTISEPTIC, FRAGRANT & REFRESHING.
FOR SKIN, SCALP, HAIR, HANDS
FOR THE TOILET, BATH, NURSERY
FOR SHAVING AND SHAMPOOING

THE WORLD'S FAVOURITE

For Preserving, Purifying and Beautifying the Skin, Scalp, Hair, and Hands.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal and emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of saponaceous ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odors. Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, U.S.A., 137 Columbus Ave., Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props.

Fertile Farming
LANDS
Cheap
Easy Terms
In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.
Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.
Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.
Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

NEW WHEAT LANDS IN THE CANADIAN WEST

160 ACRE
FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

5,000 additional miles of railway this year have opened up a largely increased territory to the progressive farmers of Western Canada and the Government of the Dominion continues to give ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE to every settler.

THE COUNTRY HAS NO SUPERIOR

Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access; taxes low; climate the best in the northern temperate zone. Law and order prevails everywhere. For advice and information address the SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Oh! What a Cold I HAVE.
You can quickly get rid of it by taking
Johnson's Anodyne Liniment
DROPPED ON SUGAR.
It's as much for Internal as External use, and for 96 years has been curing colds, coughs, croup, cramps and colic. Try it. 25 and 50 cents. At all dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

DO YOU BURN KEROSENE?

If so get one-third more light with a "BING GLASS CONE LAMP BURNER." The glass top does it. They are great—fit common lamps. Send your dealers name to-day and 25c for a BING—size No. 1 or 2 post paid. BING BURNER CO. Dept. 44, Minneapolis, Minn.

CHEAP LANDS Unexcelled for general farming, stock, dairying, fruits, trucks, etc.; convenient to the very best markets and transportation facilities. Write nearest office for lists and publications. M. V. Richards, Land and Industrial Agent, Southern Ry. and Mobile & Ohio R.R., Washington, D.C. G. S. Chase, West. Agt., 624 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

YEARS OF THE EARTH

THIS WORLD OF OURS COUNTS THEM BY THE MILLIONS.

Various Calculations by Which the Famous Scientists Have Endeavored to Figure Out the Age of the Planet Upon Which We Live.

The time has admittedly gone by for attempting to "reconcile the facts of nature," to use a recognized phrase, with the chronology of the Bible, which makes the age of the world rather less than 6,000 years.

Indeed, in the Egyptian rooms at the British museum the visitor can see for himself objects which go back to an authenticated period long antecedent to 4,000 years B. C., and great is the wonder produced on the minds of those who first make their acquaintance.

In that same department, among the mummies, there is what is in many respects the most striking of the exhibits in the department—the body of a man who belongs to the stone age. It lies in an accurate representation of the peculiarly shaped grave in which it was found, and it has been in consequence somewhat irreverently nicknamed by the habitues of the museum "the man in the pie dish."

The particular interest in that corpse, which men, women and even children look upon without the least thought or suggestion of the fear or horror usually inseparable from death, is that it is unquestionably the oldest exhibit in the museum, and scientists have been rather struck by the fact that the authorities of the great institution in Great Russell street have not, so to say, taken the bull by the horns, boldly labeled that exhibit as dating from 50,000 B. C. Thus with one single stroke of the pen Bishop Usher's Biblical chronology is multiplied by about nine, and it may be that an even higher number would be required to satisfy the requirements of the age of that particular specimen.

How long has the earth been a planet capable of supporting not only human, but any form of life?

In an address Lord Kelvin once delivered on this subject he gathered together the opinions of various scientific men which cannot but be of interest to every thinking being. Darwin, in his "Origin of Species," stated that, "in all probability a far longer period than 300,000,000 years has elapsed;" while later on, in the same book, he stated: "He who can read Sir Charles Lyell's grand work on the 'Principles of Geology,' which the future historian will recognize as having produced a revolution in natural science, yet does not admit how incomprehensibly vast have been the past periods of time, may at once close this volume."

Lord Kelvin himself—then Professor William Thomson—later made an attempt to calculate the length of time during which the sun has been burning at the present rate, and in that connection he wrote: "It seems on the whole most probable that the sun has not illuminated the earth for 100,000,000 years and almost certain that it has not done so for 500,000,000 years. As for the future we may say with equal certainty that the inhabitants of the earth cannot continue to enjoy the light and heat essential to their life for many million years longer unless new sources, now unknown to us, are prepared in the great storehouse of creation."

It is a remarkable evidence of the acute perception of Lord Kelvin's mind, as of the rare prevision of his intellect, that the last words—"unless new sources, now unknown to us, are prepared in the great storehouse of creation"—should have been added to that remarkable sentence.

As an example of the very extraordinary range of time given to the age of the earth, consider the following statement from Professor Jukes' "Students' Manual of Geology." He wrote: "Mr. Darwin estimates the time required for the denudation of the rocks of the weald of Kent, or the erosion of space between the ranges of chalk hills known as the north and south downs, at 300,000,000 years. It may be possible, perhaps, that the estimate is a hundred times too great, and that the actual time required did not exceed 3,000,000 years, but, on the other hand, it is just possible that the time which has elapsed since the first commencement of the erosion till it was reduced to its shape as it now is was ten or a hundred times greater than his estimate, or 30,000,000,000 years."

Professor Phillips in a lecture at the University of Cambridge considered the rate of erosion between the ranges of the north and south downs to be rather one inch a year than Darwin's estimate of one inch in a hundred years, so that on mere geological grounds he reduced the time to about a hundredth. Calculating, however, the actual thickness of all the known geological strata of the earth he came to the conclusion that life on the earth's surface may probably date back to between 38,000,000 and 96,000,000 years.

Professor Sollas of Oxford, working on new principles applied to the stratified rocks, reduced this time very considerably, for he wrote, "So far as I can at present see, the lapse of time since the beginning of the Cambrian system is probably less than 17,000,000 years, even when computed on an assumption of uniformity, which to me seems contradicted by the most salient facts of geology."

What are the data, it will naturally be asked, on which calculations of this magnitude are made? Among the most important are the consideration of the underground heat which is constantly being conducted out of the earth—in other words, the cooling of the earth—the speed at which the earth rotates on its axis as well as physical properties of rocks at high temperatures.

The loss of heat by conduction was

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905 at 11:30 o'clock A. M., in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof.

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn. mar21-m 2

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Mar. 7, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that Richmond Desotel of Terrebonne, Minn., has filed notice of his intention to make final five year proof in support of his claim, viz:

Homestead entry No. 22931, made March 21, 1902, for the SE¼ NE¼ Section 21, Township 150 N., Range 43 W., and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on April 17, 1907.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, the land, viz:

Harmidas Sauve, Arthur Archambault, Joseph St Martin and Louis Terrup, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

R. J. Montague, Register.

Notice of Lein and Sale of Personal Property.

Notice is hereby given that Otto Zaiser and Fred Zaiser, co-partners as Zaiser Bros. claim and have a lein upon the following described personal property, towit: One bay horse called "Prince," weight about 950 pounds, the property of S. A. Swanson, for the care, feeding, keeping and boarding of said horse, which care, feeding, keeping, and boarding was furnished at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota at the request of said owner from and ever since September 18th, 1906 to and including the date hereof, at the agreed price of ten dollars per month, which became due more than ninety days prior to the date hereof.

And said Zaiser Bros. will sell said horse at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of Zaiser Bros. Livery Stable in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, Minnesota, on the 6th day of April, A. D. 1907, at 2 o'clock P. M., to pay the amount then due to claimants upon said lein-claim, which amount, exclusive of the expenses of advertising and sale, is hereby stated to be the sum of sixty-six dollars, of which three dollars have been paid, and to pay also the reasonable disbursements of advertising and sale thereof.

Dated March 20th, 1907.

Otto Zaiser and Fred Zaiser,
Co-partners as Zaiser Bros.
m21-m28 Claimants.

Don't Grind
YOUR LIFE AWAY
Become a demonstrator and earn $5.00 to $10.00 a day. Men or Women. Guaranteed salary if wanted. Household necessity—sells like magic. Our factory working overtime. Act today.
COLONIAL SUPPLY CO.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Four hundred fifty-six and 78-100 Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Edward Hebert and Victoline Hebert, mortgagors, to First State Bank of Brooks, mortgagee, bearing date the 12th day of September, 1905, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of September, 1905, at 2 o'clock p m., in book 34 of mortgages, on page 359, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The west half of the north east quarter of section fourteen (14), in township one hundred fifty (150) of range forty-two (42) and lots numbered five (5) and (6) in block numbered five (5), in the townsite of Brooks, in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the west front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county and state, on the 30th day of March, 1907, at 10 o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Four hundred fifty-six and 78-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises, and Twenty-five dollers, attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law: subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated, Red Lake Falls, Minn., Feb. 13, A. D. 1907.

First State Bank of Brooks,
Mortgagee.
I. C. Simons, Attorney. f14-m21

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR LIQUOR LICENSE.

State of Minnesota,
County of Red Lake } ss
City of Red Lake Falls

Notice is hereby given, that application has been made in writing to the city council of said city of Red Lake Falls and filed in my office, praying for License to Sell Intoxicating Liquors for the term commencing on March 25th, 1907, and terminating on March 24, 1908, by the following person, and at the following place as stated in said application, respectively, to-wit:

WM. H. KRUEGER,

In that certain frame building situate on lot 14 of block 7 in Champagne and Dowe' Addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Said application will be heard and determined by said city council of the city of Red Lake Falls at the city hall in the city of Red Lake Falls in Red Lake county, and state of Minnesota, on Thursday the 21st day of March, A. D. 1907, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Witness my hand and seal of the city of Red Lake Falls this 11th day of March, A. D. 1907.

[Seal] A. P. Toupin,
m14 City Clerk.

Citation for Hearing on Petition to Sell, Mortgage or Lease Land.

Estate of Berget Vettleson, Decedent.

State of Minnesota,
County of Red Lake. } ss

In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Berget Vettleson, Decedent,

The State of Minnesota to Halvor Vettleson, Hulda Maria Vettleson, William Vettleson, Mabel Theoliana Vettleson, Louis Vettleson, Thea Helena Vettleson, Laura Elvira Vettleson, Helena Bertina Vettleson and Joseph Vettleson and all persons interested in the sale of certain lands belonging to said decedent: The petition of Thomas Germo as representative of the above named decedent, being duly filed in this court, representing that it is necessary and for the best interests of said estate and all interested therein that certain lands of said decedent described therein be sold and praying that a license be to him granted to sell the same:

Now Therefore, you and each of you are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this court at the Probate Court Rooms in the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 10th day of April 1907, at 10 o'clock a. m., why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness the Judge of said Court, and the seal of said court, this 11th day of March, 1907.

N. W. Tarrant,
(Court Seal) Judge of Probate Court.
Germo & Farley,
Attorneys for Petitioner. m14-m28

NOTICE OF HEARING ON JUDICIAL DITCH NO. 5.

State of Minnesota,
County of Polk. } ss

District Court,
Fourteenth Judicial District.

Notice of hearing in the matter of Judicial Ditch Number Five (5), Polk and Red Lake Counties.

Notice is hereby given that a hearing will be had at the Village Hall in the Village of Erskine, Polk county, Minnesota, on Saturday the 23rd day of March, 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day upon the remonstrance made in this matter against the draining or lowering of Badger Lake, it being claimed that some of the persons who signed the remonstrance were not legally qualified to sign such remonstrance, and some of those who signed it having asked that their names be withdrawn from such remonstrance, and the court having ordered that a hearing on said matter be had at said time and place.

Dated March 9th, 1907.

W. A. Lanntot,
Clerk of the District Court,
Polk County, Minnesota.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by L. A. Dautremont and Laura E. Dautremont, his wife, mortgagors, to Phil A. Kaufer, mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota on 12th day of September, 1903, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., in book 21 of mortgages on page 168, by the terms of which mortgage the following described premises were described in, mortgaged and conveyed to said mortgagee, to-wit: Lots nine (9), ten (10), and the north ten (10) feet of lot eleven (11), in block seven (7) in Champagne and Dow's addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the corrected plat thereof, being in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 9th day of September in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note: by failure to pay the $1000 falling due on the 9th day of September, 1904 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the year 1905, and whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay said note or any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said real estate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable:

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon to the date hereof the sum of one thousand one hundred eighteen dollars, ($1118.00.)

And Whereas, because of said defaults and each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the west front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls, in said county, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1907, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the attorney's fees of $25.00 and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Dated Feb. 26, 1907.

—Phil A. Kaufer.
Mortgagee.
Chas. E. Boughton,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls. f28-a4

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of seven hundred one and 98-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Rudolf Warberg and Katharina Warberg, his wife, mortgagors, to Ralph Rogers mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of April 1903, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, on the 18th day of April, A. D. 1903, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., in book 29 of mortgages, on page 29

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Ralph Rogers mortgagee, to G. B. Ward by written assignment dated the 15th day of October 1906, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 13th day of November 1906, at 1:00 o'clock P. M.; in book 32 of mortgages on page 391.

Which said mortgage, together with said debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said G. B. Ward, the assignee and holder thereof, to Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, a corporation, by written asignment dated the 13th day of November, 1906, and recorded on the 22nd day of November, 1906, at 3:10 o'clock P. M., in book 15 mortgages page 339, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

North east quarter of section numbered twenty-eight (28), in township numbered one hundred fifty (150), north of range forty-one (41), west of the 5th P. M. in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city or Red Lake Falls in said county and state, on the 23rd day of March, 1907, at 11:00 o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of seven hundred one and 98-100 dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty and no-100 dollars, attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated, February 6th, 1907.

Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls,
Assignee of Mortgagee.
F. A. Grady, Attorney for
Assignee of Mortgagee, f7-m21
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

SHIP YOUR GRAIN. We are the only firm in this city dealing exclusively with the farmer. All Millers know that our cars are of one grade and not elevator mixed, which explains why our service is more satisfactory than any other concern. Submit us samples for grades, etc.
COOPER COMMISSION CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Tell Your Friends About It.

You may have friends in the east, who would be gald to move to the west, if they knew what opportunities are here. Send us their names, we will be glad to send them a bulletin on Montana and North Dakota.

Souvenir Playing Cards

Great Northern Railway Cards, 15c per pack; Great Northern Steamship cards, 25c per pack. Both are sold at actual cost. The Great Northern Steamship cards are gilt edged. Mailed to any address on receipt of price. Send stamps or money order.

MAY WE HELP YOU PLAN YOUR TRIP?

Two trains daily. Standards and Tourist Sleepers.

THE ORIENTAL LIMITED, THE FAST MAIL.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather. the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near oor idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
Minnesota Historical Society

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MARCH 28, 1907 No 26

DISTRICT COURT MILL GRINDING OUT WORK

March Term Of District Court For Red Lake County In Session Here This Week.

Several Cases Tried And Others Settled Term Will Likely Continue All of Next Week.

The March term of the District Court for Red Lake county was convened at the court house in this city Monday, with the Hon. William Watts on the bench.

Nothing much was done in the morning, but in the afternoon the court got down to business in earnest, and since that time very satisfactory progress has been made, it being thought that the jury cases will be wound up by Saturday night, with the exception of the criminal counts.

The following is a brief resume of the cases tried, settled and disposed of thus far:

O. A. Aabol vs. St. Hilaire Lumber company, damage case arising from the erection of a dam in the Red Lake river by defendants, abutting plaintiff's land in Rocksbury. The case was finished last evening and went to the jury after supper.

Felix Fournet vs. Eli Lasha; suit on notes, judgment for plaintiff in amount claimed, defendant's answer withdrawn.

First National Bank of Crookston vs. Russel E. Vance and Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls; settled out of court.

Stone-Ordean Wells company vs. J. F. Mathews; settled, judgment for plaintiff.

Great Northern Railway company vs. Wylie Farmers' Elevator company; dismissed.

John Florin vs. J. K. Johnson, Theo. LaBissoniere, H. J. Kaufer, John Deutschman and M. Skala; suit against bondsmen of Contractor Johnson for material furnished him in the construction of the Washington school building in this city. This case has been noticed for trial this term, but it is expected that it will go over and be tried later in chambers.

Case of John Haley and Eliza Haley vs. the Great Northern Railroad company; this was a personal injury suit for a large amount, and promised to develop some interesting testimony. The plaintiff's alleged that as a result of a shock sustained in a wreck on the defendant's railroad, Eliza Haley gave premature birth to a child, thereby impairing her health, and restitution was demanded. The company sent a detective to Thief River Falls and as a result of his investigation a large number of prominent Thief River business men and others were subpoenaed to appear as witnesses, and it was hinted that had the case came to trial some decidedly interesting developments would have been forthcoming. The jury was empaneled but before the trial started the company's attorney made a final offer of settlement, which was accepted, and the deal was off. The plaintiff's were given $1500 in settlement of the three cases on the calendar and withdrew the complaints.

The case of Joseph Brohman vs. George Singer, an appeal from the justice court, [illegible] today and will likely be finished tonight.

It is probable that with the criminal matters and few remaining civil cases court will be in session nearly all of next week.

FARM HOME BURNS.

The farm residence of Paul Cyr, west of the city was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday night, the building and all the contents being entirely consumed. The origin of the fire is not known, but it had gained such headway when discovered that nothing much could be saved. Mr. Cyr estimates his loss at $1500, with $100 insurance.

See us for that Easter suit for the boys; bargains in caps and shoes too.

ARBOR DAY PROCLAMATION

Govenor Johnson Proclaims April 26 the Day for Planting Trees In Minnesota.

Spring poetry stirred the blood of Governor John A. Johnson Friday when he dictated his annual Arbor day proclamation. The governor grew sentimental when he thought that for one day Minnesota people will plant trees instead of destroying them. Here is what he said:

"When, following the law and custom of our state, I hereby proclaim Friday April 26, as Arbor and Bird day for 1907, private pleasure collaborates with official duty.

"The place and purpose of the tree in history, its dignity and worth, are they not set forth in the chronicles of christendom that all the world may read, from it's first mention in the first chapter of the first book on to that last Revealation of the world unseen, where, 'In the midst of the street of it * * * was there the tree of life, * * * and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations?'

Throughout all time man has been the tree's sincere worshipper. In his boyhood he sought its green heights; in his youth he walked beneath its whispering branches; in his age he sat content in its sympathetic shade; 'after life's fitful fever, he sleeps well'—at the foot of it. The influence of this lifelong companionship is deep, lasting and visible.

"Quite apart from the indirect force in the mass as a factor of climate, we have daily testimony of its power to mold in the character of the Norseman, austern, independent, strong as his native pine; the Briton, rugged, honest, outspreading as his much-sung oak; the German, true forester and forest-lover that he is, full of sentiment as his linden, musical as his fir, sturdy as his beeches. Out of a state peopled by such races, what may we not hope for? Surely, the rights of the forest will be reverenced; surely the forest will make royal return.

"Let the day of this proclamation be observed far and wide among us, in deed and in spirit, in school, home and mart. Let the highways be embellished; make crooked paths straight, rough places smooth. Let consecration of aim unite with concentration of effort toward making of Minnesota one vast landscape garden, where the workings of nature are cunningly aided, not held in thrall by man; where song sparrow may sing in the hedgerows, while meadow lark and bobolink trill their sweetness from the topmost boughs, 'and none shall make them afraid.'"

GRAND JURY MAKES REPORT

August Body Completes Two Days' Session and is Discharged Last Evening.

The grand jury returned the report of its findings to the court last evening, after having been in session two days, and were discharged with the thanks of the court for their faithful service.

On convening Tuesday morning, Russel E. Vance was chosen foreman, and the work before them was taken up. A large number of witnesses were examined on different matters, and while nothing is given out as to what they did, it is hinted that seven indictments were returned. Nothing is known as to their nature, other than that two of them are against the Soo brakeman now held in the county jail here.

They will probably be public property in a very short time, however, as soon as those who counts have been issued against are brought before the court.

Monday is April Fool day.

KODOL digests what you eat and quickly overcomes Indigestion, which is a forerunner of Dyspepsia. It is made in strict conformity to the National Pure Food and Drugs Law and is sold on a guarantee relief plan. Sold by all druggists.

Concert Was Good.

The March band concert, given at the Met last Thursday evening, was well patronized, and as is the habit the organization gave a splendid accounting of itself, the entire program being one of keen enjoyment. The band numbers were all good and were given liberal applause. The specialties were also of an unusually high order, and were all enthusiastically received. Clem Brunelle played a pretty cornet solo, which was very well rendered. Mrs. E. F. Marshall sang "The Swallow" in a delightfully pleasing manner and was given a hearty encore. The band orchestra rendered two pleasing numbers and the specialties were finished by a clarinet solo by Bandmaster Bruckmnn, accompanied on the piano by Miss Igna Hamry. The solo was a very heavy one, but nothing like that bothers the Herr Bruckman, and his work was away ahead of anything ever heard here before. The accompaniment to the solo was also very fine, and this number was surely one of the finest features of the winter's series of concerts. The concert for April will terminate the indoor series, and an effort will be made to have several features entirely out of the ordinary incorporated in the program.

Pleth Won't Leave.

Julius Pleth, the hustling Plummer real estate dealer, has announced his intention of remaining in Red Lake county, and will not leave Plummer for the cities, as was intended. The news of Mr. Pleth's decision to remain with us will surely be well received by his legion of friends in all parts of the county, as there is no one who knows Julius but what is anxious to have him remain a resident of the best county in the valley. Mr. Pleth plans on a big business in the real estate line during the coming summer, and the Gazette hopes he will get it—and more.

Best confectionery in the city at Freund's.

SOO BRAKEMAN HELD ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Languishes In The County Jail In This City Indicted Under Two Different Counts.

R. B. Hamilton, of Thief River Falls, Must Stand Trial For Rape and Indecent Assault.

County Attorney Germo and Sheriff Nelson were called to Thief River Falls Monday on a very serious criminal case, and as a result of their visit R. B. Hamilton, a brakeman on the Soo line west from Thief River Falls, is held in the county jail in this city, awaiting trial on the charge of rape. It is understood that the grand jury returned two separate counts against him, one for rape and one for indecent assault, and it possible that he will be tried on both charges.

Hamilton is a freight brakeman on the Soo, and the complainant is at Thief River Falls. She alleges that she boarded the freight at Viking last Monday morning to go to Thief River Falls, and that while alone in the caboose with Hamilton the assault was committed. On reaching Thief River Falls she at once complained to the authorities, with the result that Hamilton was arrested and brought down to the county jail here that evening. His bail was placed at $4000, in default of which he is kept in confinement. It is probable that the trial will come up Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Hamilton, of course, professes innocence of any assault, and the conductor and other brakeman of the crew are here and will be witnesses in the case. Hamilton's wife and her sister have also been here since Monday and will remain for the trial.

County Attorney Germo will conduct the case for the state, and Hamilton will be defended by Attorney Perl W. Mabey, of Thief River Falls, and Attorney F. A. Grady, of this city.

BERTHON & ARMSTRONG
Leading Men and Boys Clothing Outfitters

A PERSONAL VISIT

Will demonstrate to your entire satisfaction that this is the best store for Men and Young Men's things to wear.

Our Clothes are beyond criticism in QUALITY, FIT, and STYLE. It's entirely impossible for our customers to get a wrong thing, and besides it is our hobby to specialize for men and young men of taste.

Easter Gloves, tans and grays, $1.50 and $2.00
Spring Weight Underwear, 50c
Shirts of reputation, dotted ground Percales, striped Madras, checks and box pleats, $1.00 and $1.50
Exclusive patterns in Bengaline and beoche bengaline Neckwear, 50c
Spring Weight Underwear, 50c and $1.00
Spring weight Suspenders, vari-colored effects, genuine Guyot Suspenders, 50c
Latest Spring Half-hose conception, Magenta, Niles, etc., 25c

Unparalled Choice in WALK-OVER SHOES

We have the agency for the Knox $5 Derby and Knox $2.50 Crushers.
We thank you for a look.

JIM & PAUL

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Criglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT HOME TOLD IN CONDENSED FORM.

LATE FOREIGN DISPATCHES

Interesting Items of News Gathered from All Parts of the Globe and Outlined in the Briefest Manner Possible.

RESUME OF THAW TRIAL.

[illegible] Attorney Jerome appealed to the [illegible] to stop the Thaw trial, [illegible] Thaw was insane and [illegible] directing his counsel. The [illegible] delayed for two days while the [illegible] inquired into Thaw's mental condition and decided whether or not to appoint a commission in lunacy.

In the Thaw trial the case for the people was closed by the introduction of the Hummel affidavit, in which Evelyn Nesbit accused Thaw of repeatedly whipping and lashing her brutally when they were in Europe together, according to Hummel. Miss Nesbit also swore she would not sign statements which Thaw had prepared accusing Stanford White of having drugged and ruined her.

Able Attorney Delmas fighting every inch of the way, District Attorney Jerome secured from Abraham Hummel his complete story as to the affidavit which it is alleged Evelyn Nesbit Thaw made in the lawyer's office in 1903 charging Harry K. Thaw with beating her when she told him that the statement that Stanford White had drugged and ruined her was not true.

A schoolmate of Harry K. Thaw's in Wooster (O.) University has made a statement denying the stories of Thaw's wild life in that institution.

Reports that Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw had collapsed and that Abe Hummel faces prosecution for perjury as a result of his testimony about the affidavit accusing Harry Thaw of cruelty toward Evelyn, were prevalent. The closing of the case for the defense was delayed a day. Thaw sent $100 to the flood sufferers at Pittsburg.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The grand jury at San Francisco returned 65 indictments against Abraham Ruef charging the bribery of members of the board of supervisors in connection with overhead trolley and prize fight permits, 85-cent gas rate and telephone franchise. Ten indictments were returned against T. V. Halsey for bribery in connection with the telephone franchise.

A duel with swords, that went six rounds, was fought at Paris between Emmanuel Arene, senator from Corsica, and Adolphe Brisson, a journalist. Both contestants were wounded in the arm.

The armies of Honduras and Salvador made an attack on the Nicaraguans at Namasigue and both sides claim a victory.

In the Hermann land fraud trial A. D. Puter told how he paid money to Dr Loomis and to Senator Mitchell and arranged with Hermann for the fraudulent issue of patents to 12 homesteads.

Several bridge builders and individuals were indicted at Freeport, Ill., for conspiracy to prevent competition and for bribery.

Gov. Folk called an extra session of the Missouri legislature to begin April 9.

Alonzo L. Hart, of Detroit, Mich., was fined $6,000 for illegally manufacturing oleomargarine.

W. H. Martin, a prominent citizen of Detroit and a director of the Michigan Mutual Life Insurance company, was drowned while surf bathing at San Diego, Cal.

J. A. Wild, 55 years old, a prominent lumberman of Hoffman, Minn., died on a Missouri, Kansas & Texas train just before reaching St. Louis.

A bill forbidding state officials from using or soliciting free passes on the railroads, passed both houses of the New Hampshire legislature.

Six men were killed by an explosion in the Emporium powder mill near Emporium, Pa.

Mrs. Russel Sage gave $150,000 for the erection of a new sailors' home in New York.

The fish store of Joseph Tusa in Philadelphia was wrecked by a bomb supposed to have been thrown by "Black Hand" agents.

Frank H. Jones, assistant cashier of the Charlotte National bank of Charlotte, N. C., is missing with $68,000 of the bank's funds.

Two men arrested in New York for attempting to smuggle $25,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry are wanted abroad for a $35,000 robbery.

Two hundred and fifty pounds of dynamite exploded in Cincinnati and did great damage to a hospital and many residences and stores.

Miss Josie Gray, cashier of a furniture store at Evansville, Ind., was locked in the safe by robbers who escaped with several thousand dollars.

Mgr. Thomas P. Thorpe, a well known prelate in the Cleveland diocese of the Roman Catholic church, died of arterial sclerosis.

The coast line of the Southern Pacific railway was completely blocked by a landslide that closed the long Santa Margarita tunnel in the mountains north of San Luis Obispo.

John Blake, an employe of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company, met his wife Mary, in South Boston, shot her and then committed suicide. The woman may live.

The lining of a furnace of the Woodward iron company at Woodward, Ala., fell in and hundreds of tons of brick and mortar buried a number of workmen. Five dead bodies were taken from the debris.

A bomb was exploded in front of Judge Ogden's house in Oakland, Cal. The whole front of the house was destroyed, but none of the inmates was injured.

A south-bound homeseekers' excursion train on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad was derailed at Ldue, Mo. A number of passengers received bruises, but none was seriously hurt.

Edward Howell, colored, president of the Peoples bank of Harrisburg, Miss., was shot in the back and killed.

Two colored women, accused of a murderous attack on a white woman, were killed by a mob near Stamps, Ark.

S. E. Howell, president of the Omaha coal exchange, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 and serve six months in the county jail for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Benjamin Parker, in the burning of whose boarding house at Mayfield, Ky., one man lost his life, was indicted for murder and arson.

John Harrison was convicted at Elizabeth City, N. J., of kidnaping the son of former State Senator Beasley.

The "L. X." ranch of 200,000 acres in the Texas panhandle was sold for about $1,000,000 and will be cut into farms.

"Suffragettes" of London made another raid on parliament and about 70 were arrested.

An American mail bag whose contents were worth about $400,000 was stolen from the French line steamer La Provence.

A turn of sinister and widespread significance was given to the Central American war by the finding, on the persons of captured Nicaraguan soldiers, of proclamations promising them the loot of the first cities which they can capture in both Honduras and Salvador.

President Roosevelt conferred with Charles S. Mellen, head of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, on the railway situation.

Heavy rains in western Pennsylvania caused new floods in the Pittsburg district. Floods in Nevada and California did great damage.

Thousands of Roumanian Jews, attacked and plundered by peasants, fled into Austria. The town of Botosahni was nearly destroyed by flames.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich, the author, died at his home in Boston.

The members of the Nashville city council were arrested for contempt on warrants issued by the Tennessee house of representatives.

Mrs. Margaret Harold Davidge, for many years well known in theatrical circles, died of heart disease following the arrest of her son for murder.

Henry T. Jaeger, general passenger agent of the Erie railroad, died at Buffalo, N. Y.

The Citizens State bank of Firth, Neb., was closed by the state banking board. The cashier is missing.

The mercury registered 102 degrees in the shade at Guthrie, Okla., breaking all heat records for the territory.

The national Saengerfest at Indianapolis, Ind., has been postponed until 1908.

Count Lamsdorff, former Russian minister of foreign affairs, died at San Remo.

Six hundred men employed by the Interstate Steel company at Hammond, Ind., struck for higher wages.

Mrs. James Tolbert was brutally assaulted and her two-months-old baby was murdered by a negro at Fairmont, Ga.

Three men blew the safe of the bank at Diamond, Mo., and escaped with $600 after Cashier Brookshire had fired five times at them.

The federal grand jury at Chicago will be asked to find new indictments against John R. Walsh, the former president of the Chicago National bank.

Herbert A. Graves, a young architect, was shot and painfully wounded in Kenosha, Wis. It is thought the shot was fired by a woman disguised as a man.

Former Deputy Manuel Talavera has been fatally wounded in a duel at Asuncion, Paraguay, with Lieut. Crispin Torres. Pistols were used. The former deputy fell at the first shot.

Attorney Arthur Clinton, chairman of the Edgar county Republican central committee, and Alvan Long, justice of the peace, both of Paris, Ill., have been indicted on charges of conspiracy to defraud by suing on a forged note for $10,000.

Fire at Augusta, Ga., ruined the office of the Augusta Chronicle, the main offices of the Western Union Telegraph company and the Union city ticket office.

Accosting Miss Dudez Dobson, his 17-year-old sweetheart, on the main street of Pointe a la Hache, La., Whitney Moliere, a young planter, asked her to marry him and upon being refused shot and killed the girl and himself.

Capt. Kosiloff of the East Siberia Sharpshooters, resenting a slur on the Russian army in a St. Petersburg hotel dining room, cut off the ear of Prince Nikaridge of Kutias, and was shot twice by the prince.

Lloyd C. Griscom, the new American ambassador to Italy, was received by King Victor Emmanuel.

Brig. Gen. John Moore, U. S. A., retired, former surgeon general of the army, died in Washington, aged 81 years. He was a native of Indiana.

About 40 members of Upton Sinclair's colony met at Englewood, N. J., near the ruins of Helicon hall, and decided not to abandon their cooperative effort.

The United States armored cruiser squadron has arrived at Shanghai. It is reported that Ensign John C. Fremont, Jr., jumped overboard in a heavy overcoat and rescued a doctor who was near drowning.

Dr. Julius H. Weinsberg, of St. Louis, was mortally shot by his son when the latter discovered that the doctor's wife was his stepmother.

Frank Dutton and Alcene Ross eloped from Virginia to Hellier, Ky. Sam Rose, brother of the girl, followed them to Hellier, where in a pistol duel he killed Dutton and almost immediately after was himself shot by Elias Dutton, brother of Frank.

As the result of a collision between a passenger and freight train at Turushiobe station, Manchuria, 17 persons were killed and 35 injured.

Judge Munger in the federal court at Omaha sentenced Bartlett Richards, W. G. Comstock, C. C. Jameson and Aequilla Triplett to fines and jail imprisonment for conspiracy to defraud the United States government out of public lands.

It was reported that the authorities of Erie, Pa., had found the kidnaped son of Dr. Horace Marvin.

Two persons were killed and ten injured at Cincinnati by the collapse of a flood-weakened house.

The port of Trujillo, Honduras was captured by the Nicaraguan naval forces. Salvador was said to have allied itself openly with Honduras.

E. P. Ripley of the Santa Fe, said that President Roosevelt was responsible for the present uncertain conditions in Wall street and attributed the recent semi-panic to "brush fire which the president started."

President Roosevelt announced the appointment of John E. Fader, of Columbus, O., as United States district judge for the southern district of Ohio.

David Vannecken was arrested at Kokomo, Ind., for an alleged attempt to wreck a Pennsylvania passenger train.

A local option bill, with an emergency clause, was passed by the legislature of Colorado. It is approved by Gov. Buchtel.

The grand jury of San Francisco was said to have uncovered further municipal corruption involving the board of supervisors.

The lower house of the New Mexico legislature voted to investigate the charges against Gov. Hagerman, who is accused of a land fraud.

Rear Admiral Benjamin F. Tilley, commandant at League Island navy yard, died of double pneumonia.

The railway commission of Canada ordered the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk railroads to reduce passenger rates to three cents a mile.

Upton Sinclair, whose cooperative colony house, Helicon hall, near Englewood, N. J., was destroyed by fire, admitted that three weeks ago enough dynamite was found in the cellar of the building to have blown the structure to fragments.

Victor Emmanuel Orlande has been appointed minister of justice in the Italian cabinet in the place of the late Sig. Caio.

Calvary Baptist church, Lexington, Ky., built last year at a cost of $50,000, was destroyed by fire with all its contents.

One man was killed and two fatally injured in a wreck of a gravel train at Robinson, Ill.

Walter Pelham, an English author and playwright, died of pneumonia at the Mansion house, Garrison-on-the-Sound. He was 73 years old.

W. J. Rhees, keeper of archives of the Smithsonian institution, died of heart failure in Washington, D. C. Mr. Rhees had been connected with the institution since 1852.

The Elder-Dempster liner Jebba was wrecked on the rocks near Prawle Point, England, but all aboard were saved.

A negro who says he is one of the discharged troopers of the Twenty-fifth infantry confessed that the colored soldiers did the shooting at Brownsville, Tex., and said many of them helped to clean the guns.

Three masked men held up the passenger station of Macon, Mo., and got away with $200.

The appearance of several smallpox cases in Paris caused a great rush to get vaccinated.

M. Berthelot, who was foreign minister of France in the Bourgeois cabinet, died suddenly on being told his wife had expired.

Pedro Marcos, a lawyer, of Valladolid, Spain, his two children, their nurse and a young lady were drowned by their carriage and horse falling from a bridge into the canal.

Tests made by the ordnance department of the army proved that four rifles from company B, Twenty-fifth infantry were used in the Brownsville raid. The "confession" of a discharged trooper at Galveston was declared to be a fake.

It was reported that John D. Rockefeller had provided in his will a gift of $250,000,000 for charity and education and was about to give $50,000,000 to New York city.

Gen. Joseph Stockton, a civil war veteran and one of Chicago's oldest residents, died aged 74 years.

Copies of official papers show that the original cause of the dispute that has brought on the war between Honduras and Nicaragua was the theft of a mule by Nicaraguan cavalrymen.

Word was received of a terrible massacre of Jews in Podihilo, Roumania.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, March 16—With close to 200 bills piled up and clogging general orders, the house in committee of the whole today got another oratorical fever and wasted much precious time in wafting "hot air" towards the galleries. The most important bill considered was the W. I. Nolan bill, a copy of the municipal ownership Mueller law of Illinois. The bill was finally recommended for passage and passed to the calendar, the place of its final consideration by the house. The Rachie bill, requiring the governor to appoint the state railroad commissioners, was a subject of lengthy discussion. It was finally amended by A. J. Rockne with a proviso that the commission be increased from 3 to 5 members, two to be at once appointed by the governor for four year terms, after which all members shall be elective. Mr. Rockne deplored attacks which had been made on the state railroad commission, calling attention to the vast amount of work the commission always has on hand, and saying that in view of this work the commissioners deserve much commendation.

Among new bills in the house today, was one for annual sessions of the legislature by M. S. Carl, and an anti-treating bill by Thos. H. Horton. The house adjourned till Monday at 2 p. m.

The senate took things easy today. Early in the session the rule prohibiting smoking was suspended, and during the rest of the day business was transacted through a fog of blue smoke.

A lengthy communication was received from the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly, asking that the Hackney semi-centennial bill be passed and expressing a belief that the advertising to Minnesota through such an exposition would be of tremendous good. The bill now rests with the judiciary which is looking into its constitutional state of health. It is understood when the bill comes up again there is to be an amendment attached to give each county in the state a substantial allowance to expend for a county exhibit, with a view to having all parts of the state represented and advertised in a way they have never been before.

The senate adjourned till Tuesday at 10 a. m.

St. Paul, March 18—The house met this afternoon and devoted its entire time to advancing bills from general orders, in committee of the whole, to the calendar. It was from beginning to end a session of routine business and bills were brought up and disposed of as fast as they could be read, and to hasten matters the reading clerk did not hesitate to leave out many a section of a long bill which would otherwise have taken up much more unnecessary time. About 25 bills were advanced by the committee of the whole, making something of an impression on the 175 measures which had piled up on general orders. The bills thus recommended to pass included, the bill calling upon public service corporations to pay special assessments for local improvements, the pure food bill of the dairy and food commission prohibiting use of coal tar dyes in any food stuffs, the Davidson bill prohibiting treating at elections, the bill proposing a constitutional amendment to permit creation of a special tax for good roads.

W. H. Putnam of Red Wing barely saved the life of his bill which calls for the new girls' industrial school to be at Red Wing. The bill was recommended for indefinite postponement by committee, but on request of Putnam the house consented to permit the bill to be tabled for the time being with out administering the death blow.

St. Paul, March 19—Half a million dollars in appropriation for a new prison is provided in a bill introduced by Senator George H. Sullivan today, to be erected on the site purchased at Stillwater a short time ago by the state board of control. The appropriation is divided into two allowances of $250,000, one for the year ending July 31, 1907, and one for the following fiscal year. The state board of control is named as having full authority to prepare plans and let contracts.

The senate settled the question today that there will be no new normal schools established in spite of the fact that bills for two such institutions have been pending for some time. One bill by Senator D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids, provided for a normal at Cass Lake. The second bill, by Senator A. L. Hanson of Ada, called for a normal to be located by the normal board at some point along the Great Northern line between Duluth and East Grand Forks. Both measures came up for debate this afternoon. Each of the two named senators spoke in favor of his bill and quite a wrangle started. Senator P. Fitzpatrick of Winona made a speech which was the death blow of both bills, and which seriously questioned the need of any new normal at any location at all. The senate took the Winonian's suggestion to heart, and motions to indefinitely postpone both bills were then carried by a large majority.

The house today killed the bill requiring locomotive engineers to have three years experience as fireman, by a vote of 51 to 34. Elmer Adams of Fergus Falls called attention to the fact that the enforcement of such a law, would mean at times of strikes, railroads in the state would be absolutely tied hand foot and unable to move a train.

E. A. Orne of Faribault introduced a bill which aims to repeal all laws relating to primary elections in this state. The bill, however, does not re-establish the old convention system and would leave the state without any means of making nominations.

Both senate and house are now spending nearly all their time considering bills on general orders in committee of the whole, to advance them to the calendar where they may be finally acted upon. This is tedious routine work, but absolutely necessary to get the pending business moving. The senate when it adjourned late yesterday, had caught up with its work. The house is still considerably swamped, but in better shape than two days ago.

St. Paul, March 20—A statistical bureau to be devoted especially to reports relative to farm products, is provided by a bill introduced in the senate today by George H. Sullivan of Stillwater. The state auditor is made superintendent, and allowed $6,000 a year for the payment of assistants and such other expenses as it may be necessary to incur.

An interesting bill is one presented by Senator D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids. It makes a state park of Star Island in Cass lake, to be under supervision of the governor who may appoint a superintendent and caretaker at $100 a month. This island is heavily wooded. In its center, is a forest-hidden little lake, which is considerably higher in water level than Cass lake which surrounds it. How it is possible for the waters of this lake to remain higher than those of Cass lake is a mystery which no one can solve and which caused the state auditor to recommend the very action by the legislature which this bill proposes.

Senators Canestorp and Representative W. C. Bicknell both introduced an amendment of the existing inheritance tax law which is important. It extends the tax to the transfer of any and all properties within the state where such transfer is in the settlement of an estate. Thus a tax would be secured from non-residents who now escape.

The Pauly bill requiring corporations to pay labor wages at least twice a month, was indefinitely postponed by the senate today after lengthy debate. It was contended the bill was unfair to farmers, to operations in the woods, and to mining interests.

A blow at the liquor monopolies which are said to exist in many of the large centers of population in the state, is made by a bill introduced in the house today by Representative James S. Spencer of Rochester. Spencer says that in his town a local brewery has practically obtained control of all the available property for saloons, and thus secures a monopoly of the business. The bill prohibits any brewery, person, firm or corporation from taking out more than one license in any one town. The penalty for violation is $100 or 90 days in jail.

Messrs. Bjore and Jefferson today introduced in the house their third joint tonnage tax bill. It provides a graduate tax from 2 cents per ton on ore containing 49 per cent of iron, to 7.1 cents per ton on ore containing 66 per cent of iron. The average Minnesota ore runs about 55 per cent, which is taxed 5 cents per ton.

The senate committee on logs and lumber today presented a measure to increase the price paid for scaling state timber from 5 to 15 cents per thousand feet. The bill is introduced at the request of the state timber board, the members of which say that because of the diminutive size of logs at present being cut, and which one member of the board jokingly describes as "hand-picked", scalers have to do vastly more work to the thousand feet of scaling than a few years ago. The timber board members say the state's interests have suffered much because of being compelled to accept the services of poor men, the experts not caring to work for the remuneration offered.

There is every indication that at the end of the present session, the bills piled up in the house swamping that body will be hundreds in number. The house for ten days past has failed to catch up with the bill on general orders. The senate, however, manages to clear up both its calendar and general orders each day. The house has an over-supply of talkers, who insist on taking the floor at the least provocation and making the body as a whole "hold its horses" while they address the galleries. Every speech made at this stage of the session, acts as a compulsory order on each pending measure to "whoa Bill."

A Mystery

Minneapolis—By the death of Robert E. Lester, an automobile mystery of three years ago was probably sealed forever from being unearthed. On May 14, 1904, Robert Lester returned to his room in the Vendome hotel bruised and cut. Medical assistance was summoned and he lingered for three years a helpless invalid who had forgotten everything about the accident except that it was an automobile. The only clue is that he at times talked about how fast some chauffeurs drive their machines.

Cow Had Rabies

Mankato—Dr. Wesbrook of Minneapolis, director of the laboratories of the state board of health, has reported to Chairman Thompson of the Watonwan county board of health an examination of the head of a cow sent to him last Sunday shows that the cow died of rabies.

This cow was one of a herd owned by Fred Kirsch of Long Lake. Kirsch's dog bit four of his cows and is thought to have bitten dogs belonging to neighbors. A number of unmuzzled dogs have been shot in the county.

LUMBAGO AND SCIATICA

ST. JACOBS OIL
Penetrates to the Spot
Right on the dot.
Price 25c and 50c

The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed.—Sheridan.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

English Municipal Employes.

In London there are 70,000 municipal employes; in England generally there are close to 2,000,000.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
Largest creamery in the northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures.—M. Gerald.

Stood the Test.

Allcock's Plasters have successfully stood the test of sixty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equaled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon their reputation by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as Allcock's."

Allcock's plasters stand to-day indorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Physiological Mystery.

According to some curious investigations conducted by English scientists, eldest sons tend to be criminals and youngest sons paupers. A great many thousand school children and many family histories have been examined to yield these results. First-born children were found to be, as a rule, taller and heavier, with greater ability and endurance than the others. This is in accordance with the popular feeling in many countries that the oldest child is superior to the others and deserving of special privileges. It is a well established fact that among men of genius an undue proportion are eldest sons.—Detroit Free Press.

SCIATIC TORTURE

A Locomotive Engineer Tells How He Was Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Pain that seems almost unbearable is a characteristic of sciatic rheumatism. In some cases the pain is knife-like, sharp or shooting; in others it is dull and aching. Sciatica is stubborn in resisting treatment and the patient frequently suffers for years. This was the case with Mr. Herbert E. Spaulding, a locomotive engineer on the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railway, whose home is at Longview, Texas.

"While running an engine some years ago," he says, "I fell off and hurt my knee and spine and I have always considered this to be the cause of my illness. The sciatica took hold of me from my heel to the back of my head. The pain was the worst I ever suffered in my life and my leg and back were twisted out of shape. I was under a physician's care for several months and for six months could not get out of bed. I also went to Hot Springs but came back in a worse condition than when I went.

"It was when I was down in bed that I heard of the case of a Mr. Allison, a much older man than myself, who had been cured of sciatica by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking the pills and soon was able to get out of bed. When I had taken six boxes I was able to work about the house and yard. I kept right on with the pills until I was cured and I have never had any return of the trouble. I have been running an engine ever since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Genuine Must Bear
Fac-Simile Signature
Brent Good
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

When he had said over the words long as his parched throat would him, he became quiet. To his azement, some new, strange peace filled him. He took it for the ace of death. He was glad to think was coming so gently—like a kind other soothing him to his last sleep.

His head on his arm, his whole tired ody relaxing in this new restfulness, opened his eyes and looked off to he south, idly scanning the horizon, s eyes level with the sandy plain. Then something made him sit quickly p and stare intently, his bared head eaning forward. To the south, lying w, a mass of light clouds, volatile, hanging with opalescent lights as he ooked. A little to the left of these louds, while his head was on the and, he thought his eyes had de- ted certain squared lines.

Now he scanned the spot with a everish eagerness. At first there was ly the endless empty blue. Then, hen his wonder was quite dead and was about to lie down, there came miracle of miracles,—a vision in the ear blue of the sky. And this time e lines were coherent. He, the dying inner, had caught, clearly and posi- tively for one awful second in that , the flashing impression of a cross. faded as soon as it came, vanished while he gazed, leaving him in gasp- fainting wonder at the marvel.

And then, before he could think or estion himself, the sky once more bled its vision; again that image of cross stayed for a second in his s, and this time he thought there e figures about it. Some picture s trying to show itself to him. Still ning his body forward, gazing efully, his aroused body pulsing ttly to the wonder of the thing, he an to pray again, striving to keep excitement under.

O God, have mercy on me, a sinner!"

Slowly at first, it grew before his eyes, then quickly, so that at the there was a complete picture but an instant before had been a meaningless mass of line and olor. Set on a hill were many low, quare, flat-topped houses, brown in olor against the gray ground about them. In front of these houses was a arger structure of the same material, church-like building such as he had ce seen in a picture, with a wooden oss at the top. In an open square efore this church were many moving persons strangely garbed, seeming to Indians. They surged for a mo- ent about the door of the church, then parted to either side as if in an- ver to a signal, and he saw a proces- ion of the same people coming with owed heads, scourging themselves ith short whips and thorned branches. At their head walked a own-cowled monk, holding aloft be- him a small cross, attached by a ain to his waist. As he led the pro- ession forward, another crowd, some them being other brown-cowled monks, parted before the church door, and there, clearly before his wondering eyes was erected a great cross pon which he saw the crucified Sa- vior.

He saw those in the procession form about the cross and fling themselves upon the ground before it, while all the others round about knelt. He saw the monk, standing alone, raise the smaller cross in his hands above them, as if in blessing. High above it all, he saw the Crucified One, the head lying over on the shoulder.

He sank back on the sands in an ecstasy. His Witness had come—not as he thought it would, in a moment of spiritual uplift; but when he had been sunk by his own sin to fearful depths. Nor had it brought any message of glory for himself, of gifts or powers. Only the mission of suffering and service and suffering again at the end. But it was enough.

How long he lay in the joy of the realization he never knew, but sleep or faintness at last overcame him.

He was revived by the sharp chill of night, and sat up to find his mind clear, alert, and active with new purposes. He had suffered greatly from thirst, so that when he tried to say a prayer of thanksgiving he could not move his swollen tongue. He was weakened, too, but the freezing cold of the desert night aroused all his latent force. He struggled to his feet, and laid a course by the light of the moon back to the spring he had left in the morning. How he reached the hills again he never knew, nor how he made his way over them and back to the settlement. But there he lay sick for many days, his mind, when he felt it at all, tossing idly upon the great sustaining consciousness of that vision in the desert.

The day which he next remembered clearly, and from which he dated his new life, was one when he was back in the Meadows. He had ridden there in the first vagueness and weakness of his recovery, without purpose, yet feeling that he must go. What he found there made him believe he had been led to the spot. Stark against the glow of the western sky as he rode up, was a huge cross. He stopped, staring in wonder, believing it to be another vision; but it stayed before him, rigid, bare, and uncompromising. He left his horse and climbed up to it. At its base was piled a cairn of stones, and against this was a slab with an inscription:—

"Here 120 Men, Women, and Children Were Massacred in Cold Blood Early in September, 1857."

On the cross itself was carved in deep letters:—

"Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."

He fell on his knees at the foot and prayed, not weeping nor in any fever of fear, but as one knowing his sin and the sin of his Church. The burden of his prayer was, "O God, my own sin cannot be forgiven—I know it well—but let me atone for the sins of this people and let me guide them aright. Let me die on this cross a hundred deaths for each life they put out, or as many more as shall be needed to save them."

He was strong in his faith again, conscious that he himself was lost, but burning to save others, and hopeful, too, for he believed that a miracle had been vouchsafed to him in the desrt.

Nor would the good padre, at the head of his procession of penitents in his little mission out across the desert, have doubted less that it was a miracle than did this unhappy apostle of Joseph Smith, had he known the circumstance of its timeliness; albeit he had become familiar with such phenomena of light and air in the desert.

"Are You a Damned Mormon?"

CHAPTER XXI.

The Sinner Chastens Himself.

How to offer the greatest sacrifice—how to do the greatest service—these had become his problems. He concerned himself no longer with his own exaltation either in this world or the world to come.

He resolved to stay south, fearing vaguely that in the north he would be in conflict with the priesthood. He knew not how; he felt that he was still sound in his faith, but he felt, too, some undefined antagonism between himself and those who preached in the tabernacle. For his home he chose the settlement of Amalon, set in a rich little valley between the shoulders of the Pine mountains.

Late in October there was finished for him on the outer edge of the town, near the bank of a little hill-born stream, a roomy log-house, mud-chinked, with a water-tight roof of spruce shakes and a floor of whip-sawed plank,—a residence fit for one of the foremost teachers in the Church, an Elder after the Order of Melchisedek, an eloquent preacher and one true to the blessed Gods. At one end of the cabin, a small room was partitioned off and a bunk built in it. A chair and a water-basin on a block comprised its furniture. This room he reserved for himself.

As to the rest of the house, his ideas were at first cloudy. He knew only that he wished to serve. Gradually, however, as his mind worked over the problem, the answer came with considerable clearness. He thought about it much on his way north, for he was obliged to make a trip to Salt Lake City to secure supplies for the winter, some needed articles of furniture for the house, and his wagons and stock.

He was helped in his thinking on a day early in the journey. Near a squalid hut on the outskirts of Cedar City he noticed a woman staggering under an armful of wood. She was bareheaded, with hair disordered, her cheeks hollowed, and her skin yellow and bloodless. He remembered the tale he had heard when he came down. He thought she must be that wife of Bishop Snow who had been put away. He rode up to the cabin as the woman threw her wood inside. She was weak and wretched-looking in the extreme.

"I am Elder Rae. I want to know if you would care to go to Amalon with me when I come back. If you do, you can have a home there as long as you like. It would be easier for you than here."

She had looked up quickly at him in much embarrassment. She smiled a little when he had finished.

"I'm not much good to work, but I think I'd get stronger if I had plenty to eat. I used to be right strong and well."

"I shall be along with my wagons in two weeks or a little more. If you will go with me then I would like to have you. Here, here is money to buy you food until I come."

"You've heard of me, have you—that I'm a divorced woman"

"Yes, I know."

She looked down at the ground a moment, pondering, then up at him with sudden resolution.

"I can't work hard and—I'm not—pretty any longer—why do you want to marry me?"

Her question made him the more embarrassed of the two, and she saw as much, but she could not tell why it was.

"Why," he stammered, "why,—you see—but never mind. I must hurry on now. In about two weeks—" And he put the spurs so viciously to his horse that he was nearly unseated by the startled animal's leap.

Off on the open road again he thought it out. Marriage had not been in his mind when he spoke to the woman. He had meant only to give her a home. But to her the idea had come naturally from his words, and he began to see that it was, indeed, not an unnatural thing to do. He dwelt long on this new idea, picturing at intervals the woman's lack of any charm or beauty, her painful emaciation, her weakness.

As he entered Brigham's office in Salt Lake City some days later, there passed out by the same door a woman whom he seemed dimly to remember. The left half of her face was disfigured by a huge flaming scar, and he saw that she had but one hand.

"Who was that woman?" he asked Brigham, after they had chatted a little of other matters.

"That's poor Christina Lund. You ought to remember her. She was in your hand-cart party. She's having a pretty hard time of it. You see, she froze off one hand, so now she can't work much, and then she froze her face, so she ain't much for looks any longer—in fact, I wouldn't say Christina was much to start with, judging from the half of her face that's still good—and so, of course, she hasn't been able to marry. The Church helps her a little now and then, but what troubles her most is that she'll lose her glory if she ain't married. You see, she ain't a worker and she ain't handsome, so who's going to have her sealed to him?"

"I remember her now. She pushed the cart with her father in it from the Platte crossing, at Fort Laramie, clear over to Echo canyon, when all the fingers of one hand came off on the bar of the cart one afternoon; and then her hand had to be amputated. Brother Brigham, she shouldn't be cheated of her place in the Kingdom."

"Well, she ain't capable, and she ain't a pretty person, so what can she do?"

"I believe if the Lord is willing I will have her sealed to me."

"It will be your own doings, Brother Rae. I wouldn't take it on myself to counsel that woman to anybody."

"I feel I must do it, Brother Brigham."

"Well, so be it if you say. She can be sealed to you and be a star in your crown forever. But I hope, now that you've begun to build up your kingdom, you'll do a little better, next time. There's a lot of pretty good-looking young women came in with a party yesterday—"

"All in good time, Brother Brigham! If you're willing, I'll pick up my second on the way south."

"Well, well, now that's good!" and the broad face of Brigham glowed with friendly enthusiasm. "You know I'd suspicioned more than once that you wasn't overly strong on the doctrinal point of celestial marriage. I hope your second, Brother Joel, is a little fancier than this one."

"She'll be a better worker," he replied.

"Well, they're the most satisfactory in the long run. I've found that out myself. At any rate, it's best to lay the foundations of your kingdom with workers, the plainer the better. After that, a man can afford something in the ornamental line now and then. Now, I'll send for Christina and tell her what luck she's in. She hasn't had her endowments yet, so you might as well go through those with her. Be at the endowment-house at five in the morning."

And so it befell that Joel Rae, Elder after the Order of Melchisedek, and Christina Lund, spinster, native of Denmark, were on the following day, after the endowment-rites had been administered, married for time and eternity.

From the altar they went to the wagons and began their journey south. Christina came out of the endowment-house, glowing, as to one side of her face. She was, also, in a state of daze that left her able to say but little. Proud and happy and silent, her sole remark, the first day of the trip, was: "Brigham—now—he make such a lovely, bee-yoo-tiful God in heeven!"

But his work of service had only begun. As they went further south he began to make inquiries for the wandering wife of Elder Tench. He came upon her at length as she was starting north from Beaver at dusk. He prevailed upon her to stop with his party.

"I don't mind to-night, sir, but I must be off betimes in the morning."

But in the morning he persuaded her to stay with them.

"Your husband is out of the country now, but he's coming back soon, and he will stop first at my house when he does come. So stay with me there and wait for him."

She was troubled by this at first, but at last agreed.

"If you're sure he will come there first—"

She refused to ride in the wagon, however, preferring to walk, and strode briskly all day in the wake of the cattle.

When they reached Cedar City a halt was made while he went for the other woman—not without some misgiving, for he remembered that she was still young. But his second view of her reassured him—the sallow, anemic face, the skin drawn tightly over the cheek bones, the drooping shoulders, the thin, forlorn figure. Even the certainty that her life of hardship was ended, that she was at least sure not to die of privation, had failed to call out any radiance upon her. They were married by a local Bishop, Joel's first wife placing the hand of the second in his own, as the ceremony required. Then with his wives, his charges, his wagons, and his cattle he continued on to the home he had made at the edge of Amalon.

Among the women there was no awkwardness or inharmony; they had all suffered; and the two wives tactfully humored the whims of the insane woman. On the day they reached home, the husband took them to the door of his own little room.

"All that out there is yours," he said. "Make the best arrangements you can. This is my place; neither of you must ever come in here."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Coming of the Woman-Child.

The next day he sent across the settlement for the child, waiting for her with mixed emotions,—a trembling merge of love and fear, with something, indeed, of awe for this woman-child of her mother, who had come to him so deviously and with a secret significance so mighty of portent to his own soul. When they brought her in at last, he had to brace himself to meet her.

She came and stood before him, one foot a little advanced, several dolls clutched tightly under one arm, and her bonnet swinging in the other hand. She looked up at him fearlessly, questioningly, but with no sign of friendliness. He saw and felt her mother in all her being, in her eyes and hair, in the lines of her soft little face, and indefinably in her way of standing or moving. He was seized with a sudden fear that the mother watched him secretly out of the child's eyes, and with the child's lips might call to him accusingly, with what wild cries of anguish and reproach he dared not guess. He strove to say something to her, but his lips were dry, and he made only some half-articulate sound; trying to force a smile of assurance.

Then the child spoke, her serious, questioning eyes upon him unwaveringly.

"Are you a damned Mormon?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The world doesn't owe you a living—it was here first.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

State Has 5,000,000 Trout Fry.

St. Paul—The state game and fish commission this year will distribute 5,000,000 brook trout fry through the parts of the state where these kind of fish thrive. This will break all previous records of the department along this line.

Shipments of the fry are already being made to the southern and northern parts of the state, where the small brooks most abound. One shipment is being made every day, and so far seven carloads, or about 280,000 brook fry, have been shipped.

The sportsmen at Winona and in other parts of the state have organized anglers' associations and these associations have provided tanks for the fry that they may be kept safely until all danger from the spring freshets has gone. The shipments are made direct to the associations.

All the trout are healthy. The two fish hatcheries were so crowded that part of the stock had to be disposed of earlier than usual. The shipments are made in cans containing about 2,000 trout each. Twenty cans are sent in each shipment.

Rich Iron Ore Struck.

Brainerd—A valuable find of iron ore is reported to have been made at Randall, in Morrison county, on the cut-off on the Cuyuna range. The ore is said to be red hematite of a 60 per cent grade and equals anything yet found on the range.

There have been drills at work in that vicinity for nearly a year, and it is said on good authority that the Allworth and Washburn interests have made arrangements to renew the work with increasing vigor as soon as spring opens.

It is also said that strong indications of ore have been found in a line running from about the center of Mille Lacs southwesterly through Morrison county. The claim is made that this line has been known for two years to certain Minneapolis financiers who have been quietly acquiring title to the land through which it runs. There has been no drilling done on this line and apparently it is not the intention to begin exploration work until all of the land has been acquired.

Fixes Interest Rate.

St. Paul—The state board of deposit, consisting of State Auditor S. G. Iverson, State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart and Public Examiner Anton Schaefer, has passed a resolution requiring an interest rate of 3 per cent from all banks in the state used as state depositories. But three banks are exempt, they being the Security Bank of Minnesota at Minneapolis and the Merchants National and First National banks of St. Paul. These banks are designated as depositories where the active current state accounts may be kept, and these banks are to pay 2 per cent interest on daily balances.

Heretofore the distinction in regard to the rate of interest has been between the city and country banks, the banks of the small towns being obliged to pay 3 per cent interest, while the banks of St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and Winona paid but 2 per cent. The new order makes the distinction between active and checking accounts. The order will affect nearly all the banks in the state.

State Gets $67,792.

St. Paul—The state of Minnesota is a gainer in the sum of $67,792 which has just been ordered paid by congress. This sum represents interest on the old bonds upon which Governor Ramsey raised money in 1862 to suppress the Sioux uprising. When in Washington two years ago, State Auditor Sam G. Iverson, in making some investigations, discovered what he believed to be a claim against the government for this interest.

Accordingly he took the matter up and had a brief prepared by Attorney General Young. A bill was passed ordering an investigation, and, as a result of Mr. Iverson's persistency, the claim has been allowed.

Fruit From South Africa.

Minneapolis—Pears and plums that were grown in South Africa furnish something in the way of unusual delicacies in the stock of E. P. Stacy & Sons, commission merchants, and so far as it known, this is the first South African fruit to appear in the Minneapolis market.

The consignment, which was shipped first to London and from there to Minneapolis by way of New York, consists of several boxes of Wickson plums and several of Bon Cretin pears. The fruit was grown on the Cecil Rhodes farm and because of the cost of transportation it will be necessary to sell each pear or plum for 10 or 15 cents to cover expense.

Blows Off Top of Head.

Alexandria—Peter Nelson, a farmer of Lund township, Douglas county, blew off the top of his head with a shotgun. He had been very gloomy for some time. During the temporary absence of his family he went into the kitchen and resting the butt of the gun against the wall placed the muzzle in his mouth and discharged the weapon by means of a small stick. His hired man entered the kitchen just in time to see him fall dead.

Engineer and Conductor Killed.

Deer River—Frank McVeigh, engineer, and George Martin, conductor, were instantly killed in a head-on collision between freight trains on the Minnesota & International, near Deer River. The trains came together on a reverse curve where the engineers could not see the headlight of the other train.

Both engines were shattered and Engineer McCabe was crushed to death in his cab. Conductor Martin was riding on the top the caboose of his train and was hurled to the ground, breaking his skull. Twenty cars were wrecked.

Sales of State Land.

St. Paul—Samuel G. Iverson, state auditor, is arranging for the sale of 341,600 acres of state lands this summer, beginning with a sale at Grand Rapids on June 11, and concluding with an auction at Pine City on July 3.

According to law, these lands will be sold by auction to the highest bidder. Only 15 per cent of the purchase price must be paid at the time of the sale. The remainder is allowed to run for forty years, if so desired by the buyer, at 4 per cent interest.

The sales which the auditor plans to hold, the place and date of each sale, and the amount of land to be offered at each place, is to be summarized as follows:

	Acres offered.
Tuesday, June 11, Grand Rapids, 10 a. m.	35,000
Wednesday, June 12, Duluth, 10 a. m.	35,000
Thursday, June 13, Carlton, 10 a. m.	21,000
Friday, June 14, Aitkin, 10 a. m.	36,000
Saturday, June 15, Brainerd, 10 a. m.	21,000
Monday, June 17, Bagley, 1 p. m.	15,000
Tuesday, June 18, Bemidji, 1:30 p. m.	20,000
Wednesday, June 19, Walker, 10 a. m.	20,000
Thursday, June 20, Park Rapids, 10 a. m.	17,000
Friday, June 21, Wadena, 2 p. m.	15,000
Saturday, June 22, Long Prairie 1 p. m.	8,600
Monday, June 24, Hallock, 1 p. m.	25,000
Tuesday, June 25, Warren, 1 p. m.	3,000
Wednesday, June 26, Crookston, 10 a. m.	3,000
Friday, June 28, Roseau, 10 a. m.	30,000
Monday, July 1, Red Lake Falls, 1 p. m.	5,000
Tuesday, July 2, Detroit, 10 a. m.	23,000
Wednesday, July 3, Pine City, 1 p. m.	10,000

Fish Clog Water in Pipe.

Brainerd—The Northern Pacific Railway company has been having trouble for some time in getting water at its well which supplies the tank at Klondike. A few days ago a crew of men were set at work to clean out the well, and it was found to be absolutely filled with fish. There were suckers, bullheads, shiners and other small fish almost by millions. Suckers weighing seven pounds were found.

The pumps has refused to work and an examination showed that two large bullheads had got into the cylinder, clogging it completely and it was necessary to take the pump apart to get them out.

The well is connected by a large intake pipe with the Lookout lake, and it is thought that the screen over the end of the pipe must have rusted out, thus allowing the fish to pass into the well.

War on Wolves.

St. Paul—The war which is being waged on mad dogs in various parts of the state is merely a flicker of the candle when compared to the battle which has been going on against Minnesota wolves during the last three months, according to the wolf bounties paid by the state auditor's office.

Since Dec. 26, when the last bounties were paid, 1,228 full-grown wolves and 299 cubs have passed away through the medium of the bounty seekers, making a total of 1,587 for which the state will pay $9,958.50. Roseau county leads the list with 361 wolves, thereby securing almost $3,000. Metropolitan Ramsey county is at the bottom of the ladder, but managed to break into the run column with three full-grown wolves.

Walked From Oregon.

from the asylum at Fergus Falls with David Murphy, who is being returned to the asylum at Portland, Ore. Murphy escaped from the Oregon asylum more than a year ago and walked the entire distance from Portland to Duluth, occupying seven months in the journey.

He was picked up by the Duluth authorities about five months ago and was committed to the asylum. From words dropped by the man it was learned that he had been an inmate of the Oregon institution, and correspondence with the authorities there developed that Murphy had escaped from the asylum.

While at Church Home Burns.

Crookston—The farm house of Owen Jones, four miles east of the city, was burned to the ground while the family was in the city at church. The fire was discovered by neighbors, who broke open the doors and succeeded in saving the piano and a few articles of furniture. The house was totally destroyed. The loss will reach several thousand dollars, partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but it is thought that it may have been started by an overheated stove.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis—Judgments for $1,006.03 have been given in the district court against twenty-seven members of the university class of 1905, as a result of the scandal connected with the Gopher published by that class. Byron & Willard, the printing firm that issued the book for the class, has been given judgment against the number.

Mankato—A physician sent $1.85 to a whisky firm in response to an advertisement that for this sum it would send twelve full bottles of whisky, this offer being made "merely to introduce the goods." When the package arrived it contained the twelve full bottles, as promised, but each bottle was about as big as a thimble.

Fergus Falls—John Persons of the town of Deer Creek was severely injured while cutting cordwood with his brother. The two young men were using double-bitted axes and standing back to back, when the brother swung his ax and struck John in the back, cutting a long gash alongside the backbone, severing a number of ribs and literally laying his back open. Fortunately the blade did not cut through any of the vital organs, and he will recover.

Winona—E. K. Tarbell, former mayor of this city and for a number of years proprietor of the Hotel Winona, died here, after a brief illness.

Moderate Price

Calumet Baking Powder

$1,000.00 will be given for any substance injurious to health found in Calumet.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

Published weekly, Thursday evening. Entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

STATE AID FOR ROADS.

The discovery that it will be impossible for the legislature to appropriate [illegible] or any sum greater than the proceeds of a tax of 1-20 [illegible] for state aid to road building in Minnesota, draws attention to the necessity of passing the proposed constitutional amendment to give the legislature more power. A similar amendment, apparently, failed to carry at the election, last fall, according to the official returns, but the new proposition is so drawn as to do away with all opposition.

The proposed amendment is brief, and is build on the "wide-open" plan, leaving it to the discretion of the legislature to levy as great a tax for this purpose and it to appropriate the proceeds as it sees fit.

The amendment submitted last fall was objected to because limits were placed on the amount that could be appropriated to any one county, and because it was provided that no county should have the use of any state aid until it should expend, from its own funds, twice as much for the road purposes. Both these objectional features have been omitted.

This amendment is the result of the demand, all over the state, for good roads, by which the farmer may bring his produce to his market at the least expense and with the least trouble. Every city, village and township in the state will profit by making farming a more profitable business, through cheapening the cost of hauling produce from farm to market. Hence the demand that a larger portion of the state funds should be devoted to this meritorious purpose, and no one should say it nay.—St. Paul Dispatch.

TWO KINDS OF SUCCESS.

E. H. Harriman may be right in his recent declaration that "every body hates a successful man" if, by that designation, he means such men as himself, John D. Rockefeller, John W. Gates, the late Russel Sage, H. H. Rogers, "Gas" Addicks and others of that ilk. All of these have made their successes simply by riding rough-shod over the people, by acts that savor strongly of those of pirates and by ruthless disregard of the rights of others.

But there are thousands of men in all walks of life who may justly claim to have been eminently successful—business men, lawyers, doctors, ministers, public men, even financiers—who certainly are not only not hated but are universally admired. Such men, and their names are legion, are held up to the world as the truest and best models of marked success and the growing generation is constantly advised to pattern after them.

The class of men, to which Harriman certainly refered, is that of the unscrupulous builder of big fortunes at the expense of the mass of the people. These are hated, not because of their wealth, for there are many very wealthy men who have been deservedly popular, but because of the methods they have adopted to win their so-called success and pile up their millions on millions and because they have adopted toward the great mass of the people the "public be ——" policy of William H. Vanderbilt.

Harriman and his like have not shown any inclination to win the friendship and esteem of the public. Even John D. Rockefeller's colossal bids for popularity came so late that his every gift is suspected. Why then should the Harrimans of today expect anything except hatred? Contrast them with Mark Twain, Thomas A. Edison, President Roosevelt, the late Bishop Phillips Brooks, D. L. Moody and others, who certainly measure far beyond Harriman's type of successfulmen, and who will dare say that the public is wrong in its discrimination as to men to be hated and those to be admired?—Duluth Herald.

Editor Hunt, of the Sunbeam must have been reading the Plummer Pioneer. He says: "The only line of goods that are being handled in Plummer is Sunny brook rye, and stationary."

A North Dakota paper says: "Most of the people who were frozen to death in North Dakota the past winter—on paper—are coming forward and denying the charge in forcible and indignant language. Like the average healthy North Dakotan, they are bubbling over with life and naturally object to having their obituaries printed in the eastern papers. If some of these "frozen stiffs" could be rounded up and exhibited at the Jamestown Exposition it would be a good advertisement for North Dakota."

The Taking Cold Habit

The old cold goes; a new one quickly comes. It's the story of a weak throat, weak lungs, a tendency to consumption. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral breaks up the taking-cold habit. It strengthens, soothes, heals. Ask your doctor about it.

The best kind of a testimonial—"Sold for over sixty years."

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of Ayer's SARSAPARILLA. PILLS. HAIR VIGOR.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

Keep the bowels regular with Ayer's Pills, just one pill each night.

Safety and Convenience

"Safety" is the password in transferring money—"convenience" is also of equal importance.

You have both safety and convenience in money matters when you pay by check.

A checking account is the simplest method for everyone—for you—to emply in financial affairs, because you have a complete record of every transaction.

We welcome small accounts.

All accounts—large and small—receive the same careful attention.

Merchants State Bank

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

There are over 12,000 laws on the Minnesota statute books, and yet it is held that ignorance of the law excuses no man.

Bemidji has a new daily newspaper, launchhd by A. B. Allen of the Bemidji Weekly Sentinel. This gives the city two dailies.

C. J. Pryor, manager of the Bemidji Daily Pioneer, and A. G. Rutledge, city editor, have purchased the controlling interest in that paper and will guide its course henceforth. Mr. Pryor, who is well known in this city, and the genial "Doc" Rutledge, who has been actively connected with the state game and fish commission for several years past, ought to make a good running team, and the Gazette extends best wishes.

Few realize how great a source of wealth the horse is. In Minnesota, for instance, there are no less than 723,000 horses, representing a valuation of $70,000,000. While North Dakota has 580,000 horses worth $55,000,000 and South Dakota 548,000 worth $45,000,000. Thus the horse, despite the encroachment of the automobile, stands well in the front in importance and in three states represents wealth equal to $170,000,000.

Revival Notes.

Evangelist John S. Hamilton, and Singer John R. Bursk arrived in this city on Tuesday and began meetings at the Presbyterian church the same night. In spite of bad weather the meeting the first night was largely attended. Rev. Hamilton spoke to Christians on the duty of being "Helpers." It was a thoughtful and stirring discourse.

Prof. Bursk organized a large chorus from the singers of the audience, and desires to invite all other singers to join the chorus. He also sang two Gospel solos in a very winning way. He has a pleasing voice and sings very earnestly. He is planing to organize a "Sunbeam Choir" of boys and girls, and to make their singing a special feature of the meetings. The orchestra will be present, except when detained by other duties, and will also assist in making the music a special feature of these meetings.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Evangelists, accompanied by Rev. Knox, visited a large portion of the business houses to become acquainted with the men and invite them to attend the meetings. Services begin each night at 7:30 p. m. The meetings will last only a short time and you are urged to attend every night, if possible.

Herbert W. Knox, Pastor.

Break-up Causes Trouble.

The break-up of the latter part of last week, played havoc in general with the country roads, and as a result taffic was at a standstill for several days. The "Star" mail carriers failed to get here at all from Friday until Tuesday, and then their trips were extremely difficult ones and were made under almost impossible conditions. The large amount of snow throughout the country had become well trodden down during the winter, so that rigs could drive over the high drifts with comfort. The warm sun of a few days of last week completely changed conditions, however, and in many places the horses would go nearly out of sight in the snow, breaking through at every step. No travel was attempted for several days, and while conditions are somewhat better at the present writing it will be some little time before the roads are in satisfactory shape for comfortable travel.

May Locate Here.

Fergus Falls Journal: E. M. Nelson, the well known citizen of Friberg was in the city Saturday on his return from Thief River Lalls, Red Lake Falls, Crookston and other northern points. Mr. Nelson's health has not been particularly good for a year or two past and he thinks of giving up farming and engaging in the real estate business in some of the cities to the northward, but has not yet come to any definite conclusion.—Fergus Falls Journal.

You should be very careful of your bowels when you have a cold. Nearly all other cough syrups are constipating, especially those containing opiates. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup moves the bowels—contains NO opiates. Conforms to National Pure Food and Drugs Law. Bears the endorsement of mothers everywhere. Children like its pleasant taste Sold by all druggists.

CLASS PLAY OF '07

The Sweet Girl Graduate Will Make Her Debute In The Glare of The Footlights.

The sweet girl graduate is not only the embryo of expectancy and many future hopes, but has found her way into the field of romance to the extent that she has commanded the attention of the playwright, and, H. Rea Woodman, charmed by her many little whims and caprices, has embodied her several moods in a delightful little farce comedy entitled "The Sweet Girl Graduates," which will be presented to the people of Red Lake Falls by the High School Class of '07, at the Metropolitan Opera House on the evening of April 12th two weeks from tomorrow (Friday.)

The play, which is composed of three acts and an epilogue, is replete with many little scenes abounding with comedy and satire, sombered by the deep earnestness with which plans are laid for the great and unknown future, and suggest to the play goer days gone by when they too were about to go go fourth into an untutored and unsuspecting world.

The Class of '07 have had the play in hand for some two weeks past, and at rehearsals now being held, promise to give a first-class reproduction of the "Sweet Girl Graduate as depicted by the author, whose portrayal of life is decidedly typical.

Many specialties will be interwoven with the play and an effort is being made to have a full orchestra in attendance, so that there will not be an idle moment during the entire program. In the afternoon of April 12th, the class will give a matinee for the benefit of the children who would be unable to attend in the evening, thereby giving all who desire, a chance to witness the "Sweet Girl Graduate" as she is about to enter an unexplored world filled with the hope of youth and many plans for the future.

The cast of the play is as follows:

Miss Maude De Smythe, the Sweet Girl, Secretary of the Class of '07.
—Alice Ericson.

Mrs. DeSmythe, her mother, who is threatened with neverous prostration.
—Lucy Hunt.

Mr. De Smythe, her father, President of the R. I. P. Railroad.
—John Richards.

Mr. Jack Hamilton, her Beau, President of the Class of 1907.
Paul Bruuelle.

Miss Matilda Hoppenhoer. her aunt. Who never graduated, thank Heaven.
Freda Ittner.

Miss Valeria Reynolds, her dearest friend.
Viola Longtin.

Madam Sateene, her dressmaker,
Ina Linnihan.

Miss Rantum, her elocution teacher, (late of the Boston school.)
—Edna Swanson.

Professor Grindem, Principal of the High School.
—Herbert Findeisen.

Mr. Chinese Bulbus, the Florist.
—Olaf Floan.

Katherine,...............the maid.
-Lillian Zaiser.

Ole. G. Sanders and Miss Anna Johnson, of Highlanding were married by Judge Tarrant Thursday of last week. the newly married couple are settlers on the reservation and will make their home near Highlanding.

Harry Mitchell's EDITORIAL.

I want to make your Spring Suit. I want to demonstrale to you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than your local tatilor would make you for $30.00 $35.00 and $40.00.

I've got my Mail-order Department down so fine that no matter where you live I can fit you, and give as good satisfaction as if I took your order myself.

Write me today and tell me about the kind of a spring suit you have on your mind, and by return mail I'll send you samples of the swellest fabrics you ever saw.

Remember, I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money. You take absolutely no chances in the deal. I also pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,

HARRY MITCHELL,

310 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Respect YOUR Stomach

GIVE it food that will not irritate or retard the performance of its natural functions, and it will reciprocate in a way agreeable and comforting.

No single ingredient contributes so largely toward wholesome, nourishing, agreeable food as Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Baking Powder's active ingredient, Grape Cream of Tartar, is the most healthful of the fruit products.

This is why Royal Baking Powder makes the food finer, lighter, more appetizing and anti-dyspeptic, a friend to the stomach and good health.

Imitation Baking Powders Contain Alum

"The use of alum and salts of alumina in food should be PROHIBITED. The constant use of alum compounds exerts a deleterious effect upon the digestive organs and an irritation of the internal organs after absorption.

"EDWARD S. WOOD, M. D.
"Professor of Chemistry
"Harvard Medical School, Boston."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK

FIRST STATE BANK
OF
RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU

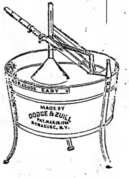
PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.

DIRECTORS
Theo. Garceau Frank E Hunt
Chas. N. Bourdon
W. A. Schreiter A. P. Toupin
N. M. Watson Geo. F. Hennings

The Syracuse "Easy" Washer



A Few Reasons Why You ... Should Have One ...

It saves the clothes.

It saves precious time.

It saves physical force.

It saves in cost—no new tubs or boards to buy.

It washes cleaner and rinses better.

It is adapted to both heavy and light clothes.

We Have Sold Hundreds of these machines since we have had the agency—another good reason why you should have one. We wouldn't have sold so many if they weren't right. Remember we put them out on trial and the price is only ....

$8.00

Hunt Hardware Co.

The Local Field---

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Sunday is Easter—watch for that new bonnet.

Dan Linnihan was down to Crookston Tuesday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Joe Grey transacted business at Crookston Tuesday and Wednesday.

J. W. Wheeler of Crookston was a business caller in the city the first of the week.

Father Adolph of Thief River was the guest of Father Ambrose over Tuesday night.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

Joe Boushea, of Brooks came over Wednesday, to act as a witness in the Brohman-Singer case.

F. E. Hunt spent several days at Brooks the first of the week getting the stock of hardware recently purchased at that place, in shape for the spring trade.

Attorneys Richardson and Stanton, of Thief River Falls, and Miller, of Crookston, were looking after the Thief River end of the county seat case before the district court this week.

Miss Lillian Swanson who is employed as stenographer in the office of Superintendent of Schools. E. E. McIntyre, of Crookston, came home Saturday for a few days visit with her parents.

The Gazette has a new apprentice this week in the person of Anthony Paradis who has decided that he desires to become versed in the mysteries of the printers art. Anthony is starting out well and promises to make rapid advancement in the business.

"Jim and Paul" the popular clothiers were down to Crookston the first of the week to meet representatives of some of the eastern clothing and haberdashery firms, and make selections from the elaborate displays of the season's styles on exhibition at that place.

We make farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds on hand at all times ---First State Bank. Red Lake Falls.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

Sam E. Hunt was in off the road between trains yesterday.

Wm. Clancy was a business caller at Crookston the first of the week.

For Sale—Light Brahmas, thorough bred cockerels. C. L. Mikkelsen.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes, The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

Don't forget the Easter concert and ball given by the Orpheus Quartette Monday evening.

W. B. Cheshire, cashier of the Bank of Brooks, was a business caller in the city Wednesdry.

Attorney Perl Mabey of Thief River transacted legal business before Judge Watts Tuesday.

The name of the town of Oslo on the Soo west of Warren has been changed to Soo City.

C. M. Rasmussen, of Thief River Falls, is spending the week at the home of his nephew, Sheriff Nelson.

Dr. Argue was up to St. Hilaire Wednesday on professional business. Hereafter he will make that place every Wednesday, instead of twice a month as heretofore.

Rudolph Warberg, of Lambert. was transacting business in the city Wednesday. Mr. Warberg will dispose of his properties in that that township shortly and remove to other fields.

The Big Store calls your attention to a few of their Easter Offerings in their ad. this week. They could not enumerate them all, but would be pleased to show you many more at the Big Store.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Talk about the past winter deing a cold one, Henry Peters was around yesterday with pansies which he had picked in the garden. They had been covered with straw and snow.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President Mrs. S. M. Sivertson: 1st vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Boughton; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. A. E. Cairns: secretary, Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain: treasurer. Mrs. E. F. Marshall.

Congressman Steenerson has received notification from the pension department at Washington, D. C., that the pensions of A. M. Childs, City Clerk, and Cornelius Snyder, a drayman of Crookston have been increased to $12 per month. Knute Anderson of Fosston has received an advance which entitles him to $20 per month and Simon Paul of this city will get $12 monthly from now on.

N. E. Beebe. a prosperous St. Hilaire farmer, is in the city doing duty on the grand jury. Mr. Beebe is a hustling dairyman and his monthly check is one of the biggest given out at the St. Hilaire creamery. The editor knew "Norm" years ago in one of the oldest towns in the southern part of the state and knows that he comes of stock that will help to make Red Lake county famous in both the dairy and farming line.

Macaroni seed wheat for sale.—L. C. Simons.

Attorneny Martin O'Brien of Crookston, was a caller here Monday afternoon.

Chief of Police Erickson of the Upper Falls was a court visitor the first of the week.

Vena Carver who has a school near Thief River Falls is home for the Easter vacation.

Marcus Johnson came up Wednesday to look after his many business interests at this point.

Chas. Tscinda, the Fertile cigar man was drumming up a trade in the city the first of the week.

Mrs Arthur Zaiser returned Monday morning from a few days visit with her parents at Crookston.

Dr. Fletcher, the dentist, will be at Dr. Wilkinson's office in this city Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Agent Weimer of the Ham Brewing Co., came down from Thief River, Monday to look after business in his line.

J. H. Peterson, the Kewiel Brewery representative was looking up the "Bock" trade in the city the first of the week.

"Jim & Paul" ask you to come and see the latest styles in spring haberdashery. Read their big ad on the front page.

Dr. Spofford will miss his visits for March and April, to Red Lake Falls. Next visit May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Wanted—Person to travel in home territory; salary $3.50 per day and expenses. Address. J. A. Alexander, 125 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

Hank Draper returned to Thief River, having completed the job of loading the old Meehan sawmill boilers for shipment to Minneapolis.

Felix Fournet and L. P. Stranahan, two prominent Crookstonites, were in the city Wednesday looking after business matters and calling on their many friends.

Attorney Wilhelm Michelet was here over Monday night on court business. He will be down again next week to try a case before the court on Wednesday.

Doctor Henry Grundy and H. O. Schaleben were down from Thief River the first of the week summoned as professional witnesses on several cases before the district court.

The Modern Woodmen will hold their regular meeting on Wednesday evening of next week. A full attendance is desired as business matters of much importance will come up at this time.

C. L. Hanson, the popular St. Hilaire banker, spent several days here this week. C. L. likes St. Hilaire better every day he lives there, and says that her people are loyal to the home institution every time.

At the meeting of the county board last week unorganized town 154-39 in eastern Red Lake county was organized underthe name of Reiner. "Teddy" was likewise suggested as a name but the commissioners decided upon Reiner as being more dignified and appropriate.

To remove a cough you must get at the cold which causes the cough. There is nothing so good for this as Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. The liquid cold relief that is most quickly effective, that stills and quiets the cough and drives out the cold. Sold by all druggists.

G. A. Johnson, representing the Wright, Barrett and Stillwell Paper Co. of Minneapolis, was calling on the trade in this city Saturday. Mr. Johnson has been traveling for this company for several years, and in addition to his old line of customers will handle the territory covered by W. A. Andrews, who was recently killed in a Great Northern railroad wreck.

A refunding bond of Red Lake county for $10,000 is due and becomes payable April 12th. There being insufficient funds to meet this obligation at the present time, the county board has made application to the state for a loan to take up these bonds. This $10,000 obligation was incurred at the time of the organization of Red Lake county in 1896 to paying running expenses until tax money should begin to come into the treasury.

Remi Fortier of Crookston was a visiter at the home of his son, Joseph in this city Tuesday of this week. Mr. Fortier had in his possession a petition to the state legislature asking for an appropriation for the benefit of the state agricultural school at Crookston, which was circulated among the business men and received the hearty approval of nearly everyone to whom it was presented. The school is of much importance and benefit to Northern Minnesota and it is to be hoped that a substantial appropriaton will be made by the legislature to promote its further development.

For Sale.

One 22 shoe Dowagaic drill, as good as new, 1 Jones mower and rake, 1 John Deere gang plow, 1 riding cultivator. Will be sold at a bargain if taken at once. Inquire of F. C. Westphal, Red Lake Falls.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

.. An .. Invitation

Every woman who has difficulty in accurately fitting her feet; every woman who's shoes cause her feet to burn or to be otherwise uncomfortable; every woman who appreciates or desires shoes that are absolutely the last word of fashion, and every woman in the least disposed to practice economy is invited to inspect our assortment and be convinced that Queen Quality Shoes offer the solution of all the foot troubles.

Queen Quality Boots, $3, $3.50, $4

Queen Quality Oxfords - $2.50, $3

Let us show you our new styles while the assortment is at its best. Not the slightest obligation to buy.

The Busy Store

Garceau & Zaiser.

Easter Offerings

We offer for your inspection a complete line of Kuppenheimer's Fancy Men's Clothing

$15..00 to $25.00

Cravanettes and Top Coats--We show a fine line of these goods at $10.00 to $20.00

EDERHEIMER STEIN'S STYLISH YOUNG MENS' CLOTHING

$8.00 to $18.00

The Xtra Good Brand. The best made, most stylish Boys' Clothes made in America. No other store in this town or any other town shows any thing nicer or better, it isn't made. Our prices you will find low considering the price of the goods. For a second line we offer the famous L & S line of N. Y. While this line does not show the workmanship that the first named lines show, it shows wonderful values. Woolen goods are higher everybody knows, but we can still show you all wool suits, well made at $8.00 and for $12.50 and $15.00 we show all wool worsterds in as pretty patterns as you ever saw.

PATENT LEATHER OXFORDS

A full and complete line of Fancy Patent Leather Shoes and Oxfords, light soles and heavy soles—Lace, Button or Blucher styles

$1.75 to $3.50

Parents who have large families to buy shoes for will save money at this store. Our Godman shoes are fully 25 per cent better value than any other make. They are sold to us for spot cash, they are not advertised and not highly polished, but all the value is put in the leather.

Sizes 8 to 11 at $1.00 to $1.25
Sizes 11½ to 2, $1.25 to $1.75

Try Us For Shoes We Will Save You Money

A swell new line of Side and Back Combs, the New Leather Belts, Hand Bags, Embroidered Collars, Hat Pins, Etc, Come and see the latest things.

It pays to trade at THE BIG STORE The Store of Quality.

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

Treasurer Tandberg was up to Thief River Falls Monday.

W. A. Schreiter was a between trains visitor at St. Hilaire Monday.

Joe Brohman came in from Lambert Wednesday to look after his interests in a case before the district court.

Attend the revival meetings at the Presbyterian church. You will be pleased with both the singing and the sermons.

Banker W. W. Prichard of the First National Bank of Thief River Falls. was looking after business matters at the court house Monday.

F. L Farley closed a deal this week whereby he becomes owner of the Hatten residence on State street, which he has occupied for some time past.

Thief River Falls sent a large delegation down this week to attend the session of the District Court, about fifty being present the first of the week.

Misses Mary Lamb and Elene Hanson of the teaching force of the Lafayette school are spending the Easter vacation at thier homes in Moorhead and Fertile respectively.

Miss Clara Marchand came home Saturday from Moorhead for a weeks sojourn. She was accompanied by Miss Pauline Day, who is also putting in part of the week visiting friends at St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls.

The Markham Hotel at St. Hilaire, which was closed down recently will be be thoroughly overhauled and renovated and will be reopened for business April 1st, under the management of Mr. Hans Wilson of Wylie. The need of hotel accommodations at St. Hilaire is so pronounced that her citizens at once took steps to secure new managemeut for the Markham which was closed about a fortnight past.

Little globules of sunshine that drive the clouds away. DeWitt's Little Early Risers will scatter the gloom of sick-headache and biliousness. They do not gripe or sicken. Recommended and sold here by all druggists.

J. W. Bourdin was a St. Hilaire caller Monday.

Frank McGinty of Thief River, was a county seat caller Monday.

M. R. Hall returned Monday from the Big woods where he put in the past winter in the lumber camps.

Miss Mamie Ericson who is teaching at Fergus Falls arrived home Saturday morning to spend the spring vacation.

Miss Maggie Kaus accompanied by her friend Miss Thompson of Moorhead, came up from that place Saturday for a weeks vacation from normal studies.

W. J. Scharmer and wife, of Sandridge, spent several days the first of the week as the guest of Mrs. Scharmer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Leader who reside northeast of this city.

Oliver Belair has acceted a position at Fred Borchers popular refreshment emporium. Mr. Belair takes the place formerly filled by Joe Patnode who will remove to Argyle

---

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.

DENTIST

Offices in LaBissoniere Block. Office hours 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.

At St Hilaire every Wednesday.

Thomas Germo, Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys at-Law

Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

The winds of March have no terror to the user of DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. It quickly heals chapped and cracked skin. Good too, for boils and burns, and undoubtedly the best relief for Piles. Sold here by all druggists.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray. founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1319 Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo. N. D.

Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges . . .

We have just received several of the latest constructed Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges, in which are contained all the features which has made the steel range famous and the latest improvements that are known to the range manufacturers' art, which makes this range the "Monarch" of them all. These ranges are now on exhibition at our store, and we would be pleased to have every housewife in this vicinity call and look them over. The price of the Monarch Malleable Steel Range" is cheaper accordingly than other so called "steel ranges."

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

AN EASTER SONG

A song of sunshine through the rain,
Of spring across the snow,
A balm to heal the hurts of pain,
A peace surpassing woe.
Lift up your heads, ye sorrowing ones,
And be ye glad of heart,
For Calvary and Easter Day,
Earth's saddest day and gladdest day,
Were just one day apart!

With shudder of despair and loss
The world's deep heart was wrung,
As, lifted high upon His cross,
The Lord of Glory hung—
When rocks were rent, and ghostly forms
Stole forth in street and mart:
But Calvary and Easter-Day,
Earth's blackest day and whitest day,
Were just one day apart.
—Susan Coolidge.

Symbol of Glad Easter

All Nations and All Peoples Have Connected the Egg with the Creation or Renewal of Life.

FOR days the shop windows have spoken eloquently though mutely of the advent of tho great spring festival which in some form or other the classes and masses of the people are observing. Easter lilies and tulips, violets and hyacinths nll have spoken of the birth of a new year, of the springing forth of buds and blossoms, of the thrilling of bird songs, of the breaking of ice-bound waters, of the passing of winter, and of the return of the sun, bringing with it seedtime, and the birth of new hopes and desires, symbolized in the celebration of Easter.

And everywhere the egg, symbolic of the universe and of life, of the springing forth from the germ of new forces and powers, has been in evidence.

The Egyptians, the Jews, the Persians and Hindus, the Syrians, the Burmese, the Chinese, the Australians, the Hawaiians—all have connected the egg with the creation or renewal of life.

The fire worshippers of Persia, worshiping Zoroaster as a prophet, believed in a first great spirit from whom came two brothers, Ormuzd and Ahriman. Ahriman, showing jealousy of his brother, Ormuzd, was condemned to darkness for thousands of years. Angered, he longed for revenge, and when Ormuzd made an egg containing good genii Ahriman made another full of evil spirits, and broke the two together, so that from the beginning good and evil were mixed. In memory of this legend of creation, tbe Persians at the festival of the solar new year, held in March, exchanged colored eggs as gifts.

The Chinese have a story that the first man, Poo Koo Wong, came from an egg, and that having been born he used the upper part of the shell to make the heavens, while the lower part became the earth.

The Burmese tell that the first man and woman, their Adam and Eve, were hatched from a single egg.

The Syrians say that their gods from whom they were descended were hatched from eggs.

The Australians believe the earth was darkened space until one of their race threw up an egg, which exploded and became the sun.

Hawnll, the islanders declare, wns a great egg which some mammoth hird dropped as it passed over the seas.

The Egyptians regarded the egg as a sacred emblem of the renovation of mankind nfter the flood, nnd the Jews used it as a type of their departure from the land of the Egyptians, nnd with the Paschal lamb it was a part of the Passover feast.

The early Christians were, of course, Jewish, and when they began to observe Easter as a Christian feast gave to the egg as a part of the ceremonial of the season a new significance, that of the resurrection from tho dead. Eggs were forbidden during Lent, and so nnturnlly accumulated, as the hens did not stop laying. Eating them on Easter day signified that fasting time was over nnd feasting begun, so they were connected with joy just ns were the hells which, hushed during the period preceding Easter day, broke into joyous pealing at its dawn.

The nnme for Easter in the romance languages—paques in French, pasqua in Italian, nnd pascun in Spanish—comes through the Latin paschn, from the Chaldean form of the Hebrew name for the Passover festivnl. Hence the eggs are pace, pashe, paschal, or pasque eggs, as well as Easter eggs.

When the early Christians began to observe Easter as a Christian festival a controversy as to the time of its observance, known as the Paschal controversy, and extending from the second to the fourth centuries, arose. The Eastern churches kept it at the same time as the Jewish Passover, tho 14th day of the Jewish lunar month of Nisnn, which most often corresponds to our month of April, though sometimes synchronous with March. The Western churches thought that it should he identified with Sunday, and observed it on the Sundny following the 14th day of Nisan. At the beginning of the fourth century, the Emperor Constantine succeeded in having a canon passed hy the ecumenical council of Nice, fixing and making uniform the dnte of its observance, though as the rules laid down by this council for the date of its observance made it necessary to reconcile tbree periods, witb no common measure, namely, the week, the lunar month and the solar year, the determination of Easter was for a long time a matter requiring great nicety of calculation, aud so, as the Egyptians were skilled in astronomical matters, this was left for n long time to the Alexandrian see to decide.

The rules decreed that the 21st of March should be regarded as the vernal equinox.

The full moon happening upon or next after the 21st of March should he regarded as the full moon of the month of Nisan.

The first Lord's day after that full moon should be observed as Easter day.

If the full moon chanced to fall on Sunday, the next Sunday should he Easter day.

As all the movable feasts and fasts depend on Easter, uniformity of time in its observance was an important matter. The rules adopted by the Nicene council makes it possible for it to fall upon any Sunday of five weeks, commencing with March 22 and ending with April 25.

The name Easter is derived from the name of the Saxon goddess of spring, Eostre, Eastre, or Ostera, and may he traced back to the Phoenician moon goddess, Astarte, so often associated with the hare in Eastern myths. Hence, perhaps, the use of the hare in connection with the Easter eggs, which it is said to lay.

Some think the name comes from the word oster, which means rising, and to Christians it, of course, is commemorative of the rising of Christ from the dend.

Tbe month dedicated to the spring goddess of the Saxons wns the fourth month, which answers to our April, and her festival was held in honor of the opening of the natural year, to commemorate the setting free of tha nntural forces of germination and growth which the winter had chilled and crucified.

Each nation has had its own Easter customs, hut many of them can ha trnced hack to the ancient spring festivals welcoming the return of tha sun. In tbe church it is one of the threc grent Christinn feasts, and has heen known as the Queen of Festivals and the Lord of Days. It is ushered in hy vigil and fasting, hut is, itself, a time of rejoicing. In the olden days a relic of the fire worshiping time could he found in the kindling of new and pure fires, after the old ones hnd heen extinguished, from the Paschal candle, the great and sacred candle which often weighed hundreds of pounds. The washing of the feet of others by high dignitnries of church and state was, of course, done in memory of Christ's wnshing the feet of the npostles.

Music, candles, honfires, flowers, miracle plays, the pealing of bells, the exchange of gifts, the liberation of prisoners, the setting free of slaves, the giving of alms or maunds, the playing of games, some of them rude and rough enough indeed, during Easter week—these set npart the season from others.

Certain articles of food, such ns tansy cake, typifying the "hitter herhs," and hot cross huns and custarda were eaten in England. In Ireland the peasants rose early to see the sun dance, which we mny do hy looking in a stream of water, as they did.

Most of the ruder sports have died out, but the note of glndness in its observnnce still dominates, though sounded in gentler fashion.

And the solemn observance of the church, made beautiful hy an impressive ritual invested with all that light and color and sound can add to a ceremony, inspire the faithful with the thought that once again light and life have triumphed over death and darkness.

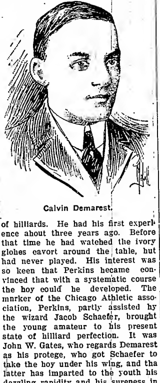
Sporting Gossip.

Again a young billiardist—this tima Calvin Demarest, a youth of 19 from the west—has electrified the followers of the game by winning tbe national nmnteur championship at 14.2, in tbe recent tournament in New York city. This amateur promises to create as much of a furor at tbe game as tbe late Frnnk C. Ives, and more recently William F. Hoppe, nlthough the latter two were of the professional class. In every phase of manipulation of the ivory halls with the willow cue the lad who represents the Chicago Athletic association displays a technique and skill which have hrought no end of controversy among tha wiseacres, hoth amateur and professional.

Besides taking the championship, the young amateur captured the prize for high single avernge, high grand average and high run.

That one so young in years and to the game should at one session at the tahle eclipse the world's amateur record average with 27 3-11, and also count a high run of 115 carroms, in a measure tells the story of his execution and skill. This is all the more remarkable when it is taken into account that 12 months ago Demarest made his first appearance as an aspirant for national honors. Even then he showed such mastery of the ivory glohes that he was placed second to Edward W. Gardner, winner of the championship, and captured the high grand averaga prize of the tournament at the Chicago Athletic association with 12.07. His improvement has heen so marked that during the recent meting at the Liederkranz club such experts as Maurice Daly, George F. Slosson and Edward McLaughlin predicted that he could now give Hoppe a hard mntch.

The method of training hy which Demarest has attained his proficiency is without its duplicate in the history of hilliards. He had his first experience ahout three years ago. Before that time he had watched the ivory glohes cavort around the tahle, hut had never played. His interest was so keen that Perkins hecame convinced that with a systematic course the hoy could he developed. The mnrker of the Chicago Athletic association, Perkins, partly assisted hy the wizard Jacob Schaefer, brought the young amateur to his present state of hilliard perfection. It was John W. Gates, who regards Demarest as his protege, who got Schaefer to take the hoy under his wing, and tha latter has imparted to the youth his dazzling rapidity and his sureness in playing the difficult masse shot.



Calvin Demarest.

Demarest's skill is another exemplification of the time-worn ndage that "sticking everlastingly at it hrings success." He is a slave to hard and careful practice. His training is another indication of what cnreful training hacked hy painstaking application and an adaptahility for the game will accomplish even for one young in years. In Chicago they class Demarest as the foremost amateur in America.

Perkins was the first to impart the knowledge of carroms to the boy. It was a grueling beginning according to Demarest, as for a period of half a yenr his only practice was with a fairly heavy cue, ahout 24 ounces swinging the willow wand with the right and left hands, hut never touching a hall. It was in a sense imaginary hilliards. He merely formed bridges and worked for a graceful and easy swing of stroke. But it achieved its objact, as can he easily seen hy his perfect action when in match play.

Under this mathod Damarest was brought to a state of methodical and mechanical perfection in the manual work of his arms nnd the swing of the cue. After that had heen attained the carroma and the angles, with the ivory spheres followed, and it was then that Schaefer supplemented the training accomplished under the eye of Perkins.

It is conceded hy all of the experts that Demarest is hardly a finished product as a hilliardist, hut that his game is remnrkable and displays wonderful possihilities.

Maurice Daly believes that Demarest will achieve hetter results when he has learned to play tha carroms with mora delicacy of touch, and arrives at a stage of his career when he can accomplish big runs hy nursing. In this he is upheld by George F. Slosson.

FADED TO A SHADOW.

Wern Down hy Five Years of Suffering from Kidney Complaint.

Mrs. Remetha Myers, of 180 South Tenth St., Ironton, O., snys: "I hava worked hard in my time and have heen exposed again and again to changes of weather. It is no wonder my kidneys gnva out and I went nll to pieces at last. For fiva years I was fading away nnd finally so weak that for six months I could not get out of tha house. I was nervous, restless and sleepless nt night, and lame and sore in tha morning. Sometimes everything would whirl and hlur hefore me. I hloated so badly I could not wear tight clothing, nnd had to put on shoes two sizes larger than usual. The urine was disordered and passages were dreadfully frequent. I got help from the first hox of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and hy the time I hnd taken four hoxes the pain and hloating were gone. I have heen in good health ever since."

For sale hy all dealers. 50 cents a hox. Foster-Milhurn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Secret of Japan's Success.

Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton of the British army wrote the evening after one of the great hattles which he had witnessed between Russians and Japanese in the recent war in Menchuria: "To bed! Although it is with reluctance that I prepare to lose my grip of the exciting consciousness that I have to-day seen the most stupendous spectacla that it is possihle for mortal hrain to conceive—Asia advancing, Europe falling hack; the wall of mist and the writing thareon." Then as to the meaning of this retreat of Europe hefora advancing Asia: "The more I think the more certain I am that it was not strategy or tactics, or armament or informntion, which won tha hattle of Liaoyang for Oyama, hut that it was rather tha souls of the Japanesa troops which triumphed over tha less davaloped, less awakaned, less stimulated qualities of the Russians."

THREE BOYS HAD ECZEMA.

Were Treated at Dispensary—Did Not Improve—Suffered Five Months —Perfect Cure hy Cuticura.

"My three children had eczema for five months. A little sore would appear on the hend and seemed very itchy, increasing day after day. The hahy had had it about a week when tha second hoy took the disease and a few sores developed, then the third hoy took it. For the first threa months I took them to tha N— Dispensary, bnt they did not seem to improve. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and in a few weeks they had improved, and when their heads were well you could see nothing of the sores. Mrs. Kate Keim, 513 West 29th St., New York, N. Y., Nov. 1, 5 and 7, 1906."

Valuahie Ruhber Plant.

A German maid with a knowledge of English just sufficient to gat things mixed was much interested in tha housa plants of her mistress, who possessed, among others, a rubber plant.

One day whila sweeping the room she had occasion to move this particular plant, when she ramarked that she had read in the paper that a rubher plant worth $200,000 hurned in Woonsocket, and sha thought it must have heen a heautiful plant to have cost so much money.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot he cured hy Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and helieve him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN,
Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Pine 200 Years Old.

Charles H. Lord of Dunharton, N. H., recently cut a large pine tree on his farm which, from the rings, was 200 years old. The tree was 134 feet tall, measured five feet four inches on the stump, and at the height of 60 feet measured thrae feet in diameter.

It Cures While You Walk.

Allen's Foot-Ease is a certoin cure for hot, sweating, callous, ond swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Be not discouraged with your work, neither with your life. No work faithfuliy done has ever heen wastad, and no life truly lived has ever failed.—C. Simmons.

FITS, St. Vitus Dance and oll Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for Free $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Philodelphia, Pa.

So mysteriously are we linked with others in this world that we cannot fail in our duty without harming others, nor hear ourselves hravely without henefit to others.—Scovil.

Take Garfield Tea, the herb remedy that has for its object Good Health! It purifies the blood, cleanses the system, makes people well. Guaranteed under the Pure Food Law.

The noblest spirit is most strongly attracted hy the love of glory.—Cicero.

Panthers and Grizzly Bears.

Ship Furs Pelts McMillan Fur & Wool Co., Minneapolis, Minn. Write for prices

And some people are so industrious that when they haven't anything to do they proceed to do somebody.

WILLING TO LET HIM DIE.

Stinging Message Sent by Farmer Worstad in Business Deal.

In the old colony town of Scituate, Mass., onca lived Deacon J——, who had a yoke of oxen he desired to sell. The news reached the ears of Farmer T——, who lived in another portion of the town, who was in want of a pair. So he visited the deacon, who met him with a gracious smile and led him to the oxen, which were chewing their cuds and to all appearances ready for any amount of toil.

After some hargaining a difference of fiva dollars remained. Finally the deacon said: "I am old and feehle, and shall not live long, and five dollars will he of no account," so the hargain was made. Farmer T— took the oxen bome.

They proved worthless, could not work, nnd had heen heated. He felt provoked at heing sold, and, seeing a person tha next day who was going to the part of the town where the deacon lived, said: "You tell Deacon J—— he need not live another d—d minute longer on my account."

You can do your dyeing in half an hour with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES. Ask your druggist.

One makes one's own happiness only hy taking care of the happiness of others.—C. Doane.

HE HAD TASTE IN VEILS.

Unfortunate Admission That Made Trouhie for George.

She was standing by the mirror. He was huried deep in the sporting page.

"George!"

"Well, well! What is it now?"

"How do you like my new veil?"

"Oh, it is very pretty. Anything else?"

"But how do you know it is pretty? Men don't know anything ahout veils."

"You nra very polita toward our sex. I would hava you understand tbat I have a taste for veils."

"You have a taste for veils?"

"Yes, I have tasted a dozen veils. Tbat is—er—I mean I have—no, yes, I—wbat in thunderation do I mean? I—"

"Stop! Not another falsehood, George Brown! You have heen kissing some girl through her veil. You know the taste of veils, eh? You deceiver. I—"

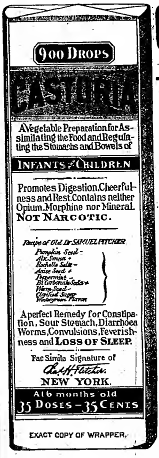
But poor George had fled.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.

PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days or money refunded. 50c.

Coolies Show Affection.

The Chinese laborers in the Van Rhu gold mines recently prasented to their white manager a handsome silver tray to mark their feelings of affection, "as deep as the sea."



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed -
Alx. Senna +
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed +
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda +
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas H. Fletcher
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas H. Fletcher
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Sloan's Liniment
For Cough, Cold, Croup, Sore Throat, Stiff Neck, Rheumatism and Neuralgia
At all Dealers
Price 25c 50c & $1.00
Sent Free
Sloan's Book on Horses Cattle, Hogs & Poultry
Address Dr. Earl S. Sloan
615 Albany St. Boston, Mass.

Happy Colors

You know that there are colors which signify sadness, others which indicate happiness—but do you ever stop to think how often people are made sad or glad because of the colors?

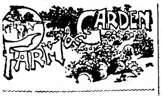
You know that children and flowers thrive best in the sunshine. Why not have more sunshine in your own home, than—why not let us show you how to get it in the walls by using

Alabastine
The Sanitary Wall Coating

By having your walls decorated with Alabastine you will make them more artistic, more durable, more sanitary, and will make your home a more cheerful place to live in. Let us show you how easy and economical Alabastine is, and how the different tints and stenciled designs can be combined to produce "exactly the effect you want." Write us today.

Accept no substitute—insist on getting Alabastine.

The Alabastine Company,
Grand Rapids, Mich., or 105
Water Street, New York City.



HOME-MADE LAND ROLLER.

One Which Will Do Good Service in Pulverizing the Soil.

With four old mowing machine wheels, with the earth slugs cut off, an axle and a sickle bar, a very satisfactory roller can be made after the manner shown in the accompanying illustration. One-half inch holes were drilled every four inches, about the outside rim of each wheel. Two by four oak planks three feet six inches long with half-inch holes bored close to the end, were bolted on the old mowing machine wheels, being careful not to let the two by four project over the edge of the wheel.

In the center an old sickle bar with guards off was used with a two-inch hole in the center. The ends were turned half around to fasten to the frame. This bar was placed between the two sections of the roller. The ends of the center shaft were inserted in boxes in the two outside pieces of the frame, which was made of four by four hardwood material. Four two by eight planks were used for the front and rear of the frame.

Roller from Mowing Machine Wheels.

A platform was made on which the seat was attached by taking an old wagon tire and bending it in position shown. Platform was placed on these rails and an old mowing machine seat bolted for the rider. An old mowing machine tongue was used for the tongue on the roller. When a roller is devised in this manner, says Prairie Farmer, it is much easier for a team to turn around than is the common log roller.

TREATING GRAIN FOR SMUT.

How It Is Done with Formaldehyde Solution.

For the benefit of those who have not already treated seed grain for smut with formaldehyde, I will state my experience in doing so, writes a correspondent of The Farmer. Three years ago I had 300 bushels of wheat that was so smutty that I could not sell it at the elevator but had to grind it and use it for hog feed. I did not buy different seed the following year but treated the grain I had in the following manner and it cleaned it so effectively that very little smut is to be found in the grain now. I made a solution as the directions with the formaldehyde stated, in a barrel about half full or more with water. By having a board slant onto the edge of the barrel and placing the dripping sacks on the board, the solution which drips from them will all run back into the barrel. By having two coarse sacks, one submerged in the barrel and the other on the board dripping, it does not take very long to treat enough grain for the following day's seeding, thus giving it one day's time to dry. I consider this less work than sprinkling and shoveling and far surer of getting all the grain treated. Have also treated oats with very good results. I treat oats the same way only they have to be stirred more on the floor and left longer to dry as it is very difficult to sow swollen oats. I also believe in cleaning all seeds in the best possible way, but if they are found to contain foul seed it is safest not to use it for seed at all. From costly experience I have learned the old saying to be true: "As we sow so shall we reap."

Growing Better Corn.

Now for a better stand of corn. Over much of the corn belt it is estimated that not more than two-thirds of a stand of corn is secured. The fault is largely with the seed. It is not graded or sorted so that the planter will drop uniformly. It is surprising how many different shape kernels are found on a single ear, and when all of these are put into the planter boxes the best you can expect is uneven drops. Not only use good seed, but size it so that two, three or four kernels may be dropped in 95 hills out of 100.

Have Faith in the Farm.

Make farming a business. Put money and brains into the farm with the expectation that it will return a profit. To manage a farm in a half-hearted way, being afraid to invest a dollar on improvements or to apply sufficient fertilizer for fear that it will not pay, is a sure way of having one's fears realized. If the effort is made to make the farm better year by year it is pretty certain to be a success.

Don't Waste.

The manure made from fattening steers is too valuable and much too costly to permit waste. Keep the sheds well bedded so that as much of the manure as possible will be saved. Too often feeding is done out of doors and every rain or thaw drains away great streams of costly fertilizer. Stop these drains.

Ideal Trade Conditions.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen, maybe, would have a bad time for six or 12 months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress, and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

Triumph of American Duchess.

Helen, duchess of Manchester, is now lady-in-waiting to Queen Alexandra, and the first American to receive that honor. So much for marrying the only son of the most popular duchess at the court of Edward VII. Other American duchesses may shrug and say they wouldn't be a lady in waiting on any account; but don't you believe them. It is a royal distinction tremendously valued by English nobility, and the next step is the political plum to be made mistress of the robes.—Boston Herald.

TACK THIS UP.

Simple Advice Which May Prove of Untold Value.

At the first sign of Backache or pain in the region of the Kidneys, or weakness and Urinary trouble, the following simple prescription should be used:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Any good prescription pharmacy will supply these three ingredients at small cost, which can easily be mixed by shaking well in a bottle. This is said to force the Kidneys to filter the sour acids and poisons from the blood, overcoming the worst cases of Rheumatism.

THE ARTISTIC WALL.

One of Solid Color Will Always Give Best Effect.

The dearest, daintiest, most artistic wall is a solid colored wall. It furnishes a perfect background for all kinds of pictures, it throws them out in their correct proportions, and does not detract from their artistic value. The solid colored wall is also much better as a background for furniture, and harmonizes much more artistically with carpets and rugs than any other method of wall treatment. The less breaking up of color on a wall the more artistic it is.

The most successful form of the solid colored wall is an alabastined wall. There is as much difference between tinted walls, as there is between shoddy and all-wool gowns. The shoddy gown holds its color for a few days, while the all-wool keeps its color to the very last thread, so also in solid colored walls, there are shoddy walls and permanently colored walls which retain their color down to the very last particle. The ideal wall coating never rubs off, never flakes nor chips off and is always ready for a fresh coat. If there is wallpaper on the wall, soak it off with warm water, then go over the plaster after you have removed the paper with warm water to remove every trace of paste. Have the wall thoroughly clean for a clean wall cannot be built on an unclean foundation. If there are any particles of foreign matter adhering to the wall scrape them off with a putty knife. Then if there are any discolorations on the wall, size it with a material made from cheap varnish, thinned down with benzine and japan added for a drier, then cover your wall with your tinting material.

Be sure your man uses a tinting material mixed with cold water. If he comes to you and asks for warm water, you can make up your mind that there is glue in the material which he proposes to put on your wall, and you can be certain that you are going to have a shoddy wall, for glue means shoddy. Glue means that it will hold its color long enough for the man to collect his bill and not much longer. Insist on your tinting material being mixed with clear, cold water. Be sure that your wall is made from pure materials, then you will have a permanent, artistic, sanitary wall. A wall that will be a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

FOOLED THE PREACHER.

A Doctor's Brother Thought Postum Was Coffee.

A wise doctor found out coffee was hurting him, so he quit drinking it.

He was so busy with his practice, however, that his wife had to write how he fooled his brother, a clergyman, one day at dinner. She says:

"Doctor found coffee was injuring him and decided to give Postum a trial, and we have used it now for four years, with continued benefit. In fact, he is now free from the long train of ills that follow coffee drinking.

"To show how successful we are in making Postum properly I will relate an incident. At a dinner we gave, Doctor suggested we serve Postum instead of ordinary coffee.

"Doctor's brother, a Clergyman, supposed it was old fashioned coffee and remarked, as he called for his second cup: 'If you do preach against coffee, I see you haven't forgotten how to make it.'"

This goes to show that well-made—fully boiled—Postum has much the flavor and richness of good coffee although it has an individuality all its own. A ten days' trial will prove that it has none of the poisonous effect of ordinary coffee, but will correct the troubles caused by coffee. "There's a reason." Name furnished by Postum Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Easter Millinery.

In Fashion Land it has been Spring these many weeks, especially so in the realm of Millinery where Flowers are blooming in abundance. Dainty Ribbons and Silks of Spring like colors combined with Flowers make the beautiful trimmings seen on the Ladies' Hats now being sent out by the large Wholesale Dealers. One of the recognized and Foremost Houses of the United States is the firm of Blumenfeld, Loeber & Brown Co., known to the trade as "The Progressive Millinery House of Milwaukee." The wonderful growth and success of this firm is the talk of the Millinery World. Their Trimmed Hats are sent to every State and Territory of the United States and are becoming known to every lady who studies styles and recognizes workmanship. When you go shopping for your Easter Hat ask the saleslady to show you a hat with a B. L. B. Co. Monogram Label. Hats from this firm are always the latest in style, excellently made and the prices will be within reach.

Coldest European Winter.

In the year 1814 the Thames froze and the English channel was for a time impassable because of icebergs. The coldest European winter on record was that of 1708-1709. It began early in October. In 1740 also the cold was so intense that birds fell dead to the ground.

Oats—Heads 2 Foot Long.

The John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., are bringing out a new oats this year, with heads 2 foot long! That's a wonder. Their catalog tells!

Spetz—the greatest cereal hay food America ever saw! Catalog tells!

FREE

Our mammoth 148-page Seed and Tool Catalog is mailed free to all intending buyers, or send 6c in stamps and receive free samples of new Two Foot Long Oats and other cereals and big catalog free.

John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box W, La Crosse, Wis.

City's Death Rate Reduced.

The London death rate is now nearly 30 per cent. lower than it was at the coming into operation of the public health act in 1891. In that year the death rate was 17.1; in 1905 it was 15.1 a thousand.

One trial will convince you of the peculiar fitness of Nature's remedy, Garfield Tea, for liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels, for impure blood, rheumatism and chronic ailments.

Character is that kind of statuary which a man cuts out with himself as both tool and subject.—Sterne.

ONLY ONE "BROMO QUININE"
That is LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine. Similarly named remedies sometimes deceive. The first and original Cold Tablet is a WHITE PACKAGE with black and red lettering, and bears the signature of E. W. GROVE. 25c.

There are as many miseries beyond riches as on this side of them.—Izaak Walton.

We Pay Top-Price for Cream.

Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

True dignity is never gained by place, and never lost when honors are withdrawn.—Massinger.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

We are ourselves served best by serving others.—C. G. Ames.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

All philosophy lies in two words—"sustain" and "abstain."—Epictetus.

WOMEN IN HOSPITALS

Experiences of Mrs. Rockwood and Miss Tierney

MISS MARGARET TIERNEY MRS. CHAS. A. ROCKWOOD

A large proportion of the operations performed in our hospitals are upon women and girls for some organic trouble.

Why should this be the case?

Because they have neglected themselves, as every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in those dragging sensations, pains at left or right of abdomen, backaches, nervous exhaustion, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, and other organic weaknesses.

All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female system and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has saved hundreds of women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has cured more cases of feminine ills than any other one remedy. Such letters as the following are constantly being received by Mrs. Pinkham to prove our claims.

Mrs. O. A. Rockwood, teacher of Parliamentary Law, of 58 Free St., Fredonia, N. Y., writes:—

"For years I suffered with female trouble. It was decided that an operation was necessary, and although I submitted to a serious operation my sufferings continued, until Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and it proved a marvelous remedy, so quickly did it restore my health. I cannot thank you sufficiently for the good it has done me."

Miss Margaret Tierney, of No. 328 W. 25th Street, New York, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

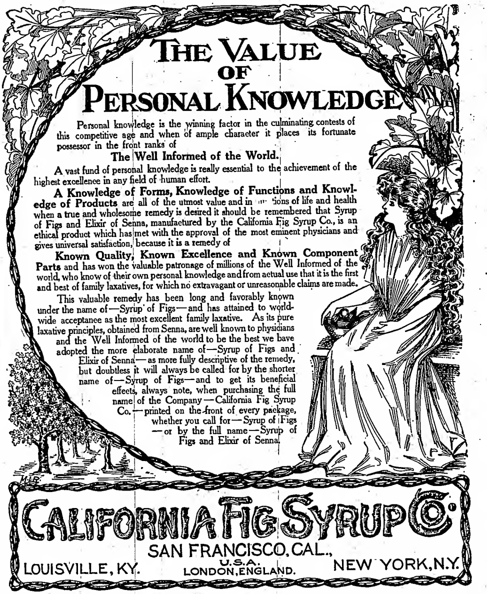
"When only eighteen years of age our physician decided that an operation was necessary to permit of my womanly organs performing their natural functions. My mother objected and being urged by a relative to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did so. I soon improved in health, the proper conditions were established and I am well and strong, thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

No other remedy has such unqualified endorsement as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other remedy in the world has such a record of cures of female ills.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that may help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.



THE VALUE OF PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

Personal knowledge is the winning factor in the culminating contests of this competitive age and when of ample character it places its fortunate possessor in the front ranks of

The Well Informed of the World.

A vast fund of personal knowledge is really essential to the achievement of the highest excellence in any field of human effort.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value and in [illegible] tions of life and health when a true and wholesome remedy is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Excellence and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual use that it is the first and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

M.L.B.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,
U.S.A.
LOUISVILLE, KY. LONDON, ENGLAND. NEW YORK, N.Y.

A Positive CURE

Ely's Cream Balm

is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once.

CATARRH

HAY FEVER

It cleanses, soothes heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts., at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size 10 cts. by mail. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

WHY NOT GO SOUTH?

Where work can be carried on the entire year, where the lands are fertile and productive and where you will not have to battle against the elements of a frozen country. You should send a postcard to J. W. WHITE, Gen. Ind. Agent, Seaboard Air Line, Dept. 6, Portsmouth, Va., for a copy of the

SEABOARD MAGAZINE sent free

and it will be sent you together with other handsomely illustrated literature descriptive of the south and its wonderful resources and opportunities for northern farmers desiring to locate in a country blessed with a delightful climate. Special low rates to homeseekers and prospectors.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D.C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

NO MORE MUSTARD PLASTERS TO BLISTER.
THE SCIENTIFIC AND MODERN EXTERNAL COUNTER-IRRITANT.

CAPISICUM VASELINE

EXTRACT OF THE CAYENNE PEPPER PLANT

A QUICK, SURE, SAFE AND ALWAYS READY CURE FOR PAIN.—PRICE 15c.—IN COLLAPSIBLE TUBES—AT ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS, OR BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF 15c. IN POSTAGE STAMPS. DON'T WAIT TILL THE PAIN COMES—KEEP A TUBE HANDY.

A substitute for and superior to mustard or any other plaster, and will not blister the most delicate skin. The pain-allaying and curative qualities of the article are wonderful. It will stop the toothache at once, and relieve Headache and Sciatica. We recommend it as the best and safest external counter-irritant known, also as an external remedy for pains in the chest and stomach and all Rheumatic, Neuralgic and Gouty complaints. A trial will prove what we claim for it, and it will be found to be invaluable in the household and for children. Once used no family will be without it. Many people say "it is the best of all your preparations." Accept no preparation of vaseline unless the same carries our label, as otherwise it is not genuine. SEND YOUR ADDRESS AND WE WILL MAIL OUR VASELINE PAMPHLET WHICH WILL INTEREST YOU.

CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO.
17 STATE STREET, NEW YORK CITY

W. L. DOUGLAS

$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD

W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

Fertile Farming

LANDS

Cheap
Easy Terms

In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.

Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.

Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.

Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

POULTRYMEN!

Do you want strong, healthy chicks?
Then mix with your feed

SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER

The original medicine to make hens lay. Causes perfect assimilation of food, keeps poultry healthy, and increases egg production in fall and winter when prices are high.

One pack, 25c.; five, $1; two-lb. can, $1.20; six, $5.00. Express paid. At all dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FARMS THAT GROW "NO. 1 HARD" WHEAT

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

(Sixty-three Pounds to the Bushel). Are situated in the Canadian West where Homesteads of 160 acres can be obtained free by every settler willing and able to comply with the Homestead Regulations. During the present year a large portion of

New Wheat Growing Territory

HAS BEEN MADE ACCESSIBLE TO MARKETS BY THE RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION that has been pushed forward so vigorously by the three great railway companies.

For literature and particulars address SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or the following authorized Canadian Government Agent:

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Mention this paper.

READERS of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

PARLOR ORGAN ECHOS A choice collection of instrumental and vocal music, for Organ or Piano. Book 1—21 pieces, 25c. Book 2—24 pieces, 25c. Book 3—26 pieces, 25c. To introduce these beautiful collections a copy of either book will be sent postpaid on receipt of 15 cents, stamps or coin. WM. A. POND & CO., 148 5th Ave., New York.

DEFIANCE STARCH—16 ounces to the package —other starches only 12 ounces—same price and "DEFIANCE" IS SUPERIOR QUALITY.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use } Thompson's Eye Water

A. N. K.—G (1907—12) 2170.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL......

F. C. Westhhal visited with friends at Thief River Tuesday.

See Jim and Paul for your boys clothes; they'll save you money.

City Clerk Lars Backe, of the Upper Falls, transacted business at the county seat yesterday.

Jim and Paul can dress your b[illegible] location in suits, caps and shoes.

A new policeman has been added to the city's already efficient force, a bouncing baby boy having arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lizee, Wednesday evening, March 27th. Both mother and child are doing nicely.

Joseph Fortier will leave this evening, or tomorrow, for Portland Oregon, and other western points to look up a business location in the mercantile line. If nothing suitable is found Mr. Fortier signifies his intention of returning and settling in the good old state of Minnesota.

The remains of Oliver Lagassy, who died Thursday of last week, were laid to rest in the St. Anthony cemetery Monday, when the last sad rites that make all mankind akin were held. The remains were held until that time to permit several relatives from a distance to be in attendance.

N. J. St. Aubin and family who have been living at Devils Lake, N. D., for about a year past, will return to this city during the early part of April and will take up their residence at their old home. S. L. [illegible] who now occupies the Aubin [illegible] into the residence [illegible] by K. M. Hansen.

Prof. E. W. Chamberlain went down to [illegible] Friday to act as judge in a debating contest between the High School girls and boys [illegible]. It is intimated that the professor gave way to a little [illegible] prejudice and handed down a decision in favor of the ladies. Mr. Chamberlain also put in a day or two at the Twin Cities before returning.

Jack Lagassy arrived in the city Sunday from Vonda, Saskatchewan, Canada, from which place he was called by the death of his father, Oliver Lagassy. Mr. Lagassy, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Clas, went to Brooks Monday for a brief visit, from which point they will return to Mr. Lagassy's home at Vonda, where Mrs. Clas will remain for several weeks before returning to Milwaukee.

Merchant H. H. Zaiser, who has been in Chicago for several days past, writes from that place that he has purchased a large line of fancy and staple dress goods which will arrive at the Busy Store in a few days. The line contains some of the swellest individual patterns of the coming season's styles and was purchased with a view of giving the Busy Store's customers the best and most up to the season values that could be procured on the market.

Mr. and Mrs. K. M. Hansen will move their household goods to Thief River Falls the first of next week where they will make their future home. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen have made many warm friends during the time they have lived in this city who will regret to see them depart from our midst. Mr. Hansen is yet undecided as to what his future course in business will be but will probably conduct an [illegible] and collection office at the Upper Falls.

Orpheus Concert Program For Next Monday Evening.

Overture "Bohemian Girl," ..... Balfe
Orchestra

Song [illegible] ..... [illegible]
Quartette

Waltz "Daughter of Love," ..... Bennett
Orchestra

Clarinet Solo ..... Selected
Prof. F. H. Brackman

Grand Fantasia ..... Weber
Quartette
Introducing excerpts from Weber's most famous composition, Oberon, Rosamunde, Invitation to the Dance.

Clarinet Duet ..... Selected
Messrs. Brackman and Tracy.

"[illegible]" ..... Langey
Quartette

Violin Cello Solo ..... Selected
L. P. Berthon.

Echoes from the Metropolitan Opera House ..... Tobani
Quartette.
Containing excerpts from the following operas: The Prophet, Aida, Cavalleria Rusticana, [illegible], Tannhauser, William Tell.

Price of admission $1.00 for both concert and dance. Tickets on sale at Anderson's Jewelry Store Saturday, March 30th.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Re-opening of Lands.

Under the Provisions of the Indian appropriation bill for 1905 an appropriation of $15,000 was made for a drainage survey of the ceded Indian lands in Minnesota, and the lands were withdrawn from entry pending the survey and report. Under the last Indian bill it was provided than these withdrawn lands should be made subject to entry upon the settlers agreeing to pay for drainage when the same is actually made. Many settlers are desirous of making entry on these withdrawn lands. Last week Congressman Steenerson telegraphed the Commissioner of the General Land Office inquiring on what date they would be subject to entry, and received a reply that the instructions relative to the re-opening of the withdrawn ceded Chippewa lands had been prepared and would be forwarded to the local land office at an early date.

It is therefore expected that persons desiring to file on these withdrawn lands will know within a couple of weeks when they can file on the land and under what conditions the filings will be accepted.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, Interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20 100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th, A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Mortgagee.
Wm J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota.
m28-m9

Subscribe for The Gazette.

THE GARDEN SPOT OF WESTERN CANADA
LAST MOUNTAIN VALLEY
THE HEART OF THE GREAT SASKATCHEWAN WHEAT PLAINS
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD
NORTHERN BANK BLDG. WINNIPEG, CANADA

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) Interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof,

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Wm. J. Brown, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn. mar21-m 2

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Mar. 7, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that Richmond Desotel of Terrebonne, Minn., has filed notice of his intention to make final five year proof in support of his claim, viz:

Homestead entry No. 22031, made March 21, 1902, for the SE¼NE¼ Section 21, Township 150 N., Range 43 W., and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on April 17, 1907.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, the land, viz:

Harmidas Sauve, Arthur Archambault, Joseph St Martin and Louis Terrup, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

R. J. Montague, Register.

Notice of Lein and Sale of Personal Property.

Notice is hereby given that Otto Zaiser and Fred Zaiser, co-partners as Zaiser Bros. claim and have a lein upon the following described personal property, towit: One bay horse called "Prince," weight about 970 pounds, the property of S. A. Swanson, for the care, feeding, keeping and boarding of said horse, which care, feeding, keeping, and boarding was furnished at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, at the request of said owner from and ever since September 18th, 1906, to and including the date hereof, at the agreed price of ten dollars per month, which became due more than ninety days prior to the date hereof.

And said Zaiser Bros. will sell said horse at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of Zaiser Bros. Livery Stable in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, Minnesota, on the 6th day of April, A. D. 1907, at 2 o'clock P. M., to pay the amount then due to claimants upon said lein-claim, which amount, exclusive of the expenses of advertising and sale, is hereby stated to be the sum of sixty-six dollars, of which three dollars have been paid, and to pay also the reasonable disbursements of advertising and sale thereof.

Dated March 20th, 1907.

Otto Zaiser and Fred Zaiser,
Co-partners as Zaiser Bros.
m21-m28 Claimants.

Don't Grind
YOUR LIFE AWAY
Become a demonstrator and earn $5.00 to $10.00 a day. Men or Women. Guaranteed salary if wanted. Household necessity—sells like magic. Our factory working overtime. Act today.
COLONIAL SUPPLY CO.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by L. A. Dautremont and Laura E. Dautremont, his wife, mortgagors, to Phil A. Kaufer, mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota on 12th day of September, 1903, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., in book 21 of mortgages on page 168, by the terms of which mortgage the following described premises were described in, mortgaged and conveyed to said mortgagee, to-wit: Lots nine (9), ten (10), and the north ten (10) feet of lot eleven (11), in block seven (7) in Champagne and Dow's addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the corrected plat thereof, being in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 9th day of September in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note; by failure to pay the $1000 falling due on the 9th day of September, 1904 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the year 1905, and whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay said note or any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable:

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon to the date hereof the sum of one thousand one hundred eighteen dollars, ($1118.00.)

And Whereas, because of said defaults and each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the west front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls, in said county, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1907, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the attorney's fees of $25.00 and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Dated Feb. 26, 1907.

—Phil A. Kaufer,
Mortgagee.
Chas. E. Boughton,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls. f28-a4

Citation for Hearing on Petition to Sell, Mortgage or Lease Land.

Estate of Berget Vettleson, Decedent.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss

In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Berget Vettleson, Decedent.

The State of Minnesota to Halvor Vettleson, Hulda Maria Vettleson, William Vettleson, Mabel Theoliana Vettleson, Louis Vettleson, Thea Helena Vettleson, Laura Elvira Vettleson, Helena Bertina Vettleson and Joseph Vettleson and all persons interested in the sale of certain lands belonging to said decedent: The petition of Thomas Germo as representative of the above named decedent, being duly filed in this court, representing that it is necessary and for the best interests of said estate and all interested therein that certain lands of said decedent described therein be sold and praying that a license be to him granted to sell the same:

Now Therefore, you and each of you are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this court at the Probate Court Rooms in the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 10th day of April 1907, at 10 o'clock a. m., why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness the Judge of said Court, and the seal of said court, this 11th day of March, 1907.

N. W. Tarrant,
(Court Seal) Judge of Probate Court.
Germo & Farley,
Attorneys for Petitioner. m14-m28

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR LIQUOR LICENSE.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake } ss
City of Red Lake Falls }

Notice is hereby given, that application has been made in writing to the city council of said city of Red Lake Falls and filed in my office, praying for License to Sell Intoxicating Liquors for the term commencing on March 25th, 1907, and terminating on March 24, 1908, by the following person, and at the following place as stated in said application, respectively, to-wit:

WM. H. KRUEGER,

In that certain frame building situate on lot 14 of block 7 in Champagne and Dowe' Addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Said application will be heard and determined by said city council of the city of Red Lake Falls at the city hall in the city of Red Lake Falls in Red Lake county, and state of Minnesota, on Thursday the 21st day of March, A. D. 1907, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Witness my hand and seal of the city of Red Lake Falls this 11th day of March, A. D. 1907.

[Seal] A. P. Toupin,
m14 City Clerk.

Use a little KODOL after your meals and it will be found to afford a prompt and efficient relief. KODOL nearly approximates the digestive juices. It digests what you eat. It is sold on a guaranteed relief plan. Sold here by all druggists.

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Tell Your Friends About It.

You may have friends in the east, who would be gald to move to the west, if they knew what opportunities are here. Send us their names, we will be glad to send them a bulletin on Montana and North Dakota.

Souvenir Playing Cards

Great Northern Railway Cards, 15c per pack; Great Northern Steamship cards, 25c per pack. Both are sold at actual cost. The Great Northern Steamship cards are gilt edged. Mailed to any address on receipt of price. Send stamps or money order.

MAY WE HELP YOU PLAN YOUR TRIP?

Two trains daily. Standards and Tourist Sleepers.

The Oriental Limited. The Fast Mail.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, - - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, APRIL 4, 1907 No 27

TEACHERS SELECTED

Eight Teachers Were Engaged Monday Evening For Ensuing Year.

The school board met Monday evening in a short business session, the principal feature of the meeting being the election of teachers for the coming school year.

Prof. E. W. Chamberlain was re-elected superintendent of the city schools at an advance of $50 per year, making his salary $1200. Mr. Chamberlain has given the schools an excellent administration during the past three years, and the announcement of his re-election to serve for the fourth term at an advance in salary will be received with pleasure by the many patrons of the schools.

Only eight teachers were chosen at this meeting, as follows:

Miss Twinam, per month,...		$60.00
Mrs. J. J. Doe,	" ..	50.00
Miss Lamb,	" ..	47.50
Miss Detert,	" ..	47.50
Miss Brady,	" ..	50.00
Miss Coughlin	" ..	50.00
Miss Kaus	" ..	50.00
Lee Healy, principal Washington school		70.00

Misses Hanson, Wilson, Trudo, Hennemuth and Nieland have signified their intention of not returning to this city next year and the election of teachers to fill the remaining positions will probably be made at the next meeting of the board.

Adjourned Hearing.

On Saturday, March 23rd, the hearing was held at Erskine on the remonstrance against the lowering or draining of Badger Lake in Polk county, by the proposed judicial ditch No. 5 which will empty into Terrebonne ditch No. 1, in Red Lake county. Judge Watts, Clerk of Court Lanctot, Surveyor Ralph and a large number of farmers interested were present and the matter was discussed at some length. However, no decision was arrived at and the meeting was postponed to reconvene at Crookston on Saturday, April 6th.

HAMILTON-BURSK MEETINGS

At the Presbyterian Church Have Drawn Large Crowd.

The revival meetings at the Presbyterian church have been largely attended, and the interest has been most encouraging to the pastor and people of that congregation. A large number have expressed a desire to become Christians, many of whom will become members of the church.

Evangelist Hamilton is very popular with the people. He presents truth in a very forcible way, and his manner is very pleasing. There is nothing stereotyped in his methods, and he is always very tactful in dealing with his audience. Singer John R. Bursk has won the hearts of the boys and girls. His "Sunbeam Choir" of 25 members is a notable feature of the meetings. There is also a Young People's Choir with 20 voices. Mr. Bursk's solos are sung with good expression and are effective means of bringing the truth of the Gospel to every hearer.

The meetings will close on Sunday night, and the evangelists will go to Hallock, where they will conduct a two weeks' revival. The people are urged to attend every service until the close. Saturday night there will be a stereopticon lecture on the "Passion Play" as given at Ober-Ammergau giving the story of the life of Christ.

Celebrate Tenth Anniversary.

On Monday of next week the local lodge of Modern Brotherhood of America will give a dancing party at their lodge rooms in the Kaus block for their members and invited guests. The function is given to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of the order which occurs on April 5th. This order, for its age, is one of the strongest fraternal organizations in the United States, is founded on sound financial principles, and at the present date has a reserve fund of half a million dollars well invested. Its membership is not far from 100,000. The local lodge which is known as Good Faith Lodge No. 601, is in a very flourishing condition, having a membership of eighty five, with new members being added rapidly.

GONE!!! One Battered, Worthless, Old County Seat Petition, For Which Thief River Falls Had No More Use.

County Auditor O'Brien reports that the county seat petition, that famous, but somewhat worthless, battered, old literary production which Thief River Falls filed here some years ago, has disappeared from his office.

When, where and how, nobody seems to know, but it is suspected that if two or three of the wise-heads who rule Thief River's destinies in the county seat matters, would open their sphinx-like faces, they could tell us all about it and reveal the present hiding place of the much-regretted petition.

Doesn't it strike you, gentle reader, as somewhat strange that during all the time that Red Lake Falls men occupied the court house—Ford, Jeffers, Perrault, the petition lay safely in its place; stayed there when Red Lake Falls was losing in the fight:—

Stayed there when Thief River Falls' money effected a change in the board of county commissioners;

Stayed there when Commissioners Shaw, Eckstrom and Johnson were jumping on Red Lake Falls with both feet, and kicking what they thought was a corpse;

Stayed there when the District Court decided against Red Lake Falls and by its' mandate, bound and gagged us, our only hope lying in a doubtful appeal to the Supreme Court.

If it ever lay in the power or desires of the good people of Red Lake Falls, to do away with the petition, those were the times.

But when our men went out of office, the petition was still there, and when the decision of the Supreme Court was handed down, destroying the hopes of Thief River Falls, the petition was still there as safe as if in the hands of its original signers.

But now,—

When it has been shown up that the county seat petition is as full of holes as the proverbial sieve;

When Thief River Falls people themselves admit that they "made lots of mistakes" when they got up that petition, and "will know better how to do it next time."

When the Red Lake Falls attorneys, acting under the instructions of the county board, ask the Court to open the Mandamus case, so that the court may investigate that petition and show up its irregularities, and the fraud that was used in getting it;

When a fair and impartial county board is about to meet and pass upon this petition, and disclose its illegality to the citizens of the county;

When it is known that Red Lake Falls has enough withdrawals of signatures to the petition, to accomplish its downfall, and defeat stares Thief River Falls in the face at every turn of the road;

THE PETITION TURNS UP MISSING.

Why? Because Thief River Falls people realize they can never win out on that petition, and want it out of the way, so they can get a new one.

Because they want to make a grand-stand play, lay the theft on Red Lake Falls, and appeal to the sympathy of the people.

No one ascribes the loss of the petition to any fault on the part of Auditor O'Brien, or any other county officer. Mr. O'Brien is an able and conscientious official, and we trust and believe, will always remain so.

But all the county officers have a right to resent the slur thrown upon them by the Thief River Falls News of last week, in its article on the theft of the petition, in which it states that several of the other county officers used the auditor's vault and knew the combination of the lock.

FAST WORK.

Soo to Build Duluth Extension in a Big Rush.

The building of the Duluth extension of the Soo line is liable to be a record-breaker in point of rapidity of construction. The company is reported to be very anxious to have the road completed in time for handling the Northwestern grain crop.

It is even said that Foley Bros., who have the contract for grading will, if necessary, prosecute the work of construction both day and night in order to have the line completed before the movement of the fall crop begins.

The work of preparation for grading is being rushed with all possible haste. Several carloads of supplies and equipment for construction work have arrived at Milaca and Mora, and every team in that section of the country has been mustered into service for the hauling in and distributing of these supplies at camps which are being established along the survey of the new line.

Sweet Girl Graduates.

The class of '07 is busy with rehearsals of the class play, "The Sweet Girl Graduates," and though she is a trifle shy, each succeeding rehearsal brings them in closer touch with their many excellent traits and when the time comes for them to make their debut to the public promise to have sufficiently won their confidence to eliminate all danger of stage fright, and present a first class entertainment to the theatre going public.

Nearly all the arrangements have been made for the play which will be given on Friday evening, April 12th. with a matinee in the afternoon for the benefit of the children who cannot attend the evening entertainment. The price of admission at the afternoon performance will be 15 cents, while in the evening the popular prices of 35c, 25c and 15c will prevail. Don't forget to reserve this date and come and see the "Sweet Girl Graduates."

CREAMERY STARTS UP

Local Institution Started Up Last Week With Competent Buttermaker in Charge.

The Red Lake Falls Creamery Association's creamery was started for the season's business last week, with P. L. Malvin, of Oakes, N. D., in charge as buttermaker and factory manage. Mr. Malvin is an experienced creamery man and comes well recommended.

Owing to the bad condition of the roads the cream receipts have been a trifle light, averaging between three and four thousand pounds, but as soon as the conditions become more favorable an effort will be made to secure every pound of cream in the country tributary to the local institution, and it is believed from present indications that the coming year's business will be one of the best in the history of the creamery. The prices of dairy products are advancing steadily and should be an incentive to every farmer to make dairying one of the principal sources of revenue from the farm.

While for the past year or two the creamery has been operated only during the summer months, it is the intention of the association from now on to keep the plant running the year round and no effort should be spared by our business men and the farmers in the surrounding country to promote the welfare of the local creamery and dairying in general. While cereal crops may fail, this country has never known a failure of the products which go to support the dairying industry and the farmer who will devote a portion of his time in this line is assured of a permanent income.

For Sale.

One 22 shoe Dowagaic drill, as good as new, 1 Jones mower and rake, 1 John Deere gang plow, 1 riding cultivator. Will be sold at a bargain if taken at once. Inquire of F. C. Westphal, Red Lake Falls.

BERTHON & ARMSTRONG
Leading Men and Boys Clothing Outfitters

WE HAVE SOME LEFT

We still have some great bargains in Boys' Suits. Of course the lots are broken in sizes, but we may be able to fit your boy.

Boys' $6.00 Suits for.................. $4.35
Boys' high top, heavy storm, box calf for spring wear....................... $1.98
Boys' $5.00 Suits for.................. 3.85
Boys' School Shoes box calf at.................................... 1.68
Boys' $5.00, $4.00 and $3.50 suits, assorted styles and sizes, to close out............ 1.98

Nice line of Boys' Furnishings, Hats, Caps, Shirts, Collars, ties ....

JIM & PAUL

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dudley & Creglow, Publishers

RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT HOME TOLD IN CONDENSED FORM.

LATE FOREIGN DISPATCHES

Interesting Items of News Gathered from All Parts of the Globe and Outlined in the Briefest Manner Possible.

After the Thaw jury had been excused until Monday and the commission to determine the state of Thaw's mind had been sworn in, former Judge Morgan J. O'Brien resigned from the latter body, and Justice Fitzgerald appointed David McClure, a well-known lawyer, in his place. It was announced that the inquiry would be pushed rapidly and that some of the hearings would be public.

Mayor Schultz of San Francisco denied the story that he had profited to the extent of $662,000 from participating in boodling operations, and intimated that as soon as he was well, he would sue the papers for libel.

James Henry Smith, of New York, who inherited over $50,000,000 from his uncle, George Smith, died in Kioto, Japan. He was on his bridal tour.

Richard Mansfield, the actor, is so ill that he has abandoned his spring tour.

An explosion in a fireworks factory on Staten Island killed one man and fatally injured a boy and two girls.

At a meeting of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, it was announced that Mrs. Russell Sage had added $100,000 to her recent donation of $250,000 for the building of a home for the committee.

A. L. Sutton, chief of the bureau of exploitation of the Jamestown Exposition company, tendered his resignation at the request of the board of governors upon charges filed by a tourists' bureau.

William West, of Montgomery, Ala., shot and killed Engineer Fraser and, finding escape impossible, turned his pistol on himself, dying a few moments later. West was accused of stealing a diamond ring from Fraser.

The federal grand jury at Chicago began an investigation of the abuse of the express franking privilege.

John W. Leonard, a Chicago policeman, killed his wife and himself by shooting.

San Antonio, Tex., detectives believed young Horace Marvin, the kidnaped boy, was in that city, but he disappeared.

A proposed advance of coal rates by the Illinois and Indiana railroads was averted by the intervention of the interstate commerce commission.

President Roosevelt was invited to address business men of the middle west at Springfield, Ill., and to declare his policy as to railroads.

Thirty sacks of gold, valued at $10,000, said to have been stolen from the mines at Rhyolite, Nev., and shipped into Pueblo, was seized by a United States marshal.

The president will speak at the unveiling of a monument to the Rough Riders in Arlington National cemetery April 12.

Roy Bourquin, 17 years old, was arrested for trying to blow up a hospital in Cripple Creek, Col., with dynamite.

William McElroy, aged 18 years, was shot and fatally wounded by a policeman in Philadelphia while resisting arrest for stealing bread.

A fire of unknown origin at Elizabeth City, N. J., resulted in estimated loss of between $400,000 and $450,000 in property.

John A. Meyer, of Milwaukee, a freshman in the University of Wisconsin, who was injured while diving off the pier at Madison, Wis., into Lake Mendota, died.

The Chattman mill at Howard and Berks streets, Philadelphia, occupied by a number of textile concerns, was damaged $100,000 by three fires that were discovered within a period of 12 hours.

Simeon W. West, an aged stock raiser of Leroy, Ill., was robbed in a San Francisco street car, losing $6,000 in drafts and $100 in currency.

Sixty thousand tailors in Germany demanded a wage increase of from 40 to 100 per cent., and are threatened with a lock-out.

Dynamite exploded at the Southern railway station in Atlanta, Ga., killing two negroes and a white man and hurting others.

The Wisconsin senate adopted a resolution to begin balloting for United States senator April 16.

Arthur Sanderson of Carthage, Mo., who killed Dr. S. D. Sanderson because he mistreated Mrs. Sanderson, was acquitted by a jury.

Speaker Cannon and members of congress were not permitted to land at Colon until the six days' quarantine against Venezuela had expired.

Cleveland Harding (colored) was lynched near Florence, Ala., for attacking a white woman.

France obtained three rich provinces by a new treaty with Siam.

Secretary Taft was entertained at Charleston, S. C., on his way to the isthmus of Panama.

Nicaraguan forces captured Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, after a hard battle in which Gen. Barahona, Honduran minister of war, was mortally wounded. President Bonilla was reported to be reorganizing his army for a prolonged resistance. Peace negotiations were started in Washington.

Peasants on the estate of King Charles of Roumania revolted and troops were sent to the royal domains. Bloody battles between insurgents and soldiers took place in several towns.

The British war office has removed the ban from Chicago meats.

William C. Gilbert, a shoe clerk, was elected mayor of Danbury, Conn., by a majority of 425. He is president of the Danbury Republican club.

Prof. Belar, of Laibach university, reports an earthquake shock which traveled 6,000 miles.

An estate worth over $20,000,000 was left by the late Herr von Korn of Germany, owner of the Schlessissche Zeitung.

Justice Fitzgerald appointed a commission in lunacy to inquire into the present mental condition of Harry K. Thaw. The men selected are: Morgan J. O'Brien, a former justice of the appellate division of the supreme court; Peter B. Olney, former district attorney of New York county and a lawyer of high legal attainments; Dr. Leopold Putzel, a practicing physician and authority on mental disorders.

The first distribution by the general education board of John D. Rockefeller's $32,000,000 was made as follows: Yale university, $300,000; Princeton university, $200,000; Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me., $50,000; Millsaps college, Jackson, Miss., $25,000.

Senator Foraker in a public statement suggested that Ohioans vote at the primaries to decide who shall be their favorite son and presidential candidate.

A violent storm of wind, rain, hail and lightning passed over Chicago and northwestern Indiana, causing several deaths and great damage to property.

Mrs. James R. Hemphill, of Akron, O., going insane, strangled her daughter and tried to commit suicide.

Col. James M. Farnum, formerly surrogate of New York county, was killed in an automobile accident.

The Minnesota Title Insurance company of Minneapolis closed its doors and James D. Shearer was appointed receiver by State Bank examiner Schaeffer.

Nebraska legislature passed a bill permitting a large increase in the taxation of railroad property.

The body of Prokop Plecity, town clerk of the town of Haugen, Wis., was found in his burning office and residence by neighbors. He had been shot.

Salvador asked Mexico to intervene and restore peace between the warring Central American Republics.

Gen. Charles Dick, of Ohio, was elected president of the National Guard association, which adjourned to meet next year.

In a duel over a poker game at Reserve, La., Superintendent T. W. Farrell of the Ruddock-Orleans Lumber company, was killed outright and Benjamin P. Bourgoois, his opponent, was seriously wounded.

Hugh G. Shaugh, the organizer of the Brotherhood of Railway Postal Clerks, was dismissed from the railway mail service.

While John Corcoran of Yonkers, N. Y., was ramming a charge of dynamite into a hole in a rock with the handle of a broom the charge exploded and the broomstick was driven through his body below his heart.

Jesse F. Welborn has been chosen by the directors of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company to succeed the late Frank J. Hearne as president of that company.

Judge Samuel Ryan, aged 83 years, the oldest editor in Wisconsin and one of the oldest members of the Odd Fellows, died of pneumonia at the home of his brother, James Ryan, in Appleton, Wis.

The town of Lincoln, N. J., offered Upton Sinclair a big house and fertile land for the burned-out colony of Heliconites.

The plant of the Mennonite Publishing company at Elkhart, Ind., was damaged by fire to the extent of $65,000.

The glaze mill of the Austin Powder company at Fall Junction, O., blew up and two men were killed.

Oscar Nyler of Cambridge, Ill., committed suicide at Mount Pleasant, Ia., by throwing himself under the wheels of a train.

Several persons were killed and injured in a fight at Muskogee between members of United Socialists and city and federal officers.

Suit to recover $20,000,000 from the trustees of the estate of the late Isabelle E. Schege, widow of Isaac M. Singer, was begun in New York, by Paul C. W. Schege, the third husband of the former Mrs. Singer.

Frank Brink, who murdered his sweetheart, Bessie Newton, at Ponca, Neb., was declared insane and acquitted by the jury.

A serious fire broke out in the 600-foot level of the Home Stake Mine, Lead, S. D.

Interrupted in an attempt to commit suicide Charles Wallace, a saloonkeeper, of Memphis, Tenn., shot and seriously wounded his brother-in-law, J. E. Rousch, and firing two bullets into his own breast, ended his life.

Fire at Minersville, Pa., destroyed the Union Brewing company's plant and four tenement houses.

M. Pobiedonostseff, ex-procurator general of the holy synod, died at his home in St. Petersburg, aged 80 years.

The pope set April 15 as the date for the next consistory, when he will create six cardinals, all Europeans.

Capt. A. S. Barnes, in point of service the oldest railway mail clerk, died at Elkins, W. Va.

Twenty-four persons were injured, some seriously, and a two-story building occupied by a five-cent theater, was wrecked at Greenfield, Ind., by an explosion of natural gas used to heat the building.

The Morton Salt block, in Hutchinson, Kan., the largest in the world, owned chiefly by Joy Morton and Paul Morton, former secretary of the navy, was destroyed by fire, the loss being $500,000.

Alexander Beaubien, the first white child born in Chicago, died, aged 85 years.

Abraham Ruef of San Francisco withdrew his writ of error in the federal supreme court and said he was ready for trial on the charge of extortion.

Attila F. Mallory, one of the most prominent citizens of Pensacola and a brother of United States Senator Stephen B. Mallory, was found dead in his office.

Peter Clark shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Ollie Hill on an interurban car near Girard, Ill., because she repulsed him. Both principals in the tragedy had been divorced because of their relations with each other.

An immense landslip at Steubenville, O., buried railway tracks and broke gas mains.

Mrs. William Moore and her daughter Emma were fatally burned at Decker, Ind.

Rev. Stephen Sater Ortynskyi, of the Order of St. Basil the Great, has been appointed bishop for the Catholics of the Greek Ruthenian rite in the United States.

James Young who, with M. M. Towle, founded Hammond, Ind., 30 years ago, died at San Diego, Cal.

In an effort to enforce recognition of their unions, 2,000 skirt, cloak and suit makers of Boston, employed in about 100 shops, went out on strike.

John Hippo, a white man, 35 years of age, hanged himself in a toilet room on a Louisville & Nashville train.

Miss Emma Rousey, of Huntington, W. Va., was killed by a railway train, as was Perry Meadows, a section hand, who tried to save her.

United States Judge Emory Speer in a decision in the case of Lucy Snead, administratrix, against the Central of Georgia Railway company, upheld the constitutionality of the employers' liability act passed by the last congress.

Strikers in a chocolate factory, at Vevey, Switzerland, became riotous and were fired upon by gendarmes, several being injured.

Speaker Cannon and members of congress spent a day inspecting the Panama canal.

Only two white laborers in the canal zone died during February.

Three men were killed by the explosion of a locomotive boiler at Onava, N. M.

Col. Albert L. Meyer, Eleventh cavalry, has been selected for promotion to the rank of brigadier general to fill the vacancy created by the death of Gen. Wint.

William John Merrall, vice president and director of the Acker, Merrall & Condit company, died at his home in New York city. He was 76 years old.

A male teacher of English in Granada, Spain, posing as a woman, has been unmasked.

A great gas well near Sapulpa, I. T., caught fire and could not be extinguished.

A collision between the Dover-Calais mail steamers Princess Henriette and Lord Warden near Dover, England, caused excitement on both vessels, but no one was injured.

The Pennsylvania railroad announced in Philadelphia that it may countermand orders for $25,000,000 worth of improvements owing to the two-cent fare agitation.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., informed his Bible class in New York that his health is near a breakdown. He will take a long rest.

The prefect of police, Ghent, Belgium, will add women to the force.

Six persons were killed and 17 injured when a special carrying students and the Overland limited on the Santa Fe collided head-on at Los Angeles.

Elmer Sheppard, colored, who was only 17 years old but weighed 640 pounds, died in Appleton, Wis.

Fire in the F. H. Lawson tinplate factory at Cincinnati did $100,000 damage.

Joseph Demar, a wealthy Italian, was murdered by Black Hand agents at Bellefontaine, O.

Fire destroyed the store of A. G. Spalding Bros. in Chicago, with $350,000 worth of sporting goods.

The ruling dynasty in China was reported to be in grave peril as a result of the famine, and the United States and Europe were concerned for the safety of white residents in China.

A fund was being raised in Portland, Ore., to employ Heney and Burns of San Francisco to uncover municipal graft in the Oregon city.

Nine hundred veterans in the Old Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, Kan., were poisoned by tainted hash, and one died.

Former Senator Joseph R. Burton, of Kansas, on reaching his home at Abilene, delivered an address in which he called himself a martyr and said the sugar trust had plotted to ruin him.

Ten men successfully passed the government's first competitive examination for positions in the consular service.

William Henderson, of Oregon City, Ore., killed his wife, wounded her father and then committed suicide.

Mrs. Mary Peters, a widow, committed suicide at Cleveland, O., by jumping from a high bluff into Lake Erie.

COURT HOLDS HILL STOCK ISSUE VALID

MINNESOTA SUPREME BODY DECIDES IN FAVOR OF $60,000,000 INCREASE.

RULING OF LOWER BENCH IS REVERSED

Great Northern Has Right to Put Forth Shares Without Consulting Railroad Commission According to Opinion.

St. Paul, March 29.—The state supreme court Thursday upheld the Great Northern railroad in its contention that it had the right to issue $60,000,000 of addition stock which was authorized by the board of directors several months ago. The issue was enjoined through the intervention of Attorney General Young, who held that the railroad company should first go before the state railroad and warehouse commission and submit to an examination to show the necessity of the issue. The contention of the state was upheld by Judge Hallam in the Ramsey county district court, and he ordered an injunction to issue. The supreme court reversed that decision.

Court's Opinion Unanimous.

The opinion of the court was unanimous. Chief Justice Start delivered the opinion, the syllabus of which follows:

1. The terms and conditions upon which corporations may be created, the powers and capital stock they may have, the purposes for which they may increase their capital stock and the conditions and limitations thereof are exclusively matter for legislative action which cannot be delegated.

2. The state having created railway corporations for public purposes, the legislature has the right to enact statutes regulating the increase of their capital stock. Such regulations tend to prevent secrecy of operation and accounts by such public agencies and the issue and sale of fictitious or watered stock, which is a felony in this state.

3. In the exercise of this right the legislature may enact n statute providing generally for what purposes and upon what terms, conditions and limitations an increase of capital stock may be made, and may confer upon a commission the duty of supervising any proposed increase.

Commission May Find Facts.

4. It may also delegate to the commission the duty of finding the facts in each particular case, and may authorize and require it, if it finds the existence of facts that bring the case within the statute, to allow the proposed increase or otherwise to refuse it.

5. Any statute, however, which attempts to authorize the commission in its judgment to allow an increase of capital stock for such purposes and on such terms as it may deem advisable or in its discretion to refuse it would be unconstitutional, as an attempt to delegate legislative power.

6. Section 2,872, R. L. 1905, relating to the increase of capital stock of railway corporations, does not violate article 1, section 11, of the state constitution, or article 1, section 10, of the constitution of the United States, which forbid the enactment of any law impairing the obligation of contracts. It does, however, violate section 1, article 3, of the state constitution in that it delegates to the commission legislative power. Order reversed.

Hill Says He Expected It.

New York, March 29.—"The decision of the Minnesota court was no more than was expected," said J. J. Hill, when informed that the supreme court had upheld the Great Northern stock issue. "For 15 years we had been doing the same thing, with never any serious opposition from the authorities of that state."

The four deferred payments, or installments, on new Great Northern stock will amount to $24,000,000 by April 9. As the payment of so large a sum at this time might create a disturbance in the money market, it is believed that stockholders who may find it convenient to remit the full amount will be granted an extension of time.

Glass Factories to Shut Down.

Hartford City, Ind., March 29.—As a result of a cut in prices by the American Window Glass company, which uses machines, every window glass factory in the country, with the possible exception of the one nonunion plant at Lancaster, O., will close April 25. The National Brokerage company, representing the output of 90 per cent. of the hand-blower plants, refused to meet the cut in price.

Nephew of Gen. Lee Dead.

Colorado Springs, Col., March 29.—Hamlin F. Lee, a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars and a nephew of Gen. Robert E. Lee, died here of heart failure, aged 87 years. Although closely related to the southern general, and a Virginian by birth, Mr. Lee fought with the union army. In the late 70's Mr. Lee went to Leadville and was the discoverer of the famous Robert E. Lee mine.

Tornado Damages Kansas Town.

Chanute, Kan., March 29.—A tornado of small proportions struck the outlying portion of Chanute early Thursday, damaging half a dozen houses and causing other minor damages. No one was hurt, so far as learned.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Beaten and Robbed.

Ashawa—William Nichols was attacked and badly beaten by three hold-up men, who secured $5, but overlooked a roll of $215 which Nichols had in an inside pocket. Nichols was on his way home from work when three men with masked faces suddenly confronted him and demanded his money. The hold-up men did not produce revolvers, and as Nichols had a weapon he drew it and opened fire. The bandits took to flight and Nichols emptied his revolver after them, but without effect. The bandits then, realizing that their victim was unarmed, returned and, taking his revolver from him, beat him over the head and shoulders with it until he was insensible. They then searched his pockets and secured what loose change he had, but apparently were frightened away before they discovered the other money. Nichols thinks he can identify his assailants.

Explosion Burns Two.

Hibbing—Daniel Previck and Thomas Ryan were seriously burned in two different explosions of gasoline at the Sellers stripping works. Previck was severely burned about the face and hands and probably will not recover. He was working on a steam shovel and found a cap on a jerk which he could not unscrew. Taking a can of gasoline he poured a large quantity of the fluid on the cap and set fire to it. The can containing the gasoline was exploded, and the burning stuff scattered over Previck's face and hands. Ryan, who is a locomotive fireman, was filling a lamp from a gasoline can and at the same time smoking his pipe. A spark from the pipe exploded the can and he was severely burned about the face and hands, but will recover.

Big Suit Transferred.

Minneapolis—By order of Judge Fred V. Brown the biggest personal injury suit ever commenced in Hennepin county has been transferred to the federal court because the defendant is an outside corporation. The case is that of Michael Shema, as guardian of Annie Shema, against the Bemis Brothers' Bag Company.

Shema claims $60,000 as the result of his daughter's injuries in the factory of the company. In some way her hair was caught in a revolving shaft and her scalp was torn from her head. Although the accident occurred five months ago, the girl is still in the city hospital, where she has submitted to four skin-grafting operations.

Missed Shot is Fatal.

Virginia—A missed shot was responsible for the death of John Kaslika and the injury of Werner Saraner, employed in the Larkin mine near here.

The men were about to leave the pit for the day and had lighted fuses in three holes. Two of the charges exploded and the men rushed back to see what was wrong with the third.

They reached the spot just as the dynamite exploded. Koslika's body was blown to pieces. Saraner had an open knife in his hand and the force of the explosion drove the blade into his side. He was seriously hurt, but will recover.

Train Kills Team.

Mankato—Ed. Klitzke, a well-known farmer of Penn township, near Winthrop, had a narrow escape from instant death. He drove to town in the morning, attended to some business and in the evening started with a cord of wood for the church in Penn township. When three miles out of town, his team started to cross the railroad track at a crossing, when a special freight train struck and killed them, hurling them 150 feet or more. The accident happened at 11 o'clock at night. Klitzke was unhurt, having escaped death by a couple of seconds.

Laboratory Not Ready.

St. Paul—It is feared that the chemical laboratory established by the national government for the analyzing of food products in this part of the country will not be ready by May 1. It was announced some days ago that a laboratory would be established in St. Paul and a room in the old capitol had been set apart for its use. There was difficulty, however, in securing men able to manage such a laboratory and, so far as local authorities know, little has been done toward setting up the apparatus.

Fire Exposes a Fraud.

Cloquet—The Great Northern station at Swan river was burned recently, the fire exposing an interesting fraud. Some years ago, the story runs, the body of a supposed petrified Indian woman was dug up near Cass Lake. It was shipped to Swan River and never called for. Charges accumulated and the express company stored it in the Swan River station. After the recent fire nothing remained of the "corpse" but some cement and the iron in the frame.

NEWS NOTES.

St. James—The St. James Telephone company, which was organized last year by business men, built seventy miles of rural lines last season and thirty miles more are projected for the coming summer.

St. Paul—State Auditor S. G. Iverson has issued a booklet entitled "Great Opportunities in Minnesota." The booklet contains full information regarding the sale of school and other state lands during June and July. Each county is dealt with separately and the booklet is illustrated with views of farms throughout the state where the land is to be offered for sale.

Duluth—Hans Miettinen, a laborer, who has lived in West Duluth for the last year, committed suicide by hanging. Miettinen had gone to an empty house, and entering the garret had fastened one end of a short leather strap to the rafter, the other end had been noosed about his neck. The man's feet touched the floor of the garret and he evidently had strangled to death.

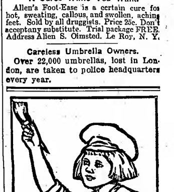
Faribault—The Episcopal church in the village of Dundas was broken into and the silver communion service, collection plate and other valuable articles were stolen. There is no clue to the burglars.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES cost but 10 cents per package and color more goods faster and brighter colors.

Reticence has been responsible for many a lamentable failure.

It Cures While You Walk.
Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Careless Umbrella Owners.
Over 22,000 umbrellas, lost in London, are taken to police headquarters every year.



Poor Paint is Expensive

If one is rich enough to repaint his buildings every year for the pleasure of having a change of color scheme, the quality of the paint used may cut little figure. But if it is desirable to cut the painting bills down to the least amount possible per year, it is of the utmost importance that the paint be made of Pure White Lead and the best of Linseed Oil. There are imitations in the form of alleged White Lead, and there are substitutes in the form of ready-prepared paints.

We guarantee our White Lead to be absolutely pure, and the Dutch Boy on the side of every keg is your safeguard. Look for him.

SEND FOR BOOK
"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY
in whichever of the following cities is nearest you:
New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia (John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.), Pittsburgh (National Lead & Oil Co.)

Fertile Farming
LANDS
Cheap
Easy Terms
In the Best Section of the South
Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.
Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.
Cattle need but little winter feed.
HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.
Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.
Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

Mica Axle Grease
Best lubricant for axles in the world—long wearing and very adhesive.
Makes a heavy load draw like a light one. Saves half the wear on wagon and team, and increases the earning capacity of your outfit.
Ask your dealer for Mica Axle Grease.
STANDARD OIL CO.
Incorporated

HOW can I ever do my work
when my muscles are all inflamed with Rheumatism?
Johnson's Anodyne Liniment
Rubbed on Briskly
will remove the inflammation, limber up the muscles, and make you good as new. 25c., three times as much 50c. All dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

A Positive
CURE FOR CATARRH
Ely's Cream Balm
is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once.
It cleanses, soothes, heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts. at Druggists or by mail; Trial size 10 cts. by mail.
Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D.C.

HOME OF THE MALAY.

PRIMITIVE HABITATIONS ARE STILL IN EXISTENCE.

Warm but Rainy Climate Calls for Light and Waterproof Houses—Ancient Rites Still Practiced by the Natives.

Among the most distinctive homes of the far East are those of the Malays who inhabit the island on which the British city of Singapore is built. The town, beside the great marine highway between India and China, is modern; the houses in the country out from it are as ancient as the history of the land itself. They have not changed in style in a thousand years, and probably will not in a thousand more.

On the Malay peninsula the weather is always warm and several months in the year it is rainy. In such a climate a house must be both light and waterproof. These two properties the natives secure with the simplest materials, ready to their hand in the lush forest growth all around them.

They make the frames of their houses of light, strong trees, planting the timbers firmly in the ground. Between the uprights are fitted squares of bark reinforced with light slats of split bamboo, to which the bark is tied with roots of fiber.

The roof is thatched, lightly, but in a manner to keep out the heaviest downpour of rain, with the leaves of the atap palm, which are laced in layers to the rafters.

The floor is made of split bamboo, laid flat side upward.

The house, as in most eastern countries except China and Japan, is raised from the ground several feet, for the double purpose of keeping out damp and prowling beasts.

It is a sweet, light and airy habitation, better than a white man could devise for such a country, and an ideal home for the little brown people of the woods and shore.

In the Malay home furniture is limited. In fact, there is hardly any, as the floor serves for seats, tables and beds. It is covered with soft, sweet-smelling mats, made from grasses or vegetable fiber, and on these the family sleep. In such a warm climate bed covering at night is not needed. Thus the housewife's worry about bedding is not great.

The culinary arrangements of a Malay home, while much more advanced than those of the sea islands across the Straits, are primitive. Staple articles of diet are rice, yams, eggs and fish. Cooking is done out of doors, or under a protecting shack of palm leaf in wet weather. A few primitive clay pots are the kitchen outfit. Roasting is done over live coals, and of baking there is scarcely any, since bread is not a part of the family diet.

Sweet cocoanut milk, from young nuts, is the chief drink of the people, and one of the first acts of entertainment when a visitor arrives is to send a boy up a tree to throw down some young nuts to supply him a drink of milk.

The Malay women are good cooks, and are specially skilled in making fiery sauces and condiments. They have all the materials for such work at hand, as the forest around them is rich in pepper, cloves and other spices, as well as in various sweet herbs.

A Malay House Near Singapore.

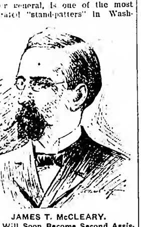
The dress of the Malays consists of a sort of petticoat wound around the waist, and a tight jacket above it, fastened with buttons. The women are skilled with the needle, and make very pretty embroidery in gold and silver thread. Both men and women are fond of introducing a little gilt or color into their clothing.

Large families are common among the Malay people, and early marriages are the rule. Strangely enough, these brown men of the East are Mohammedans, their forefathers having become converts many centuries ago. Their marriage ceremony is according to that faith, though some of their ancient rites survive, as, for example, the filing down of a girl's teeth when she becomes engaged, and the dyeing of her finger nails and palms.

POSTAL JOB FOR M'CLEARY.

Minnesota Congressman to Succeed Shallenberger.

Washington. — James Thompson McCleary, who succeeds W. S. Shallenberger as second assistant postmaster general, is one of the most celebrated "stand-patters" in Washington. He took John Lind's seat in congress when Lind's Minnesota district repudiated him for supporting free silver during the first Bryan campaign.



JAMES T. McCLEARY.
(He Will Soon Become Second Assistant Postmaster General.)

McCleary gained national fame when Speaker Thomas B. Reed selected him to answer Congressman Towne, who had made a brilliant speech in favor of the 16 to 1 doctrine.

He brought in a lot of maps and figures, just as Towne had; he took a ruler and pointed out this date, that price, the other condition of the country, and he did it for several hours. That speech had the largest circulation of any sent out by the Republican committee in 1896 and Gen. O. O. Howard is authority for the statement that Mr. McKinley believed that, next to the efforts of Mark Hanna, he owed most to McCleary's great argument on the silver question.

Congressman McCleary is a man of intense and radical convictions. He believes in a high tariff that is really high. He has fought the Massachusetts revisionists at every turn. He is author of a bill providing a maximum and minimum tariff. This would allow the president to enforce the maximum rates against countries that discriminated against America. He would take the Dingley schedule as the minimum and in speaking of a tariff war with Germany said he would advance these duties 25 per cent.

Congressman McCleary was born in Ingersoll, Ont., in 1853. He attended McGill university in Montreal. He taught school in Wisconsin. He became professor of history in the Minnesota Normal and was president of the Minnesota Educational association in 1893, when first elected to congress.

ON IMMIGRATION COMMISSION.

Prof. Jenks and C. P. Neill Made Civilian Members.

Washington.—Prof. John W. Jenks, of Cornell university, and Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill who are to be appointed civilian members of the immigration commission, authorized by the last congress, are well known students of political economy. Professor Jenks is the head of the political economy department in the Ithaca college, and is said to be one of the most original and entertaining lecturers in the country. He was appointed in August, 1907, special commissioner of the war department to report upon economic questions, particularly in the English and Dutch colonies of the Orient. In his report Professor Jenks advocated a system of registration of Chinese laborers and their admission to the Philippines on the plan of a three years' contract. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

Mr. Neill has been labor commissioner since 1905. He was born in Rock Island, Ill., and was educated at the University of Notre Dame, University of Texas, Georgetown college and the University of Chicago. He has been a social settlement worker in the stockyards district, vice president of the board of charities of the District of Columbia, assistant recorder of the anthracite strike commission and professor of political economy in the Catholic university at Washington. Mr. Neill gained wide reputation as assistant recorder of the commission that arbitrated the differences between the anthracite coal operators and the striking miners.

PROF. J. W. JENKS.
(One of Newly Appointed Civilian Members of Immigration Commission.)

Never stand too high to listen to advice.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, March 25—The anti-trust twine bill was passed by the senate today. The bill, H. F. 586, permits the state board of control to sell prison twine outside the state at its discretion, in retaliation when so desired, for encroachments by the twine trust. The bill also allows dealers to sell twine made by convicts at a profit of 1 cent a pound on cash sales, and 1½ cents on credit sales, a half cent more than is allowed by the present law. The bill passed by a vote of 47 to 5.

The S. D. Works inheritance tax bill went down and out today in the senate. This is the bill which provides that half of the inheritance taxes collected shall go to the counties wherein the deceased lived and the other half to the state. Under the present law, it all goes to the state. The bill was attacked by Senators O. G. Dale of Madison, F. H. Peterson of Moorhead, and Frank Clague of Lamberton. They asserted that the wealthier counties are now avoiding much taxation by the hiding of personal property, and that to divert half of the inheritance taxes to the respective counties would cause heavier state taxation to be paid by the less wealthy counties. The bill was indefinitely postponed.

Trusts received a severe grilling in the senate in considering the E. H. Canfield bill making contracts entered into with trusts null and void. Senator George P. Wilson was opposed to the bill. He said that under this bill a man might buy lumber, build a house, and then make the provisions of the bill an excuse for not paying for it. Ray G. Farrington, C. J. Gunderson, and C. A. Johnson all spoke in favor of the bill. Trusts, the lumber and building material combine, especially, were given warm roasts by these gentlemen, and the senate committee of the whole voted the bill for passage.

The house did not convene till this evening, and was in session but a short time. W. H. Putnam of Red Wing succeeded in getting his bill for a girls' training school at Red Wing, from the table and on to general orders, making the motion and getting it through in the absence of Representative Spooner, the author of the bill for such an institution in some county where a state institution is not already located.

G. W. Rodenberg of St. Paul introduced a bill to pension teachers not to exceed $40 a month in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants. A bill in the senate by A. D. Stephens makes a minimum penalty of 25 years, and a maximum of forty, for burglary where dangerous explosives are used.

St. Paul, March 26—Reductions in passenger and freight rates which will aggregate $4,000,000 a year, are offered by the railroads to the legislature for a settlement to all pending difficulties, not only in the way of contested and pending bills, but in the settlement of the cases now pending in the courts which promised to be dragged out through several years of litigation. Both branches of the legislature have passed two-cent passenger fare bills. These bills are in conference committee of which L. C. Spooner is chairman for the house delegation, F. H. Peterson chairman for the senate. The overtures of settlement and virtual surrender have come to this committee. The conference committee told the roads the committee had no jurisdiction to accept or even negotiate a settlement but would submit the proposition to the legislature. Accordingly, a resolution has been passed by the house, and is now pending in the senate, to permit the conference committee to negotiate with the roads, and report to the legislature not later than April 2. The settlement offer of the roads is a grant of nearly all demands on the part of the state. In brief, the document which the attorneys of the various lines are now preparing, may be summarized into the following points; a maximum rate of 2½ cents, with family mileage books at 2 cents, good until used, and unused portion redeemable in cash. Interchangable 2,000 mile books at 2 cents, good until used. All round-trip tickets at 2 cents, return coupon to be good at any time and without restriction. Voluntary reduction in existing commodity rates by the railroads, amounting to two-thirds of the sweeping reductions recently ordered by the railroad commission. Roads will dismiss injunction suits pending in the United States court. Roads will recognize the power and authority in future of the state railroad commission in making rates. There will be no withdrawal of special excursion rates.

The house committee of the whole, has recommended two important bills for passage after lengthy debates on each. One is for the agricultural industrial schools to be established at central points for various districts of the state. Speaker Lawrence Johnson today left the chair to conduct the campaign on the floor for the bill and finally carried his point. The second important bill, is the so-called Mueller bill, because it follows the Mueller law of Illinois, to permit municipalities to absorb public service corporations, street cars, gas and electric plants.

W. W. Dunn, who is author of the existing primary election law, introduced an important election bill today in the senate. It provides for special elections for selection of delegates to county conventions which are to nominate state officials. Each political party is to have ballots for this election of a different color, but there may be as many different ballots of one party as there are sets of men wanting to be county convention delegates. When each man votes, he must declare his party, which shall be registered with his name. The lists thus secured shall be used at the regular primary election later, and the men registered shall be compelled to vote at the primary election only the ticket of the party with which they are registered.

The H. W. Libbey bill to compel the railroads to employ only the most competent men as locomotive engineers, was laid on the shelf forever, by a vote of 44 to 58 in the house. The country members killed the bill, claiming it was going a step to far for labor interests to expect.

By a vote of 78 to 11 the house passed the C. B. Miller bill increasing the gross earnings taxes on railroads to five per cent.

St. Paul, March 27—After six hours of strenuous arguments and voting, the senate this evening by one vote killed the famous Hackney semi-centennial exposition bill. During all this time the fate of the bill was never certain for an instant, in fact not until the very last man had cast his ballot on the final roll-call, making the vote 30 for and 31 against the bill, and as Victor Johnson ended an explanation of his vote by saying: "Gentlemen, I know that the vote I am about to cast will decide this great issue of the proposed expenditure of $1,000,000 for a semi-centennial exposition in 1908. I must be true to what I believe are the desires in this matter of the people I represent, and vote 'no' on this bill.

Then the air castles of the big show planned for the state fair grounds in 1908 fell silently in ruins. The half-formed plans for making not only the eyes of this country, but of the world all turn to Minnesota in 1908 were obliterated. It was 7 o'clock in the evening. The senate had been battling on the proposition all morning and all afternoon and had refused to adjourn for supper till the pending matter was disposed of. There was a burst of applause from the opponents of the bill, who earlier in the day had admitted their own defeat. Then came adjournment and enemies and opponents of the bill, but one and all friends of its author, J. M. Hackney, crowded around him to express their good will toward him, and to congratulate him on the noble, straight-forward and ever gentlemanly campaign and final fight he had put up in the interests of the bill for a big exposition in the inter-city district which he is representing for his first term.

With the exception of one hour today, the entire time was put on the exposition bill in the senate. But in that one hour, the W. A. Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill of the house was taken up and passed by a vote of 51 to 9. There was not an attempt made to even amend it, through it was criticised severely in addresses by Senators George R. Laybourn of Duluth and J. F. Calhoun of Minneapolis.

The house today passed the agricultural school bill, the measure for which the speaker has worked untiringly and a number of times left the chair to take the floor and defend. The bill establishes agricultural industrial school at Breckenridge, Austin, Willmar, Madison, Marshall, Morris, Slayton, and Wadena. There is prospect that when the bill reaches the senate the number of agricultural schools will be decreased.

A number of bills were introduced in the house. One interesting measure of a rather uninteresting lot, is by J. S. Gates of Kenyon. It provides for a mercantile tax on all dealers in goods and merchandise, a license as it were. Retailers are to pay $2 a year plus 5 mills on each dollar of their gross volume of state business. Wholesalers are to pay $10, and 3 mills on the dollar of earnings.

The joint committee on iron property taxation, has prepared a report opposing the proposed iron ore tonnage tax as unconstitutional, unwise, and a measure which would likely prevent the contemplated establishment of large steel plants in this state as is contemplated by the United States Steel corporation.

Christmas in Scandinavia.

In Scandinavia Christmas is celebrated in its literal sense of "peace on earth, good will toward men"; the courts are closed, quarrels are adjusted and old feuds forgotten. It is the home of the famous Yule log.

No More Horse Thieves.

St. Paul—The anti-Horse Thief Society of Olmsted County was disbanded last week. The society was organized in 1879 and was effective in putting an entire stop to the operations of bands of "rustlers," who had stolen numbers of horses in Olmsted county.

From the time of the organization of the society to the present there has not been a single horse stolen in Olmsted county. Of the sixty-one charter members thirty have died or moved away.

New Flax a Success.

St. Paul—The new variety of flax distributed by the Minnesota experiment station last spring has proven of great value to the state. About one thousand bushels of this flax was distributed to about 270 farmers in various parts of the state. Each man was allowed four bushels or less, for which he paid $2.50 per bushel. Forty-eight reports were returned in which the new flax was compared with, or grown under similar conditions with, common varieties.

Black and Brown Only Colors for Thin Face Veil

There is something particularly becoming in a bewitching veil. It is the finishing touch to the street costume. Very few women can get along without a veil because of the perishable qualities of the present-day coiffure. To the tailor-made, spick-and-span type of woman it is an absolute necessity.

There are only two colors desirable for the thin face veil—black and brown. White veils are so colorless when worn against the face and give such a look of paleness that they should be carefully avoided, although a white veil with a single black thread and plenty of black dots will do nicely for the girl who has ruddy red cheeks. Brown is unusually good for either blondes or brunettes. There is also a sort of grayish brown now in vogue that is very pretty, but it comes only in the very expensive French qualities.

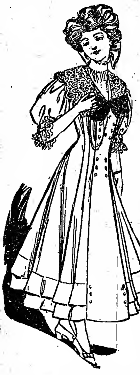
Purple, green and red veils are most trying. They are loud and striking, and not one woman among many thousands can wear any one of these colors and look well. So far as chiffon veils are concerned—that is a different matter. The loose automobile or driving veils are worn away from the face, and almost any color is possible.

Quite the prettiest, newest and most satisfactory veil is a black or brown one, with an edge of velvet to match, the mesh itself being a heavy embroidered dot, quite dreadful for the comfort of the wearer's eyes, but a great joy to the beholder. Such a veil brings out all the brightness and light of a woman's face, giving her youth and loveliness, softening every blemish and increasing every quality of beauty.

Few women realize that veils, like every other article of dress, become decidedly soiled and that they need constant attention from the cleaner.

Lace veils may be dipped in gasoline and then pressed with an iron only fairly warm. They will come out nicely. Face veils bought by the yard may be cleaned with alcohol, the fabric being pulled gently into straight lines while it is drying. The alcohol gives the proper body and stiffness to the veil.

MISSES' DRESS OF BLUE LINEN.



The misses' dress is of blue linen with a collar of Irish lace tied with a black velvet ribbon. The bias band on the skirt is held loose at the top which gives a slight fullness at the hem.

Period gowns will characterize many of the spring and summer models for evening wear. One will see costumes on the lines of those worn in the day of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. There will be empire and semi-empire, and even the classical princess robe.

Pure Gold Brown Now Fashionable Color for Hair

The fashionable color of hair this coming season is to be the pure gold brown, beloved of youthful poets, writes the lady correspondent in Paris of the London Tribune.

It is always difficult to trace directly back to the actual personage who starts a new fashion; fashions very often seem to start themselves. In the affair of gold brown hair it is possible that we have to thank two famous beauties—one a true Parisienne and the other a Parisienne from New York city. Both these lovely women have hair of a delicious shade of brown gold, absolutely and entirely natural and difficult beyond words to imitate. On the other hand, it may well be that some autocratic Parisian coiffeur has, under the rose, given this new mode a push forward. There is no color so difficult to imitate as pure gold brown, and the attempt to imitate it is a very costly and elaborate business.

For the last two years the coiffeurs of Paris have been complaining bitterly of "bad times," etc.; they have found their hands more or less idle since artificial undulations began to go out of fashion and—coiffeurs are quite human.

Many things can be done at home by amateur hands, but hair tinting, except with henna, is not one of them. To tint the hair with henna is a horribly dirty piece of work, but it can be done at home with the help of a clever maid or obliging sister. On the other hand, it is impossible for an amateur to make her hair gold brown otherwise than by the use of peroxide, and peroxide can only be used in small quantities and with the greatest care, for it quickly gives a glittering, unpleasant tone of color which is clearly artificial by daylight.

Apropos the hair on the head of a pretty woman—the fashion in the matter of hair-dressing is slowly but surely changing—the low natural looking headdress is coming in again. We have for some little time back been swaying in this direction; picture hats and dresses have demanded picture headdresses, and more and more it has ceased to be correct to dress the hair stiffly and in artificial undulations, and every effort is made to produce a natural effect.

The Greek coiffure is very fashionable this winter for evening wear, and in a somewhat modified form it is quite charming. It is not considered necessary to adopt the severely plain flat bands in front, and at the back the hair may be caught up in a series of loose curls or in careless looking coils confined by silver ribbons or by art nouveau bandeaux.

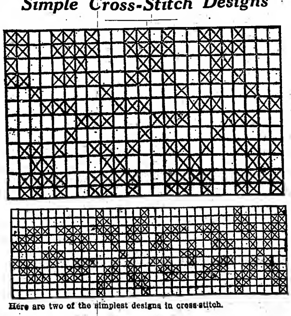
TO MASSAGE THE FACE.

Operation Any Woman Can Successfully Do at Home.

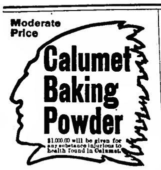
It is not difficult to massage one's own face. To do it use the whole hand, for the palm smooths the skin upward and each of the finger tips has its particular motion. For the small wrinkles around the corners of the mouth work from the nose and corners of the mouth out to the cheeks. Place the first finger at the corner of the nose and smooth the wrinkles up to the first finger. Around the eyes where there are those little lines that are so distressing massage out from the corner of the eye to the temple and then from the corner under the eye to the nose and back again. Always have all the motions with an upward tendency. With both palms at once gently smooth the skin up toward the eyes to take away the possible sagging of the flesh of the jowls, and with the backs of both hands and with the chin tilted back smooth the under part of the chin to do away with the possible double layer of fat there. That part of the throat is admitted to be the first indication of middle age, so if taken in time one may easily ward off that stage a few years longer. A massage is not only good for the skin but very restful.

Just how to wear a veil is an important piece of knowledge. The woman who throws on her veil helter-skelter can never look tidy and trim, and a woman without neatness is always without beauty.

Simple Cross-Stitch Designs



Here are two of the simplest designs in cross-stitch.



Moderate Price

Calumet Baking Powder

$1,000.00 will be given for any substance injurious to health found in Calumet.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

Published weekly. Thursday evening. Entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

A POPULAR FORM OF SOCIALISM.

There is a certain form of socilism that is growing rapidly in this country. It is not the socialism that points to communism that holds all labor on a parity, that considers all wealth as based on manual labor, or that would work a redistribution of wealth through the law.

It is that which holds that primarily all forms of natural wealth, all the earth's resources, belong of right to all the people, and that therefore they should be developed for the good of all the people. That the control of all industrial enterprises; all means of transportation; all public utilities is a public trust.

It holds that these should not be exploited for private and individual gain, and that men who either through inheritence, business ability, their executive powers or other dominant mental facilities have secured the control and management of such enterprises, must be content with a fair, though justly large financial return, but must find the greater part of their reward in the glory of accomplishment.

This is the form of socilasim which today is winning the brains and the honesty of the world as its converts and that is finding its expression in laws and even more powerfully in public opinion. On the one side of this proposition is seen Theodore Roosevelt; at the other extreme E. H. Harriman.

In a recent interview B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the Rock Island-Frisco railroad executive boards, said: "A railroad has no more business to be at the mercy of stock jobbers than a savings bank or a life insurance company. The American railroads are or should be as much a public trust as these institutions. Wild and ruthless, speculation in the securities of a railroad company should be made subject to criminal prosecution. Stock and bond values should represent actualities, not hot air.

Mr. Yoakum in this goes a long way with the people on the road of modern socialism. He believes, however, that these conditions will gradually come of themselves; that "overcapitalization is bound to be squeezed out automatically," and that "with proper federal rates supervision most of the other abuses of managerial power will vanish.

He is too optimistic of human nature. He is still somewhat blinded. So long as men have the power to water stock and to exploit the railroads and the earths's resources to their own profit they will do it. The only way to prevent it is by law—a law that wilt makes it criminal—and then in this country the administration of the law remains with the people.—Duluth News Tribune.

STATE AUDITOR SAM IVERSON BOOSTS RED LAKE COUNTY.

We are in receipt of a booklet compiled by State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson, under the caption of "Great Opportunities in Minnesota," which is an excellent method of advertising to the world at large the preeminent advantages and superb prospects of the northern part of the state as could well be devised. If copies could be placed within the reach of all of the tens thousands of homeseekers now moving, or preparing to move, out of the East, the result would inevitably be that hundreds of the people would turn from the far west and southwest and Manitoba and be delighted to take up lands in this state.

As a simple collection of facts relative to Northern Minnesota and as an exact statement of conditions that will bear the closest investigation, Mr. Iverson's booklet is a capital guide and compendium. It does not ask any homeseeker to take things for granted but it invites him to examine everything for himself and make his own unbiased decision with perfect confidence as to what that decision will be.

The original object of the booklet was to set forth the great and attractive opportunities offered by the coming sale of 300,000 acres of school and other state lands during June and July next, but it will in the end du more than that. These 300,000 acres will be appraised in advance and the minimum price, which may be as low as $5 an acre, will be fixed. These lands are sufficient to furnish good homes' in a well timbered region where there is no danger of a fuel famine, to from 1,875 to 3,000 families of men who are seeking good living, good homes and good profits from reasonable work.

Plain condensed descriptions of each of the counties in which the lands lie—St. Louis, Itasca, Carlton, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Clearwater, Beltrami, Cass, Hubbard, Wadena, Todd, Kittson, Marshall, Polk, Roseau, Red Lake, Becker and Pine—are given. Liberally interspersed through the book are views from real life in each of the various counties that, in themselves, should be sufficient to induce hundreds to ceme and see the attractions for themselves.

In speaking of Red Lake couuty he says:

This is an important county and is one of the richest in the state, it being quite well developed and farming is the principal industry. Wheat is the principal crop raised here, yielding un the average of 20 bushels to the acre, while oats go about 50 bushels per acre. Corn is alsu sucessfully raised here and dairy farming is becoming the principal agricultural industry, and many creameries and cheese factories are being erected.

Red Lake Falls is the county seat and is a thriving village. The county is well watered by three large rivers and tributaries, and three railways, the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Soo Lines, furnish excellent railway facilities. The soil is very rich, being of a rich black loam with a clay sub-soil, is very productive. The character of the country varies considerably, a majority of it being gently rolling, other parts are sparsely timbered, while still in other sections we find dense hardwood timber.

The county abounds in wild game: ducks, geese, prairie chickens, grouse, snipe, deer and bear and many streams have been stocked with trout. The population is mixed, being American, Scandinavian, German, French, and Irish. In this county are located several large flour mills, which supply the northwestern part of the state and part of Dakota with excellent flour and feed. This county has been receiving a great many new settlers the past few years, swelling its population a great deal, but there is still considerble good farm lands to be had at very low figures. Wild lands sell at from $10 to $14 per acre, and improved lands sell at from $15 to $40 per acre.

For general healthfulness, Red Lake county cannot be surpassed and the water is pure and healthful. The county is well organized and has many school districts, affording splendid schools and churches for the settlers. The state of Minnesota sold a large amount of land in this county last year and still owns many acres, which will be offered at the land sale tu be held at Red Lake Falls in June. No doubt all of the state land in Red Lake county will be sold at this sale and this will probably be the last chance to secure a good piece of cheap land in Red Lake. Everyone stands an equal chance of bidding on these lands and the state gives forty years' time at 4 per cent interest. The sale of Red Lake County lands will occur on Monday, July 1, at the Court House in Red Lake Falls, at one o'clock P M.

Revival meetings are being held in Red Lake Falls. We know of no place more in need of a revival.—Thief River Press.

Judging from the indictments returned by the grand jury last week, it would seem that a little missionary work in the up-river town would be very beneficial and might tend somewhat to raise the moral standing of the community. "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

A bill has passed both houses of the legislature, and is now in affect, which requires boards of county commissioners to allow the actual and necessary expenses of county superintendents of schools. The bill is as follows:

Section 1. The county board of each county of the state of Minnesota shall audit and if found correct allow duly itemized and verified claims of the county superintendent of schools for actual and necessary traveling expenses, incurred and paid by him or his assistant in the conduct of his official duties as county superintendent of schools.

Section 2. All acts or parts of acts, general or special, inconsistent with the foregoing are hereby repealed.

Section 3. This act shall be in force and take effect from and after its passage.

What is it that tastes as pleasant as maple sugar and relieves coughs and colds? Mothers who have used it will quickly answer: "Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup." The pleasant cold remedy that expels the cold through its laxative action on the bowels. Conforms strictly to the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Contains no opiates. Sold by all druggists.

Chas. Claus, of Thief River, who who has been sojourning at the county bastile for the past forty daya, bid Host Nelaon adieu last Saturday and wended his way back to former fields, promising to be a better man. Charley is a good workman but frequently strays from the water wagon and proceeds to indulge in "brainstorm" beverages until the strong arm of the law has to come to his assistance to help him regain his seat on the water van.

Rest is the great restorer. We tire our muscles by exercise and then rest to restore them; yet a great many of us do not stop to think how little rest we give to our stomachs. As a usual thing no part of our bodies is so generally overworked as our digestive organs. A tired and overworked stomach will give signs of distress to which we pay no heed until at last Dyspepsia takes hold. Indigestion is just a warning, and if we heed the warning we can easily avoid further consequences. KODol is a most thorough stomach relief. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach the needed rest and greatly assists in restoring it to its normal activity and usefulness. KODOL is sold on a guaranteed relief plan. It is sold here by all druggists.

Safety and Convenience

"Safety" is the password in transferring money—"convenience" is also of equal importance.

You have both safety and convenience in money matters when you pay by check.

A checking account is the simplest method for everyone—for you—to emply in financial affairs, because you have a complete record of every transaction.

We welcome small accounts.

All accounts—large and small—receive the same careful attention

Merchants State Bank

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

SPRING OPENING

FOR the Spring Season of 1907 this store will show a better and more complete line of Spring Goods than ever before in its history. We are constantly growing, improving, progressing. Our aim is to become more generally known as Red Lake Falls' greatest store for popular priced merchandise, and the public is cordially invited to inspect our elegant new Spring and Summer lines.

WASH GOODS

New designs and colorings in materials that will withstand the wear and tear of repeated washing and ironing without losing its original brilliancy of color and finish, at astonishing low prices.

Tissue, Zepher, Poplin, Costume Silk, Swiss, Lawns, Batiste and Madrass Cloth in the new designs, at

15c, 20c, 25c 35c and 50c

Dress Ginghams at 10c and 12½c;
New Calico at 6c and 7c.

Ladies Neckwear and Belts—Stocks and collars in silk, embroidered and Swiss, 10c, 15c, 35c and 50c.

Leather Belts with new Swastiker buckle, 50c and 75c; Black ank colored Silk Belts, 35c, 50c and 60c.

Note the strikingly handsome styles of "QUEEN QUALITY" SUMMER OXFORDS displayed in our window this week. Note also the moderate prices asked for these really fashionable and pretty shoes. But don't stop at the window, come in and try on a pair. Not the slightest obligation to buy.

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR

Ladies, we wish to call your special attention to our fine assortment, to the home-made appearance and to the remarkably low price. Please remember when in our store to ask our sales lady to show you our Muslin Underwear and the American Beauty Corsets.

Corset Covers at 15c, 25c, 35c, 50c.
Drawers at 25c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00.
Shirts at 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.75.
Gowns at 75c, $1 00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75.

MEN'S FURNISHINGS

New Spring Shirts, tasteful colorings, the jacket style with cuffs attached, at $1, $1.25, $1.50.

The Lanpher Hats, none better in all the new styles, $3 and $4.

Men's Spring Weight Underwear, just the kind you'll need some of these days; light weight, wool or cotton, union suits or seperate garments, per garment, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Fancy Hose For Men, from 25c to 50c.

THE BUSY STORE

GARCEAU & ZAISER

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.......

Miss Eline Hanson, who has been principal of the high school in this city for the past two years, has been tendered the principalship of the Alexandria high school for the school year of 1907-08 and has accepted. She will teach the English classes. Miss Hanson's many friends in this city regret to learn that she has decided to severe her connections with the Red Lake Falls schools, but are pleased to know that she will enter a larger field and wish her the success which ambition merits.

The bank statements of the Marchants State Bank and the First State Bank of St. Hilaire appeared in last week's Spectator and make a very substantial showing, the deposits of the two banks aggregating close on tu $112,000.00, with the Merchants State leading by about $22,000: This is not so bad for a town which last year lost one of its biggest institutions—the saw mill. St. Hilaire has a good substantial farming community to back her up and promises to hold her own with her sister towns.

Yesterday Coroner Belair drove out to the town of Wyandotte to investigate the death of Ole Omoth, who was found dead on section 15 in that township. The body of Omoth was found in a chair where he had been sitting and it is supposed that death was due to heart failure. Mr. Omoth had been drawn to serve on the petit jury at the present term of court but was excused last week on account of illness. He was a farmer and lived alone, with the exception of a hired man who was absent at the time of his death.

H. H. Zaiser returned Monday from an extended trip to the Twin Cities, Chicago and other eastern points. Mr. Zaiser combined business with pleasure and during his sojourn in Chicago made large purchases of the season's dress goods and novelties which will arrive this week. While in Chicago Mr. Zaiser had the honor of becoming a member of the Chicsgo Commercial Association, which is an association for the mutual benefit of wholesale and retail dealers, with club rooms and other facilities for the convenience of its members and friends.

The post Lenten concert and hall given by the Orpheus Quartette last Monday evening proved to be one of the finest musical entertainments given in this city in some time past. The concert numbers were all well rendered, and disclosed the fact that Red Lake Falls possesess an orchestra which will rank well to the front among the high class musical organizations of the Northwest, while the individual members at once showed exceptional musical talent and executive ability. After the concert dancing was the order of the program, and this ever popular amusement held the participants until a late hour. Both the concert and dance were well attended and thoroughly enjoyed. The receipts of the evening reached a very substantial figure.

The men's supper which was to have been served at the Presbyterian Church this week has been postponed until Tuesday evening April 16th. It is said that several of the gentlemen are having considerable difficulty in fulfilling their promises to furnish cakes, pies, etc. for the occasion. Thomas Germo is trying to construct an angel food cake that won't fall apart as soon as taken from the oven; Prof. Chamberlain is endeavoring to construct a mince pie by an algebraic process; L. C, Simous is figuring on how to bake bread by the hydraulic raising method, and Geo. Hennings is offering all the small boys in town 10 cents a dozen to hunt up holes enough to insert in the batch of doughnuts that he has in the process of consruction.

SHIP YOUR GRAIN. We are the only firm in this city dealing exclusively with the farmer. All Millers know that our cars are of [illegible] grade and not elevator mixed. [illegible] satisfaction. [illegible] Send us samples for grading [illegible]
COOPER COMMISSION CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Crookston Journal: Congressman Halvor Steenerson has received notice from Washington of the establishment in Red Lake county of the postoffice of Malone named after a prominent young lady in this city. As there is more than one Miss Malone in Crookston and as the honored young lady is of an exceedingly modest nature it is thought best not to be too specific.

Superintendant McAnulty made his regular monthly trip to Thief River last Tuesday. These visits are made for the purpose of accommodating anyone from the Eleven Towns who may have business with the superintendants office. Mr. McAnulty makes his headquarter at the Rusford hotel where he may be found by anyone desiring to consult him on his regular visits to that place.

FIRST STATE BANK
OF
RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU

PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.

DIRECTORS
Theo. Garceau
Frank E Hunt
Chas. N. Bourdon
W. A. Schreiter
A. P. Toupin
N. M. Watson
Geo. F. Hennings

The Syracuse "Easy" Washer

A Few Reasons Why You ... Should Have One ...

It saves the clothes.

It saves precious time.

It saves physical force.

It saves in cost—no new tubs or boards to buy.

It washes cleaner and rinses better.

It is adapted to both heavy and light clothes.

We Have Sold Hundreds of these machines since we have had the agency—another good reason why you should have one. We wouldn't have sold so many if they weren't right. Remember we put them out on trial and the price is only ....

$8.00

Hunt Hardware Co.

Delicious
Hot Biscuit
MADE WITH
ROYAL BAKING POWDER
are the most appetizing, healthful and nutritious of foods
Much depends upon the Baking Powder
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

The Local Field---

Send us the news.

Henry Henderson was down from St. Hilaire Monday.

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Wm. Clement returned Saturday from his winter's work in the lumber camps.

Miss Mamie Erickson returned Saturday to Fergus Falls to resume her school duties.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

Just Received—A car of fresh lime, plaster and cement.—Thief River Falls Lbr. Co., Dan J. Doran, Mgr.

Miss Laura Lizee, who is attending the Crookston College came up Monday for a short visit with the home folks.

Miss Alpha Twedten of Crookston spent several days in the city the first of the week as the guest of Miss Ella Hanson.

Oscar Sponheim, assistant cashier of the Peoples State Bank of Thief River Falls was a business caller here on Monday.

Miss Mable Hanson of Fertile, spent several days in the city the first of the week as the guest of her sister, Miss Ella Hanson.

Albert Swanson, of Clover Leaf, spent several days in the city the first of the week visiting with Register of Deeds E. L. Quist.

John Savord, who has been cooking in one of the lumber camps near Blackduck during the past winter returned to this city Saturday.

I have taken off a hatch and will now sell or trade my "Old Trusty" incubator, 110 egg size, as I have no further use for it this year.—Fred L. Farley. 2w

Mrs. J. E. [illegible]karud returned to this city Thursday of last week after having spent some time as the guest of friends at Grand Forks and at her old home at Ada.

The Thief River high school class of '07 have prepared a play entitled "A Cheerful Liar," which will be presented at the opera house in that city tomorrow evening.

The Busy Store advertise their Spring Opening in this week's issue, and will be pleased to show you their many novelties in the season's goods. It will pay you to look over their ad.

Miss Amanda Johnson, sister of Clerk of Court Johnson, returned home Monday from Fergus Falls, where she has been attending the Northwestern college the past winter.

We make farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds on hand at all times.---First State Bank, Red Lake Falls.

When in the City
stop at
PAUL'S
HOTEL
Sample Room In Connection
Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.
☞House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.
Give Us A Call.
SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

Banker Hansen of St. Hilaire was a business caller in the city Monday.

For Sale—Light Brahmas, thoroughbred cockerels. C. L. Mikkelsen.

Good speltz and barley seed for sale. Inquire of H. O. Gjerberg, town of Gervais.

Burt Lizee returned home Saturday after having spent the winter in the big woods.

Farmers bring your cream to the Red Lake Falls creamery and help make this year's business a record breaker.

Clara Marchand, Margaret Kaus and Miss Thompson returned to Moorhead Monday to take up their normal studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brouillette, of Dugdale, were over Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brouillette.

Only a few more evenings to attend the revival meetings at the Presbyterian church. You are cordially invited to be present.

J. A. Egan returned Saturday from a trip to Galesburg, N. D., where he has been looking after his land holdings in that vicinity.

Dr. Spofford will miss his visits for March and April, to Red Lake Falls. Next visit May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Mrs. John E. King and children accompanied Mr. King on his trip to this city Saturday, and are putting in the week visiting among old acquaintances.

Services will be held at the Norwegian Lutheran church next Sunday at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Rev. I. T. Aastad will conduct the services both morning and evening.

Miss Mable Hannay came down from St. Hilaire Monday evening to be present at the Easter concert and ball. She was the guest of Miss Mary Lamb during her stay in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry L. Malvin arrived from Oaks, N. D., last week and have moved into the Callier house. Mr. Malvin will have charge of the local creamery during the coming year.

G. A. Kankel, the hardware man, has erected a large and attractive sign over the entrance to the Kankel store. The sign is a very prominent one and cannot be missed by anyone looking for a hardware store.

A fine lot of household goods for sale. Everything up-to-date, including high grade piano, china closet and other things too numerous to mention. Must be sold before May 1st. Will sell cheap for cash.—Mrs. Louis Sieff.

KODOL for Dyspepsia clears the stomach and makes the breath as sweet as a rose. KODOL is sold by druggists on a guarantee relief plan. It conforms strictly to the National Pure Food and Drugs Law. Sold by all druggists.

Crookston Journal: Friday afternoon Miss Edna Glenn entertained 16 girls at a thimble bee for Miss Ethel Bourdon of Red Lake Falls who is the guest of Miss Ina Phillips. Lunch was served and a very pleasant afternoon was spent.

A business meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the Presbyterian church will be held at the home of Mrs. Henry Hennemuth on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, April 10th Important business will be transacted and all members are requested to be present.

Macaroni seed wheat for sale.—L. C. Simons.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

J. J. Padden was an over-night visitor at Crookston Monday evening.

Attorney Chas. Loring of Crookston was in the city on business the first of the week.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes, The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

M. V. Evenson of Thief River was an over Tuesday night business caller at the county seat.

Miss Eline Hanson spent several days last week as the guest of Miss Alpha Twedten of Crookston.

Peter Beauleau, of the Busy Store force, made a business trip to Grand Forks Tuesday returning the following day.

P. E. Pirath was up the Greenbush line last week dispensing chemical fire extinguishers, for which he has the agency.

Merchant F. J. Boivin of Dorothy was a business caller in the city Monday. The Gazette acknowledges a pleasant call.

"Jim & Paul" call your attention to some big bargains in boys suits, shoes and furnishings in their ad on the front page this week.

Wanted—Person to travel in home territory; salary $3.50 per day and expenses. Address. J. A. Alexander, 125 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

The members of the family of J. Benoit Carder, who have been undergoing a seige of typhoid fever are all reported on the road to recovery at this writing.

White Wyandottes are the best general purpose fowl. Have the size and are great winter layers. Eggs from extra fine stock $1.00 per setting.—Fred L. Farley. 27 30

Abner Fletcher, who is attending the U. of N. D. at Grand Forks, came over Friday of last week for a rest from student life and a few days' visit with the home folks.

County Treasurer Tandberg requests that in paying or asking for statement of taxes in each case mention year and add 30c advertising fees to each description for back taxes.

Mrs. T. J. McKee, accompanied by her step daughter, little Miss Dorothy arrived Monday from Newfane, New York, for an extended stay at the home of Mrs. McKee's mother, Mrs. O. LaFreniere.

Grand Rapids Independent: Joseph Hamel, who has been spending the past several weeks at Terrebonne, Red Lake county, returned Tuesday. He was accompanied by H. Hinslet, who will visit here for some time.

When you need a pill, take a pill and be sure it's an Early Riser. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are safe, sure, satisfactory pills. The pills with a reputation. They do not gripe or sicken. They are sold here by all druggists.

The star route mail carrier from Crookston failed to make his appearance last Sunday on account of the bad condition of the roads and the postoffice patrons were again forced to forego the pleasure of receiving their Sunday mail.

The Big Store this week calls your special attention to their line of spring shoes, dress goods and the ever popular Palmer Coats which are recognixed as the standard of perfection in all fashionable centers. They also quote extra specials in the grocery line.

Use Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Children like its pleasant taste, and mothers give it hearty endorsement. Contains no opiates, but drives out the cold through the bowels. Made in strict conformity to Pure Food and Drugs Law. Recommended and sold by all druggists.

Medames Theo. LaBissoniere, Wm. Findelsen and J. P. Hairen will entertain a number of their friends from three to five o'clock Friday afternoon at the Oddfellows hall. Elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of their guests and the occasion promises to be one eminently befitting the opening of the post Lenten social season,

Louis Sieff left Tuesday with a party of about twenty men for Billings, Montana, where they will put in the summer on railroad construction for A. Guelthre & Co., who have large contracts for the Great Northern in that vicinity. Among those who joined the party were Fred Bergdorf, Chas, Gerlach, M. R. Hall, Herman Wolf, Chas. Bourdon, Jr., Frank Doyea, and Fritz Gerka, Joseph Seiff and others.

Mayor Lundgren who has just been elected to his fourth consecutive term at Warren believes that all lads and lassies should marry, and as an extra inducement to bachelors and old maids in that city has offered to present large residence lots to the first five who will abandon single blessedness and join the anti-race-suicide throng. While the mayor may be able to interest some of the bachelors of that vicinity, we will bet our brindle cat that he won't find any of the ladies who will admit that they have reached the age when the term "old maid" might be applied.

"Good for everything a salve is used for and especially recommended for Piles." That is what we say about DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. That is what twenty years of usage has proven. Get the original. Sold by all druggists.

The following marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk of Court Johnson during the past few days: Eli G. Gunder and Miss Anna Johnson, of Thief River Falls; Gustav Braggren and Miss Helena Johnson, of Thief River Falls; and William Dejare, of St. Paul, to Miss Hulda S. Erickson of Thief River Falls.

"Off again, on again, gone again, Finnigan." Carl E. Peterson who left this city three weeks ago Monday, returned to Red Lake Falls Monday and will be found at his old stand on the Gazette force. Pete arrived from the deserts of the Dakotas covered with alkali dust, his cheeks wan and drawn, and his throat parched and dry. He said that he had travelled straight as the crow flies and that he arrived just in time to save having his life snuffed out in the drought stricken districts of old Setting Bulls former stamping grounds. Pete didn't take to the descendents of that famous warrior in the least and says that Red Lake Falls is good enough for him, and that he is going to remain here this time forever and a day.

. . . Shoes for Spring . . .

IT IS with confidence and pride that we offer to the public our new spring line--
St. Cecilia Shoes for Women and Misses
In spite of the fact that leather is much higher than in past year, this new line shows more quality and style than they have shown in the past. So the friends of the St. Cecilia shoe will not be disappointed as the wearers of other makes are in these days of high prices when so many unscrupulous manufacturers will take the quality out of a shoe in order to maintain old prices. We show them in B C D and E widths, single and double sole, blucher and plain lace $3.50 to all. Nanaimo $3.00, Saranac $2.50. Godman $1.50 to 2.25. They are world beaters as to quality.

Long Coats for Women
Fashion has again put its stamp of approval on the long coat. We are showing a line of Palmer Coats that must be see to be appreciated. 8.00 to $13.50. You are not doing yourself justice if you do not wear a Palmer coat or skirt. They do not cost any more so why not buy a Palmer? We are also showing a splendid line of Long Coat Goods. 36 in Suitings at 50c and 60c, that are very good in quality and appearance. Fine Imported English Suitings at 80c to $1.50 in the latest Pasted Shades, Phantom Plaids, Invisible Checks, etc. Finest line ever shown here.
Send for Samples
We are pleased to send samples to out of town buyers. Don't be bashful.
Wash Goods
The finest line at 12½c and 15c in the city. The latest effects. Easily worth 5c per yard more. The finest silk effects up to 60c yard.
Specials
Remnants of waistings ½ regular price: Soiled waists 29c worth up to $1.50. Misses Rain Coats 1.00 to 2.75 worth from $4.00 to $9.00. Must go quick. Ladies $6.00 skirts for $3.25. Cod fish 5c lb. Wheat Flakes, 6c. Egg case full crackers $1.00. Lemons 25c doz. Fancy apples 50c peck. Fine corn 75c doz. Cake flour 25c. 3 gal. pail syrup, $1.25. Fine White fish 10c, Corn startch 5c.
It pays to trade at THE BIG STORE The Store of Quality.
THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.

I'm after your Spring Suit order, and when I tell you that I'll make you a better Spring suit for $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 than your local tailor would make for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00, don't you think I've a license to butt in?
It don't cut any ice where you live, I'll absolutely guarantee to fit you and give you perfect saitsfaction. I do the biggest mail-order business in the country, and I know what I'm talking about.
Write me today and tell me about the kind of Spring suit you have on your mind, and by return mail I'll send you samples of my spring fabrics, also self-measurement blank. Don't be afraid to ask questions. I want to be of service to you any way I can.
Remember, I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money—you run no risk whatever. I pay all express charges, so your clothes will cost you no more than if you bought them right here in Minneapolis.
Write me today and let me save you a bunch of money.
Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

It's Up to You
I AM RIGHT WITH THE GOODS.
Suit Made to Order, Scotch Goods, Worth $30 and $35
$15
Suits Made to Order, English Goods, Worth $35 to $40
$20 AND $25
Suits Made to Order, Special Goods, Worth $45 to $50 of Any Other Tailor
$30 AND $35
Write for Samples Today,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges . . .
We have just received several of the latest constructed Monarch Malleable Steel Ranges, in which are contained all the features which has made the steel range famous and the latest improvements that are known to the range manufacturers' art, which makes this range the "Monarch" of them all. These ranges are now on exhibition at our store, and we would be pleased to have every housewife in this vicinity call and look them over. The price of the Monarch Malleable Steel Range" is cheaper accordingly than other so called "steel ranges."

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXII.—Continued.

He broke the spell of awe that had been upon him, so that he felt for the moment only a pious horror of her speech. He called Christina to take charge of her and Martha, the second wife, to put away her little bundle of clothing. He himself went to be alone that he could think what must be done for her. From an entry in the Bible, written in letters that seemed to shout to him the accusation of his crime, he had found that she must now be five years old. It was high time that he should begin to supply her very apparent need of religious instruction.

When she had become a little used to her surroundings later in the day, he sought to beguile her to this end, talking diplomatically with other things.

"Come, tell me your name, dear."

She allowed her attention to be diverted from her largest doll.

"My name is Prudence—" She hesitated.

"Prudence—what?"

"I—I lost my mind of it." She looked at him hopefully to be prompted.

"Prudence Rae."

She repeated the name, doubtingly. "Prudence Rae?"

"Yes—remember now—Prudence Rae. You are my little girl—Prudence Rae."

"But you're not my really papa—he's went far off—oh, ten ninety miles far."

"No, Prudence—God is your Father in heaven, and I am your father on earth."

"Are not my papa!"

"Listen, Prudence—do you know what you are?"

The puzzled look she had worn fled instantly from her face.

"I'm a generation of vipers."

She made the announcement with a perceptible ring of elation in her tones, looking at him proudly, and as if waiting to hear expressions of astonishment and delight.

"Child, child, who has told you such things? You are not that!"

She retorted, indignantly now, the lines drawing about her eyes in signal of nearby tears:

"I am a generation of vipers—the Bishop said I was—he told that other mamma, and I am it!"

"Well, well, don't cry—all right—you shall be it—but I can tell you something much nicer." He assumed a knowing air, as one who withheld knowledge of overwhelming fascination.

"Tell me—what?"

And so, little by little, hardly knowing where to begin, but feeling that any light whatsoever must profit a soul so benighted, he began to teach her.

In the days that followed he wooed her patiently, seeking constantly to find some favor with her, and grateful beyond words when he succeeded ever so little. At first, he could win but slight notice of any sort from her, and that only at rare and uncertain intervals. But gradually his unobtrusive efforts told, and, little by little, she began to take him into her confidence. The first day she invited him to play with her in one of her games was a day of rejoicing for him.

And that night, before her bedtime, when he sat in front of the fire, she came with a most matter-of-fact unconsciousness to climb into his lap. He held her a long time, trying to breathe gently and not daring to move lest he make her uncomfortable. Her head pillowed on his arm, she was soon asleep, and he refused to give her up when Martha came to put her to bed.

Though their intimacy grew during the winter, so that she called him her father and came confidingly to him at all times, in tears or in laughter, yet he never ceased to feel in aloofness from her, an awkwardness in her presence, a fear that the mother who looked from her eyes might at any moment call to him.

CHAPTER XXIII.

How the Red Came Back to the Blood to Be a Snare.

The red was coming back to the blood of Martha, the fair flesh to her meager frame, the spring of youth to her step and living fire to her voice and the glance of her eyes. Her husband was pleased. He had made a new creature of the poor, worn wreck found by the wayside, weak, emaciated, reeling under her burden. He rejoiced to know he had done a true service. He was glad, moreover, to know that she made an admirable mother to the little woman-child. Prudence, indeed, had brought them closer to each other, slowly, subtly, in little ways to disarm the most timid caution.

And this mothering and fathering of little Prudence was a work by no means colorless or uneventful. The child had displayed a grievous capacity for remaining unimpressed by even the best-weighed opinions of her protector. She was also appallingly fluent in and partial to the idioms and metaphors of revealed religion,—a circumstance that would not infrequently cause the sensitive to shudder.

Yet her days were by no means all of reproof nor was her reproof ever harsher than the more or less pointed selections from the moral verses could inflict. Under the watchful care of Martha she flourished and was happy, her mother in little, a laughing whirlwind of tender flesh, tireless feet, dancing eyes, hair of sunlight that was darkening as she grew older, and a mind that seemed to him she called father a miracle of unfoldment. It was a mind not so quickly receptive as he could have wished to the learning he tried patiently to impart; he wondered, indeed, if she were not unduly frivolous even for a child of six; for she would refuse to study unless she could have the doll she called Bishop Wright with her and pretend that she taught the lesson to him, finding him always stupid and loth to learn. He hoped for better things from her mind as she aged, watching anxiously for the buddings of reason and religion, praying daily that she should be increased in wisdom as in stature. He had become so used to the look of her mother in her face that it now and then gave him an instant of unspeakable joy. But the sound of his own voice calling her "Prudence" would shock him from this as with an icy blast of truth.

She Was Waiting, Silent, But with Eyes That Told More Than He Dared to Hear.

As he observed her day by day in her joyous growth, it was inevitable that he came more and more to observe the woman who was caring for her, and it was thus on one night in late summer that he awoke to an awful truth,—a truth that brought back the words of the woman's former husband with a new meaning.

He had heard Prudence say to her, "You are a pretty mamma," and suddenly there came rushing upon him the sum of all the impressions his eyes had taken of her since that day when the Bishop had spoken. He trembled and became weak under the assault, feeling that in some insidious way his strength had been undermined. He went out into the early evening to be alone, but she, presently, having put the child to bed, came and stood near, silently in the doorway.

He looked and saw she was indeed made new, restored to the luster and fullness of her young womanhood. He remembered then that she had long been silent when he came near her, plainly conscious of his presence but with an apparent constraint, with something almost tentative in her manner. With her return to health and comeliness there had come back to her a thousand little graces of dress and manner and speech. She drew him, with his starved love of beauty and his need of companionship; drew him with a mighty power, and he knew it at last. He remembered how he had felt and faintly thrilled under a certain soft suppression in her tones when she had spoken to him of late; this had drawn him, and the new light in her eyes and her whole freshened womanhood, even before he knew it. Now that he did know it he felt himself shaken and all but lost; clutching weakly at some support that threatened every moment to give way.

And she was his wife, his who had starved year after year for the light touch of a woman's hand and the tones of her voice that should be for him alone. He knew now that he had ached and sickened in his yearning for this, and she stood there for him in the soft night. He knew she was waiting, and he knew he desired above all things else to go to her; that the comfort of her, his to take, would give him new life, new desires, new powers; that with her he would revive as she had done. He waited long, indulging freely in hesitation, bathing his wearied soul in her nearness—yielding in fancy.

Then he walked off into the night, down through the village, past the light of open doors, and through the voices that sounded from them, out on to the bare bench of the mountain—his old refuge in temptation—where he could be safe from submitting to what his soul had forbidden. He had meant to take up a cross, but before his very eyes it had changed to be a snare set for him by the Devil.

He stayed late on the ground in the darkness, winning the battle for himself over and over, decisively, he thought, at the last. But when he went home she was there in the doorway to meet him, still silent, but with eyes that told more than he dared to hear. He thought she had in some way divined his struggle, and was waiting to strengthen the odds against him, with her face in the light of a candle she held above her head.

He went by her without speaking, afraid of his weakness, and rushed to his little cell-like room to fight the battle over. As a last source of strength he took from its hiding place the little Bible. And as it fell open naturally at the blood-washed page a new thing came, a new torture. No sooner had his eyes fallen on the stain that it seemed to him to cry out of itself, so that he started back from it. He shut the book and the cries were stilled; he opened it and again he heard them—far, loud cries and low groans close to his ear; then long piercing scream stifled suddenly to low, horrible gurglings. And before him came the inscrutable face with the deep gray eyes and the shining lips, lifting, with love in the eyes, above a gashed throat.

He closed the book and fell weakly to his knees to pray brokenly, and almost despairingly: "Help me to keep down this self within me; let it ask for nothing; fan the fires until they consume it! Bow me, bend me, break me, burn me out—burn me out!"

In the morning, when he said, "Martha, the harvest is over now, and I want you to go north with me," she prepared to obey without question.

He talked freely to her on the way, though it is probable that he left in her mind little more than dark confusion, beyond the one clear fact of his wish. As to this, she knew she must have no desire but to comply. Reaching Salt Lake City, they went at once to Brigham's office. When they came out they came possessed of a document in duplicate, reciting that they both did "covenant, promise, and agree to dissolve all the relations which have hitherto existed between us as husband and wife, and to keep ourselves separate and apart from each other from this time forth."

This was the simple divorce which Brigham was good enough to grant to such of the Saints as found themselves unhappily married, and wished it. As Joel Rae handed the Prophet the fee of ten dollars, which it was his custom to charge for the service, Brigham made some timely remarks. He said he feared that Martha had been perverse and rebellious; that her first husband had found her so; and that it was doubtless for the good of all that her second had taken the resolution to divorce her. He was afraid that Brother Joel was an inferior judge of women; but he had surely shown himself to be generous in the provision he was making for the support of this contumacious wife.

They parted outside the door of the little office, and he kissed her for the first time since they had been married—on the forehead.

Christina would now be left alone with the cares of the house, and he knew he ought to have some one to help her. The fever of sacrifice was also upon him. And so he found another derelict, to whom he was sealed forever.

At a time of more calmness he might have balked at this one. She was a cross, to be sure, and it was now his part in life to bear crosses. But there were plenty of these, and even one vowed to a life of sacrifice, he suspected, need not grossly abuse the powers of discrimination with which Heaven had seen fit to endow him. But he had lately been on the verge of a seething maelstrom, balancing there with unholy desire and wickedly looking far down, and the need to atone for this sin excited him to indiscretions.

It was not that this star in his crown was in her late thirties and less than lovely. He had learned, indeed, that in the game which, for the chastening of his soul, he now played with the Devil, it were best to choose stars whose charms could excite to little but conduct of a saintlike seemliness. The fat, dumpy figure of this woman, therefore, and her round, flat, moon-like face, her mouse-colored wisps of hair cut squarely off at the back of her neck, were points of a merit that was in its whole effect nothing less than distinguished.

But she talked. Her tones played with the constancy of an ever-living fountain. Artlessly she lost herself in the sound of their music, until she also lost her sense of proportion, of light and shade, of simple, Christian charity. Her name was Lorena Sears, and she had come in with one of the late trains of converts, without friends, relatives, or means, with nothing but her natural gifts and an abiding faith in the saving powers of the new dispensation. And though she was so alive in her faith, rarely informed in the Scriptures, bubbling with enthusiasm for the new covenant, the new Zion, and the second coming of the Messiah, there had seemed to be no place for her. She had not been asked in marriage, nor had she found it easy to secure work to support herself.

"She's strong," said Brigham, to his inquiring Elder, "and a good worker, but even Brother Heber Kimball wouldn't marry her; and between you and me, Brother Joel, I never knew Heber to shy before at anything that would work. You can see that, yourself, by looking over his household."

But, after the needful preliminaries, and a very little coy hesitation on the part of the lady, Lorena Sears, spinster, native of Elyria, Ohio, was duly sealed to, for time and eternity, and became a star forever in the crown of Joel Rae, Elder after the Order of Melchisedek in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and President of the Amalon Stake of Zion.

In the bustle of the start south there were, of necessity, moments in which the crown's new star could not talk; but these blessed respites were at an end when at last they came to the open road.

At first, as her speech flowed on, he looked sidelong at her, in a trouble of fear and wonder; then, at length, absently, trying to put his mind elsewhere and to leave her voice as the muted murmur of a distant torrent. He succeeded fairly well in this, for Lorena combined admirably in herself the parts of speaker and listener, and was not, he thankfully noted, watchful of his attention.

He was called back by the stopping of her voice, but she had to repeat her question before he understood it. The Devil tempted him in that moment. He was on the point of answering, "Because she talked too much," but instead he climbed out of the wagon to walk. He walked most of the 300 miles in the next ten days.

But he had taken up a new cross and he had his reward. The first night after they reached home he took the little Bible from its hiding place and opened it with trembling hands. The stain was there, red in the candle-light. But the cries no longer rang in his ears as on that other night when he had been sinful before the page. And he was glad, knowing that the self within him had again been put down.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Wild Ram of the Mountains Offers to Become a Savior on Mount Zion.

In the valley of which Amalon was the center, they made ready for the end of the world. It is true that in the north, as the appointed year drew nigh, an opinion had begun to prevail that the Son of Man might defer his coming; and presently it became know that Brigham himself was doubtful about the year 1870, and was inspiring others to doubt. But in Amalon they were untainted by this heresy, choosing to rely upon what Brigham had said in moments more inspired.

He had taught that Joseph was to be the first person resurrected; that after his frame had been knit together and clothed with immortal flesh he would resurrect those who had died in the faith, according to their rank in the priesthood; then all his wives and children. Resurrected Elders, having had the keys of the resurrection conferred upon them by Joseph, their own households; and when the last of the faithful had come forth, another great work would be performed; the Gentiles would then be resurrected to act as servants and slaves to the Saints. In his lighter moments Brigham had been wont to name a couple of Presidents of the United States who would then act as his valets.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

OVER $1,000 A YEAR AND "LIVING."

That is the Story of a Michigan Farmer Who Lives in Western Canada.

Olds, Alberta, Dec. 10, 1906.

Mr. M. V. McInnes, Detroit, Michigan:

Dear Sir and Friend—It will be four years next May since I came to Olds, and have lived here ever since.

Since I came here wheat has run from 25 to 45 bu. per acre, oats from 65 to 115, that I know of. I raised that last year, 115 bu. to the acre of the finest oats I ever saw, and oats that I sowed 31st day of May this year went 72½ to the acre and weighed 41 lbs. to the bushel. My barley went 40 bu. last year and 50 this year, and was not sown until the latter part of May. I had 3 acres of potatoes this year and sold 700 bushels and put 275 bu. in the cellar, and no bugs to pick.

We have a fine Government Creamery at Olds. Our cows made $41 per head and I didn't feed any grain; only prairie hay, so you see we are doing well. We have the patent for our homestead now and am very thankful that we came to Alberta. We have made a little over $1,000 each year besides making our living. I would not go back to Michigan to live for anything. If I had my choice of a ticket to Olds or a 40-acre farm in Michigan I would take the ticket and in two years I could buy any of them 40-acre farms. This is the country for a poor man, as well as a man with money.

I will close, thanking you for our prosperity, I remain yours truly,

(Signed) OTTO YETTING,

Olds, Alberta, Canada. Box 159.

Information as to how to secure low rates to the free grant lands of Western Canada can be secured of any Canadian Government agents.

CLAIMS TO CURE ALL ILLS.

Scotch Minister Announces Discovery of Remarkable Germicide.

A claim of an astounding nature is put forward by a minister whose field of work lies within the bounds of the city of Glasgow, Scotland. He has discovered a germicide by the application of which he can cure every kind of infectious, loathsome, and incurable disease, even when considered, humanly speaking, hopeless. He has demonstrated to his own satisfaction that hospitals for infectious diseases are quite unnecessary, and that surgical operations except on the battlefield or in railway or other accidents, are totally uncalled for. No operation is needed, according to him, for appendicitis, for example, as it can be perfectly well cured by the germicide. The discoverer of the germicide has published a list of the names of 50 patients, with their addresses, whom he says he has cured, or is in process of curing, even in some cases, after they had received their "death warrant" from medical practitioners.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF ECZEMA.

Terrible Itching Prevented Sleep—Hands, Arms and Legs Affected—Cuticura Cured in 6 Days.

"I had eczema nearly fifteen years. The affected parts were my hands, arms and legs. They were the worst in the winter time, and were always itchy, and I could not keep from scratching them. I had to keep both hands bandaged all the time, and at night I would have to scratch through the bandages as the itching was so severe, and at times I would have to tear everything off my hands to scratch the skin. I could not rest or sleep. I had several physicians treat me but they could not give me a permanent cure nor even could they stop the itching. After using the Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent for about six days the itching had ceased, and now the sores have disappeared, and I never felt better in my life than I do now. Edward Worell, Band 30th U. S. Infantry, Fort Crook, Nebraska."

Varnish Secret Lost.

The Cremona varnish disappeared about 1760, and so far the recipe has not been rediscovered. Whether it was a gum or an oil or a distillation from some plant or a chemical is not known, nor how it was mixed. Many theories regarding it have been advanced from time to time, and Dod, who died in 1830, claimed to have rediscovered it. He employed others to make his violins, but always varnished them himself. His varnish is very superior, and his violins command high prices. The varnishing and polishing of a violin are done usually by a woman. It requires time and practice, for the finest instruments are gone over as often as 30 times.—March Circle.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.

Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

Instead of throwing stones people who live in glass houses should grow violets at a dollar a bunch.

Panthers and Grizzly Bears.

Ship Furs Pelts McMillan Fur & Wool Co., Minneapolis, Minn. Write for prices.

A friend in need usually needs all he can induce you to give up—and then some.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

It is difficult to greet misfortune with a smile when it is always frowning.

Ship Your Cream to Us.

Largest creamery in the northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

There is always room for a man of force, and he makes room for many.

OPEN THE WINDOWS

FRESH AIR ESSENTIAL TO PREVENT CONSUMPTION.

Dangerous to Neglect Even an Ordinary Cough or Cold—Simple Remedy Is Effective.

"Good food, fresh air and rest; keep your windows open winter and summer."

So we are told by the great scientists who are certainly doing wonders in reducing the death rate from Tuberculosis. They also warn us not to neglect a cold or cough, and it is most important that this advice be followed. While the cough or cold may not bring consumption, it is better to be on the safe side and take no chances.

Here is a simple remedy that will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable: Glycerine, two ounces; Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), one-half ounce; good Whisky, a half pint. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours. The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost, but must be pure to effect the desired results. For this reason it is always best to purchase the ingredients separately and prepare the mixture at home.

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) should be purchased only in the original half-ounce vials put up for druggists to dispense. Each vial is enclosed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure); guaranteed under the Food and Drug Act, June 30, 1906. Prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, O.—plainly printed thereon. Imitations and oils sold in bulk pay dealers larger profits, but they are dangerous to health and should never be used.

New Danger for Burglars.

A phonographic device that will call the police by telephone adds a new hazard to the dangers of the burglar's profession. When an attempt is made to force a window or door with which the proper connections have been made an electric current operates a phonograph in the garret. The machine calls up central and asks for the police station. The phonograph then informs the officers of the robbery, giving street and number, and repeats this information as long as the receiver is down. Meantime, the intruder, all unconscious that an alarm has been rung in, virtually walks into a trap, and if the call is promptly responded to is soon in the lockup.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Democratic Danish Statesman.

The Danish minister of agriculture, Ole Hansen, is one of the most popular and democratic of the public men of his country. His daughter, desiring to learn practical housekeeping, decided, with her father's consent, to start at the bottom of the ladder. Therefore, she went to Berlin and took a position as cook at a modest stipend at the home of a small government employe. Her employer for a long time had no suspicion that the cook was a daughter of a minister of state.

Italian Born Dublin Mayor.

Joseph Nannetti, recently reelected lord mayor of Dublin, has sat in parliament since 1900. He is the son of an Italian modeler and was educated in Dublin. Mayor Nannetti is in his fifty-seventh year.

TWO YEARS IN BED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Stubborn Rheumatism When Other Treatment Gave No Relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been curing the most stubborn cases of rheumatism for nearly a generation and thousands of grateful patients have given testimony that cannot be ignored.

Mr. Robert Odhert, a machinist, living at 201 Cameron Street, Detroit, Mich., had a very distressing experience with rheumatism for about two years. He makes the following statement: "About the year 1887 I felt the effects of rheumatism which gradually grew worse until I was compelled to give up work for a time. The years of '97 and '98 I was confined to my bed most of the time. I was under doctors' treatment but found no relief. My legs were swollen from the hips downward and red blotches appeared all over them. Frequently they pained me so that I had to bind them tightly with strips of linen. This sometimes relieved the pain but at other times failed to do so. At times I had to crawl to my work, using two crutches. During these spells I suffered greatly from pain around my heart which I attributed to the rheumatism.

"At last my mother wrote me and asked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did and in a short time I found myself getting better and have had no trouble since. I may here add that I consider myself perfectly cured. I have not had the least sign of the disease since and feel better now than I ever did. For these reasons I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any one affected the same as I was."

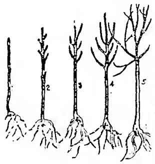
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

HORTICULTURE

PRUNING TREES AT SETTING.

The Work Can Be Done More Rapidly at That Time.

Some interesting information relative to the different methods of pruning peach trees at time of setting are given in bulletin on "Suggestions on the Renewal of the Peach Industry in New Jersey," by G. F. Warren. Our illustration is made from a photograph reproduced in this bulletin. Prof. Warren points out that all pruning before setting can be done most rapidly before the trees are set in the ground. The trees may be pruned, have borers removed and be dipped in lime, sulphur and salt and then heeled in again to set for time of planting.



Pruning Peach Trees to Enhance Vitality.

In order to see what effect this system of pruning might have on the growth of trees, it is reported that 80 Mountain Rose trees were divided into four lots. Different methods of pruning were as follows:

Lot 1 were pruned to whips.

Lot 2 were pruned so that about five stubs were left, each about one inch long so that there was one bud on each side branch.

Lot 3 were pruned so that five stubs were left, each stub being about three inches long.

Lot 4 were pruned so that one-third of the top of each tree was removed by cutting the tips of the twigs off. By this method the heads were left almost as they were when they came from the nursery.

Lot 5, as shown in the illutsration, was left unpruned.

The result of the test as reported by Prof. Warren shows that the severe pruning proved to be the most successful. It was found that of the 20 trees pruned to whips 18 were found to make good growth on June 1, while two were making a fair growth.

Lot 2, which were pruned to one inch tops had 17 making good growth on June 1, and three making fair growth.

In lot 3, which were pruned to three-inch stubs, on June1, it was found that 18 were making good growth with two reported fair.

In the lot where one-third of the top was left it was found that on June 1 only 11 were making good growth, six were making fair growth, two were reported making very poor growth and one was found to be dead.

It is concluded from this experience that pretty severe pruning is necessary to the trees before being set out in order to insure good growth. It is not found that the trees were injured by being healed after pruning, waiting suitable time for planting.

SUN BETTER THAN SHADE.

The Reason Why Trees Are Not Desirable Along Roads.

Concerning trees for the roadside, my advice is, that the less trees on the roadside the better for the roads, either in summer or winter, writes a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer. One reason is, that in summer they shade the roads too much in rainy weather, thereby keeping the roads wet too long where there is too much shade, while the other parts of the road dry up quickly. In winter, where there are trees on the roads, the snow accumulates, piles up too much in windy weather, making it difficult and sometimes dangerous to travel, and takes longer in the springtime to thaw away and consequently keeps the roads much longer in bad condition than if otherwise were the case. I agree, however, with the suggestion that on a 160-acre farm, ten acres should be devoted to trees.

Not All Lost.

If the cold, driving winds of the past winter have killed back the tops of your peach trees, do not despair. Use the pruning shears expediently; cut back as far as the wood appears to be killed. Chances are fair that the trees will then form a much better top and bear more fruit than in any previous year. Their newly-formed tops grow thriftily and very productively, says Farm Journal. You must go after them as early as possible in the spring, otherwise they will very likely pine away and die with the coming of the growing season.

Too Late Now.

It's late to prune grapevines. The work ought to have been done last November, or during a mild spell in February. If done now the vines will bleed.

RENEWING OLD ORCHARDS.

How Pruning and Cultivation Will Give New Life to Trees.

Altogether the most profitable orchards are those set in recent times, or at least put out in the modern method. They are composed of strong, healthy, vigorous trees which practically cover the ground and among which there are no blanks. On many farms, however, there are smaller or larger tracts of old orchard, many of which are worthless and many more of which are not distinctly profitable. Some of these old orchards could be rejuvenated. They could be brought into reasonably good bearing and to a point where they would really pay a profit. Now the rejuvenation of an old orchard is a fairly simple matter, providing it is properly understood, says Country Gentleman. The important point is that it does not consist in the application of any single patent remedy. Spraying will not do the work; pruning will not cure all the troubles; tillage alone will be worth very little; the only way to get the desired result is to apply proper methods all along the line. The soil should be loosened up and proper drainage provided. The trunks should be scraped clean and spread with copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture. Old dead limbs should be cut out. A reasonable but not excessive pruning should be given. Thorough spraying should be undertaken. In case the trees are of mixed or unprofitable varieties, they should be regrafted to standard sorts. It is not likely that additional plant food will be required at first, except on soils very much depleted. An orchard taken vigorously in hand in the matter of tillage, pruning and spraying is apt to start into a strong growth at once; and if a good deal of raw fertilizer is applied, there may easily be more growth than is desirable. However, one must keep his eyes open, and in case the trees show the want of more food, it should be given. It is really a comparatively easy matter, if all these things are systematically attended to, to bring an old orchard round. It requires from two to five years to do it, depending on the condition of things when the matter is taken in hand.

RASPBERRIES FOR HOME USE.

Every Farmer Should Have His Berry Patch.

No farmer is doing his full duty to his family if he neglects to set at least four long rows of raspberries for home use. Four rows, because he needs four varieties, two of which should be black and two red, an early and a late of each.

Set them in the spring on freshly prepared land by laying it off with a shovel plow and setting 2½ feet apart in the bottom of the furrow. Tramp the dirt firmly on the roots. Make the rows as long as the needs of the family may require.

Locate the patch out in the open where cultivation may be easily given, for which the ordinary corn plows are well adapted, suggests Farm and Home. They will not bear the first year, and only a part of the crop the second, but for from six to ten years after that the crop is almost certain. After the second year a six-inch mulch of straw each season will make cultivation unnecessary and the only work required will be an annual trimming. This may be done when the plant is dormant, but preferably in the winter or in early spring.

Orchard and Garden.

If the garden plot is not naturally well-drained, make plans for draining it.

It is surprising how few farmers make a practice of spraying their fruits and vegetables.

In spraying use plenty of liquid and put it on thoroughly. Use too much rather than too little.

Keep an eye on the strawberry bed. If winds blow the mulch off in spots, replace it at once.

In western New York buckwheat as a cover crop is the standard of fertilization for apple orchards. It really works wonderful results.

Why do we not spend more time digging weeds before our crops are swamped by them, and less in mourning because we had such a light yield at harvest time?

Time to Spray.

Fruit growers should spray their fruit trees in March, before buds swell, for fungous troubles such as peach leaf-curl, scab of pear and apple, fruit rot, etc. The Bordeaux mixture is the standard fungicide. (But, remember, lime-sulphur is also a fungicide; so if you use it for San Jose on your trees you will not need the early spray of Bordeaux.)

The Strawberry Bed.

Somebody asks: "Shall I cultivate or hoe my strawberry bed this spring?" To this the Farm and Home says: As a rule, no. The bed should have been clean when it was "laid by" last fall. Any weeds which push through the mulch should be pulled out by hand.

Planting Pears.

Pears can be planted closer than apples. A convenient distance is 15x20 feet. These can be thinned to 30x20 feet when time shall require. This will be all the thinning necessary, as pears tend to reach up rather than laterally.

A Way to Save Money.

A good fruit garden saves money and doctors' bills, drives away the blues and sweetens up the home.

A Big Bargain for 12 Cents Postpaid.

The year of 1906 was one of prodigal plenty on our seed farms. Never before did vegetable and farm seeds return such enormous yields.

Now we wish to gain 200,000 new customers this year and hence offer for 12c postpaid

1 pkg.	Garden City Beet	10c
1 "	Earliest Ripe Cabbage	10c
1 "	Earliest Emerald Cucumber	15c
1 "	La Crosse Market Lettuce	15c
1 "	13 Day Radish	10c
1 "	Blue Blood Tomato	15c
1 "	Juicy Turnip	10c
1000	kernels gloriously beautiful flower seeds	15c
	Total	$1.00

All for 12c postpaid in order to introduce our warranted seeds, and if you will send 16c we will add one package of Berliner Earliest Cauliflower, together with our mammoth plant, nursery stock, vegetable and farm seed and tool catalog.

This catalog is mailed free to all intending purchasers. Write to-day.

John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box W, La Crosse, Wis.

Detective's Parable.

Hilary K. Adair, the well-known detective, was complimented in Galveston, Tex., on an arrest that he had made. The arrest had been mysteriously achieved and Mr. Adair was asked to explain it. This, though, he refused to do.

"There are so many ways of catching criminals," he said, laughing. "You know what the old man told his wife? She first said to him:

"'Don't talk, John. You can't say I ever ran after you.'

"'True,' the old man assented. 'And you can't say the trap ever runs after the mouse, either, but it gathers him in just the same.'"

DURING THIS MONTH.

Excellent Advice Which Our Readers Will Benefit By.

Now is the time to get the rheumatic poisons and foul acids from the blood and system, states an eminent authority, who says that Rheumatism and Kidney trouble are caused by the blood, which often becomes sour from excessive acids, and also tells what to do to make it pure and healthy.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Just try this simple blood cleaner and tonic at the first sign of Rheumatism, or if your back aches or you feel that the Kidneys are not acting right. Any one can easily prepare this mixture at home.

BUTTON THEIR OWN WAISTS.

New York Women Have Surmounted Great Obstacle.

Marvelous as it may seem, New York women have lately discovered a way of fastening their waists up the back without calling for assistance. Thought not lacking in generosity, they became so tired of the outstretched palm of the chambermaids that they now feel that it is time to guard their pockets. The Gotham woman discovered that if she put her blouse on hind side before, with the sleeves hanging free, it could be fastened from top to bottom, with the exception of the hooks at the neck, and then turned around and the arms slipped into the sleeves without unduly straining the fastenings. So simple! So strange that no one had thought of it before. Or is it possible other women have used the plan and meanly kept it to themselves? Will the waist that buttons in the back now have a new lease of life?

Coincident Inventions.

Almost at the same time two different inventors in different places have announced their success with electrical devices for seeing at a distance. They are J. B. Fowler and William H. Thompson. In Fowler's device four wires are required to accomplish the combined effect of distant vision and hearing. Details of the operation are withheld, however, on the plea of getting out a patent. Each inventor uses the name "Televue."

GOOD NATURED AGAIN.

Good Humor Returns with Change to Proper Food.

"For many years I was a constant sufferer from indigestion and nervousness amounting almost to prostration," writes a Montana man.

"My blood was impoverished, the vision was blurred and weak, with moving spots before my eyes. This was a steady daily condition. I grew ill-tempered, and eventually got so nervous I could not keep my books posted, nor handle accounts satisfactorily. I can't describe my sufferings.

"Nothing I ate agreed with me, till one day I happened to notice Grape-Nuts in a grocery store and bought a package, out of curiosity to know what it was.

"I liked the food from the very first, eating it with cream, and now I buy it by the case and use it daily. I soon found that Grape-Nuts food was supplying brain and nerve force as nothing in the drug line ever had done or could do.

"It wasn't long before I was restored to health, comfort and happiness. Through the use of Grape-Nuts food my digestion had been restored, my nerves are steady once more, my eyesight is good again, my mental faculties are clear and acute, and I have become so good-natured that my friends are truly astonished at the change. I feel younger and better than I have for 20 years. No amount of money would induce me to surrender what I have gained through the use of Grape-Nuts food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason." Read the little book, "The road to Wellville," in pkgs.

MAN OF DELICATE NERVES.

Rosenthal, the Pianist, Made Much Trouble in Hotel.

Rosenthal, the pianist, is one of those entitled to have his crankiness termed "the eccentricities of genius," says the San Francisco Chronicle. When he inspected his rooms at the Majestic upon his arrival very late the other night, he went softly to the adjoining doors, and placing his ears close to the cracks, exclaimed in broken English, "Zgodd, no sounds pass thees." After nodding his approval of the grand piano and the furniture he frowned at the tan-colored window shades. "Must be green." He was assured that a change would be made especially for him the next day.

At five o'clock in the morning Rosenthal, clad only in his pajamas, came scurrying excitedly down stairs and into the office, where the drowsy night clerk was nodding at the desk.

"Ze street cars! Noise! Must stopped! Nervous me! I cannot sleep."

The clerk hurriedly sent for Manager Gustav Mann, and Mann spent two hours telling Rosenthal funny stories in German trying to divert his mind while the clerk was upstairs squaring the management for waking a guest on the Gough street side and ordering him to move at once to the Sutter street side as a gas pipe had burst under the floor and had to be repaired!

A Natural Remedy—Garfield Tea! It is made of simple Herbs. Take it for constipation, indigestion, sick-headache; it regulates the liver, purifies the blood, brings Good Health.

The average woman makes a strenuous effort to discover her husband's faults for the purpose of hiding them from other people.

People appreciate the delicate taste and natural action of Garfield Tea, the mild herb laxative. Best for liver, kidneys and bowels. Guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Law.

Isn't it strange that men who brag always brag about something that doesn't interest you in the least?

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

To forgive a fault in another is more sublime than to be faultless one's self.—George Sand.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

It's about all some people can do to keep from being done.

PE-RU-NA A MEDICAL COMPOUND

In any medical compound as much depends upon the manner in which it is compounded as upon the ingredients used.

First, there must be a due proportion of the ingredients. Each drug in the pharmacopeia has its special action. To combine any drug with other drugs that have slightly different action, the combination must be made with strict reference to the use for which the compound is intended. The drugs may be well selected as to their efficacy, but the compound ENTIRELY SPOILED BY THE PROPORTION in which they are combined.

It takes years and years of experience to discover this proportion. There is no law of chemistry, of pharmacy, by which the exact balance of proportion can be determined. EXPERIENCE IS THE ONLY GUIDE.

In compounding a catarrh remedy Dr. Hartman has had many years' experience. In the use of the various ingredients which compose the catarrh remedy, Peruna, he has learned, little by little, how to harmonize the action of each ingredient, how to combine them into a stable compound, how to arrange them into such nice proportions as to blend the taste, the operation and the chemical peculiarities of each several ingredient in order to produce a pharmaceutical product beyond the criticism of doctors, pharmacists or chemists.

WE REPEAT, THAT AS MUCH DEPENDS ON THE WAY IN WHICH THE DRUGS ARE COMBINED AS DEPENDS UPON THE DRUGS THEMSELVES.

The compound must present a stability which is not affected by changes of temperature, not affected by exposure to the air, not affected by age. It must be so combined that it will remain just the same whether used in the logging or mining camps of the northwest or the coffee plantations of the tropics.

A complete list of the ingredients of Peruna would not enable any druggist or physician to reproduce Peruna. It is the skill and sagacity by which these ingredients are brought together that give Peruna much of its peculiar claims as an efficacious catarrh remedy.

However much virtue each ingredient of Peruna may possess, the value of the compound depends largely upon the manner and proportion in which they are combined. The right ingredients, put together rightly, is the only way a medical compound can be made of real value.

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature
Brent Good
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

DO YOU BURN KEROSENE?

If so get one-third more light with a "BINO GLASS CONE LAMP BURNER," The glass top does it. They are great—fit common lamps. Send your dealers name to-day and 25c for a BINO—size No. 1 or 2 post paid.
BING BURNER CO.
Dept. 44, Minneapolis, Minn.

A. N. K.—G (1907—13) 2171.

MOTHERS
Of Skin Tortured Disfigured Babies

Warm Baths With Cuticura SOAP
And gentle anointings with Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure of torturing, disfiguring eczemas, rashes, itchings, and irritations of infants and children when all else fails. Guaranteed absolutely pure, and may be used from the hour of birth.
Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; India, B. K. Paul, Calcutta; China, Hong Kong Drug Co.; Japan, Maruya, Ltd., Tokio; Russia, Ferrein (Apteka), Moscow; South Africa, Lennon, Ltd., Cape Town, etc.; U.S.A., Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.
Post-free, Cuticura Book on Care of the Skin.

Canadian Government Free Farms
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
Over 200,000 American farmers who have settled in Canada during the past few years testify to the fact that Canada is, beyond question, the greatest farming land in the world.
OVER NINETY MILLION BUSHELS
of wheat from the harvest of 1906 means good money to the farmers of Western Canada when the world has to be fed. Cattle Raising, Dairying and Mixed Farming are also profitable callings. Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access. Taxes low.
For advice and information address the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent. CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

FREE To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.
PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT. THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

PATENTS THERE'S MONEY IN SMALL INVENTIONS as well as large. Send for free booklet. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., 900 14th Street, Washington, D. C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. Established 1864.
NO PATENT, NO FEE FOR OUR SERVICES

MRS. A. M. HAGERMANN

ALL WOMEN SUFFER
from the same physical disturbances, and the nature of their duties, in many cases, quickly drift them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, organic troubles, ulceration, falling and displacements, or perhaps irregularity or suppression causing backache, nervousness, irritability, and sleeplessness.
Women everywhere should remember that the medicine that holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female ills is made from simple native roots and herbs. For more than thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, regulating the functions perfectly and overcoming pain. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for child-birth and the Change of Life.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
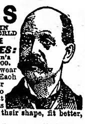
Mrs. A. M. Hagermann, of Bay Shore, L. I., writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"I suffered from a displacement, excessive and painful functions so that I had to lie down or sit still most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman so that I am able to attend to my duties. I wish every suffering woman would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see what relief it will give them."
Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women
Women suffering from any form of female illness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Therefore she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health.

Man's First Thought is of Home
His Second Thought Ought to be of
Masury's House Paints
They will preserve and keep intact the materials of which his home is built for a much longer period than the uncertain mixtures so generally offered for sale, and they hold their original appearance years after other paints have vanished. They are known as the house paints that live the longest. During Sixty-five Years They Have Never Failed. It's economy and good judgment to insist upon Masury's House Paints, made by
JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD
W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE
SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.
W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.
W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere.
Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.



INSTITUTE A CONTEST

Prizes to be Distributed Among Patrons of Red Lake Falls Creamery.

A unique contest has been instituted by the Red Lake Falls creamery association which promises to be a popular one with the patrons of the institution. The contest has as its object both the securing of additional patrons for the creamery and the promotion of interest in the most up-to-date methods of farming, and as an incentive to contestants, substantial cash prizes have been offered, the money for which has been secured by a subscription list which was circulated recently among the business men of this city. The citizens were not slow in recognizing the value of such a contest and as a result enough money was subscribed to assure the carrying out of the project in every detail as far as necessary funds were concerned.

The project is instituted under the head of "A Fodder Corn and Root Crop Contest for the Season of 1907," and is open tn all farmers who will bring their cream to the local creamery throughout the season of 1907-08, up to Morch 1, 1908. The conditions of this contest are made with the object of benefitting all who wish to participate by promoting their interest in dairying, and the prizes offered are large enough to make them well worth striving for.

The prizes offered are as follows:

For ten acres fodder corn, first prize [illegible], second prize $15.00, third prize $10.00.

For five acres fodder corn, first prize $10.00, second prize $5.00.

For one acre mangles, first prize [illegible] second prize $10.00, third prize $5.00.

For one acre stock carrots, first prize [illegible], second prize $10.00, third prize [illegible].

Church Announcement.

In connection with the close of the Hamilton-Bursk meetings the following special Sundays have been planned for at the Presbyterian church by Rev. Herbert W. Knox, the pastor:

April 7—Revival Day. Close of the two weeks revival.

April 14—Church Day. Public reception of members into the church, with a "Charge on the duties of the Christian life."

April 21—Communion Day. Observance of the Lord's Supper.

April 28—Covenant Day. Baptism of infant children.

Special music is being arranged for every service during the month. The "Sunbeam Choir" and the Young Peoples' Chorus will sing at both services each Sunday. The families living in the country are specially urged to be present.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The [illegible] of the sudden death of [illegible] Murray, founder of the [illegible] at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the [illegible] of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Core Institote 1119 Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargn, N. D.

Make Tour of Inspection.

A number of Great Northern officials came up over the Greenbush line Saturday in the general superintendent's private car, which was attached to the local passenger. The officials were on a tour of inspection and went up to Greenbush, the end of the line where a short conference was held in regard to the Greenbush-Warroad extension which the Great Northern is preparing to push to completion in the near future. While nothing definite could be learned indications point to commencement of construction work as soon as possible and it is believed the Greenbush line will be in operation clear thru to Warroad by the coming fall. Other roads are building into the country which would be tapped by this line and in view of this fact it is hardly probable that Jim Hill will long remain idle before going after his share of the business. The inspection party of last Saturday was composed of General Superintendent E. L. Brown, Division Superintendent T. F. Lowry, General Road Master T. Conlin, Division Road Master John Laughlin and Master Carpenter E. A. Mills.

Stereopticon Lecture on the Passion Play.

At the Presbyterian church on Saturday night, Mr. John R. Bursk will give an illustrated lecture on the Life of Christ as shown in the Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau in Germany. The views will be shown twice during the evening; once for children and once for adults. The first lecture will begin at 7:30 p. m. at which time the doors will be closed, and no one admitteb during the lecture. The doors will be open for the second lecture at 8:15 p. m. and the lecture will begin at 8:30. There will be a silver collection taken at each lecture for the expenses of the lecture and for the local expenses of the revival meetings. Everybody welcome.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th, A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche
Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota.
m28-m9

District Court Grind.

As we went to press last week the case of Brohman vs Singer was before the court having been brought up on an appeal from the justice court. The jury brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff awarding damages to the amount of $31.50.

In the case of Jac Kiewel Brewing Co. vs Mary Zeh; on motion of plaintiff case is dismissed without prejudice to bringing another action.

Frank Grady vs Joseph Horace Corbiel; case taken under advisement by the court.

Peter K. Olson vs. Louis Sieff; case will go over to be tried at the July term.

On Friday the court adjourned until Wednesday when the case of R. B. Hamilton, the Soo brakeman, on the charge of rape was taken up.

Last evening the court heard the case of the State of Minnesota vs. Minnie Smith and Fred Hannebohl, on the charge of keeping a disorderly house at Thief River Falls. The defendants were each fined $200 and costs which were paid this morning. Myrtle Monroe and Tom Butler, of the same place, who were also indicted under the same charge, have decided that the "skidoo" act was popular at this time, and the sheriff has been unable to locate them up to date.

In the matter of the State vs. Blackey, indictment for accepting a bribe, the case was set over to the October term on account of State being unable to secure desired witnesses at this time. Akerman, who was indicted for giving a bribe has not been located.

The Hamilton rape case is occupying the attention of the court today behind closed doors and will probably last all doy tomorrow.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Subscribe for The Gazette.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the som of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof.

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal som of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Coort House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche
Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn.
mar21-m 2

Last Indoor Concert

The date for the April band concert has been set for Friday, April 26th, and as this is the last indoor concert of the season of 1907-08 a special effort will be made to make it the biggest and best of the winter's course. The concert will also take the form of a farewell party or reception in honor of Messrs. L. P. Berthon and J. B Armstrong, as it will probably be their last appearance in the concerts at the Metropolitan opera house. As the band boys are not slow in showing their appreciation to those who have assisted in making the Red Lake Falls Concert band one of the best in the middle west, the occasion promises to be an exceptionally brilliant one from a social point of view.

Carman No More.

The Great Northern has changed the name of the town of Carman, the railroad station one mile south of Crookston to Red Land, the change evidently being made to avoid confusion in names as there is a town named Carman, Manitoba, located on the Canadian Pacific Ry., thru which the new line of the G. N. Ry., from Neche, N. D., to Portage la Prairie runs. Carman was named by the Great Northern before the name of Crookston was heard of, and a townsite by that name platted. By an act of the legislature March 7, 1887, however, Carman was made a part of Crookston and the name Carman since that time while applied in general to that section of Crookston was correctly applied only as the name of the Great Northern station south of the city limits at which all trains stop and register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Mar. 7, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that Richmond Desotel of Terrebonne, Minn., has filed notice of his intention to make final five year proof in support of his claim, viz:

Homestead entry No. 22931, made March 21, 1902, for the SE¼NE¼ Section 21, Township 150 N., Range 43 W., and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on April 17, 1907.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, the land, viz:

Harmidas Sauve, Arthur Archambault, Joseph St. Martin and Louis Teroup, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

R. J. Montague, Register.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by L. A. Dautremont and Laura E. Dautremont, his wife, mortgagors, to Phil A. Kaufer, mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota on 12th day of September, 1903, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., in book 21 of mortgages on page 168, by the terms of which mortgage the following described premises were described in, mortgaged and conveyed to said mortgagee, to-wit: Lots nine (9), ten (10), and the north ten (10) feet of lot eleven (11), in block seven (7) in Champagne and Dow's addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the corrected plat thereof, being in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 9th day of September in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note; by failure to pay the $1000 falling due on the 9th day of September, 1904 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the year 1905, and whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay said note or any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable;

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon to the date hereof the som of one thousand one hundred eighteen dollars, ($1118.00.)

And Whereas, because of said defaults and each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the west front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls, in said county, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1907, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the attorney's fees of $25.00 and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Dated Feb. 26, 1907.

—Phil A. Kaufer,
Mortgagee.

Chas. E. Boughton,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls.
f28-a4

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.
Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats
Fish and Game in Season.
Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.
TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout
Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY
Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City
W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Minnesota Historical Society

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, APRIL 11, 1907 No 28

QUIETLY PASSED AWAY

Katherine Winifred Cushing Died Saturday Morning, April The Sixth.

On Saturday morning of last week, at 7:15, Katherine Winifred Cushing quietly passed away, at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain, in this city, being a victim of consumption.

Katherine Cushing was born at New Ulm, Minnesota, November 6th, 1882, and died April 6th, 1907, having reached the age of twenty-four years and six months on the day of her death.

The death of Miss Cushing was an exceptionally sad one, inasmuch as it had been her mission to minister to the wants of the afflicted, and it was while in performance of this noble work in a hospital in Wisconsin that she contracted the disease which later was to take her to that bourne from which no traveler returns.

Symptoms of the malady were first noticed about thirteen months past, and, despite the aid of excellent medical treatment, grew apace, until last August when she was induced to come to this city in hopes that the change would prove beneficial. For a while there was a marked improvement, but in December she contracted a severe attack of the lagrippe, during which the dread ravages of the white plague had gained such headway that it left her broken in both body and spirit. A brave and valiant fight was made for her life by those near and dear, and although every effort was made for her relief until the last, it soon became apparent to all there could be but one result—death, which came to relieve her upon the 6th inst.

Short services were held at the Chamberlain home Saturday afternoon. Saturday evening the body, accompanied by Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain and Elizabeth Cushing, was taken to New Ulm, where funeral services were held Monday from the Congregational church and the remains interred in the cemetery at that place.

The Gazette joins with the community in extending their heartfelt sympathy to those who loved her, in this, their hour of bereavement.

RAILROAD EXTENSIONS

Several Roads Are Beginning To Prepare For Work On Their Extensions.

Extension work of the several railrords carrying on improvements in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin is now progressing in good shape. The contractors for the Soo, the Wisconsin Central, the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg, the Minnesota & International, and the Great Northern are all preparing to rush their contracts through in the shortest possible space of time this spring and summer.

It is expected that in a few weeks the work of laying the track from Greenbush, Minn., on the completed grade of the Great Northern to Roseau and Warroad, will begin. It is also understood that the Great Northern is taking steps to extend this line to International Falls and that a preliminary survey between these points will be made before the frost leaves the ground. For the past year there has been considerable talk about the Great Northern building from Warroad to International Falls, and it is believed that a contract for this extension will be awarded this summer.

The Minnesota & International bridge across the Big Fork river at Big Falls is practically completed, and trains are being run across it with construction material for work on the other side of the river. It is thought that the track will be laid to Little Fork by the middle of April, and the Northern Minnesota Navigation company will have its steamer Itasca in shape to take care of the passenger and freight business that will pass that way until the road is completed to International Falls.—Duluth Herald.

For Sale.

One 22 shoe Dowagatc drill, as good as new, 1 Jones mower and rake, 1 John Deere gang plow, 1 riding cultivator. Will be sold at a bargain if taken at once. Inquire of F. C. Westhpal, Red Lake Falls.

DEAD PETITION STOLEN TO AROUSE SYMPATHY OF PEOPLE

Thief River Committee Realized That the County Seat Petition Was Doomed and Kidnapped Corpse to Create Sentiment In Their Favor.

"Murder will out." is an old proverb which has proven true so often that there has long since been established a dread superstition among the members of the criminal profession that the eye of justice was omnipresent, and is not dimmed by lock nor key, nor the deep darkness of the blackest night.

That the old proverb is substantially true has been proven by recent developments in connection with the disappearance of the much lamented county seat petition, and which, it now develops was saved from the potters field by a clever ruse on the part of the high salaried, graft-fattened "county-seat committee" of Thief River Falls.

Realizing that the end was near for the $16,000 pap-fed county seat petition fraud, which had been perpetrated upon the inspecting citizens of the up-river burg, and not having enough left of that magnificent county seat fund to provide for a respectable "wake," the aforesaid committee conceived the idea of kidnapping their pet offspring and reaping their reward by the awakening of a flood of sympathy in the hearts of the people of the county and being able to secure the ready signatures of a host of voters to a new petition, by laying the dastardly deed at the door of Red Lake Falls citizens.

Accordingly a "Pat Crowe" was selected from their midst, who selecting a favorable opportunity and with a skill worthy of his craft, abstracted the petition corpse from its resting place in the county vaults, fled with it to a remote and secluded spot and having succeeded in secreting it from the eyes of the world, passed the word to his partners in crime who immediately set up the cry of "stop thief," and pointed the accusing finger of righteous (?) indignation toward Red Lake Falls.

That it was a cleverly worked out plan, and seems to some extent to be having the desired effect, we will not deny, but to every fair minded citizen there arises the question: "WHY SHOULD RED LAKE FALLS WANT THAT PETITION?"

Red Lake Falls had no desire whatsoever to have the county seat petition disappear, but would have been only to well pleased to have it appear at a regular meeting of the county board, for we have more than enough withdrawals to prove its illegality, and furthermore, there is not a citizen in Red Lake Falls but who well knew that any such move on our part would only act as a boomerang and prove detrimental to our cause.

Red Lake Falls is not playing to the galleries for sympathy—we simply want a fair consideration of the case, and, getting it, do not feel alarmed over the result.

The question at present is:

WILL THE CONTEMPTUOUS TRICK OF THE THIEF RIVER COMMITTEE WORK?

The ruse is too plain to fool the people whose sympathies are appealed to. We believe that Thief River will have to invent another game.

The Class Play of '07, the "Sweet Girl Graduates" has been postponed from tomorrow evening to Aprill 19 th. Don't forget the date.

WE WILL PLAY BALL

Local Fans Are Making Arrangements to Get Into the Game. With a Winning Team.

The base ball fans throughout the valley are showing the effects of the on-coming spring by getting together in their respective towns and laying plans for the organization of a number of fast squads for the coming season. Considerable enthusiasm has been aroused over the idea of organizing an amateur league among the different towns taking in Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Warren, Hallock, Thief River, Ada and perhaps Stephen and Argyle. All of the towns mentioned are noted for putting up fast teams in the past and should the league proposition be carried thru, the fans of the valley can look forward to one of the best seasons in base ball circles in this section.

Red Lake Falls is already making active preparations to put one of the fastest teams in the field during the history of the diamond in this city. Red Lake has always been noted for having a bunch of fast ball players and the material in sight gives promise of a better team being brought together this season than for some years past.

Negotiations are underway for the securing of a crack battery, which is the only point at which the team is short at this time, and when the season opens the other towns of the valley will find us in the field with a team that will make them all go some.

Assessors will Meet.

The various township assessors of Red Lake county will meet in the offices of County Auditor J. B. O'Brien, on Thursday, April 25th, to receive their assessor's books and such instructions as are usually given by the county auditor relative to making the official tax estimates. There will be over thirty assessors who will be expected to attend the meeting. After receiving their full instructions they will at once begin the work of assessing the real and personal property in their individual townships and villages.

HAMILTON ACQUITTED

District Court Wound Up Spring Session Last Friday Afternoon.

Last Thursday afternoon the case of R. B. Hamilton, on trial under the charge of rape committed on the person of Miss Annie Christenson, of Viking, was turned over to the jury at 3 o'clock. After being out eight and one-half hours the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Hamilton was also indicted under the charge of indecent assault. On Friday the court held a hearing in the matter and the defendant was bound over to the October term of court under $1000 bonds. By request Hamilton was taken to Thief River where bail was furnished and the prisoner released from the custody of the sheriff.

The case of Jarman vs. county board of commissioners. was dismissed for want of prosecution, the plaintiff not appearing.

Myrtle Monroe, indicted under the charge of keeping a house of ill fame, at Thief River Falls, appeared before the court, plead guilty, and was fined $200. Tom Butler, also plead guilty to running a disorderly house at the up-river town, and was called upon to pay a $200 fine. Both parties paid their fines and immediately left for more genial surroundings—Thief River Falls. This makes $800 in fines paid by the "red light" district of Thief River at this term of court.

County Attorney Germo has been very successful in bringing criminals to justice during this term and it is probable that they will not lay themselves open to prosecution again for some time to come.

The court adjourned Friday, to convene again on July 9th, when a special term will be held for the purpose of issuing citizens papers.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

BERTHON & ARMSTRONG

Leading Men and Boys Clothing Outfitters

WE HAVE SOME LEFT

We still have some great bargains in Boys' Suits. Of course the lots are broken in sizes, but we may be able to fit your boy.

Boys' $6.00 Suits for........ $4.35

Boys' $5.00 Suits for........ 3.85

Boys' $5.00, $4.00 and $3.50 suits, assorted styles and sizes, to close out........ 1.98

Boys' high top, heavy storm, box calf for spring wear........ $1.98

Boys' School Shoes box calf at........ 1.68

Nice line of Boys' Furnishings, Hats, Caps, Shirts, Collars, ties ....

JIM & PAUL

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

It was this earlier teaching that the faithful of Amalon clung to, perhaps not a little by reason that immediately over them was a spiritual guide who had been trained from infancy to know that salvation lay in belief,—never in doubt. For a sign of the end they believed that on the night before the day of it there would be no darkness. This would be as it had been before the birth of the Savior, as told in the Book of Mormon: "At the going down of the sun there was no darkness, and the people began to be astonished because there was no darkness when the night came; and there was no darkness in all that night, but it was as light as if it were midday."

They talked of little but this matter in that small pocket of the intermountain commonwealth, in Sabbath meetings and around the hearths at night. The Wild Ram of the Mountains thought all proselyting should cease in view of the approaching end; that the Elders on mission should withdraw from the vineyard, shake the dust from their feet, and seal up the rebellious Gentiles to damnation. To this Elder Bell Wardle had replied, somewhat testily:

"Well, now, since these valleys of Ephraim have got a little fattened a whole lot of us have got the sweeny, and our skins are growing too tight on our flesh." He had been unable to comprehend that the Gentiles were a rejected lot, the lost sheep of the house of Israel. On this occasion it had required all the tact of Elder Rae to soothe the two good men into an amicable discussion of the time when Sidney Rigdon went to the third heaven and talked face to face with God. They had agreed in the end, however, that they were both of the royal seed of Abraham, and were on the grand turnpike to exaltation.

To these discussions and sermons the child, Prudence, listened with intense interest, looking forward to the last day as an occasion productive of excitement even superior to that of her trips to Salt Lake City, where her father went to attend the October conference, and where she was taken to the theater.

One day in this spring when she was 14, the good Bishop Wright, on his way down from Box canyon with a load of wood, saw her striding up the road ahead of him. Something caught his eye, either in her step which had a child's careless freedom, or in the lines of her swinging figure that told of coming womanhood, or in the flashing, laughing appeal of her dark eyes where for the moment both woman and child looked out. He set the brake on his wagon and waited for her to pass. She came by with a smile and a word of greeting, to which his rapt attention prevented any reply except a slight nod. When she had passed, he turned and looked after her until she had gone around the little hill on the road that entered the canyon.

After the early evening meal that day, along the many-roomed house of this good man, from door to door there ran the words, starting from her who had last been sealed to him:

"He's making himself all proud!"

They knew what it meant, and wondered whom.

A little later the Bishop set out, his face clean shaven to the ruffle of white whiskers that ran under his chin from ear to ear, his scant hair smooth and shining with grease from the largest bear ever trapped in the Pine mountains, and his tall form arrayed in his best suit of homespun. As he went he trolled an ancient lay of love, and youth was in his step. For there had come all day upon this Prince of Israel those subtle essences distilled by spring to provoke the mating urge. At the Rae house he found only Christina.

"Where's Brother Joel, Sister Rae?"

"Himself has gone out there," Christina had answered with a wave of her hand, and using the term of respect which she always applied to her husband.

He went around the house, out past the stable and corrals and across the irrigating ditch to where he saw Joel Rae leaning on the rail fence about the peach orchard. Far down between two rows of the blossoming trees he could see the girl reaching up to break off a pink-sprayed bough. He quickened his pace and was soon at the fence.

"Brother—Joel,—I—the—"

The good man had been full of his message a moment before, but now he stampered and hesitated because of something cold in the other's eye as it seemed to note the unwonted elegance of his attire. He took a quick breath and went on.

"You see the Lord has moved me to add another star to my crown."

"I see; and you have come to get me to seal you?"

"Well, of course I hadn't thought of it so soon, but if you want to do it to-night—"

"As soon as you like, Bishop,—the sooner the better if you are to save the soul of another women against the day of desolation. Where is she?" and he turned to go back to the house. But the Bishop still paused, looking toward the orchard.

"Well, the fact is, Brother Joel, you see the Lord has made me feel to have Prudence for another star in my crown of glory—your daughter Prudence," he repeated as the other gazed at him with a sudden change of manner.

"My daughter Prudence—little Prue—that child—that baby?"

"Baby—she's 14; she was telling my daughter Mattie so jest the other day, and the Legislature has made the marrying age 12 for girls and 15 for boys, so she's two years overtime already. Of course, I ain't 15, but I'm safer for her than some young cub."

"But Bishop—you don't consider—"

"Oh, of course, I know there's been private talk about her; nobody knows who her mother was, and they say whoever she was you was never married to her, so she couldn't have been born right, but I ain't bigoted like some I could name, and I stand ready to be her Savior on Mount Zion."

He waited with something of noble concession in his mien.

The other seemed only now to have fully sensed the proposal, and, with real terror in his face, he began to urge the Bishop toward the house, after looking anxiously back to where the child still lingered with the mist of pink blossoms against the leafless boughs above her.

"Come, Brother Seth—come, I beg of you—we'll talk of it—but it can't be, indeed it can't!"

"Let's ask her," suggested the Bishop, disinclined to move.

"Don't, don't ask her!" He seized the other by the arm.

"Come, I'll explain; don't ask her now, at any rate—I beg of you as a gentleman—as a gentleman, for you are a gentleman."

The Bishop turned somewhat impatiently, then remarked with a dignified severity:

"Oh, I can be a gentleman whenever it's necessary!"

They went across the fields toward the house, and the Bishop spoke further.

"There ain't any need to get into your high-heeled boots, Brother Rae, jest because I was aiming to save her to a crown of glory,—a girl that's thought to have been born on the wrong side of the blanket!"

They stopped by the first corral, and Joel Rae talked. He talked rapidly and with power, saying many things to make it plain that he was determined not to look upon the Wild Ram of the Mountains as an acceptable son-in-law. His manner was excited and distraught, terrified and indignant,—a manner hardly justified by the circumstances, about which there was nothing extraordinary, nothing not pleasing to God and in conformity to His revealed word. Bishop Wright indeed was puzzled to account for the heat of his manner, and in recounting the interview to Elder Wardle, he threw out an intimation about strong drink. "To tell you the truth," he said, "I suspicion he'd jest been putting a new faucet in the cider barrel."

When Prudence came in from the blossoming peach trees that night her father called her to him to sit on his lap in the dusk while the crickets sang, and grow sleepy as had been her baby habit.

"What did Bishop Wright want?" she asked, after her head was pillowed on his arm. Relieved that it was over, now even a little amused, he told her:

"He wanted to take my little girl away, to marry her."

She was silent for a moment, and then:

"Wouldn't that be fine, and we could build each other up in the Kingdom."

He held her tighter.

"Surely, child, you couldn't marry him?"

"But of course I could! Isn't he tried in the Kingdom, so he is sure to have all those thrones and dominions and power?"

"But child, child! That old man with all his wives—"

"But they say old men are safer than young men. Young men are not tried in the Kingdom. I shouldn't like a young husband anyway—they always want to play rough games, and pull your hair, and take things away from you, and get in the way."

"But, baby,—don't, don't—"

"Why, you silly father, your voice sounds as if you were almost crying—please don't hold me so tight—and some one must save me before the Son of Man comes to judge the quick and the dead; you know a woman can't be saved alone. I think Bishop Wright would make a fine husband, and I should have Mattie Wright to play with every day."

"And you would leave me?"

"Why, that's so, Daddy! I never thought—of course I can't leave my little sorry father—not yet. I forgot that. I couldn't leave you. Now tell me about my mother again."

He told her the story she already knew so well—how beautiful her mother was, the look of her hair and eyes, her slenderness, the music of her voice, and the gladness of her laugh.

He was awake all night in a fever of doubt and rebellion. By the light of the candle, he read in the Book of Mormon passages that had often puzzled but never troubled him until now when they were brought home to him; such as, "And now it came to pass that the people Nephi under the reign of the second king began to grow hard in their hearts, and indulged themselves somewhat in wicked practices, like unto David of old, desiring many wives—"

Again he read, "Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord."

Still again, "For there shall not be any man among you have save it shall be one wife."

Then he turned to the revelation on celestial marriage given years after these words were writtn, and in the first paragraph read:

"Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you my servant Joseph, that inasmuch as you have inquired of my hand to know and understand wherein I, the Lord, justified my servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as also Moses, David, and Solomon, my servants, as touching the principle and doctrine of their having many wives—"

He turned from one to the other; from the many explicit admonitions and commends against polygamy, the denunciations of the patriarchs for their indulgence in the practice, to this last passage contradicting the others, and vexed himself with wonder. In the Book of Mormon, David was said to be wicked for doing this thing. Now in the revelation to Joseph he read, "David's wives were given unto him of me, by the hand of Nathan, my servant."

But in the midst of his questionings he seemed to see a truth,—that another snare had been set for him by the Devil, and that this time it had caught his feet. He, who knew that he must have nothing for himself, had all unconsciously so set his heart upon this child of her mother that he could not give her up. And now so fixed and so great was his love that he could not turn back. He knew he was lost. To cling to her would be to question, doubt, and to lose his faith. To give her up would kill him.

But at least for a little while he could put it off.

"It Will Surely Be in Another Month, Daddy—Perhaps Next Week."

CHAPTER XXV.

How the World Did Not Come to an End.

With the first day of 1870 Joel Rae began to wait. With prayer and fasting and vigils he waited. Now was the day when the earth should be purified by fire, the wicked swept from the land, and the lost tribes of Israel restored to their own. Now was to come the Son of Man who should dwell in righteousness with men, reigning over them on the purified earth for a thousand years.

He watched the mild winter go, with easy faith; and the early spring come and go, with a dawning uneasiness. For the time was passing with never the blast of a trumpet from the heavens. He began to see then that he alone, of all Amalon, had kept his faith pure. For the others had foolishly sown their fields, as if another crop were to be harvested,—as if they must continue to eat bread that was earth-grown. Even Prudence had strangely ceased to believe as he did. Something from the outside had come, he knew not what nor how, to tarnish the fair gold of her certainty. She had not said so, but he divined it when he shrewdly observed that she was seeking to comfort him, to support his own faith when day after day the Son of Man came not.

"It will surely be in another month, Daddy—perhaps next week—perhaps to-morrow," she would say cheerfully. "And you did right not to put in any crops. It would have been wicked to doubt."

His hope lasted hardly until the year ended. Before the time was over, there had crept into his mind a conviction that the Son of Man would not come; that the Lord's favor had been withdrawn from Israel. He knew the cause,—the shedding of innocent blood. They might have made war; indeed, many of the revelations to Joseph discriminated even between murder and that murder in which innocent blood should be shed; but the truth was plain. They had shed innocent blood that day in the Meadows. Now the Lord's favor was withdrawn and His coming deferred, perhaps another thousand years. The torture of the thing came back to him with all its early coloring, so that his days and nights were full of anguish. He no longer dared open the Bible to that reddened page. The cries already rang in his ears, and he knew not what worse torture might come if he looked again upon the stain; nor could he free himself from these by the old expedient of prayer, for he could no longer pray with an honest heart; he was no longer unselfish, could no longer kneel in perfect submission; he was wholly bound to this child of her mother, and the peace of absolute and utter sacrifice could not come back to him. Full of unrest, feeling that somehow the end, at least for him, could not be far off, he went north to the April Conference. He took Prudence with him, not daring to leave her behind.

She went with high hopes, alive with new sensations. Another world lay outside her valley of the mountains, and she was going to peep over the edge at its manifold fascinations. She had been there before as a child; now she was going as a woman. She remembered the city, bigger and grander than fifty Amalons, with magnificent stores filled with exotic novelties and fearsome luxuries from the land of the wicked Gentile.

More fondly did she recall two wonderful evenings at the theater. First had been the thrilling "Robert Macaire," then the romantic "Pizarro," in which Rolla had been a being of such overwhelming beauty that she had felt he could not be of earth.

And there were strange new faces to be seen, people surely of a different world, of a different manner from those she had known, wearing, with apparent carelessness, garments even more strangely elegant than those in the shop windows, and speaking in strange, soft accents. She was told that these were Gentiles, tourists across the continent, who had ventured from Ogden to observe the wonders of the new Zion. The thought of the railroad was in itself thrilling. To be so near that wonderful highway to the land of the evil-doers and to a land, alas! of so many strange delights. She shuddered at her own wickedness, but fell again and again, and was held in bondage by the allurements about her. So thrilled to her soul's center was she that the pleasure of it hurt her, and the tears would come to her eyes until she felt she must be alone to cry for the awful joy of it.

The evening brought still more to endure, for they went to the play. It was a play that took her out of herself, so that the crowd was lost to her from the moment the curtain went up in obedience to a little bell that tinkled mysteriously,—either back on the stage or in her own heart, she was not sure which.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Needs of Naval Officers.

Admiral Sir Edward Fremantle, who entered the British navy in 1849 when 13 years old, has been publishing some of his experiences and observations. He agrees emphatically with President Roosevelt that "the naval officer of the future must be a fighting engineer," and he thinks that this view is shared by the British admiralty. The admiral also says: "In the present age we are so entirely dependent on mechanical science that it is essential that our officers and men should learn to 'grease and gauge' with the engineers if they are to be capable seamen."

OLD CANNON CAN'T BE BROKEN.

Armament of Old Craft Was Made to Last.

A good story is being told at the Mare Island navy yard concerning a San Francisco contractor who bought all the old obsolete cannon which were sold at the local yard some time ago. The cannon were all of the smooth bore kind, and in order that they might be easily handled for shipment to the city all sorts of schemes were tried to endeavor to break them with dynamite and blasting powder, but they were unsuccessful.

An electric drill machine was even set up at the yards and the cannon were drilled full of holes in order to weaken them for breaking open with wedges, but this was also unsuccessful. The cannon were then taken away and the last heard of them they were corralled in the hills near Point Richmond, where an effort was being made to break them open with dynamite again.

The cannon which proved to be so strong were among the armament of the war craft which sailed the seas in 1812.

The Court Warned.

"Bill, old boy," said the prisoner to the justice, "I want you to pay particular attention while I'm a-making of this here statement."

"Don't address the court as 'Bill,' sir," said the justice, "or I'll fine you for contempt."

"That's all right, William," replied the prisoner, "we wuz growed up together an' I reckon you feel as dignified as a alligator on a log in a mill pond up thar, but ef you decide this case agin me, Lord help you when I ketch you in the middle o' the road. Go on with your proceedings."

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, }
LUCAS COUNTY. } ss.

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of CATARRH that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D., 1886.

{ SEAL } A. W. GLEASON, NOTARY PUBLIC.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Hissed Japanese Flag.

At the Star Theater, Seattle, the other evening the flags of several nations were exhibited in succession during an act on the stage. All except the flags of Russia and Japan were applauded. The former was received in silence, the latter was loudly hissed.

Hides, Furs, Pelts.

Cow hides are worth 10c to 11c per lb. horse hides $2 to $4 each, sheep pelts 50c to $1.50, as to size. Furs are very high, especially Mink and Muskrat. To get all they are worth ship to the old reliable N. W. HIDE & FUR CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

New York's Salt Water Mains.

New York city is to have 78 miles of salt water mains from eight to 24 inches in diameter, with 2,021 hydrants for fire protection.

It Cures While You Walk.

Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

We need to learn, not only how to make our living, but how to make our contribution to the living world.—Rev. T. Ferrier Hulme, M. A.

FITS, St. Vitus Dance and all Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for Free $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

People seldom improve, when they have no other model but themselves to copy after.—Goldsmith.

CURED OF GRAVEL.

Not a Single Stone Has Formed Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. D. Daughtrey, music publisher, of Suffolk, Va., says: "During two or three years that I had kidney trouble I passed 2½ pounds of gravel and sandy sediment in the urine. I haven't passed a stone since using Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and that was three years ago. I used to suffer the most acute agony during a gravel attack, and had the other usual symptoms of kidney trouble—lassitude, headache, pain in the back, urinary disorders, rheumatic pain, etc. I have a box containing 14 gravel stones that I passed, but that is not one-quarter of the whole number. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine kidney tonic."

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

GHOSTS PLAY MANY PRANKS.

Grab Rope from Bellringer and Cut Down Trees.

Ghostly happenings have disturbed the town of Kirkwall, the capital of the county of Orkney. On Wednesday night, says the London Daily Mail, the wife of the bellringer went to St. Magnus cathedral to sound the curfew at eight o'clock. This is an ancient custom still observed in the burgh. The bell had been tolled for less than a minute, when, it is alleged, a figure suddenly appeared at the woman's side, snatched her hands from the rope and as mysteriously disappeared.

Another morning 20 trees which a few years ago were planted in front of the cathedral were found to have been cut down. The night was a calm one, with brilliant moonlight, and the trees were standing at one o'clock in the morning.

Hundreds of windows have an outlook on the spot, and many people who were still astir at three o'clock in the morning did not hear the slightest sound outside. Yet an hour later every tree had been destroyed. The police are baffled.

It avails little to the unfortunate to be brave.—From the Spanish.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

A Positive CURE

Ely's Cream Balm is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at Once.

CATARRH

HAY FEVER

It cleanses, soothes heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts., at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size 10 cts. by mail. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

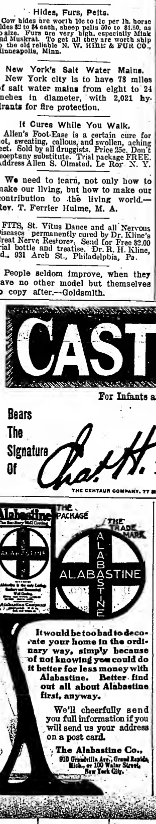
CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

Bears The Signature Of Chas. H. Fletcher. In Use For Over Thirty Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.



It would be too bad to decorate your home in the ordinary way, simply because of not knowing you could do it better for less money with Alabastine. Better find out all about Alabastine first, anyway.

We'll cheerfully send you full information if you will send us your address on a post card.

The Alabastine Co.,
910 Grandville Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich., or 100 Water Street, New York City.

Fertile Farming

LANDS

Cheap
Easy Terms

In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.

Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.

Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

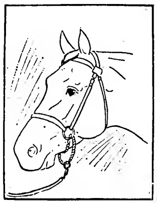
Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.

Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

TO BREAK A HALTER PULLER.

Arrangement of Rope Which Will Prove Effective.

My plan, explains an Illinois correspondent of Prairie Farmer, consists of an ordinary ring halter with the two side rings connected by a strong cord. Whenever the horse pulls, the inner part of the cord is drawn forcibly against the jaw, and the effect is severer punishment than he is willing to endure.



Plan to Break Halter Puller.

STUMBLING HORSES.

Why They Acquire the Habit and How to Cure Them.

Some horses are naturally addicted to stumbling, others acquire the fault, and still others have the stumbling habit thrust upon them, says an exchange. In the first, it is almost incurable, but the second and third causes can be remedied by the rider or driver. If the ground is rough or uneven, horses with a low action are prone to stumble. Other horses which are naturally slip-shod, generally stumble because they do not lift their feet high enough from the ground. Laziness is another cause for stumbling, and horses that are heavy in front, or whose fore legs are weak or unsound, have the same fault. Very often carelessness on the part of the driver causes horses to stumble. This makes it necessary always to bear in mind the value of keeping the horses well in hand and sufficiently collected. If the habit is due to laziness it can often be cured by riding or driving the horse over rough ground until he has been broken of the fault. But in all cases the cure rests with the driver or rider. The most sure-footed of horses is bound to stumble at times, but this can be reduced to a minimum by keeping a tight rein. A slack rein is often the sole cause for stumbling. If fatigue is the cause, extra care must be taken to keep the horse well up to the bit. No good horseman will ever take chances of his horse stumbling by allowing a slack rein. Stumbling is not only an annoying habit, but it often results in serious injury and many times in the total disability of the animal. While an habitual tendency to stumble often does not admit of a cure, the average case can be prevented by the methods suggested above.

GROWING GOOD BEEF.

It Is Possible for the Small Farm to Produce It.

It is possible to produce good beef on small farm, and much of the beef of the future will be thus produced. The demand for beef will never be less than it is at the present time, but the great ranges on which the beef of the past has been produced must grow smaller as the land is brought under irrigation. Great projects are under way for irrigating vast stretches of land that before now have been the feeding ground of cattle. How much of the ranges are to be eaten up in this way we do not know at this time. It means that the price of the best beeves must advance and that these will largely be raised on small farms and be almost a by-product. To produce this good beef, says Farmers' Review, the farmer will need but make sure that the animal he is raising for beef is a high grade of some one of the beef breeds. Some of the really good beef made now is being produced on the farms in the middle West, where only a few beef animals are kept per farm. The beef steer is proving to be a side issue with many of our farmers, but a side issue that yields annually a good profit.

Reset the Shoes.

Don't let the shoes stay too long on the work horses. It is not hard in the winter time to keep shoes on horses for three or four months, but if allowed to stay on for more than four or five weeks the shoe is likely to contract the foot and make trouble. So we would advise having them reset at least once a month or twice in three months

Trim the Hoof.

Take a chisel and good block of wood and cut off the long grown out toe of the hoof. After going through the winter without attention the feet are likely to be in bad condition in the spring time and when the colt starts running over rough ground he is likely to stumble and break into the quick or twist a pastern.

HELPING ALONG HIS MEMORY.

Husband Willing to Do His Best to Follow Instructions.

Mr. Morse is an undemonstrative man and an absent-minded one as well. In these two respects be is a trial to his wife, who is exactly his opposite. "James," she said as she bade him good-by when he was about to start for Chicago, "will you remember to hunt up Cousin William and find out all about Aunt Sarah? It is so many years since I've heard from any of that family."

"Yes, my dear."

"And do you suppose you will remember to put on your overcoat if the wind changes, so as not to catch one of your dreaded colds?"

"Yese, my dear."

"And you will try to remember that you have plenty of clean collars, so you needn't go about looking as if you had no wife to see to you?"

"Yes, my dear," said Mr. Morse, as he turned to take up his bag.

"And, James," said Mrs. Morse, tearfully, "do you suppose you will think of me every day while you are gone and I am here at home?"

"My dear," responded Mr. Morse, with his mind on catching the train, "I will certainly make a memorandum to do so."

BLOOD GETS SOUR.

Every Family Should Make Up This Home Mixture and Take Now.

At this time of year, says a well-known authority, the Kidneys become weak, clogged and inactive, failing to filter out the poisons and acids, which sour the blood, causing not only facial and bodily eruptions, but the worst forms of Rheumatism, Nervous and Stomach troubles, Backache and painful, annoying Urinary afflictions.

It is worth anyone's time now to get from some good prescription pharmacy the following ingredients: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after your meals and at bedtime.

This simple home-made mixture will force the Kidneys to normal, healthy action, so they will filter and strain all uric acid and poisonous waste matter from the blood, and expel this in the urine, at the same time restoring the "full blood count"—that is, 95 per cent. red blood corpuscles—which is absolutely indispensable to perfect health.

NIGHTCAPS IN VOGUE AGAIN.

Women Returning to the Fashion of Their Grandmothers.

Fashionable women have revived the use of the nightcap. It was discarded at least half a century ago, except by grandmothers and elderly spinsters, but now, according to the Drapers' Record, it has again become an indispensable part of woman's outfit and is included in all trouseaux. The revival is partly ascribed to the doctors. Their incessant advocacy of well ventilated bedrooms has, in the absence of over door transoms, in English houses, resulted in bedroom windows being opened at night, and women who are not robust found the wintry draughts too trying. Another and more distressing cause is alleged by hairdressers. These say that elaborate coiffures are being desired. These are helped by stylish transformations, which are detached at night. To facilitate this arrangement it is said that many ladies have their hair cropped rendering a nightcap necessary. Their grandmothers practised the same folly. Moreover, the new manner of dressing the hair, which introduces an exceptionally careful process of undulation and is submitted to by women three times a week, calls for the use of the protecting nightcap to preserve the freshness of the coiffure.

FURIOUS HUMOR ON CHILD.

Itching, Bleeding Sores Covered Body —Nothing Helped Her—Cuticura Cures Her in Five Days.

"After my granddaughter of about seven years had been cured of the measles, she was attacked about a fortnight later by a furious itching and painful eruption all over her body, especially the upper part of it, forming watery and bleeding sores, especially under the arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We tried the Cuticura Remedies and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. Mrs. F. Ruefenacht, R. F. D. No. 3, Bakersfield, Cal., June 25 and July 20, 1906."

Many Children Take Sacrament.

A notable confirmation took place recently in Dublin, at the pro-cathedral. Archbishop Walsh conferred the sacrament of confirmation on nearly a thousand children. The actual conferring lasted two hours, and the ceremony was concluded by the administering of the temperance pledge and a strong exhortation to the children to discharge faithfully all their religious duties.

Garfield Tea is for those who desire an ideal laxative; it is simple, pure, mild and potent; it regulates the liver and kidneys, overcomes constipation, and brings Good Health. It is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Law.

It is the gold of love that makes the quartz of life worth while.—A. C. Manning.

FIGURES OF A CROP IN WESTERN CANADA.

How a Swan River Settler Has Succeeded.

Benito, Manitoba, Nov. 26, 1906.

At Swan River Valley, in May, 1900, a settler took up a homestead on Section 30, in Township 34, Range 29 West of the First Meridan, at that time 50 miles from a railway, telegraph, school or church. There is now a railway within two miles of my farm, and all these other advantages close at hand. His story is:

"After making my homestead entry fee of $10 I had $45.00 total (forty-five dollars) capital. Through doing homestead duties in slack times of the year, I managed to get a start. I am a married man of 28 years of age.

"I built my first house, or shack, and broke up 8 acres, putting five acres in crop the first year.

"This year, 1906, I had 80 acres in crop—65 acres in wheat, 20 acres of which yielded 850 bushels, or 42½ bushels per acre; 15 acres of oats, which yielded 355 bushels, and one stack of oats in sheaf for feed.

"Receipts for the year—

Sold 1,755 bu. of wheat for	$1,037.10
In granary, 110 bushels	71.50
In granary, 355 bu. oats	88.75
Garden roots and vegetables	25.00
One stack of oats in sheaf	50.00
Total	$1,272.35
Expenses of year—
Blue stone for seed	$ 1.60
Paid for binder twine	30.00
Paid for hired help	120.00
Paid for threshing	107.00
Total	$ 258.60
Receipts	$1,272.35
Expenditures	258.60
Balance	$1,013.75
Assets.
160 acres of land valued at	$2,500.00
Frame house 20x26, valued at	600.00
Farm implements	425.00
1 team horses and harness	400.00
5 head young cattle	75.00
2 hogs	15.00
Receipts of this year's crop	1,015.75
Total	$5,030.75
Liabilities.
Loan on farm	500.00
Balance to my good	$4,530.75

Particulars as to how to secure low railway rates to the free homestead lands of Western Canada may be secured from any Canadian Government Agent.

Man Expert Milliner.

Charles Manners, the famous opera singer, is credited by a London expert with being one of the finest amateur milliners living, his work equaling some of the best French models.

Plan for Good Health! Take Garfield Tea now; it regulates the liver and kidneys, overcomes constipation, purifies the blood and eradicates disease. It is made wholly of Herbs.

A woman either loves or hates; there is no third part.—Publius Syrus.

Carpet rags dyed with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES will remain bright and beautiful. No trouble to use.

The worst of slaves is he whom passion rules.—Brooke.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

When You Are Praised.

When you are praised by a man for whom you cannot possibly do any favor and who, as you know, is aware of the fact, you may find it reasonably safe to conclude that he isn't laying it on any too thick.

STIFFNESS, STITCHES, LAMENESS, CRAMP, TWISTS AND TWITCHES, ALL DECAMP WHEN YOU APPLY

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE OLD-MONK-CURE

PRICE 25 AND 50 CENTS

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the appoval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.
U S. A.
London, England.
Louisville, Ky.
New York, N. Y.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

A. N. K.—G (1907—14) 2172.

MEN ADMIRE

a pretty face, a good figure, but sooner or later learn that the healthy, happy, contented woman is most of all to be admired.

Women troubled with fainting spells, irregularities, nervous irritability, backache, the "blues," and those dreadful dragging sensations, cannot hope to be happy or popular, and advancement in either home, business or social life is impossible.

The cause of these troubles, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs. It acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms. No other medicine in the country has received such unqualified indorsement or has such a record of cures of female ills as has

MISS EMMA RUNTZLER

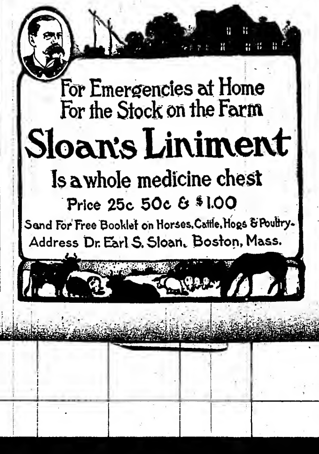
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Miss Emma Runtzler, of 631 State St., Schenectady, N. Y., writes:—"For a long time I was troubled with a weakness which seemed to drain all my strength away. I had dull headaches, was nervous, irritable, and all worn out. Chancing to read one of your advertisements of a case similar to mine cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I decided to try it and I cannot express my gratitude for the benefit received. I am entirely well and feel like a new person."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all forms of Female Complaints, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and is invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.



For Emergencies at Home
For the Stock on the Farm
Sloan's Liniment
Is a whole medicine chest
Price 25c 50c & $1.00
Send For Free Booklet on Horses, Cattle, Hogs & Poultry.
Address Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Boston, Mass.

NO MORE MUSTARD PLASTERS TO BLISTER.
THE SCIENTIFIC AND MODERN EXTERNAL COUNTER-IRRITANT.

CAPISICUM VASELINE

EXTRACT OF THE CAYENNE PEPPER PLANT

A QUICK, SURE, SAFE AND ALWAYS READY CURE FOR PAIN.—PRICE 15c.—IN COLLAPSIBLE TUBES—AT ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS, OR BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF 15c. IN POSTAGE STAMPS. DON'T WAIT TILL THE PAIN COMES—KEEP A TUBE HANDY.

A substitute for and superior to mustard or any other plaster, and will not blister the most delicate skin. The pain-allaying and curative qualities of the article are wonderful. It will stop the toothache at once, and relieve Headache and Sciatica. We recommend it as the best and safest external counter-irritant known, also as an external remedy for pains in the chest and stomach and all Rheumatic, Neuralgic and Gouty complaints. A trial will prove what we claim for it, and it will be found to be invaluable in the household and for children. Once used no family will be without it. Many people say "It is the best of all your preparations." Accept no preparation of vaseline unless the same carries our label, as otherwise it is not genuine. SEND YOUR ADDRESS AND WE WILL MAIL OUR VASELINE PAMPHLET WHICH WILL INTEREST YOU.

CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO.
17 STATE STREET, NEW YORK CITY

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD
W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.
SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

No. 313. Canopy Top Surrey with Automobile Style Seats. Price, $73.50.

34 YEARS SELLING DIRECT

Our vehicles and harness have been sold direct from our factory to user for a third of a century. We ship for examination and approval and guarantee safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied as to style, quality and price.

We Are The Largest Manufacturers In The World selling to the consumer exclusively. We make 200 styles of Vehicles, 65 styles of Harness. Send for large, free catalogue.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., Elkhart, Indiana

No. 680. Combination Buggy and Driving Wagon. Price complete, extra seat, $53.50.

EGGS
at 50 cts. a dozen pay.
Why not get them in fall and winter when prices are highest by using
SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER
the scientifically prepared poultry tonic? First in the market and in use forty years to make hens lay. Helps poultry to get full benefit of all kinds of food, makes chicks grow rapidly and keeps them healthy. One pack, 25c.; five, $1; two-lb. can, $1.20; six, $5.00. Express paid. At all dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FREE HOMES
For information address, with stamp, Colville Reservation Information Agency, POGUE, WASH.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicest.

THE CANADIAN WEST IS THE BEST WEST

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The testimony of thousands during the past year is that the Canadian West is the best West. Year by year the agricultural returns have increased in volume and in value, and still the Canadian Government offers 160 acres FREE to every bona fide settler.

Some of the Advantages

The phenomenal increase in railway mileage—main lines and branches—has put almost every portion of the country within easy reach of churches, schools, markets, cheap fuel and every modern convenience.

The NINETY MILLION BUSHEL WHEAT CROP of this year means $60,000,000 to the farmers of Western Canada, apart from the results of other grains and cattle.

For advice and information address the SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Government Agent.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

It makes you long for dinner time

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

Best for flaky pastry, wholesome bread and biscuit—best for crisp cookies—best for delicious cakes, toothsome muffins, doughnuts that will melt in your mouth.

Everything you make well, it will help to make better, because it's "best by test."

Anybody can cook well if they use Calumet Baking Powder. Failure with it is almost impossible.

It is chemically correct and makes Pure, Wholesome Food.

Price is Moderate

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

Published weekly, Thursday evening. Entered as second class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

The 2-cent fare bill was signed by the governor last Thursday and becomes effective May 1st.

"We'll dig the ditch or bust" said Speaker Joe Cannon after his recent trip to the site of the Panama canal. By the time the durned thing has been dug it will probably "bust us, by gosh."

Plummer Pioneer:-Some of the county newspapers are telling their readers what the result will be "if" the county seat petition was stolen by a partizan of Red Lake Falls. How will it be "if" it was removed by a gentlemen belonging to the other side

The committee on mileage of the house cast up its little list Friday of last week and found that at the rate of 15 cents a mile, coming and returning, the members would draw $[illegible] for traveling 25,064 miles. H. O. Hanson of Stephen is allowed 7[illegible] miles and Donald Robertson of Argyle, [illegible] miles, drawing $105 and $[illegible] respectively.

We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing headache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia, and thus preventing the Sarsaparilla from doing its best work. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. Act gently, all vegetable.

Made by J. O. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of Ayer's HAIR VIGOR. AGUE CURE. CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

Mahnomen and Koochiching as the names of two newly created Minnesota counties may have a certain sentimental value but when the land man tries to boom them with a line of warm talk his embarrassment can be imagined—one suggesting another verse of Longfellow's Hiawatha or a new breakfast food, and the other making a noise like a four-cylinder automobile climbing a steep grade.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Thief River News: An attempt was made last week to have the grand jury condemn the court house and county jail, but the scheme did not work. If the court house and jail were condemned by a grand jury the county commissioners would be compelled to furnish new buildings, which is just what Red Lake Falls wants. It was a nice scheme, but it didn't work.

Friend Eastman must have been indulging in a Turkish pipe dream or another one of his "T-o be, o-or n-o-t t-o b-e" periodicals. The above item was the first intimation that either the grand jury or the people of Red Lake Falls had received that any such attempt had been made. There were twenty-four men from different parts of the county who served on the grand jury. We will simply request the reader to ask any of these jurymen if there was any such attempt made, and if they agree, or even one-half of them agree that there was, then will we cheerfully admit the corn. If not, then brand the above as a dirty, contemptable lie.

"We will have a 3-mill direct levy for state revenue if the different demands that are being strongly backed before the appropriations comittee are granted," said a member of the sub committee recently.

The subcommittee this year is a big one, having nine members from each branch. It is so large that a good many of the appropriation bills have their sincere advocates within the committee, and there is a prospect now that the omnibus bill, as finally agreed upon, will carry over $4,000,000 in appropriations outside of those figured as the necessary annual appropriations by the state auditor. He allowed extraordinary appropriations, amounting to $500,000, on half-mill levy. At the first of the session it was thought a 1-mill levy would be enough. Ideas have expanded as the session advanced. The drainage advocates want $300,000, the capitol grounds extension calls for $500,000, the state fair for $400,000 and the university for $890,000. The county agricultural schools impose another burden of $200,000 for the first year.

St. Paul has opened her new auditorium and thinks that with the new facilities for handling large conventions she would be pleased to entertain the delegates to the next Republican National convention. It has been sixteen years since the national convention was held in Minnesota, and considering its location in the states, St. Paul hadn't ought to have much trouble in landing the convention of 1908.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.......

Sheriff Nelson transacted legal business at Thief River Monday.

Father Adolph of Thief River Falls was the guest of Father Ambrose the first of the week.

Rev. I. T. Aastad of Thief River Falls, conducted services in the Norwegian Lutheran church Sunday.

The Halstad Reporter has suspended publication owing to lack of support from the business men of the town.

Judge Knight was a G. N. passenger to Thief River Tuesday where be will spend several days renewing old acquaintances.

Court Commissioner S. T. Johnson, of Thief River, was called to this city Wednesday on business in connection with his office.

Mike McNamara left yesterday for Great Falls, Montana, near which place he has an extensive railroad contract to push through this summer.

Atty. W. A. McIntyre, formely of this city and who is now located at Langdon, N. D. transacted professional business in the city the first of the week.

No admission fee will be charged to those who desire to attend the April band concert and dance. It is desired to have a big attendance and you are invited to be present and enjoy yourself.

Peter Beauleau, who has dispensed dry goods, groceries, etc., for some time past at the Busy Store, has severed his connection with that institution, and on Monday left for Grand Forks where he will take a course in stenography at the Grand Forks Business College.

When you have glasses fitted take no chances; but have your eyes examined by a Specialist whose ability is unquestioned, Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Miss Ella Kruger who has been teaching in Polk Center township is enjoying a two weeks vacation beginning the first of this week. The roads are almost impassable and it was deemed advisable to close the school until conditions become more favorable for children to travel.

Last Saturday night, Prof. J. R. Bursk gave an illustrated lecture on the Life of Christ as interpreted by the peasants of Ober Ammergau in Southern Germany in the Passion Play, which is given there every ten years. Over fifty views were given, dealing especially with the last week of life of Jesus. The new arc-light used with the lantern for the first time, was very satisfactory and the pictures were bright and clear. The lecture was given at the Presbyterian Church, which was filled twice.

Sheriff Nelson was called to Thief River Monday where he arrested Willie Ewart, the eleven-year-old son of Henry Ewart, on the charge of incorrigibility. Willie has led a strenuous life for an urchin of his immature years, but his last escapade was a little more daring than his previous adventures and proved the windup of a career that bid fare to rival that of Captain Kidd. It seems that last week Willie got short of funds and in order to replenish his depleted larder confiscated a copper boiler, which the owner had neglected to nail down, and sold it to a local junk dealer at Thief River. The deed having been disclosed by a descendent of Sherlock Holmes, Willie was placed under arrest. Henry Ewart, the boy's father, admitted that he could not manage the youth, and Sheriff Nelson took him to Warren, Tuesday, where the case was laid before Judge Grindeland, who decided that the state training school was the proper place for the boy for awhile. Sheriff Nelson took the lad to Red Wing Wednesday.

Rest is the great restorer. We tire our muscles by exercise and then rest to restore them; yet a great many of us do not stop to think how little rest we give to our stomachs. As a usual thing no part of our bodies is so generally overworked as our digestive organs. A tired and overworked stomach will give signs of distress to which we pay no heed until at last Dyspepsia takes hold. Indigestion is just a warning, and if we heed the warning we can easily avoid further consequences. KODol is a most thorough stomach relief. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach the needed rest and greatly assists in restoring it to its normal activity and usefulness. KODOL is sold on a guaranteed refund plan. It is sold here by all druggists.

In The Towns....

where you find the people making use of their banks, depositing their money and paying their bills by check you will find a progressive, "get-there" spirit that means the up-building of that town and vicinity.

This is our home and we take an active interest in watching and aiding the material prosperity of both town and surrounding country. We should to see every man and woman who has an income, every farmer, every laboring man, every mechanic, every young man in this community start a bank account.

You are interested--come in and talk with us about it

Merchants State Bank
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

SPECIALS For One WEEK

For one week we offer the following extra specials from our big stock. They are all big values and you cannot afford to miss them.

7-INCH EMBROIDERIES, 500 Yards Per Yard........................ 10c

$2.25 LADIES' OXFORDS, an exceptional value at the price named. Next Week.................. $1.40

MEM'S SHIRTS, all our 75c and $1.00 Men's Shirts, While They Last................. 38c

You will find our Grocery Department the largest and best in the city. Your orders given prompt attention.

LAMPS, A complete Lamp Outfit, one that will give you good service, for...................... 15c

FORCE, the modern Breakfast Food, the kind you always buy. For one week, 2 packages for..................... 25c

Come in and let us show you the finest and largest line of new spring and summer shoes and Oxfords ever shown in Red Lake Falls.
--They Can't Be Beat.

THE BUSY STORE
GARCEAU & ZAISER

Revival Meetings Close.

The Hamilton-Bursk Meetings which have been in progress during the past two weeks closed last Sunday night. The meetings were largely attended although the bad roads prevented many country familes from attending. Rev. John S. Hamilton, the Evangelist, is a man of strong personality, and he preaches with great force and enthuiasm. Prof. John R. Bursk was very successful with his chorus singing. The Sunbeam Chorus of boys and girls being an especially attractive feature of the meetings. The Presbyterian Church will receive a large number additions during the next six weeks as a direct result of these Evangelists. They are now at work at Hallock.

Bray.

Old man Winter kicked up quite a fuss last Saturday and covered the otherwise bare earth with quite a heavy blanket of snow. It is a pity some inventive genius does not come along and put up some California weather in cans for the trade.

Halvor Hanson drove to St. Hilaire Wednesday.

C. P. Swanson and Emil Larson went to Wylie Saturday to attend a meeting of the directors of Wylie Elevator & Mer. Co.

Swan Schelio and son, Halvor, transacted business at St. Hilaire Friday.

O. P. Johnson left for Barnesville last Wednesday after a few days stay with his family.

Card of Thanks.

To the many friends of our departed sister who by their thoughtful attention and kindly sympathy made her last days more pleasant and kindly aided us in the performance of the last sad rites we extend our heartfelt thanks.

Elizabeth R. Cushing.
Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain.
Mr. E. W. Chamberlain.

TEXAS LANDS We own 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE; and VAN HORNE VALLEY, Texas, one of the most fertile valleys in the state. The Southern Pacific Railroad passes through the Van Horne Valley lands and the proposed line of the Santa Fe will run directly through our Panhandle tract. These lands are exceptionally well located for retail purposes. They were carefully selected, and, having purchased them some time ago, we can quote you prices and terms that are right. LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control of 10,000 acres of this land, which you can do by making a small payment down, and realize a profit of $50,000. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 607-8 Pioneer Press Bldg. St. Paul, Minn.

Harry Mitchell's EDITORIAL.

I want to make your spring suit. I want to show you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than you can get at your local tailors for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00.

My Spring goods have now arrived, and they are the most beautiful fabrics I ever saw.

Write me today for samples and tell me about the kind of clothes you are thinking of getting. By return mail I'll send you a bunch to select from, also self-measurement blanks.

Remember, I have the largest tailoring establishment in the world, that I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money; and I pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave Minneapolis, Minn.

Last Mountain Valley Lands We own thousands of acres of Choice Selected Land in this district, which is right in the heart of the Great Wheat Plains of Saskatchewan. The richness of the soil in this district is shown in the reports to the Government which give an average of 26½ bushels of wheat to the acre for 1906. The great development of this part of Western Canada has brought about the competition of 3 railways. Ample timber for fuel and fencing. Send 15c for beautiful, new souvenir book, entitled "The Lake and the Land of the Last Mountain Valley." Also 20th Century Atlas of Canada sent with souvenir book. Write to-day. Maps, descriptive matter, etc., on request.
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.
Northern Bank Building, Winnipeg, Canada.

DR. N. M. WATSON
Physician and Surgeon
Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON
Physician and Surgeon
Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.
DENTIST
Offices in LaBissoniere Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.
At St Hilaire every Wednesday.

Thomas Germo, Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley
GERMO & FARLEY
Attorneys at-Law
Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

Send us the news.

FIRST STATE BANK
OF
RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU

PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.

DIRECTORS
Theo. Garceau Frank E Hunt
Chas. N. Bourdon
W. A. Schreiter A. P. Toupin
N. M. Watson Geo. F. Hennings

The Syracuse "Easy" Washer

SYRACUSE EASY
MADE BY DODGE & ZUILL PAT. MAR.13.1900 SYRACUSE, N.Y.

A Few Reasons Why You ... Should Have One ...

It saves the clothes.

It saves precious time.

It saves physical force.

It saves in cost—no new tubs or boards to buy.

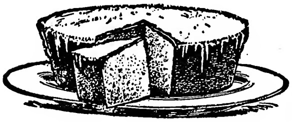
It washes cleaner and rinses better.

It is adapted to both heavy and light clothes.

We Have Sold Hundreds of these machines since we have had the agency—another good reason why you should have one. We wouldn't have sold so many if they weren't right. Remember we put them out on trial and the price is only ....

$8.00

Hunt Hardware Co.



ROYAL Baking Powder is indispensable to the preparation of the finest cake, hot-breads, rolls and muffins.

Housekeepers are sometimes importuned to buy other powders because they are "cheap."

Housekeepers should stop and think. If such powders are lower priced, are they inferior?

Is it economy to spoil your digestion?

The "Royal Baker and Pastry Cook"—containing over 800 most practical and valuable cooking receipts—free to every patron. Send postal card with your full address.

Alum is used in some baking powders and in most of the so-called phosphate powders, because it is cheap, and makes a cheaper powder. But alum is a corrosive which, taken in food, acts injuriously upon the stomach, liver and kidneys.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

The Local Field---

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Atty. A. A. Miller of Crookston, transacted business in the city last Tuesday.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

Just Received—A car of fresh lime, plaster and cement.—Thief River Falls Lbr. Co., Dan J. Doran, Mgr.

Mrs. H. W. Knox was a passenger to Thief River this morning where she will be the guest of Mrs. J. M. Bishop for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. K. M. Hauser moved their household goods to Thief River last Friday where they will make their future home.

I have taken off a hatch and will now sell or trade my "Old Trusty" incubator, 110 egg size, as I have no further use for it this year.—Fred L. Farley. 2w

Orson Doe, arrived home from Wimbleton N. D., Tuesday, where he has been working this winter. Orson will spend some time visiting with the home folks and is undecided as to whether he will return to Wimbleton.

When you need a pill, take a pill, and be sure it's an Early Riser. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are safe, sure, satisfactory pills. The pills with a reputation. They do not gripe or sicken. They are sold here by all druggists.

Six members of the orchestra, Lee and Harry Healy, Franz Freund, L. P. Berthon and Clement and A. L. Brunelle leave for Thief River tomorrow where they will furnish music for a dancing party to be given by the Antlers Club tomorrow evening.

The Board of Audit, composed of Chairman of the County Board C. A. Lindquist, Auditor O'Brien and Clerk of Court Johnson finished their labors yesterday of checking up Treasurer Tandberg's tax books and reports them O. K. The current tax collections from Jan. 8th to March 1st amount to over $25,000.

L. D. Padden, of St. Paul arrived in the city the first of the week and will have charge of a chair at the Nelson tonsorial parlors. Mr. Padden is a first class barber and will enable Mr. Nelson to take care of his rapidly increasing patronage in a satisfactory manner to both himself and the trade. Mr. Padden is a brother of J. J. Padden of this city.

We make farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds on hand at all times.---First State Bank. Red Lake Falls.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S
HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON [illegible] Proprietor.

"Sweet Girl Graduates," April 19th.

Roy Wilfred was a Crookston visitor Sunday.

For Sale—Light Brahmas, thoroughbred cockerels. C. L. Mikkelsen.

The Busy Store calls your attention to several specials in their ad this week.

Good speltz and barley seed for sale. Inquire of H. O. Gjerberg, town of Gervais.

Norman Schreiter left Saturday for a week's visit with old friends in the twin cities.

Joe Schusser and Fred Zaiser made a business trip to Thief River Falls Wednesday.

Miss Mayme Linnihan spent several days in Crookston the first of the week as the guest of Mrs. G. W. Lytle.

E. L. Norton, western freight agent for the Burlington road was calling on his many friends in this city Wednesday.

Mrs. P. E. Pirath went up to St. Hilaire Friday of last week to spend several days with her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Ives.

The Big Store always in line with the season's latest apparel, call your attention to many articles of timely interest in their ad this week.

Mrs. Joseph Sally and children spent several days this week visiting with Mrs. Sally's sister, Mrs. Fred Holtznecht of Thief River Falls.

G. A. Kankel the new hardware man calls your attention to the celebrated Heath & Milligan line of ready mixed paints, sporting goods etc., in his ad in this issue.

"Good for everything a salve is used for and especially recommended for Piles." That is what we say about DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. That is what twenty years of usage has proven. Get the original. Sold by all druggists.

Joe Duchamp, scout, guide and interpreter of Germantown, was a county seat visitor last week. Joe is one of the pioneers of the Red Lake country and always has many interesting reminiscences of early day life with which to entertain his friends of the present times.

On Monday evening the local lodge of Modern Brotherhood of America celebrated the tenth anniversary of the organization of the order by a dancing party at their rooms. About fifty couple were in attendance and a very enjoyable time is reported by all participating.

Arrangements for the men's supper at the Presbyterian church are progressing nicely and quite an elaborate spread is promised by those in charge of the arrangements. The menu is being guarded and the gentlemen promise to have some surprises for their guest. Don't forget the date, Tuesday, April 16th.

Mr and Mrs. Boyle, Tacoma, Wash. arrived in city Monday and spent a couple of days visiting with old time friends. Some eighteen or twenty years ago Mr. Boyle conducted a law office in this city; but later moved west and is now the senior member of the law firm of Boyle & Warburton, which has an extensive practice in the coast states. On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs Boyle left for New York City, from which point they will leave for a tour of the British Isles and the European continent, returning home about the first of July.

Macaroni seed wheat for sale.—L. C. Simons.

Attorney Germo was a Thief River caller Monday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Read the new ad of the Merchants State Bank in this issue.

Marcus Johnson is spending several days in the city looking after his milling interests.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes, The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

Banker John A. Duffy is spending the week looking after business matters in the Twin Cities.

Register of Deeds E. L. Quist was an over-Sunday visitor to Thief River and his farm on the reservation.

Geo. Carpenter of the Maplebay Windstacker Co. of Crookston, transacted business in the city Tuesday.

Mrs. Chas. Kankel of Terrebonne, has been spending several days visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kankel this week.

Mrs. J. K. Hanney of St. Hilaire, left last week for an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. G. B. Grace, at Mount Vernon, Washington.

Miss Maude Findeisen and Miss Margaret Kaus have been elected to positions on the instruction corps of the Warren schools for the next school year.

Supplementary proceedings in the case of Larson & Carpenter vs. John Bugge, Peder Bugge and Nels P. Arggern was heard before Referee F. A. Farley Tuesday and the case continued until the 23 inst.

White Wyandottes are the best general purpose fowl. Have the size and are great winter layers. Eggs from extra fine stock $1.00 per setting.—Fred L. Farley. 27 30

Use Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Children like its pleasant taste, and mothers give it hearty endorsement. Contains no opiates, but drives out the cold through the bowels. Made in strict conformity to Pure Food and Drugs Law. Recommended and sold by all druggists.

Wm. Hoiberg resumed his position at the Busy Store Monday, after a long struggle with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. Billy still feels the effects of the long siege, but manages to get around pretty well, and his many friends hope that he will not have to undergo any more afflictions of this character.

The St. Hilaire Commercial Club held their first meeting under their new constitution and by-laws at the village hall last Wednesday evening and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, O. F. Post; vice-president, J. C. Cummings; secretary, Jens Nelson; treasurer, K. O. Gigstud; directors, Daniel Patterson, H. E. Ives, Leonard Holmes, M. L. Hanson, J. K. Hunnay.

Dan Linnihan and Joe Gray left Monday for Glenwood, Little Falls, and other points where they will look over the specifications for contracts on construction work for the Glenwood-Duluth extension of the Soo line which is to be built during the coming summer. The building of this line is expected to be a record breaker in point of rapidity of construction, as the Soo people wish to have the line running in time to take care of the crop shipments to the head of the lakes this fall. In view of this fact, Messrs. Linnihan and Gray expect to secure some pretty good contracts which will be pushed to completion with the greatest possible speed.

On Wednesday, April 24 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Remington at St. Hilaire will occur the marriage of their daughter, Miss Alma I. to Mr. Howard K. Jones of Crookston. The wedding will take place in the afternoon after which the bride and groom will take the train for Crookston and at once start house keeping at 303 Hulbert street which is being cosily furnished by the prospective groom for his bride. Miss Remington is one of the prominent society young ladies of St. Hilaire and is a talented school teacher in Red Lake county. Mr. Jones has been a resident of Crookston since last fall when he went there from St. Hilaire. He held a responsible position with the St. Hilaire Lumber Co. His uncle, E. R. Evans was formerly superintendent of the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., but is now a resident of Crookston and is now connected with the Crookston Lumber Co.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

On Sunday morning Rev. H. W. Know, the Pastor will give a "Charge to Christians," especially to those just uniting with the church, on the duties and hindrance of the Christian life. Sunday evening the Pastor will give an object sermon to children on "Christ the Magnet." The "Sunbeam Choir" will sing both morning and evening and also the "Young Peoples Chorus." Other special music is being arranged for. The public reception of members into the church will be postponed for one week.

There's Keenest Pleasure

in making your selection of shoes from a good stock----one that shows new and reliable ideas---from the store that feels that there is nothing too good to pass along to its customers.

Our St. Cecilia Shoes

for tasty women are creating admiration for themselves, they show all that stylish women are looking for, style and comfort. The price—

. $3.50 .

and have not been cut down in quality like a good many lines have.

FREE!

A school companion free with every pair of School Shoes sold.

....Godman Shoes....

$1.50 to $2.35

are the best low price shoes produced in America. We will match them any time against shoes that cost 50c per pair more in other stores.

Can we convince you? Just come and look.

Our first lot of....

Palmer Spring Coats

sold like hot cakes. We expect another stock of these beautiful garments in a few days. So don't buy any old thing—

Wait for the best

Can We Show You?

You will not be asked or bored to buy. We leave that to you.

We have opened another new lot of Kuppenheimer Cravenettes, Spring Coats

at $15 to $20

that are beauties. The workmanship on these garments will appeal to any dressy man.

Specials

3 lb can canned Pears 15c, Egg-o-See 9c, Force 12½c, Baker's Chocolate 35c, Soda 7c, Figs 5c per pkg, Yeast Cakes 3c, Beans 3c, Fine Cabbage 4c, Cocoanut 20c lb, Vitos 12 1-2c, Sweet Potatoes 3c, Lemons 25c doz, crackers 1.25 bx, Extra fine 3K herring 10c, pail herring 7c, 10 lb box Macaroni 65c.

Everybody says it pays to trade at . .

The Big Store

Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

Butterick Patterns are now 10c-15c. Get them.

On Tuesday County Auditor O'Brien posted notices of the tax judgment sale of all lands on which taxes were delinquent on the first Monday in Januury 1907. The sale is to be held on Monday, the 13th day of May, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the auditor's office in the court house.

The attorney general has given the state superintendent of public instruction an opinion that a child who is of sufficient age cannot be kept from attending school, whether the child enters the school at the beginning or the middle of the school year. A ruling was asked by N. E. Soderberg, of Dawson board of school trustees.

Mrs. Marchand and Miss Bertha Lafreniere were Grand Forks visitors Friday and Saturday of last week. Miss Lafreniere purchased a beautiful Poole piano which will be installed at her home as soon as received from that place.

What is it that tastes as pleasant as maple sugar and relieves coughs and colds? Mothers who have used it will quickly answer: "Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup." The pleasant cold remedy that expels the cold through its laxative action on the bowels. Conforms strictly to the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Contains no opiates. Sold by all druggists.

Prof. Emil H. Bruckman who has had charge of the local band organization in this city for the past three months, finished his third month on March 8th, drew his monthly salary for the same, packed his belongings together and, without waiting to say goodbye or assigning any reason for so doing, boarding the evening N. P. train for parts unknown. Mr. Bruckman is an excellent musician, but it is believed he is imbued with the restless wandering spirit of the Arab of the desert, and like that restless tribesman frequently folds his tent, and as silently steals away. Manager Tracy informes us that a new leader for the band will be secured in a very short time, as he already has several first class men in view.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints
The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,
Small Farm Implements
Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Creglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Garee, who had been married but one day, were burned to death in a hotel at Sutton, W. Va.

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy issued a personal note saying that she had put her estate into the hands of trustees so that she might have more peace and time for spiritual thought.

Judge Jacob W. Willkin, for 18 years a member of the supreme court of Illinois, died at Danville, aged 70 years.

The Michigan senate passed a bill reducing railway fares in that state.

A fire following an explosion of a tube of benzine on the third floor of a seven-story building in New York, occupied by fur manufacturers, did damage amounting to thousands of dollars and caused a panic among 200 women and 75 men.

The airship which was brought to this country by Santos Dumont for exhibition at the St. Louis exposition and which was seized by the customs officials for non-payment of duty, was sold at New York for $80.

William Pore, a retired steel manufacturer of Pittsburg, gave $25,000 to Carthage college, of Carthage, Ill.

After several months of suffering from a nervous malady, Mrs. Ellen Berry Ryder, wife of Cornelius Ryder, one of the wealthiest men in the Gravesend section of Brooklyn, hanged herself.

Contracts for three years were signed by the representatives of the St. Louis breweries and the striking employes, and the strike was officially declared terminated.

A warrant was issued at Greensboro, N. C., against Earle Varetare, a palmist and clairvoyant, accused of taking jewelry and money to the amount of $10,000 from prominent women and others for telling their fortunes.

George S. McReynolds, who was sent to jail for fraud in connection with operations on the Chicago board of trade, was released on a writ of supersedeas.

By the explosion of an infernal machine believed by the police to have been sent him by a rival for the affections of a woman, Daniel Miller, of Schenectady, N. Y., was terribly injured. If he recovers he will be totally blind and a cripple for life.

An attempt was made to wreck a Pennsylvania railroad express train near Tacony, a suburb of Philadelphia.

A jury at Goring, Neb., brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree against E. S. Kennison and recommended the extreme penalty. Kennison last December shot and killed Sam D. Cox, a newspaper man.

Dr. W. H. Dwight, cashier of a bank at Goddard, Kan., killed himself because of ill health.

House owners of Colon complained to Secretary Taft of "unjust and intolerable conditions" imposed in the carrying out of sanitary improvements there.

Walter Scott of Boston shot and killed Agnes Bates, his sweetheart, and seriously wounded himself.

Carpenters and other mechanics of Newport, R. I., struck for a Saturday half holiday.

William Simpson, a young farmer near Montreal, killed his two little daughters and tried to commit suicide.

Alfred De Cordova, wealthy New York banker, is dead.

Walter Wellman, on arrival at New York, said he would start for the pole in his airship in July.

Marquis Bindo Peruzzi de Medici committed suicide with a revolver in his apartments at Florence, Italy. He was 29 years of age and a well-known sportsman. His mother, who is a widow, was formerly Miss Edith Storey, of Boston.

The greatest amount of merchandise ever appraised at the New York port in a single month was recorded in March. Goods valued at $86,681,523.07 were passed.

Fire caused a loss of $2,500,000 to the plant of the San Francisco Gas & Electric company.

A mother and four children perished in a tenement house fire at Passaic, N. J.

Mrs. Russell Sage is the largest individual tax payer in New York city, being assessed on $7,500,000.

A hundred passengers were jolted and bruised in a collision between a passenger train and a freight on the Baltimore & Ohio near Fairmont, W. Va.

Most of the business district of Wolcottville, Ind., was destroyed by fire.

Two men were killed by an explosion in the Lowellville steel furnace near Youngstown, O.

H. W. Goode of Portland, Ore., who was president of the Lewis and Clark exposition, died at Atlantic City, N. J.

Postmaster Fred A. Busse was elected mayor of Chicago by a plurality of 13,121 over Mayor Dunne. The entire Republican ticket was successful except for city treasurer. The traction ordinances were approved by a majority of 33,126.

Albert E. Thornton, president of the Atlanta (Ga.) National bank, and well known throughout the south, died, aged 65.

The Arctic brotherhood has raised $5,000 to send the crack Nome (Alaska) basketball team on a tour of the United States.

John O'Keefe, 108 years old, died suddenly while repairing a fence at his home in Brooklyn.

Ginna Fischelto Caraggio and her six-year-old daughter were burned to death in a Milwaukee boarding house.

The island of St. Michael's, in the Azores, was violently shaken by earthquakes.

Capt. William Swift, who was in command of the battleship Connecticut when it grounded near Culebra on January 13, was found guilty of inattention and neglect of duty by the court martial which tried him at Norfolk and sentenced to suspension for nine months and the loss of three numbers.

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of Christian Science, through her counsel, put her entire estate in the hands of three trustees, to foil the relatives who began suit.

E. H. Harriman replying to the president's denial that he had appealed to Harriman for campaign funds, refused to withdraw the charge but admitted the fund to which he contributed was for New York.

J. J. Hill resigned as president of the Great Northern and will be chairman of the board of direction. T. W. Hill, his son, is now president.

Four hundred motormen and conductors of the Michigan United States Railway company of Kalamazoo and Battle Creek on the Battle Creek & Jackson and Michigan Traction Interurban lines, the latter about 75 miles long, voted to go on a strike.

Maj. H. W. Salmon, of Warsaw, Mo., convicted of illegal banking, was refused a new trial and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

The Irish Presbyterian church has agreed to invite Rev. William J. McCaughan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago, to become pastor of the May street congregation at Belfast.

William H. Proctor, the soap manufacturer who committed suicide in Cincinnati, left his entire estate of $10,000,000 to his five children.

Only four persons were killed by the earthquake at Bitlis, Armenia, but the survivors are suffering greatly.

A plot against the life of King Charles of Roumania was discovered in Bucharest.

Congressman Rainey, of Illinois, returning from the isthmus, declared there was graft in the commissary department, but that otherwise the work on the canal was progressing very well.

Stephen S. Sharpe, a pioneer railway builder, died at Kansas City, Kan., aged 71.

Mgr. Nocedal, whose nomination as archbishop of Valencia, Spain, aroused such opposition in political and social circles, is dead. He was formerly in the Philippines and went to Spain on the conclusion of the war.

The long drouth which has caused so much loss to wheat and corn crops of Spain was broken by a torrential rain which fell throughout the country.

Baltimore & Ohio west-bound passenger train No. 7 from Washington to Chicago was derailed at Dillon Falls, O., while rounding a curve. The dining car and two rear passenger coaches left the track.

The supervisors of McHenry county have offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Deputy Game Warden Earle Eldredge, who was found dead in the woods near Richmond, Ill., February 26.

The Shamokin (Pa.) wagon works, an adjoining planing mill and seven small dwellings were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Prof. Belar, of Laibach observatory, says sun spots are indicative of further earthquake disturbances.

Miss Mabel Davidson, daughter of the governor of Wisconsin, was married to F. C. Imbusch, of Milwaukee.

A. B. Jacquith, a grain commission man of Omaha, Neb., killed himself.

Rendered insanely jealous at the sight of his sweetheart in company with another man, Roscoe James, son of the superintendent of the Oregon penitentiary, shot and killed Miss Grace N. Disney, of Warren, Ore., and then shot himself in the head. He will die.

George B. Boswell, aged 52, a millionaire, art connoisseur and retired business man, committed suicide in the East Liberty station of the Pennsylvania railroad, Pittsburg, by shooting himself.

Thrilling experiences in a storm at sea, in which four men lost their lives and the Italian steamship Industria fared badly, are told by two members of the crew who have arrived at Plymouth, England.

Two Kansas City men and their wives were killed when a train hit the carriage in which they were riding.

Mrs. Otto Britting of Millbrook, N. J., drowned herself and two little children.

A Russian student killed two policemen who tried to arrest him as he was entering a revolutionary meeting place in Moscow.

Mrs. W. H. Ogden, of Ripon, Wis., shot a justice of the peace in the chest because he fined her husband one dollar for theft.

William K. Niver, former mayor of Syracuse, N. Y., died, aged 72 years.

Mrs. Joseph Jack, of Trenton, N. J., is blind, with little prospect of regaining her sight, as the result of a violent attack of sneezing.

Bishop John C. Granberry of the Methodist Episcopal church south, died suddenly at his home in Ashland, Va. He was 76 years old and had been bishop since 1883.

Six trainmen were killed in a head-on collision between two freight trains on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad six miles south of Fort Worth, Tex.

Four men are missing as the result of a collision in the North river, New York, when the tug John D. Dailey was run down and sunk by the ferryboat Musconetcong of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company.

The Peterson planing mill, St. Louis, was almost totally destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $50,000.

I. C. Towner, a resident of Elgin, Ill., for 50 years and one of that city's pioneer merchants, is dead.

Rev. Richard Hall, aged 90 years, died at his home in St. Paul, Minn., after an illness of about ten days. He was born in Ipswich, N. H., in 1817 and was one of the first Congregational missionaries in the territory of Minnesota.

F. A. Holbrook, promoter of the church and school furniture trust, pleaded guilty, at Chicago, to charges of violating the anti-trust law and of conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Mrs. Charlotte Graff, of Chicago, was killed with an ax by her husband after a quarrel.

The trial of Haywood, one of the officers of the Western Federation of Miners, for connection with the murder of former Gov. Steunenberg, was set for May 9 at Boise, Idaho.

Republicans elected their state ticket in Michigan by majorities of about 75,000.

Fire, believed to be incendiary, destroyed the plant of the West Kentucky Coal company at Sturgis, Ky., causing a loss of about $85,000.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra postponed their visit to Madrid until the autumn.

One thousand grooms employed in New York riding academies and livery stables struck for recognition of their union.

Abraham Ruef asked the supreme court of California to free him from the custody of Elisor Biggy and order him into the charge of the sheriff, whom Judge Dunne disqualified on the gound of personal interest.

The carpenters of Minneapolis and Vancouver and laundry workers of San Francisco went on strike.

One of the largest cold storage warehouses on the Isthmus of Panama, with its contents, was burned.

The Griffin law, which prohibits all games of chance, went into effect in Montana.

Don Carlos Taft, former professor of geology in the University of Illinois, died of apoplexy in Chicago.

A portion of the city of Havana, Cuba, was inundated from the sea and many lives were endangered.

The United States Steel corporation decided to build a big iron and steel plant in Duluth.

A band of Bulgarians attacked the old Servian towns of Rudnik and Topolcha, burning 30 houses, killing seven men and maltreating a number of women and children.

Former Congressman Galusha A. Grow died at his home in Glenwood, Pa., as a result of a general breakdown attributed to old age.

Fire in the Palazzo del Drago, Ambassador Griscom's house in Rome, did about $10,000 damage. Mr. Griscom was slightly burned.

Victor L. Berger announced the plans of the national executive board of the Socialist party for spreading socialism in 26 states of the union where interest is lukewarm. He said President Roosevelt had stolen many of the ideas of the socialists.

Chili's failure to send a minister to Washington is due to the failure of its plan to raise the Chilian representative to ambassadorial rank.

Druzsaninnikoff, an ex-policeman who was sentenced February 21 to a year's imprisonment for torturing Russian peasants during a punitive expedition, has been killed by peasant prisoners in the jail at Kursk.

Mrs. E. S. Loveland, a niece of the late Collis P. Huntington, was killed while operating a new automobile, at Oneonta, N. Y.

It is currently reported that J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, has acquired for $1,200,000 the unique collection of Jules Van Den Poreboom, of Brussels, which comprises furniture, pictures, arms, brasses, ancient engravings and chimney pieces.

William B. Thayer, a member of the Emery, Bird Thayer Dry Goods company, conducting a department store at Kansas City, Mo., died, aged 55 years.

The dead body of Paul J. Weller, of Chicago, a clothing cutter, was found in a swamp near Johnstown, N. Y. There was a bullet hole in his head and a revolver lay beside his body.

Jim Williams (colored), charged with attacking Lillie Mizener (white), near Colbert, I. T., was lynched at Durant by a mob of a thousand people.

The city of Bitlis, Turkey, was wrecked by an earthquake.

H. E. Bowman, an insurance agent representing himself to be from Columbus, was found dead in a Delphos (O.) hotel.

San Francisco officials admitted they feared an attempt would be made to rescue Abraham Ruef by force. Elisor Biggy's guards were instructed in that event to shoot Ruef first and then attend to the rescuers.

The situation in Roumania appears to be quieting down, but large numbers of refugees still continue to make their way out of the troubled districts.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, March 30—The legislature is preparing to do its part toward counteracting the ruling of the state supreme court in upholding the proposed issue of $60,000,000 of additional stock by the Great Northern railroad. Today A. J. Rockna secured permission of the house to call out of the railroad committee a measure of his which had been sleeping there for some time. The bill provides that before any road shall issue any bonds or securities for construction or extension purposes, they shall first be passed upon by the railroad and warehouse commission. The bill is a measure drawn by the attorney general some time ago and introduced at his request to counteract the possible adverse decision of the court which came. The bill was placed under the head of general orders.

The bill to increase the salaries of district and supreme court judges, was recommended for passage by the committee of the whole, tho vigorously opposed by Representatives Philipps and Thayer.

St. Paul, April 1—The railroads today submitted their proposition for a compromise of all pending disagreements with the state, to the legislative conference committee and the railroad commission. The offer of settlement did not come up to expectations, and it took the committee less than five minutes to vote unanimously against recommending the legislature to accept the compromise. This means that the negotiations between the roads and the state which have been going on for so many weeks, are now all off, and that there will now be war to a finish in both legislative halls and courts. The offer which the conference committee will tomorrow submit to the legislature, provides for a 2½ cent fare maximum rate, with 2,000 mile books as now issued, a 500 mile family mileage book for $10. The expected offer of a 2 cent rate on all round trip tickets did not materialize, neither did the 2,000 mile book, good on all roads, to be sold for $40 instead of $50, with a rebate of $10 when used within a year. The offer relative to freight rates was also disappointing. The northern roads refused to grant any further concessions on grain, and the southern roads agreed to meet the cut made in grain last fall by the northern lines. The reduction offered on commodity rates was about 50 per cent of the 18 per cent cut ordered last fall by the state railroad and warehouse commission and now tied up in litigation.

Outside of the receiving of the compromise offer from the railroads by the conference committee, today was an uninteresting one in legislative circles. It was devoted almost entirely to the introduction of new bills, the attorney general having ruled that this is the last day new bills may be introduced. A perfect flood of measures appeared in both senate and house, and evening sessions were held to permit members delayed in drafting measures to "get aboard." As a whole the bills were of minor importance. The one class of bills which predominated were for state aid to counties in road and bridge work. There were a number of bills introduced which follow with slight variation along lines of measures already under consideration. There are now a total of 2,056 bills which have been introduced, and the great bulk of which are still pending. In the senate the measures number 882; in the house, 1,174. T. J. Brady of St. Paul introduced a bill to increase the governor's salary from $5,000 to $7,000 a year. Senator T. M. Pugh presented a bill which grants the rights of eminent domain to public service corporations. The senate game and fish committee introduced a measure revising the game and fish laws to agree with desires of Wisconsin relative to interstate waters, and also creating a series of rewards for those supplying evidence against illegal hunters of large game. J. B. Murphy introduced a bill in the house limiting the hours of work for female labor to eight a day, between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. Senator McGowan introduced a bill establishing the specific gravity instead of the inefficient "flash" test for oils in Minnesota, and also extending the same test to gasoline.

The bill to increase generally the salaries of state officials was killed by the house in committee of the whole today by a vote of 40 against, to 32 for the measure.

St. Paul, April 2—The legislature did but two things today, but those two are numbered among the most important actions of the session. The first was the acceptance of the report of the conference committee appointed to transmit the offer of settlement by the railroads of all difficulties between these corporations and the state, and the passage of the two-cent per mile fare bill on adoption of the recommendation that the offer of the roads be rejected. The second important action was striking death to the tonnage tax bill in the house, as a result of the announcement that the United States Steel corporation has decided to establish an immense steel plant in the city of Duluth.

The two-cent fare bill as passed, provides a flat rate of 2 cents per mile for all distances as the maximum rate, permitting the roads at their discretion to make lower excursion rates. For children under 12 years, the rate is 1 cent per mile. Each passenger is allowed 150 pounds of baggage, except children under 12 who are allowed 75 pounds of baggage each. The penalty for violating the act is made a fine not to exceed $5,000, or imprisonment not to exceed five years. The vote on the bill in the senate, was 48 to 4. In the house the bill carried 105 to 4.

The death of the tonnage tax bill (5 cents per ton on all iron ore mined) was solely due to the announcement that the steel trust was going to begin manufacture of iron and steel in Minnesota. C. B. Miller, the eloquent young member of the house from Duluth, acted as spokesman for the Zenith City interest. He spoke for nearly an hour, and plead against immediate heavy taxation of an immense industry which had just decided to move to Minnesota. He stated that the erection of the plant at Duluth would mean an expenditure of at least $5,000,000 to $6,000,000, and on its start, as soon as ready for operation, would employ some 15,000 people. The establishment of the plant was a dream of the past years at Duluth finally brought into realization. The establishment of the tonnage tax, might reverse the decision of the steel interests to establish the plant in Minnesota. Would the legislature thus threaten the future of Duluth, even of Minnesota.

The legislature decided it would not, even in spite of a number of speeches on the other side of the question, and killed the tonnage tax bill, 51 for it, and 58 against it.

St. Paul, April 3—Reciprocal demurrage is now up to the governor for his signature. The house of representatives this afternoon concurred in the few amendments the senate had made to the bill by a vote of 85 ayes, 2 nays. John G. Lennon of Minneapolis explained that he voted against the measure because he believed that without being accompanied by a stringent anti-rebate law, it would be an aid instead of detriment to rebating. J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji stated that since the amendment giving the school fund half the penalties collected had been struck out of the measure, he was no longer in favor of it, and was the other member who voted against it.

The senate this afternoon had a special order of the permanent tax commission bill substituted by the tax committee for one which had been introduced by George P. Wilson of Minneapolis. The measure was finally passed by a vote of 42 to 17 against. Strong arguments were made in its favor by Senators Wilson, Sullivan, and others. Senator George R. Laybourn offered an amendment to cut down salaries of the three commissioners to $3,600 each, from $6,000 as in the bill. This failed, but another amendment fixing the salaries at $5,000, presented by Senator Wilson, prevailed. One other amendment of importance which prevailed, gives the commission all the powers formerly had by the state board of equalization.

The senate spent over an hour today debating the Sundberg anti-cigarette bill. The bill was strongly opposed by Senator Farrington. He called attention that it was not aimed at aiding the youth of the state, but that it prohibited men, one and all, from being able to secure or use cigarettes in Minnesota. He did not believe in cigarettes, he opposed them for boys particularly; but he did think the bill was too much of an infringement on individual rights. Senator Witherstine took the opposite view.

"Two years ago," he said, "I sent communications to the superintendents of the city schools, asking two questions. How many boys in your schools have failed to pass, and how many of such boys are cigarette fiends. The replies came that 1,700 failed, and that all of them used cigarettes."

The senate finally turned down a motion by Farrington to indefinitely postpone, and advanced the bill from general orders to the calendar on motion of its author, Senator Sundberg.

The house railroad committee met in executive session this evening. The Rockne bill, regulating stock and bond issues of railroads and aimed at controverting the recent decision of the supreme court against the state in the Great Northern $60,000,000 stock issue case, came very near getting a severe blow. The committee almost unanimously voted to recommend the bill for indefinite postponement, but reconsidered this action and decided to have the bill referred to the judiciary committee to look into its constitutional state of health.

Bonbon Receptacles.

These may be easily made from large goose eggs by puncturing the shells at the small end. Slice the top off about half an inch and turn out the yolks and whites. Glue the shell to green cardboard four inches square, on which print in yellow and silver an appropriate couplet. Paint the outside shell silver and decorate it with sprays of forget-me-nots. The inside may be tinted delicately with a coating of pale blue paint. Just before arranging the shells on the table fill them with assorted candies.

Awake to Needs of the Day.

Hungary spends $17,500,000 yearly on its technical and agricultural schools.

Failures Before Success.

The child creeps before it walks; the babe lisps and stutters before it talks. It is as impossible for a man to scale the heights of success at a single bound as it is for the young bird to leap into midair at the first attempt without passing successfully through several necessary stages of failure.—Exchange.

TONIC FOR MOTHERS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Safe and Reliable—A Favorite Household Remedy.

Motherhood may be the crowning blessing of a woman's life or it may bring grief and sorrow. Mrs. M. J. Wight, of 170 Seventh Street, Auburn, Maine, relates her experience after the birth of her daughter in 1901, as follows: "I was all run down at the time the baby came and did not improve in health rapidly after. I was pale, thin and bloodless. My stomach distressed me being full of gas all the time and my heart fluttered so that I could scarcely breathe.

"Finally I remembered that a friend had recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me so I commenced using them. I gained in strength rapidly while the baby throve also. When I expected my next child I started taking the pills again as a tonic and strengthener and had no such difficulty as before. I got up better and my strength came back much sooner.

"A year ago last winter I had an attack of rheumatism in the hands which went from one hand to the other. The joints swelled up and were so stiff I could not move them. The pain extended up through my arms and shoulders. I felt sick enough to go to bed but did not do so. This attack lasted for several months. I tried several remedies but finally came back to using the pills which had done me so much good before and found that they benefited me almost at once. I have not been troubled since."

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or they will be sent by mail post-paid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Send for book of cures.

Best Violin Strings.

The best strings for violins are of Italian make and are from the intestines of spring lambs, killed in September. The process of drying and bleaching of the woods and strings by the hot Italian sun, rather than by the artificial method used in other countries, accounts in a great measure for the superior quality of both materials. This intense heat was also the reason for the slow distillation of the oils used by the Italian makers, which always remained at a high temperature, and the varnish, slowly soaking into the woods of the violins beneath the heat of those Italian summers, produced, in part, the mellowness of tone that gives to a Cremona instrument its value, after a lapse of 200 or more years.—March Circle.

Home of the Icebergs.

Almost all the icebergs seen in the north Atlantic during June are products of the coast of Labrador, formed from the ice fields that had filled the indentations of that coast the previous winter. July's icebergs come from further north in the vicinity of Baffin Land, those of August come from still further north, and though fewer in number than those of the earlier summer, are larger in individuality. From the coast of Labrador may be seen an endless procession of these ice mountains coming out of the north and taking their way majestically southward until they lose their being in the warmer waters and climate of the south Atlantic.—Maine Journal.

Tantalizing Man.

"I see by the paper," said Mrs. Blinks at the breakfast table, "that a delegation of women suffragettes is coming to this country."

Mr. Blinks said nothing.

"And they're going to invade Washington and make a speech to the president, and all."

Blinks still silent.

"I declare," snapped the lady, "You're the most tantalizing man in existence. There you sit like a statue, never saying a word to show that you don't know what you're talking about."

Keep your fears to yourself, but share your courage with others.—Stevens.

A FRIENDLY GROCER.

Dropped a Valuable Hint About Coffee.

"For about eight years," writes a Mich. woman, "I suffered from nervousness—part of the time down in bed with nervous prostration.

"Sometimes I would get numb and it would be almost impossible for me to speak for a spell. At others, I would have severe bilious attacks, and my heart would flutter painfully when I would walk fast or sweep.

"I have taken enough medicine to start a small drug store, without any benefit. One evening our grocer was asking husband how I was and he urged that I quit coffee and use Postum, so he brought home a pkg. and I made it according to directions and we were both delighted with it.

"So we quit coffee altogether and used only Postum. I began to get better in a month's time and look like another person, the color came back to my cheeks, I began to sleep well, my appetite was good and I commenced to take on flesh and become interested in everything about the house.

"Finally I was able to do all my own work without the least sign of my old trouble. I am so thankful for the little book, 'The Road to Wellville.' It has done me so much good. I haven't taken medicine of any kind for six months and don't need any.

"A friend of ours who did not like Postum as she made it, liked mine, and when she learned to boil it long enough, her's was as good as mine. It's easy if you follow directions."

Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

THE JAMESTOWN FAIR

SOMETHING OF BIG EXPOSITION SOON TO OPEN.

Great Naval Feature Will Be One of the Attractions—Many Points of Historic Interest in the Vicinity.

New York.—That the Jamestown exposition which will be formally opened by President Roosevelt on April [illegible], will astonish the country by its scope and magnitude is the opinion of [illegible] Sutton, chief of exploitation.

"The grounds, buildings and exhibits will be in complete readiness by the opening date," said Mr. Sutton, "and in this it will differ from all expositions that have preceded it. The visitor who comes on the opening day will know that he will see as much as he could at any time later. I have been connected with several world's fairs, but I consider this one remarkable in many ways.

"Its site on the shores of Hampton Roads makes possible the great naval feature, wherein it is unlike all former expositions, while the historic interest attaching to all of the surrounding country will continue it is ooe of the favorite trips for tourists.

"The grounds on Sewell's point have long had the finished apparance of a completed park, and to this end the natural beauties of the land lent themselves admirably to the art of the landscape designer. The garish appearance common to buildings covered with stoff is overcome by the use of brick as a veneer, and this comports with the style of architecture, that of the Georgian Renaissance, usually called the Colonial style, some of the finest examples of which ore found in the old mansions along the James river.

"The great attention drawn to the naval and military features of the exposition, because of their novelty, has somewhat obscured in the public mind the fact that this exposition is really an industrial one of more than usual interest, inasmuch as the exhibits are in a selected order illustrating man's progress in all of the crafts during a period of 300 years.

"The largest manufacturers have taken such an interest in the enterprise as to fill all of the space in the large exhibit palaces and cause an overflow into auxiliary buildings. Some of the exhibitors have erected costly structures for their own exclusive use, among these being the American and Baldwin Locomotive works.

"The States' Exhibits building will enable the various states to have, in addition, special exhibits showing their respective resources. The separate state buildings, designed for social purposes, are particularly beautiful in design and of permanent construction, as are indeed a large proportion of the exposition structures. The exposition site promises to become a very important and attractive suburb of growing Norfolk, from which it is reached by a pleasant trolley ride.

"Congress and conventions of varied character will fill every day of the exposition. The exposition will also be the center of interest for amateur sports, from foot-racing to yachting. Automobiling will play an important role, and in this connection 'good roads will receive special ottention and their making will be shown.

"It is curious that despite the fact that newspapers have explained from the first thot the exposition is on Sewell's point, many people think it is to be at Jamestown Island, the site of the original settlement, the establishment of which, 300 years ago the exposition is to commemorate. Only the ruins remain with several monuments to mark sites, but the patriotic societies have been restoring the old church, and the trip to the island, which is some 60 miles up the James river, will certainly be taken by a large part of the exposition visitors.

President Myers of the Jamestown Exposition.

"Old Point, with Fort Monroe, and Hampton, the oldest town of English origin in the country, and Newport News, with its great shipyards, are across Hampton Roads. On the Roads the battle of the Merrimac and Monitor will be reproduced by naval vessels. Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered, is but a pleasant boat trip distance, and many will take advantage of the opportunity to see the great Dismal Swamp, only 23 miles from Norfolk. The battlefields of Virginia and Richmond, the capital of the confederacy, will attract many more.

SILENCE AND MYSTERY THERE

Remarkable French Villa, Where Electricity Has Replaced Servants.

Enchanted House of Electricity.

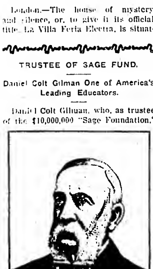
London.—The house of mystery and silence, or, to give it its official title, La Villa Feria Electra, is situated at Troyes and is owned by Mr. Georgia Knap. All the work usually done by servants, and much that is usually left undone, is performed by electric contrivance. The visitor to the villa finds that, when he rings, the door opens by itself, while a voice proceeding from a hidden gramophone tells him to allow the door to close.

Once inside the visitor is confronted by a mat that rubs and dries his boots. Press a button near the bed in your bedroom and a hot water bottle is heated—an arrangement that would suit Toddles. In the morning, curtains fly apart and shutters open in response to the pushing of a button; breakfost, papers and letters arrive at the table in the same mysterious way. An electric lift brings electrically cooked food through the center of the dining table. In the laundry electric washing machines do the washing. Everything in the house, indeed, is run by electricity, and there are even electric alarms for use against those who would break in and steal.

TRUSTEE OF SAGE FUND.

Daniel Colt Gilman One of America's Leading Educators.

Daniel Colt Gilman, who, as trustee of the $10,000,000 "Sage Foundation,"



DANIEL COIT GILMAN.
(Famous Educator Will Help to Distribute Big Sage Gift.)

will wield a powerful influence in the work of curing social evils in the poverty stricken districts in our large cities, succeeded Carl Schurz as head of the National Civil Service Reform league. He is one of tho foremost educators in America.

He was the president of the great University of California. He had previously spent two years as attache of the American legation in St. Petersburg and several years as professor at Yale. When the Johns Hopkins university was founded in Boltimore Prof. Gilman was called to preside over its destinies. He soon brought the institution into the front rank of American seats of learning. Prof. Gilman was the first president of the Carnegie Institute and has served on many important educational and charitable boards.

A Plea for the Indolent.

Men who fill unaccustomed positions exacting severe mental toll, are almost sure to be short-lived. Persons whose callings subject them to a heavy nervous strain ought occasionally to spend a day or two in bed. Even an afternoon nap is a tonic, and may do much to lessen the wear and teor of nervous, anxious days. One of the ablest statesmen of modern times, when once reproached in early life for indolence, retorted, "I am storing energy."—Success Magazine.

Too Free.

"Miss Prim was very angry about her admirer's taking out a marriage license without consulting her, wasn't she."

"Perfectly furious. She said as far as marrying her was concerned, it was a liberty, not license."—Baltimore American.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

J. J. Hill Retires.

St. Paul—Jomes J. Hill retired as president of the Great Northern Railway company at a special meeting of tho directors in St. Paul, retaining the chairmanship of the board of directors.

Louis W. Hill becomes president of the company and Frank H. McGuigan first vice-president, the other officers remaining the same.

The changes went into effect immediately.

"I don't retire," said Mr. Hill. "Instead of two men's work I shall now do one. The compooy's business has doubled in the last five or six years, which renders necessary tho increase of the operating staff."

Mr. Hill, as president of the company, has been chairman of the board of directors, and the organization is enlarged by the election of chairman.

Louis W. Hill, first vice-president, has practically been in charge of the departments of the road for about three years, but with his election to the presidency he becomes vested with more executive power, toking off part of the burden which has been resting on his father's shoulders.

Mr. McGuigan, formerly fourth vice-president of the Grand Trunk, with headquarters at Montreal, Can., is given direct charge of operating matters.

Louis W. Hill has been first vice-president of tho Great Northern for the last four years. His supervision over the various departments during that time makes him eminently qualified to assume the responsibilities of his new position. His active railroad career on the road covers a period of fourteen years, and besides his natural abilities he has had the advantage of a wide experience in railroad matters.

Suicide.

St. Peter—Rather than face trial for alleged irregularities in his office, G. A. Blomberg, Jr., formerly clerk of the court of Nicollet county, shot himself through the head. He is still alive, but cannot survive the night.

Blomberg's suicidal act followed a long series of difficulties which grew out of an investigation of his office. He was clerk of the court for 13 years, but was defeated for renomination at the primary election two years ago. Less than a year after he stepped out of office he was accused of falsifying his records and when his books were examined by a state official a shortage of several hundred dollars was discovered.

Blomberg returned this money to the county, but the grand jury at the June term of court returned four indictments against him.

He was arrested at Billings, Mont., and after being brought back to St. Peter was admitted to bail.

The cases against him would have come up at the term of court next month.

Blomberg went into a bedroom at his home, pushed the muzzle of a revolver into his right ear and fired a bullet into his brain.

A few minutes later he was found by his wife and when a doctor was called Blomberg made a statement to him and the doctor sent a message to Coroner Merritt.

Prize Steer.

St. Paul—Black Jack, the famous prize-winning Polled Angus steer, which created considerable comment at the state experiment station during the past year, is turned into meat, and was on exhibition at the Andrew Schoch Co., Seventh and Broadway.

Black Jack was sold to Swift & Co. March 21, exhibited at their yards for a few days and was admired by a party of legislators.

Black Jack was bred on the Woodlawn farm, at Creston, Ill., in December, 1904, and was purchased by the state agricultural college in December, 1905, and shortly afterwards began a career of prize winning, which ended this winter with his taking the highest honors at the International show.

He was slaughtered this week, and his dressed carcass weighed 1,222 lbs., a yield of prime meat of 68.45 per cent, and cost Mr. Schoch over $180.

Taxing Bachelors.

Warren—Mayor August Lundgren, who has just been elected for the fourth consecutive time, has undertaken to settle the bachelor question, so far as it concerns Warren, at any rate. At a recent council meeting a proposition was made to impose a tax upon all bachelors over twenty-five years of age. Mayor Lundgren, however, persuaded the members of the council, who were unanimously in favor of action of some kind, to allow him to try persuasive methods before using compulsion.

He has now issued a proclamation in which he offers to make presents of fine residence lots to the first five bachelors or spinsters who abandon the selfish state of celibacy for that of matrimony, to the profit and advancement of the city.

NEWS NOTES.

Brainerd—The next meeting of the Minnesota Educational Association will be held in St. Paul.

Minneapolis—Minneapolis flour will be sent to the suffering poor of China, 40,000 sacks having been ordered by the famine relief commission from the Washburn-Crosby Company of Minneapolis. The flour will be shipped free of charge over the Chicago and North-Western road and the Harriman lines to San Francisco. From there the United States government will send it to Shanghai on the government transport Buford.

Mankato—Joseph N. Rolger, a farmer of Stately township, Brown county, was obliged to pay a fine of $10 for sending first-class matter through the mails at fourth-class rates. Postoffice Inspector Morris ran the case down.

Margie—Fire completely destroyed the store of Daly & Hayden of this place, entailing a loss of $2,000; insurance, $900. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Delavan—The Cargill elevator at this place collapsed a day or so ago and 10,000 bushels of grain were scattered around. No one was injured. The elevator was erected in 1870.

TORTURE UP TO DATE.

He pulls his shoulders round in turn,
And twists and writhes in vain;
His face is pale; his eyelids burn
As if in frenzied pain.

No cry for mercy rends the air;
He dumbly bears his grief.
No help is nigh, and his despair
Is almost past belief.

His body shows no trace of blood;
He's not upon the rack. . . .
It's all because his collar stud
Is sliding down his back!
—Leslie Thomas, in Royal Magazine.

Consonance.

"We asked for bread," cried the poor, "and you hand us a stone."

It was the old song, but now, curiously enough, the rich acknowledged the justness of the implied rebuke.

"Ah, no doubt a lemon would be more in consonance with the spirit of the age," quoth they.

And indeed it was not to be gainsaid that the fashions in a manner affected these things.—Puck.

Dangerous Letters.

"I hear that you had a great deal of trouble with your typewriter," said the banker. "What was the cause?"

"The letters," replied the old broker.

"But couldn't you get an expert to fix them?"

"Oh, no. These were the letters she wrote to me when I was in the mountains and my wife found in my pockets."—Chicago Daily News.

Natural Query.

Bacon—The bee martin, a bird found in Mexico, has a trick of ruffling up the feathers on its head into a semblance of a flower. When a bee comes along to sip honey from the supposed flower it is snapped up by the bird.

Egbert—And does the bee martin ever have occasion to ejaculate "stung?"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Truant Angel.

Willie looked up into the sky and saw an airship for the first time. It was very high up and looked very small. After watching the wings on the machine flapping up and down, he said:

"Say, ma, look up into the sky! There's an angel ploying truant."—Judge.

Such Innocence!

Mrs. Stubb—Land's sakes, John, there must be a great many barber shops in Wall street!

Mr. Stubb—What causes you to think so, Maria?

Mrs. Stubb—Why, the papers say hundreds of men are trimmed there every day.—Chicago Daily News.

Great Originality.

"Judge Bunkum is a man of great originality, isn't he?"

"I never noticed it."

"In his speech on the trust question, the other day, he didn't refer to the Standard Oil company as 'this hydra-headed monster.'" — Chicago Record-Herald.

Exception.

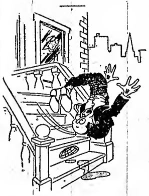
Wife (during the spat)—I don't believe you ever did a charitable act in your life.

Husband—I did one, at least, that I have lived to regret.

Wife—Indeed! What was it pray?

Husband—I saved you from dying an old maid.—Chicago Daily News.

THE GOLF CRAZE.



From the window she saw him coming up the steps.

"He comes!" she exclaimed joyfully.

There was a bit of ice on the top step. He struck it. Then he struck each of the other steps in succession.

"Heavens!" she cried, "He has foozled his approach."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Preferred Something Substantial.

"Jack told me he could live on my kisses forever."

"Are you going to let him?"

"I am just as soon as I see whether or not he can give something more substantial for me to live on."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Enemies Now.

Eva—There goes Belle. She was selling kisses at the church fair last night. She said it was for charity.

Edna—I don't doubt it. It certainly would be charity for anyone to kiss her.—Chicago Daily Newa.

The Prevailing Disease.

"He makes such big eyes at me."

"You mustn't let him, Maria. First thing you know, you'll be catching a bad case of exaggerated ego."—Baltimore American.

Horrible Thought.

She—Don't you feel well, dear?

He—My head feels heavy. Do you suppose those biscuits you made could have gone to my head?—Yonkers Statesman.

JUST HINTS OF ALL SORTS

Information of Fashion's Fancies Gleaned from Those Who Know the Art of Dress.

The stiff embroidered linen collar so oddly worn with all sorts of dressy toilettes is now being relegated to its natural place on the blouse. For the dressy occasions there are newer ones in fashionable favor of soft mull edged with high entre deux of fine tucks and lace with falling lace and exquisitely fine embroidered rabats. For swagger morning wear is the black silk stock—some are even wearing it with lingerie blouses as we bove been the linen collar. This also is finished with a white lace or a tiny black silk bow. It's awfully knowing looking.

A band of three-inch wide black velvet ribbon mokes a chorming neck finish. It is passed through several narrow gold, pearl-set bars that serve to keep it well in place, and then tied in a small bow in front.

Amber for the hair is the latest thing. All sorts of lovely shapes in knobs and balls are available in excellent imitation, if the reol is beyond one's purse; and for the first time the imitation is shown in truly exquisitely carved combs built high after the Spanish ones. Curvings, wonderful convolutions, and piercings, all after this Spanish pattern, are chic.

One of the most expensive items of our toilettes is the acquiring of the small and smart accessories. Just now, for instance, we are all on the lookout for something new in the way of belts. I've found it! A very wide supple one of white silk braid, the mesh loosely woven and unlined, and centered by a strip of open mesh of a different weave, through which is run a strip of white kid. Long clasps of white kid are at the back and two sides, quite ornate and touched by gold, and a long wider clasp is at the front. It's awfully nice with white blouses.

Little collar sets to be worn with the new tailored blouse—I mean shirt—are being exploited. They are ever so pretty! For those linen collars that are pierced in front with two eyelet-holes, there is a pair of links consisting of two jeweled balls connecting with tiny chains with cuff links to match. All the semi-precious stones, such as amethyst and coral, are used, the colorings to match the costume.

Tortoise shell has quite ousted silver from the toilet table. Of course it is frightfully expensive, but one may begin to collect it bit by bit. Gold being quite out of the question, except for a few, and silver having become so common from its small price, it is natural to turn to this lovely material. It won't be long, no doubt, before it is adroitly imitated, but so far it has not been for toilet articles, so that it has an air of taste and refinement that is most desirable. It so well bespeaks its intrinsic worth that it hardly needs a gold or silver monogram, but most of those that I have seen have had one. It was rather gilding the lily. Tiny jewels set in platinum are also seen on these shell pieces, which, of course, add to their cost, but enhance their beauty. Up to date, all the necessary pieces have not been made, but the largest pieces like brushes, mirrors, combs, boxes, etc., are seen.

It may sound like a truism to say that soap and water will clean anything. But, I mean, that one may dare to use it on the most delicate fabric with reckless confidence. A very elaborate crepe de chine blouse covered with Chinese embroidery was cleaned daringly the other day, with great success. It was dirty across the front and around the choker, and it was laid down on a marble and scrubbed, not too hard, of course, with a nail-brush wet with warm water and much soap. It was so dirty that it meant a trip to the expensive dry-cleaners before it could be worn again, so it was felt that it couldn't do it any harm. But after it had been rinsed off by dashing it lightly under the cold water faucet, and dried quickly on a hot radiator, it looked as fresh as possible. I should hesitate to immerse such a bodice entirely in water, but this method I gladly recommend.

Happy the girl who did not listen to voices that whispered of the short life in store for English eyelet embroidery, but who perfected herself in this most effective branch of needlework. Instead of falling behind in the procession, the eyelet work is more popular this season than it was last, and it is appearing in fabrics of every posible weight. The bit of embroidery gives distinction to a blouse, and the rapid needlewoman can outshine her sister who can afford imported frocks if she will bend her energies at once on the embroidering of summer raiment.

Quite as important as embroidery this season is the ability to insert lace. Some of the smartest summer trimmings show lace insets or medallions in point de Paris, German and French Val., Cluny or point de Venise, set into machine embroidery such as nainsook or Swiss.

Prudent Women Are Now Planning Summer Outfits

It is becoming more and more the custom to arrange for the summer outfit far in advance. After all, it is but a return to the old days when the prudent housewife planned the family wardrobe months ahead, employed the family seamstress and settled down to handwork. The oldtime village dressmaker, the friend of the family, is now rarely known, but there is no end of dressmakers and seamstresses who work by the day and who at the present moment are absorbed in making the simple gowns of muslin and wash materials that are included in every outfit.

All white costumes are always smart, but this year the striped ones are the fad. White with a hair line of black on collar and cuffs, is a favorite pattern, and there is an endless variety in the width of the stripe. In dark colors the hair line of a darker or lighter shade is far smarter than the shadow check or plaid of last year, and the colors are most charming.

There are not many long coats this season; the three-quarter length in the fitted cutaway design with rounded fronts is a favorable model, while the much shorter half-fitting pony coat is also popular.

White serge costumes are always effective, and this spring will be more elaborate than usual, for they are heavily braided, often two kinds of this trimming being used; the jackets are almost invariably short, the longest hip length, and while apparently loose define the lines of the figure quite sharply. White linen and all wash materials are made with the short coats also, and these last are extremely fanciful in effect, the plain linen and the embroidered also being made on the same lines. It is rather a fad just now to have a plain linen skirt, waist and jacket, the only decoration being on the jacket, a narrow fanciful binding on the lapels and the lower part of the sleeves. The different varieties of braid afford an excellent opportunity of using as varied an effect as a pretty and attractive fancy elects, but the braided revers are charming, and they are not difficult or tedious, nor do they require any especial cleverness.

Circular Veil for Picture Hat the Newest Thing

Truly the fashionable woman's veil gives her as much concern these days as any of the more important articles of her wardrobe. No longer will a piece of Brussels net, malines or other gauzy material do, purchased by the yard and tied over her face. Her veil must be made and nearly always trimmed, and in all cases is an expensive luxury. The circular veil for the large picture hat is the newest thing. It is fashioned somewhat like the old flare flounce that adorned skirts a few years ago and has its center cut out so as to fit better around the crown of the chapeau. Where the opening is thus formed there is usually a casing or else a narrow lace beading of the same color as the veil, through which baby ribbon of the same shade is run to tie it in the back. The bottom of the veil is edged with a narrow plisse of lace or a band or two of velvet of the same color as the veil. Any clever woman with a yard and a half of chiffon or lace can easily make one of these veils herself at a fraction of the cost of the ready made variety. The material should be folded in the middle and then folded in sections so as to simplify the process of cutting out the circle of the outer edge and the smaller one which fits around the crown. The depth of the veil when cut depends upon the size of the brim of the picture hat with which it is to be worn. This should be measured, and sufficient material allowed to enable the veil to fall below the chin.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER

James Wesley Convicted by Jury in the Dahl Case—Accomplice On Trial.

Bemidji, Minn., April 6. James Wesley has been convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of N. O. Dahl on April 7, 1904.

In addition to the regular jail attendant, Wesley is being watched by a special guard on account of threats of suicide in case of conviction, which he made after his arrest.

Thursday morning court convened again for the trial of Paul Fournier, Wesley's alleged accomplice and the man who, according to the testimony given in Wesley's trial, actually fired the fatal shot.

County attorney Funkley did not say whether Fournier would be tried first for the murder of N. O. Dahl or that of the daughter, Aagot Dahl.

The verdict against Wesley gives general satisfaction here, and little doubt is felt that Fournier also will be convicted.

James Wesley is 30 years old. He always has been a common laborer, working as a lumberjack, and according to people who knew him has been industrious.

The killing of N. O. Dahl and his daughter Aagot was one of the most cold-blooded and brutal murders in the annals of crime in Northern Minnesota.

An almost helpless old man white haired and past 62 years of age, and a young women, 23 years old, sickly [illegible] and without suspicion as to danger of any kind, were the victim of the murderers who shed blood in the hope of obtaining a few paltry dollars.

Mr. Dahl and his daughter lived in shacks on their claims in Beltrami county.

They frequently came to Quiring postoffice until March 1904, when their mail remained uncalled for. After a few weeks suspicion was aroused and searching parties hunted for the two. Finally, on July 26 of that year, the badly decomposed body of Dahl was found under the roots of a tree.

Fournier and Wesley were suspected of the murder and were indicted by the grand jury. Fournier was arrested, but Wesley was not apprehended until a year later, but the evidence against the two was not strong enough to convict them, so they were released. No trace of Aagot Dahl was found until Aug. 17, 1904, when her skeleton was discovered under a pile of brush.

County Attorney Funkley has been working on the clues to the mystery ever since, and on Jan. 21 Wesley and Fournier were again indicted, the conviction of Wesley resulting.

Subscribe for the Gazette.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of [illegible] Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the [illegible] of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1319 Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.

CLASS PLAY POSTPONED.

The "Sweet Girl Graduates" Will Not Make Their Appearance Until April 19th.

The Class Play of '07 the "Sweet Girl Graduates" which was scheduled to appear at the "Met" tomorrow evening has been postponed to Friday, April 19th, just one week from the former date.

Owing to other duties the class has not been able to hold rehearsals necessary to bring the play up to the point desired, and with the adding of several features, which it will take some little time to perfect, it was deemed advisable to postpone the play to the date named.

A short sketch, composed of eight characters, is being arranged to be put on right after the main performance, and will add materially to the evenings entertainment.

The class will put in some hard work on the play from now on and everyone should turn out and help give them a good house on the evening of its' presentation.

Show Good Increase.

The receipts of the postoffice for the past year show a substantial increase in the business of the postal department of this city, over that of last year. The gross receipts for the year ending March 31st. 1907, amounting to $4,739.21, as against $3,809.81 for the year ending March 31st, 1906, or a gain of $929.40 over the amount of business transacted last year. The above figures which have just been given out by Postmistress Marshall, are exceedingly gratifying to the patrons of the office, as postal receipts are generally taken as a criterion from which to judge a city's progress, and the substantial increase noted shows that Red Lake Falls is steadily forging ahead.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof.

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable.

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice.

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20 100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th, A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,) Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota.
m28-m9

Band Concert Free.

The management of the Red Lake Falls Band requests us to announce that there will be no admittance charge made for the April concert and dance which will be held on the 26th. Children, however, must be accompanied by their parents.

Manager Tracy is making special efforts to make this, the last indoor concert of the season, one of the best in the history of the organization, and from present indications will far surpass the expectations of the public, as several surprises are in store for all lovers of high class music. The social features of the evening are being arranged for with a view of giving all a chance to participate and those who fail to attend will miss a very enjoyable evening. You are invited to come.

March Apportionment.

Monday of this week County Auditor O'Brien received a check from State Auditor Iverson for Red Lake county's share of the March apportionment of the state school funds. The apportionment this year is made on a basis of $1.60 for each pupil. Red Lake county was credited with 3837 pupils who had attended school the required length of time, which made this county's share $6,139.20, which taken with the county fund of $1,725.65 makes a total of $7,865.85 to be divided among the different school districts. Of this fund Independent district No. 15, Red Lake Falls receives $1,033.20; Ind. dist. No. 18, Thief River Falls, $1,873.70; St. Hilaire, $528.90; Dist. No. 16, Plummer, $88.15; Dist. No. 1, Wylie, $51.50, while the balance, $4,280.40, is divided up among the other districts of the county.

Wanted: Person to travel in home territory; salary $3 50 per day and expenses. Address, J. A. Alexander, 125 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

Subscribe for The Gazette.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof,

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one-(1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minn.
mar21-m 2

AGAIN ON THE MARKET

Lands Withdrawn Last Fall Can Now Be Filed Upon Almost As Heretofore.

Under date of April 3, Register Montague, of the Crookston U. S. Land Office, sent out the following notice:

Prior to November 10, 1906, certain lands included in ceded Chippewa and Red Lake lands in this district were open to settlement and entry. On that day an order was issued withdrawing such lands from settlement and entry. That order has been rescinded and all lands subject to entry prior to November 10, 1906, are now subject to entry, the only difference being that in the issuance of the receipt by this office the reservation will be made providing the lands may be subject to taxation for right-of-way and cost of drainage, to be paid before the issuance of the final receipt. All persons who had acquired preference right of way by reason of contest, or having the right allowed them to make an additional or an amended or a second entry, and who could not assert that right on account of the withdrawal of the lands will have thirty days from the date hereof as preference right within which to make such entry.

All applications for entry should be made in precisely the same form as required before November 10, 1906.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., Mar. 7, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that Richmond Desotel of Terrebonne, Minn., has filed notice of his intention to make final five year proof in support of his claim, viz:

Homestead entry No. 22931, made March 21, 1902, for the SE¼NE¼ Section 21, Township 150 N., Range 43 W., and that said proof will be made before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on April 17, 1907.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of, the land, viz:

Harmidas Sauve, Arthur Archambault, Joseph St Martin and Louis Teroup, all of Terrebonne, Minn.

R. J. Montague, Register.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed, and delivered by L. A. Dautremont and Laura E. Dautremont, his wife, mortgagors, to Phil A. Kaufer, mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota on 12th day of September, 1903, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., in book 21 of mortgages on page 168, by the terms of which mortgage the following described premises were described in, mortgaged and conveyed to said mortgagee, to-wit: Lots nine (9), ten (10), and the north ten (10) feet of lot eleven (11), in block seven (7) in Champagne and Dow's addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the corrected plat thereof, being in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and was given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, on the 9th day of September in each year, according to the conditions of one principal note; by failure to pay the $1000 falling due on the 9th day of September, 1904 and by failure to pay the taxes levied upon said real estate for the year 1905, and whereas, said mortgage, provided as one of its conditions that in case of failure to pay said note or any part of said interest when the same becomes due or to pay any taxes levied upon said realestate before the same becomes delinquent, the whole sum of money or indebtedness thereby secured shall thereupon become due and payable:

And Whereas, there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice on said principal indebtedness and interest thereon to the date hereof the sum of one thousand one hundred eighteen dollars, ($1118.00.)

And Whereas, because of said defaults and each of them the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted to cover said mortgage indebtedness.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises above described which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Red Lake at the west front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls, in said county, on Saturday, the 13th day of April, 1907, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness, the attorney's fees of $25.00 and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year thereafter, as provided by law.

Dated Feb. 26, 1907.

—Phil A. Kaufer, Mortgagee.

Chas. E. Boughton,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls.
f28-a4

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never fsund a brand that come so near oor idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.
Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats
Fish and Game in Season.
Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.
TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout
Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY
Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City
W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, APRIL 18, 1907 No 29

THE MEN'S SUPPER

It Was Finally Held Last Tuesday Evening and Was A Great Success.

The muchly advertised "Men's Supper"—for which the people have waited so long in expectancy—was given at the Presbyterian parlors Tuesday evening of this week and proved to be all that was figured on—and then some.

Early in the winter this feast was planned, but from time to time it was postponed—generally the reason being given that the newly created chefs wanted more time in which to practice the art of cooking in order that they might let the public down that much easier. (On the q. t. The Gazette has inside information to the effect that the real reason for the various postponements was the fact that up until a short time ago the women folks had persistently refused to do the cooking—and the old fellows were up against it.)

Last week the announcement was made that the supper would be given Tuesday night of this week, and naturally a large number of towns-people turned out to see what the men could do in the line of serving supper.

The parlors were arranged with four tables and from 5:30 until 8:30 the waiters were kept on the constant jump serving the many who wanted to eat.

The kitchen was also a scene of activity. With Prof. Chamberlain, Ed L. Healy, Chas. N. Bourdon, Sheriff Nelson, A. Cairns and several others dishing up the eatables and keeping the waiters supplied with full trays. The kitchen committee was well selected—and they all showed their adaptability for the work. The mere fact that several gallons of dish water was spilled on the floor and the rest of the boys were kept busy dodging chinaware, doesn't reflect the least discredit on Sheriff Nelson's ability as a prize dishwasher, but the amount of work to be done realty necessitated some rapid handling of the dishes. The waiting force, the reception committee and the affable cashier all conducted themselves with ease, and made the hungry populace happy with the many good things they had in store.

The local orchestra was there, and furnished sweet strains of melody while the feast was in progress and the guests of the occasion had a most enjoyable time. The affair netted the church a neat sum, and furnished all kinds of amusement.

Regarding the rumors that are being circulated as to how the men flunked and the women folks were obliged to do the cooking, The Gazette does beleive a word of it, and knows positively that Bob Bourdon split the wood for the cooking of one of the roasts; that Gus Kankel picked over two hand-fuls of beans; that Prof. Chamberlain labored "severeal" days and nights manufacturing the chili sauce (and produced a good number, by the way) that Frank Meizen, J.B. Armstrong, Chas. Bourdon, Harry Healy, L. C. Simons, Thomas Germo, Art Zaiser Frank Hunt, Dr. Argue and lots of others helped with the spring house cleaning while the women folks were cooking the edibles-all of which is creditable and shows that they were willing to bear their share of the work—and were receiving valuable lessons in the culinary art that will come in handy in the future.

The mens supper was a decided success—this much is self-evident—and the people will forget everything but the fact that they had a most enjoyable time and were well fed-and will trust that the first attempt be followed by others in the same line.

E. N. Cyr will open a grocery store on the vacant corner of Champagne avenue and third street. Mr. Cyr will erect a building there and will open up for business shortly with a full stok of staple goods on hand.

LAST INDOOR CONCERT

Concert Season of 06'-07 To Be Finished With Excellent Program Next Friday Evening.

What has been one of the most successful seasons in the history of the Red Lake Falls band organization will be brought to a fitting close at the Metropolitan opera house next Friday evening, April 26th, and commencing with May the band appears in open air concert work for the next several months.

The band boys and public have reason to feel satisfied at the result of the winter's work. Just after entering upon the indoor concert season the band was obliged to select a director from among its members and since then has had some difficulty in securing one up to the standard, and while ordinarily this change of leadership would have retarded the progress of the organization, in this instance the work has advanced more rapidly than ever before and today the band has a membership of about thirty and is in excellent condition. Manager Tracy has several good men on the string and will have a good director here in time to start the open air concert work.

This affair will be in the nature of a farewell reception to Messrs. L. P. Berthon and J. B. Armstrong who will appear for the last time in indoor recitals.

The concert for next Friday evening will consist of several choice numbers by the band, a cornet solo by C. Edmond Brunelle, which is extremely difficult, and other specialties.

The selections are all good and intended to make a fitting close to a highly successful season of work.

The program follows:

PART I.

March..........................Nirella
"Japanese Brigade"
Symphony No. 2..........Dalbey
Cornet Solo..................Masten
"Massa's in the Cold Ground."
C. Edmond Brunelle.
Waltz............................Strauss
'Artist's Life."
Selection......................Bellstedt
By Members of the Junior Band

PART II.

Grand Selection...........Wallace
"Maritana"
Little Kinkies...............Bendix
Selection.....................Luderas
"The Prince of Pilsen"
The Clown's Parade....Laurendeau

BOYCOTT A POSTMASTER.

Residents of Plummer Now Mailing Their Letters on the Train.

The residents of the village of Plummer have invented a new boycott, says the Thief River Falls News. For some time past the business men of this village have been in an open war against Charles W. Latta, the editor and proprietor of the Plummer Pioneer, and withdrew all of their patronage from the paper. As a result the Pioneer has appeared each week and altho it does not contain the advertisement of any business house in Plummer, it dishes up a few hot roasts for some of the residents of that place each week. Mr. Latta also happens to be the postmaster and has a little over three years more to serve before his term of office expires. His salary depends upon the number of stamps cancelled, and in order to deprive Mr. Latta of revenue he would otherwise secure from the cancelling of stamps, the people of that place make it a point to mail all their letters on the train, and are conducting a campaign to induce all others to do likewise. As a result the postmaster-editor is not making much money out of the office and the war goes on.

"Good for everything a salve is used for and especially recommended for Piles." That is what we say about DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. That is what twenty years of usage has proven. Get the original. Sold by all druggists.

CLASS PLAY OF '07

Will Be Given Tomorrow Evening at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Tomorrow (Friday) evening the high school class of '07 will present the original farce-comedy the "Sweet Girl Graduates" at the Metropolitan opera house in this city.

The play is from the pen of H. R. Woodman, who while reveling in reminiscenceces of old school days was inspired with the idea of bringing the sweet girl graduate before the footlights, and the picture drawn of the closing school days is so typical that his efforts have more than pleased the every audience to which the play has been presented.

The members of the class of '07 have been captivated by the spirit of the play and have entered into the rehearsals with a zeal and earnestnes that gives promise of the authors idea being brought out in every detail. All the characters of the cast have been putting in some hard work, and the talent displayed is very gratifying to those who have the play in charge. A full orchestra will be in attendance and all those who attend are assured of a first class evening's entertainment.

In the afternoon a matinee will be given for the benefit of the children at which an admission fee of ten cents will be charged. For the evening's performance the popular prices of 25c and 35c prevail. Everybody turn out and give them a packed house.

The cast of the play is as follows:

Miss Maude De Smythe, the Sweet Girl, Secretary of the Class of '07.
—Alice Ericson.
Mrs. DeSmythe, her mother, who is threatened with neverous prostration.
—Lucy Hunt.
Mr. De Smythe, her father, President of the R. I. P. Railroad.
—John Richards.
Mr. Jack Hamilton, her Beau. President of the Class of 1907.
Paul Brunelle.
Miss Matilda Hoppenhoer. her aunt. Who never graduated, thank Heaven.
Freda Ittner.
Miss Valeria Reynolds, her dearest friend.
Viola Longtin.
Madam Sateene, her dressmaker,
Ina Linnihan.
Miss Rantum, her elocution teacher, (late of the Boston school.)
—Edna Swanson.
Professor Grindem, Principal of the High School.
—Herbert Findeisen.
Mr. Chinese Bulbus, the Florist.
—Olaf Floan.
Katherine,................the maid.
-Lillian Zaiser.

Reserved seats are now on sale at Anderson's Jewelry store.

ASSESSORS WILL MEET.

Annual Meeting to be Held Next Thursday.

The annual meeting of the newly chosen assessors of Red Lake county will meet at Auditor O'Brien's office next Thursday. A chairman will be chosen at this meeting. The books for all the townships have been completed and are ready for distribution among the various assessors.

Following is the assessor for each township:

Black River—Axel Jacobson.
Red Lake Falls—Jules H. Lasha.
Lake Pleasant—M. Ducharme.
North—G. K. Haave.
River Falls—Jas. Gilbertson.
Terrebonne—Louis Perrault.
Silverton—T. H. Omlid.
Smiley—O. M. Pederson.
Wyandotte—Lars P. Brandrud.
Emardville—A. J. Hemstad.
Poplar River—John B. Hebert.
Clover Leaf—Jay Payne.
Kratka—John T. Gullingsrud.
Mayfield—Sever Maaren.
Garnes—Simon C. Sater.
Lambert—Max Perras.
Goodridge—Donough O'Brien.
Highlanding—P. C. Wold.
Deer Park—A. J. Lillo.
Numedal—Louis E. Olson.
Bray—Emil Larson.
Polk Center—C. K. Melin.
Louisville—J. F. Mathews.
Norden—Lars Lee.
Sanders—H. F. Anderson.
Equality—Andrew Anderson.
St. Hilaire—A. F. Ittner.
Plummer—Erick Iverson.
Thief River Falls—Ben Christenson.
Town 153-39—B. Henry Costello.

BERTHON & ARMSTRONG

Leading Men and Boys Clothing Outfitters

WE HAVE SOME LEFT

We still have some great bargains in Boys' Suits. Of course the lots are broken in sizes, but we may be able to fit your boy.

Boys' $6.00 Suits for.................. $4.35

Boys' $5.00 Suits for.................. 3.85

Boys' $5.00, $4.00 and $3.50 suits, assorted styles and sizes, to close out............ 1.98

Boys' high top, heavy storm, box calf for spring wear................ $1.98

Boys' School Shoes box calf at........................ 1.68

Nice line of Boys' Furnishings, Hats, Caps, Shirts, Collars, ties ....

JIM & PAUL

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Creglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

The case against Harry K. Thaw was given to the jury, and six hours after, not having reached an agreement, the jurors were locked up for the night. Jerome's closing address was a merciless flaying of Thaw and his wife. The judge's charge was considered unfavorable to the defendant.

Senator Foraker in a speech at Canton, O., declared his independence of criticism, defended his public course and denied any part in or knowledge of the alleged rich men's conspiracy to defeat President Roosevelt.

John Temple Graves, speaking at a banquet at Chattanooga in honor of W. J. Bryan, urged that Bryan nominate Roosevelt for president on the Democratic ticket.

Secretary Taft declared that Cuba was to be turned over to the Cubans as soon as possible, made recommendations as to the holding of elections and sailed for Porto Rico.

President L. W. Hill announced that the Great Northern would build a plant for the manufacture of cars in Superior, Wis.

Fifteen persons were burned to death in a fire that destroyed an apartment house in Lisbon, Portugal.

Congressman Longworth came out in favor of Taft for the presidential nomination.

The New York Herald, James Gordon Bennett, its proprietor, and its advertising manager were fined $31,000 for sending improper matter through the mails.

Seven hundred members of the union organized at Bisbee, Ariz., by the Western Federation of Miners, employed by companies which refused recognition of the union, went on strike.

A train bearing 340 political exiles left St. Petersburg for Siberia. This is the largest consignment of political prisoners sent to the far east for several months past.

Commander Eva Booth of the Salvation army became seriously ill at Canton, O.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad and H. M. Pearce, acting freight agent, were found guilty of granting rebates by a jury at Minneapolis.

Four trainmen were killed on the Southern Pacific in California by the explosion of two locomotives.

Mrs. Mary Bechtel, aged 84 years, and her son Charles, aged 42 years, were burned to death in their home in Philadelphia.

The Akron Printing and Paper company went into bankruptcy, with liabilities amounting to $30,000 and assets the same.

The crew of naval barge No. 1 which went adrift in a storm, were rescued by the steamer Professor Woermann.

Directors of the Provident Securities and Banking company of Boston are accused by the receivers of having squandered $200,000 of its money.

Annie Adair of Triumph, Ill., is dead from swallowing muriatic acid, which she mistook for a sleeping medicine.

Richard Croker is in exceedingly poor health, according to John Fox, a Tammany leader, who has just returned to New York from England.

With a bullet in her brain Mabel Guy, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guy of Middleton, N. Y., walked a mile to Thrall hospital for treatment. She may recover.

The United Engineers' society opened its new home in New York for the erection of which Andrew Carnegie gave $1,500,000.

The Lincoln Savings and Trust company of Philadelphia was closed by the state commissioner of banking because its capital was impaired.

It is said that the death of the late Congressman Galusha A. Grow was hastened by a gang of New York swindlers, who levied blackmail upon him, using a woman as their willing tool.

One person was killed and about 15 injured in a wreck on the St. Johnsbury & Lake Champlain railroad near Hardwick, Vt.

Richard M. Waite, assistant to the president of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, died at Denver.

Dr. Paul Bettix, professor of Greek and Latin in the Central Holiness University of Oskaloosa, Ia., is preaching a new crusade and branded his forehead with a cross.

State Senator David Campbell of Illinois was appointed postmaster of Chicago to succeed Mayor Fred Busse.

P. A. B. Widener asked permission of Philadelphia authorities to erect a $10,000,000 municipal art gallery on a site to be furnished by the city.

Gen. Lawrence S. Baker, who was a well-known confederate commander, died at Suffolk, Va.

Edgar Combe, son of the ex-premier of France, died of appendicitis.

Following his indictment on the charge of using the mails to defraud, returned by the federal grand jury, H. H. Tucker, Jr., of Cherryvale, Kan., secretary and promoter of the Uncle Sam Oil company, who was arrested in Kansas City, was arraigned in the United States district court at Topeka and held in $15,000 bail.

Secretary Taft planned a compromise between the conservatives and liberals in Cuba whereby the island should be turned over to the Cubans again July 4, 1908.

Dunbar hall at Phillips-Exeter academy, Exeter, N. H., was destroyed by fire and a number of students had narrow escapes.

Fire destroyed a building in Chicago occupied by Hollister Bros., printers, and others, the loss being about $310,000.

The answer of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, John D. Rockefeller, Henry H. Rogers and other individual defendants and about 40 of the defendant corporations to the government's ouster suit was filed at St. Louis. It consisted of a general denial of all the charges.

According to a decision reached by the interstate commerce commission E. H. Harriman will be made to appear in a United States circuit court in the state of New York in answer to proceedings to be instituted to compel him to reply to certain questions which he refused to answer when he was on the stand at the recent hearing by the commission in New York.

A sneak thief took $1,700 from the paying teller's cage in the State National bank, St. Louis, and escaped.

Broken-hearted, as he said, over losses following the recent slump in Wall street, Samuel B. Van Siclen, a New York curb broker, shot and killed himself.

Both branches of the Texas legislature passed a law absolutely prohibiting the operation of bucket-shops, cotton exchanges or any dealings in futures in Texas.

The Minnesota house of representatives with a rising vote, which the speaker announced was "nearly unanimous," passed concurrent resolutions indorsing President Roosevelt for a third term.

The Union of Russian People planned an attack on the Jews at Russian Easter time, April 28, and thousands of Jewish families left the country.

President Roosevelt ended a long contest by appointing Oscar P. Hundley United States judge for the Northern district of Alabama.

Commander Peary will start on another attempt to reach the pole in June.

The Memphis Jockey club was indicted for permitting betting at its track.

The Kalamazoo strike ended by the company's yielding to all the demands of the men except recognition of the union.

Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the Rockefeller institute, New York, has discovered a meningitis serum, but he declines to discuss it till he has experimented on human beings.

The freight steamer Sagamore, plying between Oyster Bay, L. I., and Port Chester, N. Y., went ashore on the rocks near the entrance of Port Chester harbor. The crew of ten was saved.

The Oji Paper company of Tokio ordered $1,000,000 worth of machinery from the General Electric company of New York.

The plant of the Amsterdam (N. Y.) Broom company, the largest independent brush and broom concern in the country, was completely destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $100,000. William Sullivan, fireman, was killed by a falling wall.

Mrs. T. H. Ismay, widow of the founder of the White Star Steamship line and mother of Joseph Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine company, died in London.

The discovery of a new counterfeit $10 (Buffalo) United States note is announced by the United States secret service. A new counterfeit $20 national bank note has also been discovered, on the First National bank of Hereford, Texas.

One of the large buildings in the League Island navy yard, Philadelphia, containing the saw mill, joiner shop and pattern shop, was almost entirely destroyed by fire. Officers at the yard estimated the loss at between $70,000 at $100,000.

Willie Sell, who has served 20 years for the murder of his father, mother, brother and sister in Kansas, was pardoned by Gov. Hoch on condition that he should not exhibit himself for the purpose of making money.

The plant of the Columbus Dispatch and an adjoining building were almost destroyed by fire.

D. H. Kochersperger, formerly treasurer of Cook count, Illinois, and prominent in Chicago politics, is dead.

The United States supreme court decided that the Isle of Pines is Cuban territory, not American.

The executive council of the National Civic federation decided on Chicago as the place, and May 28, 29, 30 and 31 as the date for holding the national conference on combinations and trusts.

Fire in Tyler, Tex., destroyed several of the best buildings, including the opera house.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cox, of Cincinnati, were robbed of jewels valued at $35,000 in a New York hotel.

J. W. Arras, of the United States engineering corps, said Pittsburg was in danger of being devastated by a flood as was Johnstown.

The jury in the Smathers case decided that Smathers had not conspired to drug Lou Dillon and should retain the gold cup won by his horse, Major Delmar.

Puerto Cortez was taken by the Nicaraguans without a contest, the Honduran troops having returned to the plantations believing that the war was ended. American marines were posted in Ceiba to protect property and preserve order.

Secretary of War Taft conferred with conservative and liberal leaders of Cuba, advised that the national election be postponed until after the municipal and provincial elections, and intimated that American occupation would last at least another year.

The sentences of death imposed upon Mrs. Aggie Myers of Kansas City and Frank Hottman of Higginsville, Mo., who were convicted of having murdered the woman's husband, Clarence Myers, in 1904, were commuted by Gov. Folk to imprisonment for life.

Dr. Samuel S. Guy, a prominent dentist of Far Rockaway and for a number of years coroner of Queens Borough, was under arrest charged with the murder of his wife.

The directors of the State Bank of Goddard, Ksn., whose cashier, W. H. Dwight, committed suicide, announced that over $10,000 was missing from the vault of the bank. The directors decided to close up the affairs of the bank.

Safe blowers robbed a bank at Seminole, I. T., of $1,000 while confederates patrolled the street shooting at citizens.

N. D. Hildman, night operator in the Frisco station at Quapaw, I. T., was attacked by robbers, bound, gagged, and robbed. At Baxter, Kan., the robbers were captured after shooting the officer through the hand and in the body.

Albert Williams, the last survivor of the 16 delegates in the "Under the Oaks" convention at Jackson, Mich., where the first Republican state ticket was placed in nomination, died at Ionia, Mich, aged 90 years.

Mayor D. H. Leonard of Parkersburg, W. Va., died of the grip.

The Greek consul at Lowell, Mass., was arrested on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the importation of Greek laborers.

The czar of Russia made M. Plebno, a notorious anti-semite, a member of the council of empire.

A. H. Weir, ex-mayor of Lincoln, Neb., died suddenly.

A Southern Pacific passenger train was ditched at Browns, Nev., the engineer being killed and several passengers hurt.

George G. Benedict, editor-in-chief of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, died of old age.

Naval coal barge No. 1, adrift for several days, was picked up, but her crew of nine were not on board. It was thought a passing schooner took them off.

The king of Italy arrived at Athens on a visit to the king of Greece.

W. A. Brady leased the Auditorium theater in Chicago for ten years, at an annual rental of $100,000.

The Union Pacific officially announced the building of 100 miles of new double tracking in Wyoming, to be finished during this year at a cost of $3,000,000.

Col. Francis E. Lacey, retired officer of the United States army, died at Columbus, O. He served in the civil and Spanish-American wars.

Rev. John Johnson, Charleston, S. C., rector emeritus at Fort Sumter during the siege of the sixties and author of "The Defense of Fort Sumter," died at the age of 78 years.

Ten persons, two of whom were women, were rescued from death by life savers at the Nag's Head (N. C.) station when the four-masted schooner Louis Bossart was blown ashore.

A gasoline launch containing two men and two boys capsized in the Illinois river at Ottawa, Ill. All four were drowned.

Three men were instantly killed at Hillsville, Pa., by the explosion of a ton of powder at the plant of the Burton Powder company.

Robert Scholze, 63 years old, one of the leading business men of Chattanooga, Tenn., died as the result of injuries received in a runaway.

Because he had been urging that Enrique C. Creel, ambassador of Mexico to the United States, could not be elected the constitutional governor of the state of Chihuahua, Silesvtre Terrazas, editor of El Correo, a daily newspaper published in the city of Chihuahua, was put in jail.

Judge Josiah Turner, for 24 years judge of the Seventh judicial circuit in Michigan, died at his home in Owosso, aged 96 years.

The heaviest snow of the winter fell in Plainfield, Wis.

Mrs. Helen McNeill, of Denver, Col., was burned to death in Columbus, O.

Theodore D. Buhl, president of the Buhl Malleable Iron works of Detroit, president of the Detroit National bank, and also of the firm of Parke, Davis & Co., chemical and drug manufacturers, dropped dead on the street near the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York. Death was due to apoplexy.

A fire captain was killed and several firemen injured in a fire that partly destroyed the Metropolitan power house at One Hundred and Forty-sixth street and Lexington avenue, New York.

Suits to recover $40,000,000 from 14 fire insurance companies for violation of a state anti-trust law were begun by the prosecuting attorney of Arkansas.

John F. Stevens, retiring chief engineer of the Panama canal, sailed for the United States after being given a great farewell reception by the canal forces.

DEATH OF HARLAN P. HALL

THE VETERAN NEWSPAPER MAN DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART FAILURE.

His Life Has Been an Active One—Was Founder of The St. Paul Dispatch and Globe—Passed Away on the Anniversary of His Wedding.

St. Paul, April 10—Harlan P. Hall, who founded two newspapers in St. Paul and was identified in the early history of every other one of any importance in that city, died suddenly at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon while sitting in the office of Dr. George M. Coon in the Lowry arcade.

Mr. Hall, who was nearly 70 years of age, had been in very poor health for many months and regularly under treatment of Dr. Archibald McLaran. He called at the Lowry arcade yesterday to see Dr. McLaren, and finding him away, he sat down in Dr. Coon's office to await his return. Suddenly he became faint, and without saying a word, passed away.

Harlan P. Hall was born at Ravenna, Portage county, Obio, Aug. 27, 1838. His father was the publisher of a country newspaper, and in his father's office his newspaper career had its beginning. He was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan university in 1861, then took up the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1862. Health considerations brought him to Minnesota, where he arrived Oct. 6, 1862. His first daily newspaper experience was on Nov. 3, 1862, on the St. Paul Union, which was first issued on that date, and published by the late Frederick Driscoll. The editorial staff consisted of Mr. Driscoll and Mr. Hall.

HARLAN P. HALL.

In March, 1863, the Union was consolidated with the Press, and Mr. Hall continued with that paper until 1865, when, with the Davidsons, he purchased the St. Paul Pioneer. He continued with that paper until 1866, and then went into the printing business with David Ramaley. On Feb. 29, 1868, Mr. Hall launched the St. Paul Dispatch. In 1876 he sold the Dispatch, and Jan. 15, 1878, he issued the first number of the St. Paul Globe as a morning Democratic newspaper.

He conducted the Globe until February, 1885. Meanwhile he had been conducting a ready-print establishment, and he continued in this business until 1887. From then until 1893 he occupied various positions in the daily newspaper offices. Then for a time he was business manager of the Globe and later publisher of the Call. Mr. Hall founded St. Paul Trade, a periodical publication devoted to the jobbing and manufacturing interests of his city and it was only a few years ago that he retired from its management.

All his life Mr. Hall was active in the public affairs of St. Paul, and no man of his generation may be said to have spent more time or energy in that service of the public which brings no direct remuneration and but little reward in gratitude. He was prominent in nearly all of the commercial organizations of St. Paul and was one of the leading spirits in the Minnesota State Editorial association.

Mr. Hall was the founder of the Minnesota Editorial association and was a member of the executive committee. He went on every trip made by the association except the last two. He was the life of the party wherever he went. It was in his relationship with the association that he came to know the editor of every publication in the state, but he also had a wide acquaintance among other people throughout the state.

During the past year and a half he spent most of his time selling "H. P. Hall's Observations," which tells the political history of Minnesota. Few men in Minnesota knew more about state politics, while intimate association with the political leaders gave him splendid opportunities of knowing the inner workings.

Mr. Hall's surviving family consists of a son, Harlan W., who is now in Pasadena, and one daughter. There is also one brother, H. R. W. Hall of St. Paul, and a nephew, Smith B. Hall.

Mankato Schools.

Mankato—The Fairmont board of education has elected L. H. Pryor superintendent of schools. He is now at the head of the Breckenridge schools and will succeed Prof. P. P. Kennedy, who goes from Fairmont to St. Peter next year.

Prof. A. D. Griffin, for the last five years superintendent of schools at Kasota, has been elected to a similar position at Hawley. The Fulda school board has been unable to retain the services of its superintendent, Prof. Wenger.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, April 6—Senator Alderman of Brainerd won in a contest against the finance committee of the senate late today and secured a recommendation for passage from the senate committee of the whole for his bill to establish another state fish hatchery to be located at Deerwood. The bill came up before the committee of the whole with its appropriation clause struck off. Senator Alderman appealed to the senate that this was unfair; that the finance committee approved of the bill, by recommending it for passage, but might as well have killed it as to send it out with no money for the execution of its provisions. Senator Peterson of Moorhead, chairman of finance, opposed the bill. A lengthy debate followed with a final vote in favor of the measure and adding to it the clause carrying an appropriation of $6,000.

The anti-rebate fire insurance bill, indefinitely postponed two days ago, was revived today by its author, Senator McColl, who succeeded in getting a motion for reconsideration carried by one vote. The bill was then advanced to general orders and will be fought out by committee of the whole. Friends of the bill argue in its favor that it prohibits rebating. Opponents of the measure charge it is aimed at maintainance of insurance compact boards and rates.

The senate today passed the house bill for taxation of sleeping car companies, in a materially amended form. As received from the house it provided for a 4 per cent gross earnings tax. The senate tax committee amended the bill so the companies may have on the alternative of assessment and tax on an advaleram basis at their own option.

In the house today R. H. Jefferson and H. O. Bjorge, introduced a resolution directing the state railroad commission to reduce the rates charged for carrying iron ore on the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern road so as to allow such road "only a fair and just income on the money invested." The resolution laid over on notice of rebate by R. J. Wells.

St. Paul, April 8—The bill to prohibit capital punishment in the state of Minnesota was killed today in the house committee of the whole and the gallows will remain in duty.

The measure was introduced by F. B. Wright of Minneapolis, F. B. Phillips of St. Paul. In order to save the measure, Phillips offered an amendment, providing that when a person once convicted of murder takes life, the death punishment may be inflicted. There was a sentiment against the bill, however, which could not be overcome.

Said Burdette Thayer, "Under the law as it existed at one time the Younger brothers escaped the death penalty and later were pardoned. Now one is making a hero of himself by exhibiting at circuses in Missouri. He is coining the Northfield tragedy into gold. Would it not have been better if capital punishment had been inflicted in that case?"

The bill was killed by a vote of 47 against it, to 34 in its favor.

The house committee on judiciary has reported that the anti-discrimination bill, aimed at the practices of the Standard Oil company in this state, is constitutional. The same bill is now on general orders in the senate. The house today passed the senate bill of Senator O. G. Dale of Madison, authorizing cities or villages to prohibit bucket-shops or their branches within their corporate limits.

The senate spent nearly all today in consideration of the calendar. The most important bill passed was probably the E. H. Canfield measure, making an appropriation of $200,000 for each of the coming two years, for road and bridge improvements throughout the state. The bill was amended from its original form, so that the county commissioners of each county, instead of the state highway commission, will have charge of the expenditure of the fund.

The senate also passed the house bill prohibiting fraternities and secret societies in public schools and imposing a fine for violation of the rule. The high schools in the twin cities have been overrun with "frats" and they have been generally disapproved of by both teachers and parents.

In committee of the whole today, Senator Frank Clague of Lamberton, after an eloquent fight, succeeded in getting two important measures by himself, recommended for passage. One provides for abolition of the board of directors for the Faribault state school for deaf, dumb and blind; the other bill establishes a state board of visitors for state institutions.

St. Paul, April 9—The senate today passed the Clague registry tax on mortgages bill. There were 38 affirmative votes, and 14 against it. The bill was a special order for an hour, and was ably explained and defended by its author, Frank Clague of Lamberton. In view of the fact that all tax measures must originate in the lower house, the house bill which had already been passed, was the one under consideration, but was amended on motion of Senator Clague so as to become a duplicate of his senate file. There were several efforts to modify the bill, one being to cut down the tax from 50 cents per $100 to 25 cents, but this and all other amendments opposed by the senator from Redwood county were defeated. It is said the bill will raise a tax in Hennepin county of $140,000 a year, and in Ramsey county $100,000 a year.

This afternoon the Iowa distance tariff bill of Senator T. E. Cashman of Owatonna, was a special order in the upper house. One of the first things done was to pass an amendment by the author to strike from the bill the "ton per mile" requirement, leaving the bill to simply embody the distance tariff idea. Senator Cashman then advocated the bill at length, being followed by Senators Works, Witherstine, and Sageng. Senator Frank Clague opposed the bill. He warned the senate against too much railroad legislation on points already in the courts, and also said the "ton per mile" theory still remained in certain provisions of the bill. Senators Durment and Dunn of St. Paul also opposed the bill.

The house which a few weeks ago gave a body blow to the general proposition of local option, today turned down a report of the temperance committee for indefinite postponement of a bill by Elmer Adams of Fergus Falls for local option in small cities, and advanced the bill to general orders. The bill originally applied to all cities, but an amendment by the committee was retained making it applicable only to cities less than 10,000 inhabitants.

The house also passed the C. M. Bendixen bill requiring all kinds of corporations to pay fees for the filing of articles. At present purely manufacturing corporations pay a nominal fee, and others a fee based on capitalization. The Bendixen bill places them all on the same level.

The house committee on express and telegraph, reported the Sam Peterson bill regulating telegraph tolls for indefinite postponement, but the author succeeded in getting the committee turned down and the bill advanced to general orders. There were but 4 votes in opposition to the bill's advancement.

St. Paul, April 11—The house today adopted resolutions endorsing Roosevelt in placing Harriman in the "Ananias Club." The resolutions were offered by C. J. Swendsen of St. James. They recite that whereas the public press has teemed with "personal, infamous and virulent attacks made by E. H. Harriman and his crowd, casting slurs and insinuations on the veracity of our president" that the house of representatives "heartily commend the heroic efforts of the president to regulate the railroad traffic and express lawlessness."

The senate this afternoon devoted itself to considering election bills in special order. After considerable debate, Senator W. W. Dunn's bill providing for election by all political parties of delegates to county conventions which are held for the purpose of electing delegates to state conventions, was passed by a vote of 34 in its favor to 25 against. The other primary election bill under consideration, by Senator E. H. Canfield of Luverne, to authorize holding of conventions of political parties to recommend candidates for office, and providing for nomination of candidates for state offices by primary election was debated. The committee on elections presented a substitute bill in the form of a minority report. Final action was not taken on the Canfield bill. Senator McColl of St. Paul presented his measure, a copy of the Oregon law and providing for elections of United States senators by popular vote. A final vote on the bill was 26 in its favor, 28 against. This vote will probably be reconsidered at a later date. In explaining the measure Senator McColl said: "This has been referred to as a bill aimed at raising Gov. J. A. Johnson to the senate of the United States. This is a mistaken impression. Long before this bill, if passed, goes into effect, we expect our esteemed executive will be called to serve the people of this state and nation in a higher capacity than that of United States senator."

The house today passed a resolution asking the attorney general to report on all suits pending with railroads, and urging speed in consumating such actions.

Both houses spent much time today advancing bills along routine lines. Among bills of some note disposed of today, might be mentioned the anti-cigarette bill of Senator Sundberg, which failed to get enough votes for passage in the upper house.

St. Paul—Stanford Newel, former United States minister to The Hague, died Saturday evening at his residence after an illness of several months. Asthma, pleurisy and the result of a fall in which he fractured a rib, were the causes of his death.

The existence of life in other worlds has been more generally admitted by scientific men than by the average individual. It is, however, interesting to note that Dr. A. Kirschmann, professor of philosophy in the University of Toronto, has expressed himself very strongly regarding his belief that life exists in other planets. He even contends that on other bodies where conditions of temperature, of carbon, nitrogen, weather, etc., are different from our own we have no good reason to conclude that conditions may not exist to permit intelligent life comparable to our own.

Beards as a Sign of Mourning.

In ancient Rome men only grew beards as a sign of mourning. In Egypt all went clean shaven, but in Assyria only the slaves and peasants shaved.

Trees in Suburban Roads.

The planting of rows of trees in suburban roads began in 1875. In France the custom came into vogue during the Revolutionary eras—1770 and 1848—and were known as "Trees of Liberty." They were cut down in 1850, when riots ensued.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Dan Patch.

[illegible] Dan Patch, 1:55, on the [illegible] State Fair [illegible] track in [illegible] the state [illegible] the greatest of all [illegible] engaged again for the [illegible] fair. He will appear on [illegible] day of [illegible] Sept. 2, the opening [illegible] of the fair and is to go against his own world's record of 1:55 [illegible] made at the Minnesota [illegible] September. This was the fastest mile ever made by a harness [illegible] under any conditions, but Mr. [illegible] and Mr. Hersey, Dan's trainer and driver, are both confident that [illegible] beat the 1906 mark this season. The famous horse was never in better condition than now and looks [illegible] for something better than ever [illegible] he gets to work on the track.

[illegible] fact that Dan Patch has [illegible] the Minnesota State Fair track without lowering his Minnesota record. He has gone against [illegible] this track five times with the following results:

[illegible] August [illegible]........Time 2:0[illegible]
[illegible] September 4........Time 1:59½
[illegible] September [illegible]........Time 1:57¼
[illegible] September [illegible]........Time 1:56½
[illegible] September [illegible]........Time 1:55

[illegible] gave to the Minnesota State Fair track the honor [illegible] record for the fastest [illegible] by a harness horse.

Suicide.

[illegible]—A woman who registered [illegible] as "B. Ellis," committed suicide by taking poison at An[illegible] the Rainy Lake road. [illegible] reached Virginia on the Great [illegible] road, registered at the hotel [illegible] stayed over night and next [illegible] took a Rainy Lake train to An[illegible]. Here she alighted and walking a mile down the track, drank [illegible] her dead body being found in [illegible] afternoon. She gave no residence [illegible] registering at the hotel and nothing was found in her clothing to indicate her identity. She was well [illegible] and fairly good looking. At [illegible] she left her pocketbook containing [illegible] in money and a [illegible].

[illegible] last week. [illegible] insanity and [illegible] Have [illegible]

[illegible] also [illegible] The [illegible] out [illegible] and [illegible] she [illegible] with [illegible]

Gold Mine.

[illegible] on the [illegible] shows [illegible] condition of the [illegible] sent out. The [illegible] of gold were found [illegible] farm [illegible] years ago when a [illegible] well was sunk. The well driller [illegible] the soil brought out was different [illegible] and found anywhere else, and [illegible] that gold ore was in it. [illegible] has since been interested [illegible] Western copper and gold [illegible] from his investigations [illegible] sure he had gold ore [illegible] farm. Recently he did [illegible] sinking a six-foot [illegible] down about twelve feet. Some [illegible] he had assayed [illegible] it to contain gold that would [illegible] about $4 to the ton. Since that [illegible] has been sunk more than 30 [illegible] the [illegible] of the ore [illegible]

Mad Dogs.

[illegible] south and [illegible] number [illegible]

[illegible] that several [illegible] in Beauford [illegible] and which [illegible] thought to have been suffering from [illegible] the [illegible] village council [illegible] that all canines within [illegible] must be tied up or [illegible]. The village marshal is instructed to shoot all unmuzzled dogs running at large.

[illegible] week four cattle on C. S. Wis[illegible] farm in Ma[illegible] township died [illegible] strange disease, and the state [illegible] Dr. Becker, was summoned to examine the herd. He gave [illegible] opinion that the cattle had [illegible] Mr. Wishert will have one [illegible] the cattle [illegible] to determine the [illegible]

NEWS NOTES.

[illegible] Charles A. [illegible] is [illegible] returning home in [illegible] a telegram announcing the [illegible] illness of his brother.

[illegible]—The bankers of the First [illegible] district will meet in this [illegible] Tuesday, June 11, and plans [illegible] convention are almost com[illegible]

[illegible] Some of the local capitalists are working on a plan to develop the peat bogs near this city. It [illegible] known fact that there is any [illegible] peat in the vicinity of [illegible]. Peat can be found in every [illegible] where wire grass bogs exist. In [illegible] of course, the peat is only [illegible] inches thick, but in most places [illegible] enough to make it a paying [illegible]

[illegible] Game and Fish Warden P. H. [illegible] of this city was called [illegible] to investigate a case of [illegible] of the game laws and his [illegible] resulted in the arrest of Harry F. [illegible] that [illegible] the charge of [illegible] Tuem pleaded guilty [illegible]

[illegible] Francis Hughes, a 4-year-old [illegible] twelve-pound [illegible] in a brook [illegible]

Minneapolis—Minnesota is third in the number of immigrants brought West by the railways.

Hamline—Dan Patch will be the opening day attraction at the Minnesota state fair.

Hamline—One of the biggest box factories in the country is to be established in Midway district.

St. Paul—The Ramsey county grand jury has recommended that all saloons be closed in St. Paul on Sunday.

Washington—An additional carrier has been authorized for the city division of the Little Falls postoffice.

St. Paul—Oscar Larson, 1035 Burns avenue, is probably fatally hurt in a runaway accident.

St. Paul—Mr. and Mrs. George Esch are overcome by coal gas and are taken to St. Joseph's hospital in a serious condition.

Minneapolis—John Kolb's attorney announces to the pardon board that the "real" Columbia Heights murderers are in prison.

Washington—Edwin S. Johnson was appointed postmaster at Franklin, Renville county, Minnesota, vice C. M. Johnson, resigned.

Minneapolis—The commissioner's report shows that the insurance companies made a big profit on Minnesota business last year.

Spooner—Spooner tax payers are highly pleased over the financial condition of Spooner, as it does not owe one dollar and has no bonds outstanding.

Minneapolis—Nine divorce decrees have been signed and handed in by Judge Simpson, as a part of the result of the work of the first week in hearing divorce actions.

Minneapolis—Slugged into insensibility, robbed of all his money and left for dead in a boxcar by his own pal, was the fate of Fred Koehler, a lumberjack from Wisconsin.

Minneapolis—The receiving home of the Minnesota Children's Home society on Commonwealth avenue is in quarantine on account of scarlet fever and diphtheria among the children.

Owatonna—The largest mass meeting ever held in this city was called to endorse the project of the so-called "Dan Patch Air Line," the proposed new electric railway from Minneapolis.

St. Paul—Art Hathaway, George Scharfeilli, R. Jensen and Jack Wiener were arrested by Patrolmen Garvin and Mazalis at the Windsor theater on a charge of scattering Japanese snuff in the theater.

Winthrop—Game Warden P. H. Jordan of Mankato has completed an inspection trip in this vicinity, and as a result Henry F. Tuem pleaded guilty to the charge of shooting ducks out of season and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

St. Paul—E. L. Tuttle, twenty years old, was arrested on the complaint of T. P. Cleary, chief detective of the Chicago Great Western Railway company. Tuttle, it is alleged, took clothing from the construction camps of the railway company.

Minneapolis—F. L. Washburn, state entomologist, has a supply of cecropia cocoons for nature study. These cocoons will be mailed free of charge as long as the supply lasts to teachers of public schools who wish them for natural history or other class work. Address the state entomologist, St. Anthony Park.

Winona—After assaulting several neighbors in the hope that by killing them she could rid her stock of the witches which she believed were possessed by them, Lena Turnow, a spinster of the town of Norton, was brought before the probate court, declared insane and was sent to the asylum at Rochester.

Faribault—A pupil who is deaf, dumb and blind has been admitted to the state school for the deaf and dumb in this city. The little girl's name is Vera Gammon, and good progress is being made in her education. She has learned to spell on her fingers a large number of words and can use the corresponding signs of many.

Winona—Andrew Troppman is in a critical condition, blood poisoning being feared, from the bite of an infuriated Arabian stallion by which he was attacked. The animal is owned by W. G. McCutcheon, and Troppman was hitching it up. The animal had been acting ugly and suddenly lunged at him and seized his arm in its teeth.

Moorhead—The twelve-year-old son of Arne Ostrum, a farmer living in Morken township, was terribly injured by a savage hog, which attacked him in his father's barnyard. The brute caught the boy by the fleshy part of the leg, above the knee, and ripped the flesh from the bone. The result of the injury is in doubt.

Minneapolis—Two people narrowly escaped drowning in St. Louis bay, Lake Minnetonka, and were saved in the nick of time by W. D. Sammis, 1325 Harmon place, who came to their assistance in a boat. Both were unconscious for some time after the rescue, but medical assistance was summoned and it is said that they will recover.

South St. Paul—Premiums to the amount of $5,000 will be given by the northwestern livestock show, which will be held here the latter part of the year. The committee on premiums consists of Professor Andrew Boss of the state agricultural school; Professor J. J. Ferguson, Chicago, and E. W. Randall, secretary of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society.

North Branch—Christian Gillette, a farmer, was attacked by a bull, which charged him several times and would have killed him if he had not succeeded in getting hold of a sharp instrument and putting out both of its eyes.

Duluth—The Canadian Northern railroad has refused to receive further shipments of settlers' effects owing to the congested condition of traffic on the road west from the Minnesota boundary.

Mankato—Fred Helm of St. Peter trapped an otter in the Minnesota river last week, the fur from which brought him nearly $20.

FOR THE BUSINESS WOMAN

A Few Things She Should Always Keep in Mind—Poor Sense of Justice Is to Be Regretted—Sending Money Through the Mails.

BY KATHERINE LOUISE SMITH.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

An uneven balancing of money affairs is unfortunately more common among women than among men. This is not due to lack of the instinct of justice, but to want of training. We have all been the recipients of gifts that we have involuntarily exclaimed on receiving: "Oh, I wish she had not sent it," simply because we knew the donor was violating the instinct of justice. Many a grocer's wife has received a present and heard her husband exclaim on seeing it: "If that same woman would pay me what she owes me it would be a trifle better." Such cases are common. They come from a warped sense of justice induced often by lack of business system. This is one reason why it is desirable to keep books, to keep a bank account and to pay by means of checks.

If it is desirable to pay a bill in another town several ways may be adopted. Money can be sent by check or bank draft. The former should be made payable to "order." Such a check is perfectly safe in any letter as it cannot be drawn by any person save the correct party. Money can also be sent by express or telegraph companies. Both these methods are rapid but expensive and as a rule are employed in emergencies.

Another way is to send a money order. These are issued for any amount for one cent to $100. The rate varies in this country according to the amount, from 3 to 30 cents. They are not payable the day of issue, but if lost a duplicate will be made out. In order to get this duplicate it is necessary to preserve the stub handed the payer by the postmaster who issues the order.

These orders are safe, economical and can be obtained at 36,000 money order offices in the United States. As a handy reference it is well to note the following information regarding fees which is furnished by the post office:

Three cents to 30 cents for orders payable in the United States and her island possessions (Porto Rico, Hawaii, Guam and the Philippine islands), the United States postal agency at Shanghai, in Canada, Cuba, Newfoundland and in Barbados, Grenada, St. Lucia and St. Vincent (West Indies).

Eight cents to 50 cents for international orders payable in Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Bermuda, Bolivia, British Guiana, Chili, Costa Rica, Denmark, Egypt, Hungary, Jamaica, Japan, Leeward islands, Liberia, Luxemburg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Sweden, Switzerland, Transvaal and Trinidad.

Ten cents to one dollar for international orders payable in Apia (Samoa), Cape Colony, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Honduras, Hongkong, Italy, New South Wales, Portugal, Queensland, Russia, Salvador, South Australia, Tasmania and Victoria.

* * * * *

Often in sending letters or packages with valuable contents, it is well to have them registered if the mails are employed. This ensures the parcel against loss for its value up to $25. So conveniently is this arranged that while parcels may be registered in any post office or post office station, city and rural carriers are also authorized to register moderate sized letters and parcels and to give a receipt for the same. The addressee is always asked to sign a receipt on delivery of parcel and this is returned by the post office to the sender. The fee for registry is eight cents, in addition to postage, which is either foreign or domestic rate.

Uncle Sam is a sure and safe deliverer and his mail goes to every post office in the world. If it is desirable to have a letter reach its destination as soon as possible it is well to affix a special delivery stamp, in addition to the regular postage. Perhaps the letter will reach its destination on Sunday where there is no mail delivery. The special stamp insures its delivery at once within the limit of the city delivery, and within one mile of any other United States post office.

* * * * *

"How will I know which window to approach, in depositing money in a bank, and can you give me a suggestion that will help in counting my money in the bank?"—A Depositor.

The departments at a bank are always plainly marked, and the words "Receiving Teller" and "Paying Teller" show exactly where to go to deposit and receive money. Many persons imagine that banking hours are short and that business on that account is easy. The contrary is the case, for often bookkeepers spend hours rectifying mistakes. For this reason, and because her own time should be valuable, the considerate woman will count her money before leaving home, will have checks and bills separated for depositing and will keep deposit slips at home so that she can enter her money on the slip and have it ready to be handed in immediately on reaching the bank. It is always best to call early at a bank, for there is an accumulation of business near the closing hours.

* * * * *

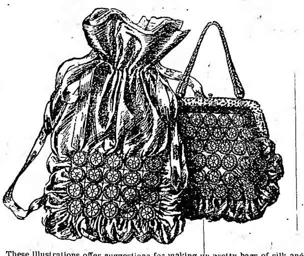
"You state that most banks have deposit slips that are handed in with the money. Of what value are they? My bank is a small one and does not use them. Could I make one out and hand in?"—Business Woman.

Yes, you can make a slip out, affixing your name, the date and the amount of checks, bills and silver that you deposit. Here is an instance of the value of a deposit slip. A well-known woman on a certain day, deposited a sum in checks and money in her bank. Unfortunately she was careless enough to leave her bank book at home, and when she obtained it later, after the monthly "write-up," no record of this transaction appeared. She at once notified the bank and a search revealed the fact that they had her deposit slip properly made out but had credited the money to another party of the same surname. The mistake was rectified at once with profuse apologies, but it serves as an instance to show how mistakes can happen even in the best banks, and how depositors should be particular to use the slips and, when possible, have the entry made at once on the pass book.

"What is meant by indorsing a check 'in blank?'"—Mrs. A. L. M.

A check indorsed "in blank" is one which bears on its back the name of the person to whom it is made out. In such a case the holder can write above the name of the indorser the words "Pay to the order of (herself)." The check cannot then be drawn by any one but the proper person. To illustrate: Mary L. Brown has a check which was given her by Dorothy Condit, whose name appears on the face and back of the check. She is afraid she may lose it, in which case anyone can draw it. So she writes over Dorothy Condit's signature on the back, "Pay to the order of Mary L. Brown." She then knows that no one can draw the check unless she signs her name beneath that of Dorothy Condit. In case Mary L. Brown wishes to turn the check over to some one, says Alice Sanborn, she writes under the other indorsements: "Pay to the order of Alice Sandborn," and signs her name, Mary L. Brown.

Two Pretty Designs for Bags of Silk and Rings



These illustrations offer suggestions for making up pretty bags of silk and rings covered with crochet. Small brass or celluloid rings are worked over in double crochet. The spaces are then filled in with spun-stitches such as are worked in lace. They should be in finer silk. The number of rings that are joined must, of course, be regulated by the size of the bag required.

Our first design is arranged so that the silk is gathered up to form a puff outside the rings at sides and lower edge. The top is drawn up by ribbon threaded through rings sewn inside about two inches from the upper edge.

The other has the silk put plainly under the rings with a puffing at the lower edge; the top is sewn into a gilt clasp mount with silk cord handle. The lining of this bag should only be carried to the edge of the plain part; it will thus make the puff set better, and make this inside more convenient.

IS THE OLDEST NEWSBOY

ORASMUS PAGE, OF JOLIET, ILL., 99 YEARS OF AGE.

Still Active Despite His Handicap of Deafness and Loss of One Leg—A Familiar Figure of Railroad Depot.

Joliet, Ill.—Ninety-nine years old, handicapped by deafness and the loss of one leg, Orasmus Page of this city has the distinction of being the oldest newsboy in the world. For 14 years, summer and winter, the patriarch has been at his place at the Chicago and Alton depot from early morning until the middle of the forenoon supplying his patrons with the morning papers. Grandfather Page, as he is popularly known, has no sympathy with the Osler theory, and, although he celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday last month, has no idea of retiring in favor of any member of the younger generation.

Two blocks from the station in a modest but comfortable little cottage lives this centenarian newsboy with his wife Mary, who is 22 years younger than her husband and rheumatic, but continues in spite of her 77 years to do the housework for the family, which includes a grandson who is living with the old couple. They have been married sixty years and have five grown children, 14 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Orasmus Page comes from a family noted for longevity. His mother died at 78 and his father's death resulted from an accident when he was 86. His grandfather lived to be 102 years and nine months old and the grandmother reached the great age of 105 years.

Mr. Page has been self-supporting from the time he was ten years old, when he went to work on a farm as chore boy in New York state, where he was born Feb. 11, 1808. During his long life he has been engaged in a wide range of occupations. He has toiled as a section hand on a railroad, run a coal office, worked at house moving, driven a team, and it was while running a threshing machine that he lost his leg. A little log cabin in Franklin county, Ohio, was the first home of the couple, and subsequently they moved to western Indiana the journey being made by team. Twenty years ago they moved to Braidwood, Ill., and a little later to Joliet.

Despite his great age, Mr. Page displays a remarkable degree of vigor. He arises at four o'clock in the morning and is down at the station looking after his papers long before the town is astir. Until ten o'clock his familiar figure, which unconsciously reminds one of an old sea salt, is to be seen around the depot, unless his supply of papers runs short before that time, which is often the case, for he has a good patronage. Then he goes home to breakfast and returns to his original occupation of doing chores. He wields an ax as handily as a youth, and there is never a lack of kindling on hand beside the stove. In the afternoon he sits down for a rest and a smoke in the cozy armchair near the stove, while Mrs. Page, who is a great newspaper reader, devotes herself to the news of the day, a discussion of which usually leads to a reminiscent chat between the old couple.

Neither of the pair ever attended a theater, but they once witnessed an amateur performance of "Bluebeard" in a school where one of their daughters was a teacher. Contented, happy and independent, Mr. Page has no special advice to give with regard to the problem of good health and attaining old age. He believes in the simple life and out-of-door work, plenty of rest and sleep and plain, substantial food. He always has been fond of tobacco, but has given all other forms of stimulant a wide berth.

ORASMUS PAGE.
(Oldest Newsboy in the World.)

MEXICAN AMBASSADRESS RICH.

Senora Creel Also an Accomplished Artist and Musician.

Washington.—One of the richest women in the world is Senora Angela Creel, wife of the new Mexican ambassador to Washington. Yet her receptions are marked by elegance and good taste, rather than a desire to parade. She is one of the least pretentious of the grande dames in the foreign corps.

Ordinarily she is gowned in simple texture, and her manner is very retiring. But on occasion she can put on the most costly garments and jewels ever seen at the capital.

Senora Creel is the daughter of Gen. Miguel Francesco de Terrajaf, governor of Chihuahua. He is a self-made man, having worked up from a laborer earning 20 cents a day. He now owns almost the whole of Chihuahua. "What he doesn't own his son-in-law, Senor Creel, does," the Mexicans say.

Senor Creel maintains at San Rosario, in the southern part of Chihuahua, one of the most magnificent establishments on this continent. The luxury of the Vanderbilt, Rockefeller or Gould estates is meager compared with it. On the Creel estate are two good-sized towns, almost three counties and vast mining and industrial plants. The retainers would make a good-sized army.

Senora Creel, who shares this vast wealth, is a linguist, musician and artist. She is aiding in the literary and artistic developments of her country.

SENORA ANGELA CREEL.
(Wife of New Mexican Ambassador, Who Is Both Rich and Accomplished.)

In Belgium, 70 per cent. of telegraph messages are delivered in from one to 15 minutes.

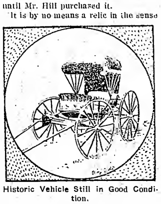
A PEDIGREED FOUR-WHEELER.

Carriage in Which Member of Washington's Cabinet Rode.

Boston.—The private carriage of Maj. Gen. Henry Knox, of Thomaston, who was first secretary of war under Washington, is in the possession of Frank B. Hills, first selectman of Thomaston, Me. Not only is it one of the most historic vehicles in the United States, but it is also probably the oldest able-bodied private carriage in existence on the continent.

In spite of its 125 years, a quaint, substantial vehicle it is. Gen. Knox probably had it made in Boston, for there were no carriage builders in Thomaston in those early days, and, as Gen. Knox operated a packet line of small sailing vessels between Boston and Thomaston, it would have been easy for him to have the carriage brought to Thomaston. Many thousands of miles has this vehicle rolled since the day it left the maker's hands. Gen. Knox used it to drive over his vast estate in Maine, and when he died on Oct. 25, 1806, it went among the possessions of his estate which were sold. The father of Alden Gay, of Thomaston, bought the vehicle, and it remained in use with the Gay family until Mr. Hill purchased it.

It is by no means a relic in the sense of something that has become useless. The historic carriage is in good condition to this day, and Mr. Hill occasionally takes a ride in it. Not only does it run easily, but it is a decidedly comfortable carriage. To use an old expression, Gen. Knox's carriage was "built upon honor"—that is to say, the whole body and wheels and axles are of the best. The whiffletree is of iron, and there is a step on either shaft to enter the carriage. Its upholstering is of the finest material, for in the old colonial days the carriages of the gentry were elaborate affairs. The dasher is covered with whole calfskin, it has a "boot," and is fitted with most of the conveniences which are used in the carriages of to-day.



Historic Vehicle Still in Good Condition.

Used by Millions

Calumet Baking Powder

Complies with the Pure Food Laws of every State.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

Published [illegible] Thursday evening, and entered [illegible] matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

THE 2-CENT FARE MOVEMENT.

The popular movement for a maximum passenger fare of 2 cents a mile swept over the country at the beginning of this year and was followed by the introduction of bills with that object in view in no less than eighteen of the state legislatures have resulted in the passage of the measures by eight of these states and in prompt signatures by the executives in each instance. Three states have the matter still under consideration by their assemblies. One—Kansas—refused to take any action. Two—Wisconsin and North Dakota—compromised on the 2½ cent rate.

The states that enacted 2-cent fare laws are, practically in the order in which they acted, Mississippi, Arkansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota and Pennsylvania. In Mississippi, the railroads have already taken legal action to stop the putting of the law into effect. In Arkansas, Missouri and Nebraska, the systems have adopted retaliatory tactics and have either materially reduced their service or are planning to do so. In Indiana, where the electric lines are extensive, as in Ohio, the pioneer in the 2 cent fare scheme, the steam roads are apparently resigned. In Pensylvania President McCrea of the Pennsylvania system and Baer of the Reading declare vehemently that they will be forced to use cheaper equipment. In Iowa and Minnesota, in which states efforts to compromise on 2½ cents failed, there have been hints of "2-cent service for 2-cent fares," but this has not come from the master-minds of any of the roads.

In Michigan, where the measure to reduce rates in the lower peninsula to 2 cent on lines earning over $1,200 a mile per year seemed in danger of being killed, Governor Warner himself took such action as will undoubtedly secure the passage of the bill by both houses, one of which—the senate—has already taken action. One house of the Illinois legislature has passed a 2-cent act and the other is almost certain to do so. New York which has 2 cents for long distances on the trunk lines is likely to make the maximum the same on all roads.

The railroads generally contend that they will have to put on cheaper trains with cheaper equipments, will have to countermand orders for costly new coaches and will also be compelled to abandon their limited service with cars of the highest and most expensive type. The advocates of the reduced rates contend, on the contrary, that cheaper fares will soon result in such increase in travel as will yield the roads greater revenues than ever and, so far as weight of precedent is concerned, they have the better of this argument. The railroads must also give credit for the goodly increase in revenue due to the cutting off of all free transportation.

In some cases, there is talk of retaliation, if the railroads shall install cheaper equipment and economize on train service. It is sincerely to be hoped, however, that talk of this kind will subside and the railroads be left in peace to work out the problems which are already sufficiently complicated.—Duluth Herald.

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this grand old medicine cannot do its best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Pills while taking the Sarsaparilla.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of

Ayer's
HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

In The Towns....

where you find the people making use of their banks, depositing their money and paying their bills by check you will find a progressive, "get-there" spirit that means the up-building of that town and vicinity.

This is our home and we take an active interest in watching and aiding the material prosperity of both town and surrounding country. We should to see every man and woman who has an income, every farmer, every laboring man, every mechanic, every young man in this community start a bank account.

You are interested—come in and talk with us about it

Merchants State Bank

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

Lightinng rod agents are getting busy in North Dakota. It is said that the farmers are buying them with hope that they will ward off the possibility of being struck by another blizzard.

St. Cloud Journal Press:—"Whom the gods would kill they first make mad." The "fat boys" are about mad enough at President Roosevelt for killing. Here's hoping they succeed in making enough of a fight to induce Roosevelt to run for a second term.

The preliminary reports of the Nebraska railroads for March indicates increased earnings under the operation of the two cents passenger rate which went into effect March 1st. The officials of the roads are reticent and refuse to give exact totals, but it is evident that the 2 cent passenger rate is no detriment to the roads, if it was, the railroad officials would not be so close mouthed.

There are now nearly eight million more people in continental United States than there were six years ago. This estimate is based upon figures compiled by the census bureau in a special report issued last week. According to its estimates the population of continental United States in 1906 was 83,941,510 an increase over 7,946,935. The population of the United States inclusive of Alaska and Insular possessions in 1906 was 93,182,240. The growth in population in continental Uuited States from 1905 to 1909 was 1,337,315. Computed on the basis of estimated density the population of continental United States in 1906 was twenty-eight persons per square mile, compared with twenty-six in 1900.

A janitor in a neighboring school threw up his job the other day. When asked what was the trouble, he said, "I'm honest and I won't stand being slurred. If I find a pencil or a handkerchief 'bout the school I hang it up. Every little while the teacher or some one that is too cowardly to face me, gives me a slur." "in what way?" asked the officer. "Why, a little while ago I saw written on the board, find the common multiple.' Well I looked from cellar to garret, and I wouldn't know the blamed thing if I met it on the street. What made me quit my job? Last night in big writin' on the blackboard, it said 'find the greatest common divisor., Well I says to myself' both of them darn things are lost now, and I'll be blamed for swipin' 'em, so I'll quit.'

Stand By The Home Creamery.

There is a movement on foot to concentrate the creamery business, now flourishing in every county of the state, in big cities, and as an inducement alluring offers are being made to the farmers by the promoters of the scheme to get them to send their cream to the cities instead of patronizing their home co-operative creameries. If the farmers are wise, they will stand by their own institutions. The city speculators do not care a rap for the welfare of the farmers and go into the venture for what there is in it. It is very probable that in the beginning they will pay a trifle more for the cream than the country creamery, but should they succeed in crowding the latter out of business, which of course will be their aim, a different tune will be heard. We may then look for Standard Oil methods and with no remedy at hand to conteract it. Every business man and farmer knows how the big oil company crushes competition. Whenever an independant concern attempted to sell its oil in a town in competition with Rockerfeller the latter sold his oil at and below cost until the other fellow gave up, and then raised the price a point or two above the former price to make up for the lost sustained in driving a competitor out of business.

Stand by your own creamery. If it needs improvments, get them. Have everything up to date, including the buttermaker. You then will command the highest market price obtainable and need not fear that the butter trust which is now being formed, will take all the profits and let you assume all the trouble and responsibility. After the country creameries are once driven out of business it will be an easy matter for the city speculators to dictate the price, quality and conditions. It will be a good deal like a commission house business—the producer the risk and the city man takes the rest.

GREAT NORTHERN

Makes a Noise Like Commencing Work on Roseau Branch.

Roseau Times: About two months ago the Times stated upon semi-official authority that work would commence on the Roseau extension of the Great Northern before the frost was out of the ground. This was no prediction, but a statement made upon the word of an official who was in a position to know what he was talking about, and it appears now that his statement is about to be verified. Word comes from Greenbush to the effect that about all the material needed for the bridge work between that point and Warroad has been unloaded, and a construction man in Greenbush stated that the work of laying steel would be completed to Roseau not later than May 15. It is to be hoped that this will prove true and the building of the road no longer delayed. The entire matter is up to the construction-department and there does not appear to be any other work to interfere with the completion of the Roseau branch from Greenbush to Warroad by June 1st.

Send us the news.

ENGLAND SAYS NO ALUM IN FOOD

In England and France the Sale of Alum Baking Powder is prohibited by law because of the injurious effects that follow its use.

The law in the District of Columbia also prohibits Alum in food.

You may live where as yet you have no protection against Alum The only sure protection against Alum in your Baking Powder is to

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ROYAL is made from Absolutely pure Cream of Tartar,—a pure Grape product. Aids digestion—adds to the healthfulness of food.

SPECIALS For One WEEK

For one week we offer the following extra specials from our big stock. They are all big values and you cannot afford to miss them.

7-INCH EMBROIDERIES, 500 Yards Per Yard........................ 10c

$2.25 LADIES' OXFORDS, an exceptional value at the price named, Next Week.................. $1.40

MEM'S SHIRTS, all our 75c and $1.00 Men's Shirts, While They Last................. 38c

You will find our Grocery, Department the largest and best in the city. Your orders given prompt attention.

LAMPS, A complete Lamp Outfit, one that will give you good service, for...................... 15c

FORCE, the modern Breakfast Food, the kiod you always buy. For ooe week, 2 packages for..................... 25c

Come in and let us show you the finest and largest line of new spring and summer shoes and Oxfords ever shown in Red Lake Falls.

—They Can't Be Beat.

THE BUSY STORE

GARCEAU & ZAISER

Changed the Name.

Some time ago the name of Oslo was changed according to reports received from that town to Soo City. The Oslo Tribune however, still comes out under that name and whether the change will stick or not seems to be a question. Citizens of that city are registering from Soo City. The change is said to have been the result of a desire on the part of Thief River Falls to change to the same name. Thief Riverites do not like their name because of its length and the implication, but Oslo thought that Soo City was a better name than Oslo so slipped in ahead of Thief River Falls. Oslo is on the Red river just west of Warren.

High School State Pupils Exam

Rural and ungraded schools desiring to secure the state high school board examinations should make known the same to the county superintendent at once. In thus notifying the superintendent it is necessary to state the subjects in which examinations are to be taken and the number of sets of questions desired in each subject.

No questions can be ordered after a requisition for same has been made to the state board. Teachers desiring the examinations should report without delay. The examinations will take place the last week of May or the first week in June.

Subscribe for the Gazette.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

The Syracuse "Easy" Washer

A Few Reasons Why You ... Should Have One ...

It saves the clothes.

It saves precious time.

It saves physical force.

It saves in cost—no new tubs or boards to buy.

It washes cleaner and rinses better.

It is adapted to both heavy and light clothes.

We Have Sold Hundreds of these machines since we have had the agency—another good reason why you should have one. We wouldn't have sold so many if they weren't right. Remember we put them out on trial and the price is only ....

$8.00

Hunt Hardware Co.

FIRST STATE BANK

OF

RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU

PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS	DIRECTORS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President	Theo. Gareeau Frank E. Hunt
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President	Chas. N. Bourdon
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier	W. A. Schreiter A. P. Toupin
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.	N. M. Watson Geo. F. Hennings

The Local Field---

Class Play
"Sweet Girl Graduates"
Friday Evening April 19th.

Everybody turn out and give them a big house.

J. B. Armstrong was an over Sunday visitor at Fargo.

A. Cairns was an over night visitor at Crookston Wednesday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Mrs. Joe Cyr is reported very ill with rheumatism this week.

Joseph Sally was an over Sunday visitor with friends at Theif River.

Miss Ida Tandberg visited with friends at Thief River tne first of the week.

L. O. Thompson, of Grand Forks spent a few days in the city the fore part of the week.

Miss Mary Lamb spent Saturday at St. Hilaire as the guest of Miss Mable Hannay.

Judge Knight returned Tuesday from Thief River where he had been visiting for a few days.

The Foresters held a qance at their hall last evening. The music was furnished by Friends Orchestra.

Mrs. P. W. Roark of Kelliher, arrived in the city last week for a two weeks visit with friends and relatives.

J. E. Leighton deputy manager of the M. B. A. lodge of this disrict was in the city this week organizing a class.

Howard R. Jones of Crookston to Alma I. Remington, of St. Hilaire was the only marriage license issued this week.

Robert Regan went to Greenbush where he has a lucrative position offered him that of assistant in the freight house.

Gus. Anderson, an uncle of S. A. Swanson, arrived in the city from Badger, Roseau County, last Tuesday. He left for Duluth last evening.

When you have glasses fitted take no chances; but have your eyes examined by a Specialist whose ability is unquestioned, Dr. Spafford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

We mnke farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds oa hand nt nll times---First State Bank. Red Lake Falls.

"Sweet Girl Graduates," April 19th.

Joe Ducharme of Badger is on the sick list this week.

F. A. Grady transacted business at Crookston Tuesday night.

Go to the Merehants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 pereent.

Z. A. Cadieux of Crookston visited with relatives here last Saturday.

Matt Skala transacted business at Crookston the fore part of the week.

Mrs. A. L. Brunelle left Saturday for a week's visit with friends at Crookston.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes, The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

Miss Aliee Coughlin spent last Friday as a guest of Miss Ada Foote at East Grand Forks.

There will be no services at St. Mary's church Sunday owing to the absence of Father Ambrose.

E. E. Fletcher went to Grand Forks yesterday morning to visit his sons, Dr. F. F. and Abner for a few days.

Nap Marleau and son departed yesterday for Spokane, Wash., where they will take up their residence for the summer.

J. W. Westphal came up from Minneapolis on Wedensday to attend to some business matters, returning the same day.

Albert Guerin and Adalore Guilmette returned to this city Tuesday after having spent the winter in the lumber woods.

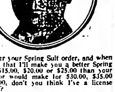
The Ladies aid soceity of the Presbyterian church will meet at the church parlors at 3 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon for a business meeting.

Jos. Sally has a brand new wagon for his dray line. The workmanship was done by Ens. Normandeau and is a creditable piece of work for any wagon manufacturer.

Dr. F. F. Fletcher. of Grand Forks, will be at Dr. Wilkinson's office in Red Lake Falls, from April 27th to 29th inclusive. Anyone having dental work should see him at that time.

When you need a pill, take a pill and be sure It's an Early Riser. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are safe, sure, satisfactory pills. The pills with a reputation. They do not gripe or sicken. They are sold here by all druggists.

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.



I'm after your Spring Suit order, and when I tell you that I'll make you a better Spring suit for $15.00, $20.00 or $25.00 than your local tailor would make for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00, don't you think I've a license to butt in?

It don't cut any ice where you live, I'll absolutely guarantee to fit you and give you perfect satisfaction. I do the biggest mail-order business in the country, and I know what I'm talking about.

Write me today and tell me about the kind of Spring suit you have on your mind, and by return mail I'll send you samples of my spring fabrics, also self-measurement blank. Don't be afraid to ask questions. I want to be of service to you any way I can.

Remember, I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money—you run no risk whatever. I pay all express charges, so your clothes will cost you no more than if you bought them right here in Minneapolis.

Write me today and let me save you a bunch of money.

Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

It's Up to You

I AM RIGHT WITH THE GOODS.

Suit Made to Order, Scotch Goods, Worth $30 and $35

$15

Suits Made to Order, English Goods, Worth $35 to $40

$20 AND $25

Suits Made to Order, Special Goods, Worth $45 to $50 of Any Other Tailor

$30 AND $35

Write for Samples Today,

HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Macaroni seed wheat for sale.—L. C. Simons.

E. L. Healy transacted bussiness at Terrehonne yesterday.

F. A. Farley was an over night visitor at Crookston Tuesday.

A. L. Reichert went down to the Twin Cities Tuesday on business.

State Libarian King attended to business matters in the eity a few days this week.

There will be a business meeting of the Royal Neighbors at 7:30 P. M. on Friday evening.

The finest line of eandies and confectionery in the eity ean always be found at Freund's.

Miss Ida Miller departed this morning for Hillsboro, N. D., ber home, where she was called.

Miss Mamie Regan returned home Saturday from a week's visit with friends at Crookston.

Supt. McAnulty is spending the week visiting schools in the northeastern part of the county.

Tom Pouliot arrived in the city last Friday from Grand Rapids and will visit among relatives for a short time.

The Big Store is advertising a discount sale of spring coats in todays Gazette. It will pay you to look over the ad.

Editor Dudley of the Gazette went to Little Falls Tuesday evening where he was called by the serious illness of his father.

Mrs. A. P. Toupin returned this morning from a two weeks visit with her daughter. Mrs. H. N. Johnson, at Park River, N. D.

Sheriff Nelson went to Thief River yesterday, from whieb place he will go out on the reservation to attend to some business matters.

I have taken off a bateh and will now sell or trade my "Old Trusty" incubator, 110 egg size, as I have no further use for it this year.—Fred L. Farley. 2w

Miss Lerain Longtin departs tomorrow for Rugby N. D. where she will resume her school duties, concluding a two weeks visit with friends and relatives here.

Miss Dollie Matthies, who who was forced to give up her work at the Normal for a time on aeeount of illness, returned to Moorhead Monday where she will resume her studies.

Contractors Linnihan & Gray shipped a bunch of horses to Glenwood yesterday to be used on contraets which they have secured on the new Glenwood-Duluth extention of the Soo.

A. P. Toupin and J. R. Pouliot left Monday for a several days business trip to Duluth. Mr. Pouliot has several positions in sight at that place and will probably take up his residence in the Zenith City.

St. Hilaire is to have an electric light plant and a telephone exehange. That Commereial Club is surely getting to the front and gives evidence of making St. Hilaire a modern little eity in every respeet.

Frank Jeffers came home Saturday for a week's sojourn among a host of friends. Frank reports everything in his line as progressing satisfaetory, but has considerable diffieulty in refraining from telling 'em to "Vote for Jeffers". when he enters a new town to solicit business.

Joe Harren received a handsome new Boston baritone last week, which is one of the finest Instruments made. The instrument which made a hundred dollar bill look like the proverbal 30-cents, is a beauty and will he a valuable addition to the band's fine equipment.

A. Mr. Hanson arrived in the city last Tuesdav and on Wednesday was taken out to Terrebonne by landman Healy witb a view of purehasing a farm. The gentlemau was favorably impressed with the eountry and wben he departed for home on Wednesday expressed a desire of returning.

Use Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Children like its pleasant taste, and motbers give it hearty endorsement. Contains no opiates, but drives out the cold tbrougb tbe bowels. Made in strict eonformity to Pure Food and Drugs Law. Recommended and sold by all druggists.

With tbe passage of the 2-cent fare bill, which goes into effeet May 1st., there is considerable interest evinced in what the ehange in fare will be to different points in this vicinity. Under the new rate the fare to Crookston will be redueed from 97cent to 64 cents a reduetion of about 65 eents for the round trip. The trip to St. Hilaire ean be made for 21 cents instead of 31 cents, and to Thief River for 36 cents in place of 53 eents under the old rate. The fare to Minneapolis at present is $8.51. Taken on a mileage basis of 284 miles, under the new rate the fare would be redueed to $5.68, or a saving of $5.66 for the round trip, which would equal a fare and a third under the old 3-cent rate.

The happiest man on this earth is the common every day ebap who makes his own living, pays bis own bills, but doesn't strive to get a corner on the loeal output and is a slave neither of ambition or society. he loves "there is no place like home." The loved wife never has to sit up at night to poultiee his conseience, for he beleives in the doetrine of live and let live. The plain man is happy because he is satisfied and does not spend the best part of his life in day dreams. scbemes and yearning for things four sizes too large for him.—Ex.

Discount Sale of
--Spring Coats--

We have just opened a lot of Cloaks that have been used as samples, not soiled in any way. perfectly clean. We offer them at a big reduction.
No duplicates furnished at same price.

$20.00 satin lined long coats, silk velvet collars, medium weight, all wool cloth, sale price...............

$15.00

$ 8.00 long coats, satin lined, all wool goods, all wool material, made in the inimitable Palmer style. Palmer made and the Palmer fit, $12.50-

$13.50

These goods should be seen to be appreciated.

If you can't afford a ready made coat, get some of our long coat material and with the aid of a Butterick Pattern you can make yourself a dandy coat for $4 00 to $5.00

Our line of Shoes

is the most complete line shown in . . . the city . . .

We show St. Cecilia shoes in turns, welts, blucher and lace, kid, patent leather and gun metal, all

$3.50

We show a regular $3.00 shoe for

$2.50

You can't beat it elsewhere for $3

Get your grass and garden seeds from us---we sell Northrup King's sterling grass seeds, clover, timothy, corn, etc.

Everybody says it pays to trade at . .

The Big Store

Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

The pure food department reeently had samples of tobacca examined and analized and the faet was revealed that the trust is preparing all kinds of stuff for the innocent to put in their pipes und smoke. The kinds known as English Curve Cut and his God and his fellowman, thinks Lucky Strike contain 40 per cent of tobacco and the balanee was common brown paper cut fine. Bull Durham contained not a particle of tobacco but was made of finely ehopped straw paper soaked in the juice of tobaceo stems and refuse. Dukes Mixture was only ten per cent tobaeco and the rest brown paper. When a man thinks be is suffering from nicotine poisoning, it may be nothing but the taste of straw smoke creosote in his mouth.

White Wyandottes are the best general purpose fowl. Have the size and are great winter layers. Eggs from extra fine stoek $1.00 per setting.—Fred L. Farley. 27 30

Fosston, McIntosh and Fertile have completed arrangements to hold a field meet at McIntosh during the last week of school. There will be twelve events, eaeh school being represented by two students in eaeh event, first place to count five points and second to count three points, the school seeuring the largest number being judged victors. Following is the list of events: Running high jump, Running broad jump, Pole vault, 100 yd. dash. 220 yd. dash, 440 yd. dash. Putting the shot 16lb., Throwing the hammer' 16lb., 1 mile relay raee, Hurdle raee, Tug of war, 6 on a side.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints
The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,
Small Farm Implements
Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

[illegible] a love story, again that [illegible] moving love of one man for [illegible] woman, that seemed as sweet as [illegible] novel to her. But there was [illegible] between the houses in the play, [illegible] young lover had to make a [illegible] see his beloved, climbing a [illegible] wall into her garden, climbing to [illegible] balcony by a scarf she flung [illegible] to him. To the young woman [illegible] Amalon, these lovers' voices [illegible] with a strange compulsion, so [illegible] they played with her heart be[illegible] them. She was in turn the [illegible] pleading in a voice that touched [illegible] heart-string from low to high; [illegible] he was the woman, soft and [illegible] hesitating in moments of de[illegible] doubt, yet almost fearful of her [illegible] to resist, half-wishing to be [illegible], half-frightened lest she [illegible]

[illegible] she followed the heart-[illegible] tragedy to its close, suffer[illegible] the grief of each lover, [illegible] death for each, and feeling [illegible] desolated when the end came, [illegible] when the dull curtain shut her [illegible] to her own little world, where [illegible] was no love like that, and be[illegible] the little bent man she went out [illegible] the night.

[illegible] next morning had come a [illegible] delight, an invitation to a ball [illegible] Brigham. Most of the day was [illegible] in one of the shops, choosing [illegible] of wondrous beauty, and hav[illegible] fitted to her. When she looked [illegible] the little cracked mirror that [illegible] she saw a strange new face and [illegible], and, when she entered the ball[illegible] she felt that others noted the [illegible] strangeness, for many looked at [illegible] till she felt her cheeks burn. [illegible] Brigham arose from a sofa, [illegible] he had been sitting with his [illegible] wife and his last, and came gal[illegible] toward her. Brigham, whom [illegible] knew to be the most favored of [illegible] on earth and the absolute ruler of [illegible] the realm about her,—an affable, [illegible] dignified gentleman [illegible], who took her hand warmly in [illegible] his own, looked her over with his [illegible] blue eyes, and welcomed her [illegible] Zion in words of a fatherly gentle[illegible]. Later, when he had danced with [illegible] of his wives, Brigham came to [illegible] with her, light of foot and full [illegible] for the measure as any youth.

[illegible]thers danced with her, but during [illegible] she kept finding herself back be[illegible] the magic square that framed the [illegible] where a man loved but one woman. She remembered that Brig[illegible] had sat with four of his wives in one of the boxes, enthusiastically [illegible] that portrayal of a single [illegible]. As the picture came back to [illegible] now, there seemed to have been [illegible] incongruous in this spec[illegible]. She observed the seamed and [illegible] features of his earliest wife, [illegible] kept to the sofa during the even[illegible] beside the better favored Amelia, [illegible] the good man had last married, [illegible] she thought of his score or so of [illegible] between them.

[illegible] she knew that what she had [illegible] the night before had been the [illegible], that she could love no man who did not love her alone. She tried to [illegible] the lover in the play going from balcony to balcony, sighing the [illegible] impassioned love-tale to woman after woman, or to imagine him with many wives at home, to whom would [illegible] taken the news of his death in the [illegible] of his last. So she thought of [illegible] play and not of the ball, stepping the dances absently, and, when it was all over, she fell asleep, rejoicing that, before their death, the two dear lovers had been sealed for time and eternity, so that they could awaken together in the Kingdom.

They went home the next day, driving down the valley that rolled in billows of green between the broken ridges of the Wasatch and the Oquirrh. It was no longer of the Kingdom she thought, nor of Brigham and his wives; only of a clean-limbed youth in doublet and hose, a plumed [illegible], and a silken cloak, who, in a voice that brought the tears back of her eyes, told of his undying love for one woman—and of the soft, tender woman in the moonlight, who had trusted him and let herself go to him in life and in death.

The world had not ended. She thought that, in truth, it could not have ended yet; for had she not a life to live?

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Lion of the Lord Sends an Order.

They reached home in very different states of mind. The girl was eager for the solitude of her favorite nook in the canyon, where she could dream in peace of the wonderland she had glimpsed; but the little bent man was stirred by dread and chafed with forebodings. To him, as well as to the girl, the change in the first city of Zion had been a thing to wonder at. But what had thrilled her with a dazed delight brought pain to him. Zion was no longer held inviolate.

And now the truth was much clearer to him. Not only had the Lord deferred His coming, but He had set His hand again to scatter Israel for its sin. Instead of letting them stay alone in their mountain retreat until the beginning of His reign on earth, He had brought the Gentiles upon them in overwhelming numbers. Where once a thousand miles of wilderness lay between them and Gentile wickedness, they were now hemmed about with it, and even it polluted the streets of the holy city itself.

One morning, a few weeks after he had reached home from the north, he received a call from Seth Wright.

"Here's a letter Brother Brigham wanted me to be sure and give you," said this good man. "He said he didn't know you was allowing to start back so soon, or he'd have seen you in person."

He took the letter and glanced at the superscription, written in Brigham's rather unformed but plain and very decided-looking hand.

"So you've been north, Brother Seth? What do you think of Israel there?"

The views of the Wild Ram of the Mountains partook in certain ways of his own discouragement.

"Zion has run to seed, Brother Rae; the rank weeds of Babylon is a-goin' to choke it out, root and branch! We ain't got no chance to live a pure and Godly life any longer, with railroads coming in, and Gentiles with their fancy contraptions. It weakens the spirit, and it plays the very bob with the women. Soon as they git up there now, and see them new styles from St. Looey or Chicago, they git downright daft. No more homespun for 'em, no more valley tan, no more parched corn for coffee, nor beet molasses nor unbolted flour. Oh, I know what I'm talkin' about. That reminds me, you had Prudence up to Conference, and I guess you don't know what that letter's about."

"Why, no; do you?"

"Well, Brother Brigham only let a word or two drop, but plain enough; he don't have to use many. He was a little mite afraid some one down here would cut in ahead of him."

Joel Rae had torn open the big blue envelope in a sudden fear, and now he read in Brigham's well-known script:

> "Dear Bro. Joel:
>
> "I was ancus to see more of your daughter, and would of kept her hear at my house if you had not hurried off. I will let you seal her to me when I come to Pine valle next, late this summer or after Oct. conference. If anything happens and I am to bisy will have you bring her hear. Tell her of this and what it will mean to her in the Lord's kingdom and do not let her company with gentiles or with any of the young brethren around there that might put Notions into her head. Try to due right and never faint in well doing, keep the faith of the gospel and I pray the Lord to bless you.
>
> "BRIGHAM YOUNG."

The shrewd old face of the Bishop had wrinkled into a smile of quiet observation as the other read the letter. In relating the incident to the Entablature of Truth subsequently, he said of Joel Rae at the moment he looked up from this letter: "He'll never be whiter when he's dead! I see in a minute that the old man had him on the bark."

"You know what's in this, Brother Seth—you know that Brigham wants Prudence?" Joel Rae had asked, looking up from the letter, upon which both his hands had closed tightly.

"Well, I told you he dropped a word or two, jest by way of keeping off the Princes of Israel down here."

"I must go to Salt Lake at once and talk to him."

"Take her along; likely he'll marry her right off."

"But I can't—I couldn't—Brother Seth, I wish her not to marry him."

The Bishop stared blankly at him, his amazement freezing upon his lips, almost, the words he uttered.

"Not — want — her — to marry — Brother Brigham Young, Prophet, Seer, and Relevator, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in all the world!"

"But he wouldn't be so hard—taking her away from me—"

Something in the tones of this appeal seemed to touch even the heart of the Wild Ram of the Mountains, though it told of a suffering he could not understand.

"Brigham is very sot in his ways," he said, after a little, with a curious soft kindness in his voice,—"in fact, a sotter man I never knew!"

He drove off, leaving the other staring at the letter now crumpled in his hand. He also said, in his subsequent narrative to the Entablature of Truth: "You know I've always took Brother Rae for jest a natural born not, a shy little cuss that could be whiffed around by anything and everything, but when I drove off he had a plumb ornery fighting look in them deep-set eyes of his, and blame me if I didn't some way feel sorry for him.—he's that warped up, like an old water-soaked sycamore plank that gits laid out in the sun."

But this look of belligerence had quickly passed from the face of Joel Rae when the first heat of his resentment had cooled.

After that he merely suffered, torn by his reverence for Brigham, who represented on earth no less a power than the first person of the Trinity, and by the love for this child who held him to a past made beautiful by his love for her mother,—by a thousand youthful dreams and fancies and wayward hopes that he had kept fresh through all the years; torn between Brigham, whose word was as the word of God, and Prudence who was the living flower of her dead mother and all his dead hopes.

He Lifted His Broad Brimmed Hat to Her In a Gracious Sweep.

Presently he saw Prudence coming across the fields in the late afternoon from the road that led to the canyon. He watched her jealously until she drew near, then called her to him. In a few words he told her very gravely the honor that was to be done her.

When she fully understood, he noted that her mind seemed to attain an unusual clearness, her speech a new conciseness; that she was displaying a force of will he had never before suspected.

Her reply, in effect, was that she would not marry Brigham Young if all the angels in heaven came to entreat her; that the thought was not a pretty one; and that the matter might be considered settled at that very moment. "It's too silly to talk about," she concluded.

Almost fearfully he looked at her, yielding a little to her spirit of rebellion, yet trying not to yield; trying not to rejoice in the amused flash of her dark eyes and the decision of her tones. But then, as he looked, and as she still faced him, radiant in her confidence, he felt himself going with her—plunging into the tempting wave of apostasy.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A New Face in the Dream.

Prudence had to be alone to dream her dreams of a love that should be always single. Brigham's letter, far from disturbing these, had brought them a zest hitherto lacking. Neither the sacrilege of refusing him, its worldly unwisdom, nor its possible harm to the little bent man of sorrows, had as yet become apparent to her. Each day, when such duties as were hers in the house had been performed, she walked out to be alone,—always to Box canyon, that green-sided cleft in the mountain, with the brook lashing itself to a white fury over the boulders at the bottom. She would go up out of the hot valley into its cool freshness and it pleasant wood smells, and there, in the softened blue light of a pine-hung glade, she would rest, and let her fancy build what heaven-reaching towers it would. On some brown bed of pine-needles, or on a friendly gray boulder close by the water-side, where she could give her eyes to its flow and foam, and her ears to its music,—music like the muffled tinkling of little silver bells in the distance,—she would let herself go out to her dream with the joyous, reckless abandon of falling water.

It was commonly a dream of a youth in doublet and hose, a plumed cap, and a cloak of purple satin, who came in the moonlight to the balcony of his love, and sighed his passion in tones so moving that she thought an angel must have yielded—as did the girl in the balcony who had let down the scarf to him. She already knew how that girl's heart must have fluttered at the moment,—how she must have felt that the hands were mad, wicked, uncontrollable hands, no longer her own.

There was one place in the dream that she managed not without some ingenuity. It had to be made plain that the lover under the window did not come from a long, six-doored house, with a wife behind each door; that this girl, pale in the moonlight, with quickening heart and rebellious hands on the scarf, and arms that should open to him, was to be not only his first wife but his last; that he was never even to consider so much as the possibility of another, but was to cleave unto her, and to love her with a single heart for all the days of her life and his own.

There were various ways of bringing this circumstance forward. Usually she had Brigham march on at the head of his great family and counsel the youth to take more wives, in order that he should be exalted in the Kingdom. Whereupon the young man would fold his love in his arms and speak words of scorn, in the same thrilling manner that he spoke his other words, for any exaltation which they two could not share alone. Brigham, at the head of his wives, would then slink off, much abashed.

She had come naturally to see her own face as the face of this happily loved girl in the dream. She knew no face for the youth. There was none in Amalon; not Jarom Tanner, six feet three, who became a helpless grinning child in her presence; nor Moroni Peterson, who became a solemn and ghastly imbecile; nor Ammaron Wright, son of the Bishop, who had opened the dance of the Young People's Auxiliary with prayer, and later tried to kiss her in a dark corner of the room. So the face of the other person in her dream remained of an unknown heavenly beauty.

"There was a young lady came a-tripping along,
And at each side a servant-O,
And in each hand a glass of wine
To drink with the Gypsy Davy-O.

"And will you fancy me, my dear,
And will you be my Honey-O?
I swear by the sword that hangs by my side
You shall never want for money-O.

"Oh, yes, I will fancy you, kind sir,
And I will be your Honey-O,
If you swear by the sword that hangs by your side
I shall never want for money-O."

The singer seemed to be making his way slowly. Far up the trail, she had one fleeting glimpse of a man on a horse, and then he was hid again in the twilight of the pines. But the music came nearer:—

"Then she put on her high-heeled shoes,
All made of Spanish leather-O,
And she put on her bonnie, bonnie brown,
And they rode off together-O.

"Soon after that, her lord came home
Inquiring for his lady-O,
When some of the servants made this reply,
She's a-gone with the Gypsy-O.

"Then saddle me my milk-white steed,
For the black is not so speedy-O.
And I'll ride all night and I'll ride all day
Till I overtake my lady-O."

She stood transfixed, something within her responding to the hidden singer, as she had once heard a closed piano sound to a voice that sang near it. Soon she could get broken glimpses of him as he wound down the trail, now turning around the end of a fallen tree, then passing behind a giant spruce, now leaning far back while the horse felt a way cautiously down some sharp little declivity. The impression was confused,—a glint of red, of blue, of the brown of the horse, a figure swaying loosely to the horse's movements, and then he was out of sight again around the big rock that had once fallen from high up on the side of the canyon; but now, when he came from behind that, he would be squarely in front of her. This recalled and alarmed her. She began to pick a way over the boulders and across the trail that lay between her and the edge of the pines, hearing another verse of the song almost at her ear:—

"He rode all night and he rode all day,
Till he came to the far deep water—,
Then he stopped and a tear came a-trickling down his cheek,
For there he saw his lady-O."

Before she could reach a shelter in the pines, while she was poised for the last step that would take her out of the trail, he was out from behind the rock, before her, almost upon her, reining his horse back upon its haunches,—then in another instant lifting off his broad-brimmed hat to her in a gracious sweep. It was the first time she had seen this simple office performed outside of the theater.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

CARE OF THE SICK ROOM.

Above All Things the Walls Should Be Kept Dry.

When the bedroom becomes a sick room there is an added reason why extreme precautions should be used to keep the room in a thoroughly sanitary condition.

Above all things, the bedroom should never be damp. It should be nice and dry, always warm and comfortable in winter, cool and airy in summer, and bright and sunny some parts of the day.

If there is any suspicion of dampness in a bedroom it is probably due, if there is wallpaper on the wall, to the absorption of water by the paper which frequently acts as a blotting paper and holds quantities of water in it.

The use of wallpaper on walls is to be deplored; it means disease, ill health and unhappiness. It is frequently the cause of lung trouble, not only because of its dampness but also because of its power to retain infection of many kinds.

The desired method of treating a bedroom wall is to tint it for the alabastined wall is a perfect wall. It never flakes off, chips or peels. It absorbs moisture and expels it, it opens the pores of the plaster and makes a room livable and breathable.

The floor in the bedroom should have light, cleanable, dainty rugs that can be easily shaken and a floor that is thoroughly oiled or varnished, that will not absorb moisture. The cracks in the floor should be thoroughly filled and covered. Woodwork in the bedroom should be attended to carefully, window sills should be thoroughly varnished or waxed, and the window casings kept in perfect order. The doors should be wiped off frequently as also should be all the standing woodwork in the bedroom, as the presence of dust on woodwork is a menace to health as well as an evidence of poor housekeeping.

WOMEN IN NEW FIELDS.

British Smart Society Takes to "Hopping"—Woman Veterinary.

Work in the hop fields is the latest "rest cure" fad for London's smart set, and the luxurious society "hoppers" claim that a week's hopping is far better and more pleasant than a rest at any well-known health resort.

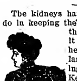
The tents of these well-to-do pickers are expensively furnished, and easy chairs, soft beds and up-to-date camping outfits are among their hopping appliances.

In Berlin there is a woman veterinary surgeon who is an official inspector of animals. She rides through the streets on the lookout for animals suffering from any disablement, and before reporting a horse as unfit for work, she examines its injuries and whenever possible applies remedies to alleviate its pain. She carries a leather case filled with bandages and other surgical appliances.

TIRED BACKS.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Mo., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.



Disliked the Word "Death."

"Decease" is now a regular form of word for death. But it began as a gentle euphemism, "decessus" (departure) seeming much less harsh to the Romans than "mors." All languages abound in euphemisms of the kind, which go back to a superstitious reluctance to mention death plainly, that gradually passed into a kindly desire to soften the idea. "Passed away," "departed," "gone," "expire" (breathe out), "no more," "demise," and even "the late" are expressions of this nature. Most striking of all is the Roman euphemism for "he is dead"—"vixit," he has lived.

Could Not Afford Title.

Many times did the German emperor press the title of prince upon Herr Von Bulow before the latter would accept. The statesman wanted the title, but could not afford to live up to it. Of this the kaiser knew nothing, of course. At length, about 18 months ago, a relative of Von Bulow died, leaving him $1,350,000. A few days later he showed the kaiser a legal notification of his good fortune. The monarch grunted. "So that was the reason—my prince," he said, laying stress on the title. "Why did you not say so before?"

Wander Fever.

Have you never felt the longing that it were possible to step quietly off your accustomed path in life and strike out into fresh fields and pastures new? There are few of us so contented as never to be troubled with such a wish.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.

Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

Study of theatrical stars has nothing to do with astronomy.

HONEST MEDICINE

TRY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR STOMACH TROUBLE.

Convincing Evidence Supported by a Guarantee That Must Convince The Most Skeptical.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a doctor's prescription, used by an eminent practitioner, and for nearly a generation known as a reliable household remedy throughout the United States. Needless to say, no advertised medicine could retain popular favor for so long a period without having great merit and it is the invaluable curative properties of the pills that have made them a standard remedy in every civilized country in the world. Added to this is the absolute guarantee that the pills contain no harmful drug, opiate, narcotic or stimulant. A recent evidence of their efficacy is found in the statement of Mrs. N. B. Whitley, of Boxley, Ark., who says:

"I had suffered for a good many years from stomach trouble. For a long time I was subject to bad spells of faintness and lack of breath accompanied by an indescribable feeling that seemed to start in my stomach. Whenever I was a little run-down or over-tired, these spells would come on. They occurred frequently but did not last very long.

"I was confined to my bed for ten weeks one time and the doctor pronounced my trouble chronic inflammation of the stomach and bowels. Since that time I have been subject to the fainting spells and at other times to fluttering of the heart and a feeling as though I was smothering. My general health was very bad and I was weak and trembling.

"I had seen Dr. Williams' Pink Pills mentioned in the newspapers and decided to try them. When I began taking the pills I was so run-down in strength that I could hardly do any housework. Now I could walk ten miles if necessary. Both my husband and myself think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine made and we always recommend the pills to our friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and give strength and tone to every part of the body. They have cured serious disorders of the blood and nerves, such as rheumatism, sciatica, anæmia, nervousness, headaches, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance and many forms of weakness in either sex. They are sold by all druggists or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Sheep Raising in Australia.

The greatest industry of Australia is sheep raising, mainly for the sake of the wool, but also in part, of course, for the meat. Australia now ranks second among the great sheep-raising countries, Argentina being first with 92,000,000 sheep, Australia second with 72,000,000, and Russia third with 70,000,000. Only a few years ago Australia was first, possessing no less than 106,260,000 head of sheep. That was in 1891. Prolonged droughts were the cause of the destruction of many millions of Australian sheep, but since 1902 there has been an annual gain. Yet these sheep were not indigenous to Australia. They were first introduced in 1797, being of the Spanish merino species.

Garfield Tea, the Mild Laxative, is a pure, practical household remedy; good for young and old. To be taken for constipation, indigestion, sick-headache, colds and diseases arising from impure blood. It clears the complexion.

There are numerous toll gates on the road to success.

Painting for Profit

No one will question the superior appearance of well-painted property. The question that the property-owner asks is: "Is the appearance worth the cost?"

Poor paint is for temporary appearance only.

Paint made from Pure Linseed Oil and Pure White Lead is for lasting appearance and for protection. It saves repairs and replacements costing many times the paint investment.

The Dutch Boy trade mark is found only on kegs containing Pure White Lead made by the Old Dutch Process.

SEND FOR BOOK

"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

All lead packed in 1907 bears this mark.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY

in whichever of the following cities is nearest you:
New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia (John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.), Pittsburgh (National Lead & Oil Co.)

That Cough

makes your life a burden.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

dropped on sugar will cure it, and cure as well colds, cramps and all throat troubles. For Internal as much as for External use. 25c., three times as much 50c. All dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

STERILIZING MILK CANS.

Steam is the Most Thorough Ageney in the Process.

Where steam can be employed, its application to dairy utensils forms one of the best means of sterilizing them. A simple method by which to use it is shown in the accompanying cut, taken from Farm and Home. The table is about two feet high and three feet square. Covered with galvanized iron, the outer edge of the top is highest and the center, where the drip is located, lowest. Preferably this should be connected with a sewer or a good drain, but may be caught in a pail. Near the drip is also the steam jet which, with the valve for operating it conveniently at hand, makes it very simple to steam out a 10-quart can by setting it over the jet and turning on the steam. Likewise separator bowls, small churns, butter workers, and, in fact, almost anything movable in or about a creamery can be sterilized at a minimum of labor.

Milk Can Steamer.

TUBERCLE BACILLI IN BUTTER.

Not as Apt to Be Present in Butter Made from Sour Cream.

It has been assumed that butter as well as milk contains tubercle bacilli at times and is therefore a source of danger. But little is as yet known about what happens to the bacilli in cream and in butter, but here and there are going on investigations that have in them much of interest. It is possible that in butter are found other forms of bacterial life that are more powerful than the disease germs and are able to destroy them. This seems to be indicated from experiments that have been made at various times, though we must not assume that the matter is as yet settled. In Germany some experimenters added some tubercle bacilli to sweet cream and made butter of it. After ten days the butter was examined and the bacilli found to be alive. It was examined 15 days after being made and the tubercle bacilli were found to be dead. It is possible that the increase of ferments in the butter resulted in the destruction of the disease germs. This was further indicated by the results of placing some of the bacilli in sour cream and making butter out of that. The germs were found to be alive after seven days, but dead after ten days. This is an encouraging feature of the examination. We may conclude from it, says Farmers' Review, that if there is danger of tubercle bacilli being present in milk that is to produce the cream for butter, it is better for the butter to be made from sour cream than from sweet cream. It was quite evident that the lactic acid ferments are enemies of the disease germs.

Raising Heifers.

Heifers intended for the dairy should have foods rich in ash, to make bone, and rich in protein, to make muscle and blood. Don't allow them to form the "fat habit" by giving too much starchy food, such as corn. Once a heifer has formed the "fat habit" it is very difficult to prevent her putting the increase on her back instead of into the pail, when she has been in milk for six months.

Pasteurization.

Pasteurization is not yet perfected by any means. It destroys the lactic acid bacteria, but not the spores of bacteria. In consequence, while the milk may not be sour two days after its receipt, it may have a putrid smell due to the butyric or putrefactive bacteria. The only milk fit for human food is clean raw milk kept continuously at low temperature.

The Rusty Can.

How about that rusty can problem, is it troubling you? There ere thousands of cans being used in the older districts which ought to receive tbe hatchet treatment. Wouldn't it be a good plan for our inspectors to devote more attention to condemning rusty cans?

The Cooperative Creamery.

How about the cooperative creamery company which sends out a cream-gathering wagon into another's territory, and then howls about the central plant invading its territory? Reminds us of the old story about living in a glass house.

The Paying Cow.

In producing milk we get no returns from the food consumed unless the question of support is first satisfied. Therefore keep the cows which do not use the food nutrients for making beef, and tben feed them all they will eat.

PROPER MANNER OF READING.

Writer Sees Much Harm in Multiplicity of Books.

It seems to me that with tbe multiplication of books we are losing all sense of literature. Leisure and three books, e Bible, a Shakespeare, a Walt Whitman, might make e man truly wise if the seeds of wisdom wera in him. I do not know even a wise man whose instinct for wisdom would not be deadened by tbe frequentation of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Books should be taken in doses no bigger than music or pictures; they are even harder to digest. Tbera is more drunkenness in a book thnn in all tbe vineyerds of France. A book may remake a man's soul. Books should ba treated with reverence or east out as dirt. They aro in danger of passing out of tbe servics of the temple into tbe "parcel delivery" of the grocer.

Nothing is gained by reading a book unless you give to tbat book mors than it brings to you. All tbese people who read with their eyes only are fatally wasting their time. A book read superficially makes the reader more superficial, and to read for "information" is to gnaw at the bones of meat.—Arthur Symonds in London Saturday Review.

SARSAPARILLA TIME.

Make Your Own Sarsaparilla or Spring Blood Medicine.

Mix one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shaka well in a bottle and take one teaspoonful after meals and again at bedtime. Any good druggist can supply these ingredients.

This is said to be a splendid Spring Blood Tonic and system renovator because of its gentle action in restoring the Kidneys to normal activity, forcing them to filter from the blood all impure matter and acids, destroying micro-organisms wbich produce ill health and sour blood.

Everyone should take sometbing to cleanse the blood at this time of year, and the above simple prescription is the most highly indorsed of the hundreds of home remedies generally used.

Mix this yourself, then you will know what you are taking.

GRIT SAVED HIS LEG.

Ranchman Rode Far After Most Serious Injury.

Jack Farland, a ranchman living et the base of Pike's Peak, and whosa post office is Midland, in this county, yesterday suffered a broken leg by being caught between a borse wbicb be was riding and a timber wagon wbicb be was attempting to pass while en route to tbis city, says tbe Crippla Creek Times. Farland displayed tbe greatest of pluck by riding on to Victor after suffering tha injury, although ha said upon arriving hers that he felt several times that he must giva up. Knowing, bowever, what difficulty would attend any attempt to dismount, and how well nigb impossible it would be for him to remount in tha event that be succeeded in getting safely off bis borse, the ranchman gritted his teeth and kept on. After having his leg set by a surgeon of tbis city, Farland collapsed and it was late in tba afternoon before he was abio to proceed bomeward in a carriage, the accident baving happened early in tbe morning.

Great German Socialist.

Herr Bebel, tho leader of the German socialists, wbo has been so much in evidence of late, is a wbeelwrigbt by trade. Altbough entirely self-educated, be is ona of tbe finest orators and debaters in the fatberland end, distasteful as his views may be to tbe reichstag, whenever he addresses tbe assembly ho is certain of having a large end ettentive audience. In such esteem is he beld by tba socialists tbat millions will obey his will without tbinking whether they ara doing right or wrong. Herr Bebel neither drinks nor smokes, and besides being a celebrity in the political world bas gained soma fame as a writer.

Peers' Queer Privilege.

Two Britisb peers, Lord Forester and Lord Kinsale, enjoy tbe curious privilege of being allowed to wear tbeir hats in the presenca of tbeir sovereign. This quaint rigbt, granted centuries ago, is only exercised on rara and entirely formal occasions.

FIND OUT

The Kind of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a tasta for tbosa things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food, etc.

A conservative Mass. woman writes: 'I bava used Grape-Nuts 5 years for tha young and for tha aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in n variety of ways as my taste nnd judgment suggested.

"But its most special, personal benefit has been a substituta for meat, and served dry with cream wben rheumatic troubles mado it important for me to giva up the 'coffee habit.'

"Served in this way witb the addition of a cup of hot water and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during wbich timo my bealth bas much improved, nerves hava grown steadier, and n gradual decrease in my comfort." Name given by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich. Read tha little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

WOMAN HAS FINE RECORD.

Keeper of Lighthouse, She Has Saved Eighteen Lives.

Ida Lewis recently celebrated her fiftieth year as keeper of the Lime Island lighthousa in the harbor of Newport, R. I. As e girl and woman Ida Lewis has lived a remarkable life. Her bravery and skill in handling e boat are well known and her fame is secura es tbe great woman life saver in the world, for sbe has tbe credit of having saved no less than 18 lives, most of her rescues baving been effected in tha face of extreme danger and in winter. As keeper of tha Lime Island lighthouse, to wbich post she was appointed in recognition of her bravery and record as a life saver on the death of her father, Miss Lewis has shown herself as careful and efficient es a man could be. Sba is one of the few women in such a position.

SLEEP BROKEN BY ITCHING.

Eczema Covered Whole Body for a Year—No Relief Until Cuticura Remedies Prove a Success.

"For a year I have had what they call eczema. I had an itching all over my body, and when I would retire for tbe nigbt it would keep me awake balf the nigbt, and the more I would scratch, the more it would itch. I tried all kinds of remedies, but could get no relief.

"I used one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, and two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, wbich cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all, and am very glad I tried them, for I was completely cured. Walter W. Paglusch, 207 N. Robey St., Cbicago, Ill., Oct. 8 aud 16, 1906."

Curious Maps.

Maps for military and general field use are produced by Dr. O. H. F. Vollbebr, of Halensee, Berlin, es microscopic transparencies, each about one and one-half incb by two incbes in size. These form slides for tbe micro-photoscope, a special instrument having a hand-mirror-sbaped frame, to which is attacbed a slide-holder, with a movable lens over it. Tba lens slides in two directions, about 70 square miles being shown in each position.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy tbe sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it tbrough the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage tbey will do is ten fold to tbe good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of tbe system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get tbe genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cbeney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Read Slowly.

Tha New York Medical Journal wisely remarks: "Tbe colon bacillus is usually ranked in the saprophytic group of bacteria ratber tban placed among tbe organisms distinctly pathogenic for man; but we know tbat it is far from being devoid of virulence, and tbat it is capabla under certain conditions of gaining increased powers of invading tbe organism and of manifesting very definite pathogenic effects."

Hides, Furs, Pelts.

Cow hides are worth 10c to 11c per lb., horse hides $2 to $4 each, sheep pelts 50c to $1.50, as to size. Furs are very bigh, especially Mink and Muskrat. To get all they are worth ship to the old reliable N. W. HIDE & FUR CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Potato-Growing County.

During the montb of February, 1,125,173 busbels of potatoes were sbipped from Aroostook county, Maine, making a total crop of 1906 and up to February 28, 1907, of 7,678,873 bushels.

It Cures While You Walk.

Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

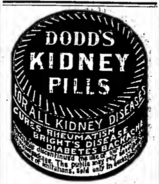
Increase in Savings Deposits.

In 1906 the resources of the savings banks of the state of New York reached $1,465,000,000, an increasa of $59,000,000 in only one year.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

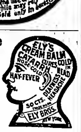
An aim in life is the only fortuna worth pursuing.—Adnah.



A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm

Is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once.



It cleanses, soothes, heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts. at Druggists or by mail; Trial size 10 cts. by mail.

Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Fruit acids will not stain goods dyed with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES, and the colors are bright and fast.

He who is firm and resolute in will molds tha world to himself.—Goethe.

Ship Your Cream to Us.

The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Men are too much inclined to accept e pretty woman at her face value.

For Prices on Poultry,

either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

Sweet are the thoughts that savor of content; a quiet mind is better than a crown.—Greene.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

He enjoys much who is thankful for little; a grateful mind is both a great and a happy mind.—Seeker.

U. S. Sheep Dip, Cattle

Wash & Disinfectant. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. Northwestern Hide & Fur Co., Mpls, Minn.

Chinese City Waking Up.

Nankin, China, is to have an electric light system of tho most modern kind; also a new water works.

Garfield Tea—the indispensable laxative! Take it in the Spring; it purifies the blood, cleanses the system, eradicates disease. It is made wholly of simple Herbs. Guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Law.

Friendship is the only thing in the world concerning tha usefulness of which all mankind ara agreed.—Cicero.

takes miles off the road, and weight from the load. Helps the team and pays the teamster.

Practically destroys friction. Saves half the wear that comes from jolting over rough roads, and lengthens the life of a heavy vehicle more than any other one thing.

Ask the dealer for Mica Axle Grease.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
Incorporated.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear
Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

Women Avoid Operations

MISS ROSE MOORE

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case, of 307 W. 26th St., N.Y. She writes:–

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:–"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years."

This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

Alabastine

THE ONLY
Sanitary
Durable
WALL COATING

ALABASTINE comes in dry powder form, ready for use by mixing with clear pure cold water. Safeguards health and makes homes beautiful and livable.

Easy to mix. You can apply it yourself with an ordinary flat wall brush.

Insist on goods in packages labeled "ALABASTINE" and that your workmen bring Alabastine in unopen packages and use on job.

If your dealer does not have Alabastine we will supply you. Write for free color suggestions and send us 10 cents for book "Dainty Wall Decorations."

ALABASTINE COMPANY, Grand Rapids, Mich. New York City.

ANY KIND OF HOUSE PAINT IS NOT GOOD ENOUGH FOR YOUR HOUSE

Masury's House Paints

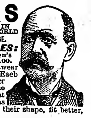
are the best and have been the standard of excellence for sixty-five years. They have withstood every possible test of endurance and their superior preservative qualities make them the ideal house paints. Do not accept a substitute, because there are no paints that can take the place of Masury's. They will outlast, not by months, but by years, any of the inferior paints so generally offered for sale.

JOHN W. MASURY & SON, NEW YORK and CHICAGO

W. L. DOUGLAS

$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD

W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.



SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:

Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere.

Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

ECZEMA

Rashes Itchings And Irritations Of

THE SKIN

Speedily Cured by Warm Baths With

Cuticura SOAP

And Gentle Anointings Of

CUTICURA

The Great Skin Cure, when all other remedies and even physicians fail. Guaranteed absolutely pure, sweet, and wholesome, and may be used from the hour of birth.

Sold throughout the world. Depots in all Cities. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Book on Torturing, Disfiguring Humours.

Fertile Farming

LANDS

Cheap
Easy Terms

In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.

Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.

Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.

Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

NEW WHEAT LANDS IN THE CANADIAN WEST

5,000 additional miles of railway this year have opened up a largely increased territory to the progressive farmers of Western Canada and the Government of the Dominion continues to give ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE to every settler.

THE COUNTRY HAS NO SUPERIOR

Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access; taxes low; climate the best in the northern temperate zone. Law and order prevails everywhere. For advice and information address the SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

FREE To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.

PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT. THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

PATENTS Give Protection FOR 17 YEARS, AT LITTLE COST

Send for free booklet. Milo B. Stevens & Co., 900 14th St., Washington, D.C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. Estab. 1864. No patent, no fee for our services.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D.C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

[illegible] heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow, [illegible] grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1429 Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over [illegible] State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in [illegible] Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. [illegible] D. M. D.

DENTIST

[illegible] Block. Office hours [illegible]

[illegible] Wednesday

[illegible]

GERVAIS [illegible]

Attorney at Law

[illegible]

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

Last Mountain Valley Lands

We own thousands of acres of Choice Selected Land in this district, which is right in the Great Wheat Plains of Saskatchewan. [illegible] Government which give an [illegible] of wheat to the acre for 1906. [illegible] of this part of Western [illegible] about the competition of [illegible] timber for fuel and fencing. [illegible] new souvenir book, entitled "The Lake and the Land of the Last Mountain Valley." Also 20th Century Atlas of [illegible] with souvenir book. Write to-day, [illegible] matter, etc., on request.

WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.

Northern Bank Building, Winnipeg, Canada.

TEXAS LANDS We own 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE, and VAN HORNE VALLEY, Texas, one of the most fertile valleys in the state. The Southern Pacific Railroad passes through the Van Horne Valley lands and the proposed line of the Santa Fe will run directly through [illegible]. These lands are exceptionally well located for retail purposes. They were carefully selected, and, having purchased them some time ago, [illegible] you prices and terms that are right.

LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control of [illegible] acres of this land, which you can do by making [illegible] payment down, and realize a profit of [illegible]. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 603-5 Pioneer Press Bldg. St. Paul, Minn.

What is it that tastes as pleasant as maple sugar and relieves coughs and colds? Mothers who have used it will quickly answer: "Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup." The pleasant cold remedy that expels the cold through its laxative action on the bowels. Conforms strictly to the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Contains no opiates. Sold by all druggists.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Of The Board of Conuty Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
March 19th, 1907.

Pursuant to call, the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met at the office of the county auditor, at the court house, at ten o'clock a. m.

Present, Commissioners Lindquist, Aubol, Shaw, Pigeon and Demann.

Minutes of the meeting of February 26th and 27th, 1907, read and approved.

On motion duly carried the application for correction and abatement of taxes of Conrad Lajambe was granted, subject to the approval of the state auditor.

On motion duly carried the application for correction and abatement of taxes of Octave Morisette was granted, subject to the approval of the state auditor.

On motion duly carried an auctioneer's license was granted to Daniel Patterson.

On motion duly carried the petition of W. H. Quist et al for organizing township 151, range 39, was granted and the following order was made:

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake } ss.

Upon receiving a petition of a majority of the male resident freeholders who are legal voters of Congressional Township number 154, north, of range number 39 west, in said county, asking that the same be organized as a new town under the township organization law, to be named "Reimer," we, the county commissioners of said county, did, on the 19th day of March, A. D., 1907, proceed to fix and determine the boundaries of such new town, and to name the same "Reiner" in accordance with said petition, and designate Reiner postoffice as the place for holding the first town meeting in such town, to be held on Saturday, the sixth day of April, A. D., 1907.

The boundaries of said town of Reiner as fixed and established by us are as follows: Beginning at the north corner of southeast quarter of section 12 in township number 154, north of range number 39, west in said county, thence west on the quarter line to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section 7, said township and range, thence south on the township line to the southwest corner of the southwest quarter of section 31, said township and range thence east on the township line to the southeast corner of the southeast quarter of section 36, said township and range, thence north along the township line to place of beginning.

By order of the board of county commissioners.

—C. A. Lindquist,
(Seal) Chairman, Board of County Commissioners, Red Lake county, Minn.
Attest: John B. O'Brien,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

Motion made by Commissioner Shaw and seconded by Commissioner Aubol that the employment of additional attorneys by the board was ill advised and unnecessary, and that we recind the resolution passed at the last meeting, appointing F. A. Grady and Chas. E. Boughton as attorneys for this board.

Commissioners voting aye are Shaw and Aubol.

Commissioners voting nay are Demann, Pigeon and Lindquist.

On motion duly carried the following resolution was adopted and made a part of the record:

March 19, 1907.

We, Chas. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady, having been employed by the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, to cause the judgement entered against said Board in Mandamus Proceedings in District Court April 12th, 1906, to be re-opened, vacated, and set aside and to interpose and answer therein and litigate said action, do hereby agree that there will be no charges for attorneys' fees against said board of Red Lake county for such services, and no expenses or costs of said action to be paid by said county.

Chas. E. Bougnton,
F. A. Grady.

On motion duly carried a recess was taken until one o'clock p. m.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at one o'clock p. m. All members present.

On motion duly carried the following bills were allowed:

Fred Zaser, building ice breakers at Louisville bridge	$ 275 00
A Swanson, drawing grand jurors one day and mileage	3 20
Red Lake Falls Electric Light Co., lighting court house and jail month of February and repairing same	14 10
C W Johnson, fees on county ditch No 21	5 [illegible]
C W Johnson, filing returns of births and deaths making certificates & docketing same	83 90
D Linnihan, office rent, fuel and light for several years 1904 and 1905 at $90 per year	180 00
C W Johnson, clerk fees, delinquent tax proceedings	233 80
William [illegible], taking care of James Nelson insane two days	4 00
[illegible], postage stamps for county treasurer's office	6 93
Joseph Pigeon, mileage att'g meeting county board	3 20
Mileage for letting contract and inspecting ice breakers at Louisville bridge	8 80
Wm C L Demann, mileage for letting contract and inspecting ice breakers at Louisville bridge	6 80
C A Lindquist, mileage for letting contract and inspecting ice breakers at Louisville bridge	11 20
Ed A Aubol, mileage att'g meeting county board	3 00
Wm C L Demann, mileage att'g meeting of county board	1 00
Daniel Shaw, mileage att'g meeting of county board	4 00
C A Lindquist, mileage att'g meeting of county board	3 60
V M Higginbotham, premium on $500 Ins. policy, Co. jail	5 00
Don B Welch, taking care of James Nelson insane two days	4 00
Lewis A Nelson, board and care of Charles Claus, prisoner	6 31
one day drawing grand jurors and mileage	3 20
Summoning petit jurors, March term of Court 07	50 35
Summoning grand jurors, March term of Court 07	49 35
John B O'Brien, postage stamps and express Co auditors office	2 60
Miller-Davis Ptg Co. supply for Co. offices	28 65
J K Wood, engineer's fees and expenses Co. ditch No 28	6 00
J K Wood, engineer's fees and expenses Co ditch No 28 and Rocksbury-North ditch No. 1	23 10
Fred Zaser, service as viewer one day and board on Co ditch No 28	4 00
George D Barnard & Co., supplies for county offices	5 50
Free Press Ptg Co. supplies for Co. offices	4 50
Brown, Treacy, Sperry & Co.
One mortgage record book	22 00
One folio record book	14 00

On motion duly carried, the board adjourned sine die.

C. A. Lindquist,
Chairman Board of County Commissioners.
Attest:
John B. O'Brien
County Auditor and Ex-officio Clerk of Board.

INDUSTRIAL CONTEST

A Contest Similar to The One of Last Year Will Be Held In December.

The State Grain Growing contest promoted in 1906 by Prof. D. D. Mayne will be continued under the general supervision of the Farmers' Club of Minnesota. Contests in cooking, sewing, and in growing fruit and vegetables will be added to the three grains, used last year. This makes the name, "Grain Growing Contest" inadequate, and the name, "Minnesota Boys and Girls Industrial Contest," has been chosen instead.

There is almost no limit to the good results which may be expected from this work. Not alone is the educational feature of the contest important, but the practical and economic results which will certainly follow where the plan is successfully carried out, should and will interest every public spirited citizen.

The plan of the county contest is very similar to that followed in many of the counties before the state contest was started; that is, the contest is under the supervision of the county superintendent of schools. Where the County Farmers' Clubs are organized the members will co-operate with the county superintendent in every possible way to help make the contest a success.

Any boy or girl in Minnesota, under eighteen years of age, or any public school student, is eligible to enter this contest. All that is necessary to enter the contest is to send your name to the county superintendent of your county and state in which of the classes you wish to compete.

The county superintendent or members of the Farmers' Club, or both, will solicit from the business men and other citizens of each county reasonable prizes for the various exhibits made. This will insure substantial prizes for several of the best exhibits in each class. The winners of the first three prizes in each class in the county contest may compete in the state contest.

The county contests should all be held before the first of December if possible. It is planned to hold the state contest at St. Paul December 19-20-21.

LAND GOES UP.

Raises the Price on Certain Classes of Isolated Tracts.

The general land office has issued a circular under date of April 8, which will be of interest to those parties who intend to purchase what is known as "isolated tracts" at auction, when ordered into the market by the government. Heretofore the minimum price at which all lands could be sold was $1.25 an acre. Under the circular of April 8, 1907, disconnected or isolated tracts which are offered for sale, when located within railroad limits—forty miles or less from the railroads limits—will be sold for not less than $2.50 per acre—or as much more as competitive bidding will bring. If the land is outside the railroad limit the minimum price will be the same as heretofore. This decision affects all sales to be made hereafter lying along the Northern Pacific railroad.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20 100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th, A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Wm. J. Brown, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota. m28-m9

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof.

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Wm. J. Brown, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn. mar21-m 2

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

"The Falls Meat Market"

BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout | Free 'Bus Meets all Trains

Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel

Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, APRIL 25, 1907 No 30

250,000 ACRES LAND

To Be Opened July First — New Homes for 15,000 Families in Northern Minnesota.

Upward of a quarter of a million acres of agricultural lands in northern Minnesota will be opened to homestead settlement July 1, next, under the provisions of the Nelson act of 1889, which provided for adjusting lands in ceded Indian reservation, as amended by the Morris act in 1902, which provided for disposing of the timber, classification of lands and establishment of a forest reserve.

The official statement issued Monday by Land Commissioner Ballinger and approved by James R. Garfield, secretary, sets forth pursuant to the provisions of section 6 of the act of Jan. 14, 1889, 229,297.41 acres, being a portion of the ceded lands in the Chippewa, Red Lake, White Earth, Deer Creek and Fon du Lac Indian reservations, state of Minnesota, and classed as "agricultural lands" within the meaning of said act, as amended by the act of June 27, 1902, will be opened to settlement and entry under provisions of the homestead law, with certain modifications which are specified in the instructions to register and receiver at Cass Lake, Crookston and Duluth, on and after 9 o'clock a. m., central time, July 1, 1907. The lands to be opened will be subject to entry at Cass Lake, Crookston and Duluth as follows:

"By act of February 9, 1903, the provisions of general townsite laws were extended to the ceded Indian lands within the state of Minnesota. Printed lists of the lands to be opened to settlement and entry, and copies of the laws and instructions governing the disposal of said lands may be obtained upon application to registers and receivers at Cass Lake, Crookston and Duluth. A prior right to enter lands will not be secured by settling on the lands before date of opening."

The land above described will furnish homes of 160 acres each to about 1,500 families and it is expected that there will be a big rush for them.

Special attention is called by the department to the strict rule that "squatters" and "sooners" will not be allowed any prior rights, and it will in no way help a prospective settler to locate on land prior to July 1.

In Cass Lake land district—portions of township 145 north, range 25 west; townships 145 and 146 north, range 26 west; township 143 north, ranges 31 and 32 west; township 115 north, range 32 west, in Chippewa of the Mississippi reservation; portions of township 149 north, ranges 33 and 35 west; township 118 north, ranges 31 and 35 west, in the Red Lake reservation; township 62 north, range 25 west, in Deer Creek reservation.

In the Crookston land district—portions of townships 159 and 160 north, ranges 31 to 38, both inclusive; township 163 north, range 36 west, in Red Lake reservation; township 145 north, range 37 west, in the White Earth Indian reservation.

In the Duluth land district—portions of townships 18 north, ranges 18 and 19 west; township 49 north, range 19 west, in the Fond du Lac reservation.

Minnesota Historical Society

Five Hundred Dollars Reward

We, the undersigned, hereby agree to pay a reward of five hundred dollars, (500.00) to any person or persons who shall furnish information which shall result in the arrest and conviction for theft, of the person or persons who stole the county seat removal petition from the court house at Red Lake Falls, if the same has been stolen.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn.. April 9th, 1807.

John A. Duffy
Wm. Findeisen
Theo. LaBissoniere
F. A. Grady
L. A. Kaufer
Chas. E. Boughton
Theo. Garceau
Arthur P. Toupin
W. A. Schreiter
N. M. Watson

FANS WILL ORGANIZE

Baseball Meeting to be Held at the City Hall Saturday Evening.

Baseball fans of the city have been lively of late and are getting material into line which promises the making of a fast team with which to meet the valley stickers when the season fully opens up. There will undoubtedly be several applicants for the different positions on the team and the tryout gives promise of some fast practice during the next week or two. Although there are quite a number anxious to make the different position on the team, the desire to bring out a fast bunch this season predominates and all the players can be counted on to give way to the best material and join in helping to make the team a pennant winner.

A meeting has been called to convene at the city hall on Satuaday evening at eight o'clock for the purpose of perfecting an organization and discussing ways and means for raising funds and procuring paraphernalia.

As the team is expected to take a prominent part in furnishing entertainment during the firemen's tournament this year, every business man in the city should turn out and help boost the team along.

Dan't forget the date or place of meeting. Saturday evening at eight o'clock at the city hall. Everybody turn out.

Editor Carr of Middle River was an east bound passenger for Crookston on Monday.

Howard Blaisdell, buttermaker at the creamery here last year, and who left here last fall for his home in the southern part of the state writes from Ledgerwood, N. D., that he has purchased an interest in a creamery there and is doing nicely.

FINAL INDOOR RECITAL

Last Band Concert of the Season Tomorrow Evening at the Opera House.

The final indoor concert of the Red Lake Falls concert will be given tomorrow night at the opera house and no admission will be charged,

One of the special features worthy of mention is the cornet solo, "Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground," with triple tongue variations by C. Edmund Brunelle. This will be rendered with band accompaniment and is a very difficult selection,

At this last indoor concert of the season there should be a record attendance, and every friend of the Red Lake Falls band, which is recognized as the best organization of its kind in the state should make it a point to be present and have all thier friends there as well. The program is as follows:

PART I.

March....................Nirella
"Japanese Brigade"
Symphunny No. 2..........Dalbey
Cornet Solo..............Masten
"Massa's in the Cold Ground."
C. Edmond Brunelle.
Waltz....................Strauss
"Artist's Life."
Selection................Bellstedt
By Members of the Junior Band

PART II.

Grand Selection..........Wallace
"Maritana"
Little Kinkies...........Bendix
Selection................Luderas
"The Prince of Pilsen"
The Clown's Parade....Laurendeau

RED LAKE GETS $2450

Fat Piece of the Road and Bridge Fund Comes to Red Lake County.

The road and bridge fund of $400-000 known as the "pork barrel" as passed in the form of a bill reported from the Road and Bridge committee gives Red Lake county $2450.

Otter Tail gets the largest amount $4800 and St. Louis county comes next with $4,300. The smallest amount goes to Cook, $500. The apportionment for the northern counties is as follows:

Aitkin $2500, Beltrami $2425, Cass $2500, Clay $2500, Clearwater $2000, Kittson $2500, Koochiching $1000, Mahnomen $1000, Marshall $2500, Norman $2,350, Otter Tail $4800, Polk $3500, Roseau $2550, St. Louis $4300.

"Good for everything a salve is used for and especially recommended for Piles." That is what we say about DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. That is what twenty years of usage has proven. Get the original. Sold by all druggists.

AN ART EXHIBITION

Will be Given at the High School Building, Monday May 29.

An exhibition of pictures with a talk on their uses in the school and home will be given next Monday afternoon and evening, at the high school building in this city, for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of pictures for the walls of the public schools.

This collection of pictures is of great interest. It consists of the entire line of the Collier Artist's Proofs that were on exhibit with so much interest at the Minneapolis public library.

The collection contains the large size originals by Gibson, Remington, Smith, Frost, Smedley and others who are paid large salaries to paint and draw exclusively for Collier's Weekly. The best of the Elson Art Co.'s Carbon Photographs, 30x40 inches in size, steel engravings and photogravures. The entire line of the Tabor-Prang Art company.

No city or town should be indifferent to the culture and refinement of its people. It is a part of school work to inculcate these qualities in the children in whatever means at its disposal, and it is generally recognized that pictures is one of the most important of these means. All the best schools are beautified by the best pictures as well as the best homes.

The price of admission will be 10 and 15 cents, and the entire proceeds of this exhibit will be devoted to beautifying our public schools.

HATHAWAY ON PAROLE

Ed. Hathaway, Who Was Connected With the Soo Robbery Is Free.

Ed. Hathaway, one of the men convicted last summer of robbery of the Soo's box car at Thief River Falls, has been paroled by the state board of pardons. He is now free and will not need to return to the state institution if he properly behaves himself.

Hathaway, after being arrested on the charge, broke jail in this city and gave the officers a merry time before he was recaptured. Had it not been for this break he would have been let off with less than the year's sentence imposed by the court.

The board of pardons was of the opinion that the young man was led astray, rather than of a vicious nature, and he was for this reason released on parole.

The finest line of candles and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

MEET IS PROBABLE

Minnesota City High Schools May Get Together In Latter Part of May.

There is a possibility that a Minnesota high school track meet will be held in Grand Forks shortly after the North Dakota track meet, which will be held May 17 and 18.

The matter has been taken up with the athletic officials of the university and the proposition is looked upon very favorably. For some time past the high schools of East Grand Forks, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls and Warren have been discussing the matter of holding a meet. Crookston was looked upon as the place for holding such a meet, but the high school of that city has announced that it would be impossible for them to take care of the meet. Following this announcement, several of the schools asked the university of North Dakota to take up the matter.

The various cities are enthusiastic over the proposition, and all would send big delegations to the meet. The high schools would have the use of the university track and field, and at the same time there would be no expense to the university. The meet, if it is held, will be pulled off in the latter part of May.

Mark Keeley and bride arrived in the city this morning after a honeymoon trip to Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago and other points. For the present they will occupy apartments at the Palace hotel and will later go to housekeeping. Conductor Keeley will return to his run on the G. N. out of this city in a few days. His bride,-formerly Miss Margaret Balfour of Euclid will be given a warm welcome to Crookston.—Journal. Mr. Keeley will be remembered by many of our townspeople, having spent last summer here as conductor on the work train.

TOMORROW ARBOR DAY

Governor Johnson Has Set Aside Friday, April 26, as Arbor and Bird Day.

Governor Johnson has appointed Friday, Apil 26, as Arbor and Bird day for 1907. His proclamation is as follows:

"When, following the law and custom of our state, I hereby proclaim Friday, April 26 as Arbor and Bird day for 1907, private pleasure collaborates with official duty.

"The place and purpose of the tree in history, its dignity and worth are they not set forth in the chronicles of christendom that all the world may read, from its first mention in the first chapter in the first book into the last Revelation of the world unseen, where in the midst of street was there a tree of life and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of nations?"

"Throughout all the time man has been the tree's sincere worshiper.

In his boyhood he sought its green heights; in his youth he walked beneath its whispering branches; in his old age he sat content in its sympathetic shade; after life's fitful fever, he sleeps well—at the foot of it. The influence of this life long companionship is deep and visible.

"Quite apart from the indirect force in the mass as a factor of climate, we have daily testimony of its powers to mold in character of the Norseman, auster, independant, strong as his native pine; the Briton ruggy, honest, outspreading as his much-sung oak; the German, true forester and forest-lover that he is, full of sentiment as his linden, musical as his fir, sturdy as his beeches. Out of a state peopled by such races what may we not hope for? Surely, the rights of the forest will be reverenced; surely the forest will make royal return!

"Let the day of this proclamation be observed far and wide among us, in deed and in spirit, in school, home and mart. Let the highways be embelished; make crooked paths stright, rough places smooth. Let consecration of aim unite with concentration of efforts toward making of Minnesota one vast landscape garden, where the working of nature is cunningly aided, not held in thral by man; where song sparrow may sing in the hedgerows, while meadow lark and bobolink trill their sweetness from the topmost bough, and none shall make them afraid.

CHEESE FACTORY OPENS.

Lambort Factory Opens Under New Management.

H. O. Parenteau, who for awhile this last winter, clerked for Everett Southmayd, of McIntosh, has purchased an interest in the Lambert cheese factory, which will hereafter be operated under the firm name of Robidoux & Parenteau. The Lambert cheese factory has for many years back been a successful business proposition and has established a first class reputation for its product, the demand for which is continually on the increase. This season's operations were started on April 9th with 1,500 pounds of milk, but its receipts have already increased to 2,800 pounds and are still rapidly increasing.

In The Towns....

where you find the people making use of their banks, depositing their money and paying their bills by check you will find a progressive, "get-there" spirit that means the up-building of that town and vicinity.

This is our home and we take an active interest in watching and aiding the material prosperity of both town and surrounding country. We should to see every man and woman who has an income, every farmer, every laboring man, every mechanic, every young man in this community start a bank account.

You are interested—come in and talk with us about it

Merchants State Bank
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

FIRST STATE BANK
OF
RED : LAKE : FALLS : MINNESOTA

OFFERS YOU

PROMPT SERVICE
LIBERAL TREATMENT
ABSOLUTE SAFETY

We Extend the Accommodations of a Strong and Well-Equipped Bank

OFFICERS
CHAS. N. BOURDON, President
FRANK E. HUNT, Vice-President
THEO. GARCEAU, Cashier
GEO. F. HENNINGS, Asst. Cash.

DIRECTORS
Theo. Garceau Frank E. Hunt
Chas. N. Bourdon
W. A. Schreiter A. P. Toupin
N. M. Watson Geo. F. Hennings

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dailey & Creglow, Publishers

RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

[illegible] Jerome said the statement of Mrs. Holman, mother of Evelyn Nesbit, that she gave him no [illegible] in the Thaw case, is true.

At the national convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington $29,800 was raised for the national home of the organization to be erected in that city.

Charges made by the "next friends" of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy are denied by the defendants at Concord, N. H., and the prosecutors are said to have loaned their names to "evil-minded persons, who, it is alleged, are the real persecutors.

The national arbitration and peace congress closed at New York with two banquets and the decoration of Andrew Carnegie with the cross of the Legion of Honor.

A verdict of acquittal in the case against Julius Kahn, formerly president of the Cash Buyers' Union First National Cooperative society was ordered by Federal Judge Anderson at Chicago.

Parts of Spain and Turkey were visited by earthquake.

The new French tariff decree is believed to be a retaliatory measure for the failure of the American senate to act on pending reciprocity treaties.

The new Ontario town of Latchford, nine miles from the famous cobalt silver mining camp, was practically destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

Secretary Taft evaded answering Porto Rica's demand for citizenship in a speech in Porto Rico. He said Roosevelt is favorable and hints Speaker Cannon is all powerful.

Dr. Aked, the new pastor of Rockefeller's church, arrived from England, and in a strenuous interview declared a policy independent of wealthy parishioners.

The Illinois supreme court decided that it did not have original jurisdiction in the Illinois Central tax suit and a new suit probably will be brought in the Sangamon county circuit court.

The first ballot of both houses of the Wisconsin legislature in joint session for United States senator to succeed John C. Spooner, was taken at Madison with no choice.

It is said that President Roosevelt will make personal investigation of E. H. Harriman's record in pooling railway properties. The result will determine the question of prosecution.

John P. Dunning, well known in newspaper circles throughout the country, died in a hospital at Philadelphia of a tumor on the brain. He was 44 years of age.

Fire in Kroeger Bros.' big department store at Milwaukee, Wis., caused damage which will not exceed $75,000.

John Gundersen was arrested at St. Paul, Minn., on a charge of having held up Fred Zimmerman, the clerk in the Northern Express company's office, and robbed the safe of a package containing $25,000.

The will of the late George J. Schlenck of Belvidere, Ill., provides a bequest for the establishment of a perpetual trust fund, part of the income of which will go to the Salvation Army to aid its work "among the lowly and outcast in places of drunkenness and squalor." Mr. Schlenck was a brewer.

While attempting to extinguish a fire in an outhouse Mrs. Johanna Frenzel, aged 70 years, was burned to death at Dubuque, Ia.

In an attempt to escape from the state penitentiary at Raleigh, N. C., C. L. Scruggs was killed by the guard. Jack Williams and Dodd Wilson were recaptured.

President Hunter, of the Rough Rider association, stated that the Rough Rider reunion would not be held in Arizona this year as planned, owing to the inability of President Roosevelt to attend.

Investment of D. A. R. funds in railway bonds, causing a loss to the society, caused a row in annual congress.

Presidents Roosevelt and Diaz sent congratulations to engineering clubs on dedication of building given by Andrew Carnegie in New York.

The new cathedral of St. John the Baptist and St. Finbar at Charleston, S. C., was consecrated by Cardinal Gibbons.

Clay Thomas is locked up at Beattyville, Ky., for the murder of Jesse Abner, the killing being a result of the Hargis-Cockrell feud.

The Honduran forces who have been besieged in Amapala by the Nicaraguans capitulated unconditionally to the enemy. President Bonilla took refuge on board the American cruiser Chicago, and he will not be permitted to disembark on Central American soil. The war is considered over.

Owing to the difficulty in establishing communication with the cities situated in the region of the greatest devastation wrought by the recent earthquake details are coming slowly, but each succeeding report magnifies instead of diminishes the extent of the disaster. The list of known dead now totals 50, and of the injured approximates 300.

Mrs. Charles J. Holman, of Pittsburg, mother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, issued a long statement in her own defense, in which she declares she would have killed Stanford White herself had she known the truth.

President Roosevelt offered to arrange peace in Central America with President Diaz' aid.

Democrats elected O'Connor mayor of Peoria. Prohibitionist comes second and Republican third.

President Roosevelt will make personal investigation of Harriman's record in pooling railway properties; result will determine question of prosecution.

Secretary Wilson declared pure food law was being misused by some big manufacturers; declared use of government's guarantee for advertising must stop.

Gunners of battleship Illinois may win navy pennant for marksmanship on their record of 92 per cent.

Seventeen West Point cadets must face trial because they allowed girls to wear their uniform overcoats.

Bingham police bill giving power to reorganize city force was signed by Gov. Hughes, of New York.

Bad year of business caused the directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Charles M. Schwab, president, to pass the quarterly dividend on preferred stock.

Arkansas house passed the senate bill repealing that portion of the anti-trust law which prohibits the old-line fire insurance companies from doing business in the state, and the bill will go to the governor.

Chicago women took the lead in the New York peace congress, Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Ellen Henrotin receiving ovations when they delivered speeches. College presidents and labor leaders joined in the movement.

Secretary Taft on his return to the country on Monday, will open his fight on Senator Foraker, and the struggle which ensues, it is expected, will be the hottest pre-convention campaign since the days of Blaine. Political leaders at Washington foresee the defeat of Foraker.

Alexander Troup, member of the Democratic national committee, introduced a resolution at the meeting of the National Publicity Law association in New York calling on the chairmen and treasurers of both the big political parties to publish a list of contributions in the last presidential campaign.

Hope was expressed by the Democrats of Brooklyn at a banquet commemorating the anniversary of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, that W. J. Bryan, present at the function, will lead the party again.

Perry L. Hedrick, chief sanitary inspector of the Chicago health department, was arrested on charges of soliciting and accepting a bribe, and was suspended by Health Commissioner W. A. Evans.

Funeral services for James H. Eckels were held in Chicago.

The North Atlantic fleet, comprising 14 battleships and three cruisers under the command of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, anchored in Hampton Roads ready to receive the fleets of foreign powers which will attend the opening of the Jamestown exposition.

Col. S. B. Rohrbaugh, one of the wealthiest citizens of Ottawa, Kan., died at Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Thaw's counsel announced that his defense in the second trial would again be legal insanity at the time of the killing of White.

Hopelessly divided—seven for a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree and five for acquittal on the ground of insanity—the jury which since the 23d of last January had been trying Harry K. Thaw, reported after 47 hours and eight minutes of deliberation, that it could not possibly agree upon a verdict and were discharged. Thaw was remanded to jail to await his second trial, which is not likely to begin before autumn.

The Dearborn Park pool-room at Clark Station, Ind., was raided by police from Hammond, Ind.

The steamer Louis Pahlow was wrecked near Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and the Delta was anchored in a perilous position. The crews were rescued.

Submarine boats of the Holland and Simon Lake types are to race under water for the government contract for new submarine war ships, equal to a prize of $4,000,000.

Michael Burke, 14 years old, a pupil in the public schools at Tolono, Ill., has been awarded $1,800 damages against his teacher, Miss Annie Kelley, for injuries resulting from a whipping.

The Great Northern Oriental limited was wrecked at Bartlett, S. D., and five persons were killed.

The medical building of McGill university, Montreal, Que., was burned, the loss being $500,000.

Police of Winnipeg, Manitoba, raided the offices of the Canadian Stock Grain company and arrested every one in them on charges of running and frequenting a bucket shop.

James H. Eckels, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago and one of Chicago's leading citizens, was found dead in bed. Death was due to heart disease. Mr. Eckels was comptroller of the currency during Grover Cleveland's second administration.

Train wreckers derailed a train at Cheneyville, La., and three men were killed.

The national arbitration and peace conference opened in Carnegie hall, New York, with Andrew Carnegie presiding and many prominent foreigners and Americans present as speakers and guests.

One of the last acts of the Tennessee house before sine die adjournment was the adoption of a resolution declaring William J. Bryan the logical candidate for the Democratic party for president in 1908.

Capt. Carnot, son of the former president of France, has given $20,000 to the French academy to be added to the Carnot fund for widows of workmen who have been left with families.

Liebler & Co., theatrical managers, announced they had received a Marconigram telling of the disappearance of Percy Janis, the actor and brother of Elsie Janis, from the steamship Minneapolis, on which he was sailing for London.

Fire destroyed the principal business section of the town of Hastings, Ont. Loss, $80,000.

Dispatches from St. Petersburg, Tokio and Peking show that the evacuation of Manchuria by the Russians and Japanese, as agreed to under the Portsmouth treaty, and the repossession of that vast domain by China, has been accomplished under the terms of the agreement between Russia and Japan fixing April 15 as the limit of time for the actual transfer.

The trustees of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy have asked an immediate hearing of the suit begun by Mrs. Eddy's relatives, and denied that they are agents of the original defendants.

Cuba has decided to send three delegates to The Hague conference.

Fire destroyed the Second Reformed church, Hackensack, N. J. At recent services it was announced that the last dollar of the congregation's indebtedness had been paid.

The northern part of Montana is badly flooded by high water in Milk river. Glasgow is completely isolated. Many hundred cattle have been drowned.

The entire business portion of Benedict, Neb., was destroyed by fire. The bank, hotel and all the stores in the town were burned.

Five thousand union carpenters in Philadelphia are to go on strike for higher wages on May 1. Five hundred union painters have also voted to enforce their demands for an increase of one cent an hour.

In consequence of the attitude of the authorities of the Jassy district, Roumania, 2,000 petitions have been presented to the Jewish assistance committee asking for means to enable them to emigrate to America.

George W. Roosevelt, American consul general at Brussels and a cousin of the president, died suddenly.

Chief of Police John Adams of Newark, N. J., shot and killed himself in Branch Brook park.

Woodson S. Morris, 77 years old, has been sentenced at Newkirk, O. T., to 99 years in prison for murder.

Twelve jurors in the United States district court at Chicago found the Standard Oil company of Indiana guilty of accepting illegal rates from the Chicago & Alton railroad, as charged in 1,462 counts of the indictment. Should the verdict stand Judge Landis can impose aggregate fines of $29,240,000, or $20,000 on each count. If only the minimum penalty $1,000 on each count be assessed, the total would reach $1,462,000, the largest fine ever entered against a person or corporation in the history of federal courts.

The police of Paris issued an expulsion order under the prevention of gambling law against George Sutton, the American billiard player, who recently ran a billiard school there.

The Ripley building, one of the largest and most important structures at Baker University, Kan., was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $60,000; insurance, $15,000.

Policemen George M. Sechler and Alfred Sellech and Charles Vincenzo were shot and mortally wounded in New York by Salvatore Gavornale in a running fight.

George Shambacher, a wealthy real estate dealer of New York, was shot and mortally wounded while in the dining-room of his home; presumably by a burglar.

James Addison Quarles, D. D. LL. D., for the past 21 years professor of moral philosophy at Washington and Lee university, died at Lexington, Va. He was 70 years old.

After being out for 36 hours, the jury in the case of former State Senator Covington, of Arkansas, charged with accepting a bribe, reported a disagreement and was discharged.

David Billington, a professional swimmer, at Sydney, N. S. W., swam three-quarters of a mile in 17 minutes 36 2-5 seconds, thereby creating a new world's record.

The town of Westwego, La., was practically destroyed by fire.

Seven new cardinals were created by Pope Pius X. at a secret consistory.

Robert H. Crowe, of Pittsburg, who shot himself while in a theater, died of his wound.

Mrs. William Norris, of Denver, Col., committed suicide in Berea, O., because of domestic trouble and illness.

William T. Steed, of London, told an audience at the Pittsburg Carnegie Institute about his peace pilgrimage plan and was showered with money to help pay the expenses.

Dr. Samuel S. Guy, former coroner of Queens county, New York, was held to await the action of the grand jury following a coroner's inquest into the death of his wife, who was shot and killed on the night of April 8.

Wildwood, the suburban residence of C. D. Garnett, vice president of the Garnett, Allen & Grubb Paper company of St. Louis, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, April 15—This was a day of small things with the Minnesota legislature. There was considerable business accomplished of a routine nature, advancement and passage of bills. In the senate, the Paully non-partisan judiciary bill passed by a vote of 33 yeas, 21 nays. An effort was made to exempt probate judges but failed. The bill to establish a commission of ten members to have charge of the extension of the capitol grounds passed with but ten votes in the negative. The bill had the original $500,000 appropriation cut out, and it is left to the discretion of the finance committee in drawing the general appropriation bill as to how much will be allowed for this purpose. The bill to provide for reorganization of the state guard on lines like the regular army and following the terms of the Dick federal bill, passed on motion of Senator Hardy, chairman of the committee on military affairs. One of the important changes made by the bill is to extend the term of office of the adjutant general from 2 to 6 years. The bill to create a state board of immigration to advertise and bring settlers to the state, was passed by a vote of 33 to 20. Senator Thorpe of Willmar was anxious to have the original appropriation of $25,000 retained in the bill but this was striken out and the matter left for the finance committee to include in the general appropriation bill.

Senator Ole O. Sageng of Otter Tail, attempted to have three measures passed, but only landed a home run with one. The one the senate consented to pass for him is to exempt successful primary election candidates from having to pay any additional election fees to get on the general election ballot. The bills that fell by the wayside called for a non-partisan county superintendent of schools, and the last one for publication of the session laws in pamphlet form instead of as newspaper supplements.

The senate also passed the Wright bill providing pensions of $15 a month for citizen-soldiers of the Indian troubles of 1862. Two members of senate, George P. Wilson of Minneapolis and George Pugh of Duluth, come under the provisions of the bill and were excused from voting. Another bill passed by the upper house was the Alderman measure establishing a new state fish hatchery at Dearwood in Crow Wing county.

In the house, the entire day was occupied with consideration of bills in committee of the whole and advancing of certain of these measures to the calendar.

The governor today exercises his veto power for the first time, in refusing to approve of a bill to permit insurance journals under certain conditions to publish legal statements of insurance companies. It is understood the governor has consented to give his approval to the introduction of a bill which will legalize the publication of annual statements of insurance companies in all the papers throughout the state, and that such a bill will be introduced in a day or two with the hope that country paper influence will aid in its passage under suspension of the rules.

St. Paul, April 16—After a strenuous day, the house passed the anti-pass bill. The bill bears the name of H. G. Hicks of Minneapolis, but after the enacting clause, the bill is in entirety an amendment by the committee on railroads, and is to go into effect Dec. 31, 1908. An amendment offered by A. J. Rockne was talked on which prohibits use of passes by any one who is connected with any political organization, or candidate for office, or who holds an office under the constitution or statute. This is to prevent such persons securing passes under the allegation that they are employes in any way of a railroad. There were 103 votes in favor of the bill, and but 3 against it. The three were representatives Saugstad, Opsahl and Wold. The bill was debated at length. John G. Lennon of Minneapolis opposed the measure. Judge Hicks indorsed it, but admitted he believed the bill had faults. The bill is remarkable for its long list of exemptions. It permits passes to be given to physicians, attorneys and bona fide employes of any road, and dependent members of their families; representatives of railroad labor organizations, children under seven, ministers of the gospel, secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. and persons engaged in charitable work, indigent, destitute and homeless persons, inmates of soldiers homes, custom inspectors, immigration inspectors, witnesses, and caretakers of shipments. It further provides a one trip pass may be issued for discharged employes good for thirty days following such discharge.

A number of important bills in addition to the anti-pass measure in the house were passed today. In the senate these included the V. B. Seward bill to establish an additional sub-experiment station and agricultural school in Lyon, Lincoln or Yellow Medicine county, to be definitely located by the state university regents. The house bill for the establishment of a state farm for inebriates under control of the state board of control. The Frank Clague bill, restricting the maximum number of senate members to 63, and house members 121. The Peuly bills establishing a state printing plant in the basement of the old capitol and appropriating $30,000 therefore; and an appropriation of $150,000 for printing expenses the next two years.

In the house, bills passed included the Saugstad bill providing primary election for nomination of state officers. The Senator Thorpe bill creating a state immigration bureau. The H. W. Libbey bill transforming the state labor bureau into a department of labor, industries, and commerce. A number of "joke" bills were also acted on amid much humor and bantering. The first of these was the Alvin Rowe bill giving a reward of $50 for arrest and conviction of chicken thieves. A. J. Rockne called attention to the bill affording a fine means for a man to get a big price for his chickens, but the house laughingly passed the measure. Another was J. R. Randall's bill to compel muzzling of dogs from May 1 to Sept. 1 in the three large cities of the state. John Lennon suggested the name "Legislative delegations" be inserted for the word "dogs" in the bill, but the suggestion was not adopted.

St. Paul, April 17—Gov. John A. Johnson had his salary raised by the senate today from $5,000 a year to $7,000. The senate did the kindly deed by passing the house bill providing for this increase. The measure is now up to his excellency for signature or if he does not sign it it will become a law any how in three days. The bill secured 47 affirmative votes, and but 2 against it, Senators Anderson and Wright. Senator Wright warned the senate that this was a great session for making salary increases, and that to pass this bill was simply making campaign matter for the democrats two years from now but his fellow members couldn't hear him. Senator Clegue offered amendments to the bill to raise the salaries of the state auditor, treasurer and secretary of state to $4,200, but withdrew the amendments on objection by Senator J. F. Calhoun of Minneapolis.

This was the event of the day in the senate. In the house it was the killing of the state fair bill. The bill provided for issuance of certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $250,000 for new fair buildings, the certificates to be eventually paid off through profits of the fair. The bill was introduced some time ago by Morse of Slayton, following the defeat of the $1,000,000 exposition bill. The Morse bill secured but 38 affirmative votes, and 68 against it. The state fair management will now not get a cent outside of whatever sum may be alloted to it by the appropriations committee in the general omnibus bill. Such an allowance will simply be for general expenses and will permit of no new buildings or enlargements. The house took a recess before voting on the bill to hear an explanation of the needs of the fair grounds from E. W. Randall, fair secretary. His appeal for aid, however, fell on deaf ears.

In the senate, bills passed today include S. F. 315, Durment, to prohibit discrimination and rebating by life insurance companies; H. F. 753, Rockne, to compel railroads to file plats of all new lines with the railroad commission; S. F. 844, McGowan, to provide for stricter inspection of oils; S. F. 271, Gunn, to give authority to the railroad commission to order installation of safety appliances; and the Tighe house bill for a wide-open tax amendment.

Bills passed today by the house include, S. F. 292, Schaller, regulating practice of veterinary surgery and dentistry; H. F. 1183, Saugsted forbidding use of spirituous liquors at polling places; S. F. 849, fish committee, regulating fishing in inter-state waters, a bill drawn after consultation with Wisconsin authorities and pertaining especially to fishing in Lake Pepin.

The appropriations committee of the house, and finance committee of the senate, are now meeting every afternoon and evening arranging appropriations for the omnibus bill. The appropriations asked are something mountain-like, and the committees are doing their best to cut them down. It is the desire to keep the appropriations so they may be met by less than a 3 mill tax. Senator Peterson, chairman of finance in the upper house, wants to keep the total down to a basis of 1½ mills.

Petrified in Grave.

St. Cloud.—The body of Mrs. J. J. Salfinger, buried in the Melrose cemetery in 1900, was exhumed and buried in another lot. The men making the disinterment, finding the box and casket decayed, expected to find nothing but the skeleton to remove, when, to their surprise, they found a well-preserved body. Upon touching it they discovered it had turned to stone. The body was of an ashy gray color, as rigid as rock and nearly as heavy.

Discovery Endangered World.

In the time of Louis XV. of France, a chemist named Depre gave an exhibit on a canal at Versailles of a kind of fire so rapid and devouring that it could not be quenched, water only giving it fresh activity. Louis forbade that the invention should be made public, and the inventor died soon after, carrying the secret with him to the grave.

Always Exaggerate.

We are never so happy or so unhappy as we suppose.—La Rochefoucauld.

Little One's Prayer.

Mary always gets a little piece of candy every day to keep her from being naughty. One day she was naughty, and she did not get her candy. That night when she was going to bed she said her prayers as follows: "Our Father, who art in heaven, please give me my daily candy."

The World's Classification.

Don't call a man a fool because he disagrees with you. A wiser one than either of you may insist upon putting you both in the same class.—John A. Howland.

A SOCIAL LEADER OF KANSAS CITY

Attributes Her Excellent Health to Pe-ru-na.

MRS. W. H. SIMMONS.

MRS. W. H. SIMMONS, 1119 E. 8th St., Kansas City. Mo., member of the National Annuity Association, writes:

"My health was excellent until about a year ago, when I had a complete collapse from overdoing socially, not getting the proper rest, and too many late suppers. My stomach was in a dreadful condition, and my nerves all unstrung.

"I was advised by a friend to try Peruna, and eventually I bought a bottle. I took it and then another, and kept using it for three months.

"At the end of that time my health was restored, my nerves no longer troubled me, and I felt myself once more and able to assume my social position. I certainly feel that Peruna is deserving of praise."

There are many reasons why society women break down, why their nervous systems fail, why they have systemic or pelvic catarrh. Indeed, they are especially liable to these ailments. No wonder they require the protection of Peruna. It is their shield and safeguard.

Yale Now Free from Debt.

Yale university is free from debt, and has a balance of $62,000, after paying a floating debt of $456,804. The university has recently invested more than $1,000,000 in New York real estate, producing 4½ per cent., and has bond investments worth $3,307,971.75 and stocks worth $500,482.32. At least a quarter million more could be realized on the bonds and stocks. The treasurer, Mr. Lee McClung, announces that the funds of the university reach $8,254,492.45.

ILL FROM OVERWORK

NERVOUS PROSTRATION CURED BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

By Toning up the Blood and Nerves Patient Recovered Weight, Strength and Good Spirits.

When the nervous system is broken down from overwork, or whatever cause, life loses its joys. Not only is the nervous victim a sufferer himself but he is usually a trial to the whole family. Nervous breakdown is often gradual, appearing at first to be merely an unusual fretfulness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills tone up the nerves in the most direct way and not only cure minor troubles but serious disorders as well.

Mr. W. W. Munroe, of 16 Hazel Park, Everett, Mass., says: "About four years ago this September I became all run down from overwork and from confinement to work during warm weather. For two months I grew steadily worse. I lost in weight and strength and had no appetite. My memory failed me quite rapidly and I became in a very low state, both physically and mentally. I took no interest in life, neither in business nor recreation. In my position, as foreman in a large manufacturing chemist's establishment in Boston, a good memory is absolutely essential to success because of the immense amount of detail that must be carried in the head.

"I grew very despairing, could not bear to have people meet me and my friends remarked on my condition. About the middle of December a friend told me one day that he had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and found them reliable. I commenced taking them and at the end of two weeks the change for the better was remarked by friends. I continued using the pills until I was thoroughly recovered. I regard them as a fine remedy and make this statement voluntarily in gratitude for the benefit I received from them."

These pills actually make new blood and have cured such diseases as rheumatism, nervous and general debility, indigestion, nervous headache, neuralgia and even partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. As a tonic for the blood and nerves they are unequalled.

If you are a sufferer from any disorder of the blood and nerves write for proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have accomplished in cases similar to yours. Every testimonial used by this company is carefully investigated before being published and is authentic.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or direct by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A Positive CURE CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm

is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at Once.

It cleanses, soothes heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts., at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size 10 cts. by mail. HAY FEVER

Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXVII—Continued.

She looked up at him, embarrassed, and stepped back across the narrow trail, her head down again, so that he was free to pass. But instead of passing she became aware that he had dismounted.

When she looked up, he was busily engaged in adjusting something about his saddle, with an expression of deepest concern in his blue eyes. His hat was on the ground and his yellow hair glistened where the band had pressed it about his head.

"It's that latigo strap," he remarked, in a tone of some annoyance. "I've had to fix it every five miles since I left Kanab!" Then looking up at her with a friendly smile: "Dandy most stepped on you, I reckon."

The amazement of it was that, after her first flurry at the sound of his voice and his half-seen movements up the trail, it should now seem all so commonplace.

"Oh, no, I was well out of his way."

She started again to cross the trail, stepping quickly, with her eyes down, but again his voice came, less deliberate this time, and with words in something less than intelligible sequence.

"Excuse me, Miss—but—now how many miles to—what's the name of the nearest settlement—I suppose you live hereabouts?"

"What did you say?"

"I say is there any place where I could get to stop a day or so in Amalon?"

"Oh—I didn't understand—I think so. At least, my father sometimes—[illegible] Elder Wardle, he often [illegible] travellers."

"You say your father—"

"Not always—I don't know. I'm [illegible] he looked doubtful.

"Well, all right! I'll ask him,—if you'll show me his place."

"It's the first place on the left after you leave the canyon—with the big [illegible] orchard—I'm not going home [illegible]."

He stroked the muzzle of the horse. "Oh, I'm in no hurry. I'm just looking over the country a little. Your father's name is—"

"Ask for Elder Rae—or one of his wives will say if they can keep you over night."

She caught something new in his glance and felt the blood in her face.

"I must go now—you can find your way—I must go."

"Well, if you must go,"—he picked up his hat,—"but I'll see you again. You'll be coming home this evening, I reckon."

"The first house on the left," she answered, and stepped once more across the trail and into the edge of the pines.

When she knew he must be gone, she came out again to her nook beside the stream where, a moment before, her dream had filled her. But now, though nothing had happened beyond the riding by of a strange youth, the dream no longer sufficed. In place of the moonlit balcony was the figure of this young stranger swaying with his horse down between the hollowed shoulders of the Pine mountains and reining up suddenly to sweep his broad hat low in front of her. She was surprised by the clearness with which she could recall the details of his appearance,—a boyish-looking fellow, with wide-open blue eyes and a sunbrowned face under his yellow hair, the smallest of moustaches, and a smile of such winning good-humor that it had seemed to force her own lips apart in answer.

The picture of him stayed in her mind, the sturdy young figure,—rather loose-jointed but with an easy grace of movement,—and the engaging naturalness of his manner. But after all nothing had happened save the passing of a stranger, and she must go alone back to her dream. Yet now the dream might change; a strange youth might come riding out of the east, sitting a sorrel horse with a star and a white hind ankle, a long rangy neck and strong quarters; and he—the youth—would wear a broad, gray hat, with a band of silver filigree, a scarlet kerchief at his throat, a scarlet sash at his waist, and yellow dogskin "chapps."

Still, she thought, he could hardly have a place in the dream. The real youth of the dream had been of an unearthly beauty, with a rose-leaf complexion and lustrous curls massed above a brow of marble. The stranger had not been of an unearthly beauty. To be sure, he was very good to look at, with his wide-open blue eyes and his yellow hair, and he had appeared uncommonly fresh and clean about the mouth when he smiled at her. But she could not picture him sighing the right words of love under a balcony in the moonlight. He had looked to be too intensely business-like.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Gentile Invasion.

When she came across the fields late in the afternoon, the strange youth's horse was picketed where the bunch-grass grew high, and the young man himself talked with her father by the corral bars. She had never realized how old her father was, how weak, and small, and bent, until she saw him beside this erect young fellow. Her heart went out to the older man with a new sympathy as she saw his feebleness so sharply in relief against the well-blooded, hard-muscled vigor of the younger. When she would have passed them, her father called to her.

"Prudence, this is Mr. Ruel Follett. He will stay with us to-night."

The sombrero was off again and she felt the blue eyes seeking hers, though she could not look up from the ground when she had given her little bow. She heard him say:

"I already met your daughter, sir, at the mouth of the canyon."

She went on toward the house, hearing them resume their talk, the stranger saying, "That horse can sure carry all the weight you want to put on him and step away good; he'll do it right at both ends, too—Dandy will—and he's got a mighty tasty lope."

At supper and afterwards Mr. Follett talked freely of himself, or seemed to. He was from the high plains and the short-grass country, wherever that might be—to the east and south she gathered. He had grown up in that country, working for his father, who had been an overland freighter, until the day the railroad tracks were joined at Promontory. He, himself, had watched the gold and silver spikes driven into the tie of California mahogany two years before; and then, though they still kept a few wagon-trains moving to the mining camps north and south of the railroad, they had looked for other occupations.

He Paused to Take One of the Long Revolvers from Its Holster, Laying It Across His Lap.

Now their attention was chiefly devoted to mines and cattle. There were great times ahead in the latter business. His father remembered when they had killed cattle for their hides and tallow, leaving the meat to the coyotes; but now, each spring, a dozen men like himself, under a herd boss, would drive 5,000 head to Leavenworth, putting them through ten or 12 miles a day over the Abilina trail, keeping them fat and getting good prices for them. There was plenty of room for the business. "Over yonder across the hills," as Mr. Follett put it, there was a herding ground 400 miles wide east and west, and a thousand miles north and south, covered with buffalo grass, especially toward the north, that made good stock feed the year round. He, himself, had, in winter, followed a herd that drifted from Montana to Texas; and in summer he had twice ranged from Corpus Christi to Deadwood.

Down in the Panhandle they were getting control of a ranch that would cover 5,000 square miles, and some day they would have every one of its 3,000,000 acres enclosed with a stout wire fence. It would be a big ranch, bigger than the whole state of Connecticut—bigger than Delaware and Rhode Island "lumped together," he had been told. Here they would have the "C lazy C" brand on probably a hundred and fifty thousand head of cattle. He thought the business would settle down to this conservative basis with the loose ends of it pulled together; with closer attention paid to branding, for one thing; branding the calves, so they would no longer have to rope a full-grown steer, and tie it with a scarf such as he wore about his waist.

But they were also working some placer claims up around Helena, and developing a quartz prospect over at Carson City. And the freighting was by no means "played out." He, himself, had driven a six-mule team with one line over the Santa Fe trail, and might have to do it again. The resources of the west were not exhausted, whatever they might say. A man with a head on him would be able to make a good living there for some years to come.

Both father and daughter found him an agreeable young man in spite of his being an alien from the Commonwealth of Israel. He remained with them three days looking over the country about Amalon, talking with its people and making himself at least not an object of suspicion and aversion, as the casual Gentile was apt to be. Prudence found herself usually at ease with him; he was so wholly likable and unassuming. Yet at times he seemed strangely mature and reserved to her, so that she was just a little awed.

He told her in their evenings many wonder-tales of that outside world where the wicked Gentiles lived; of populous cities on the western edge of it, and of vast throngs that crowded the interior clear over to the Atlantic ocean. She had never realized before what a small handful of people the Lord had set His hand to save, and what vast numbers He had made with hearts that should be hardened to the glorious articles of the new covenant.

When he left he told them he was making a little trip through the settlements to the north, possibly as far as Cedar City. He did not know how long he would be gone, but if nothing prevented he might be back that way. He shook hands with them both at parting, and though he spoke so vaguely about a return, his eyes seemed to tell Prudence that he would like very much to come. He had talked freely about everything but the precise nature of his errand in the valley.

In her walks to the canyon she thought much of him when he had gone. She could not put his face into the dream because he was too real and immanent. He and the dream would not blend, even though she had decided that his fresh-cheeked, clear-eyed face, with its clean smile and the yellow hair above it was almost better to look at than the face of the youth in the play. It was not so impalpable; it satisfied. So she mused about them alternately, the dream and the Gentile—taking perhaps a warmer interest in the latter for his aliveness, for the grasp of his hand at parting, which she, with astonishment, had felt her own hand cordially returning.

For two weeks they heard nothing of the wandering Gentile, and Prudence had begun to wonder if she would ever see him again; also to wonder why an uncertainty in the matter should seem to be of importance.

But one evening early in June they saw him walking up in the dusk, the light sombrero, the scarlet kerchief against the blue woollen shirt, the holster with its heavy Colt's revolver at either hip, the easy moving figure, and the strong, yet boyish face.

He greeted them pleasantly, though, the girl thought, with some restraint. She could not hear it in his words, but she felt it in his manner, something suppressed and deeply hidden. They asked where his horse was and he replied with a curious air of embarrassment:—

"Well, you see, I may be obliged to stop around here a quite some while, so I put up with this man Wardle—not wanting to impose upon you all—and thanking you very kindly, and not wishing to intrude—so I just came to say 'howdy' to you."

They expressed regret that he had not returned to them, Joel Rae urging him to reconsider; but he declined politely, showing a desire to talk of other things.

Then he spoke of adventures with the Indians while freighting over the Santa Fe trail, and of what a fine man his father, Ezra Calkins, was. It was the first time he had mentioned the name and her ear caught it at once.

"Your father's name is Calkins?"

"Yes—I'm only an adopted son."

Unconsciously she had been letting her voice fall low, making their chat more confidential. She awoke to this now and to the fact that he had done the same, by noting that he raised his voice at this time with a casual glance past her to where her father sat.

"Yes—you see my own father and mother were killed when I was eight years old, and the people that murdered them tried to kill me too, but I was a spry little tike and give them the slip. It was a bad country, and I like to have died, only there was a band of Navajos out trading ponies, and one morning, after I'd been alone all night, they picked me up and took care of me. I was pretty near gone, what with being scared and everything, but they nursed me careful. They took me away off to the south and kept me about a year, and then one time they took me with them when they worked up north on a buffalo hunt. It was at Walnut creek on the big bend of the Arkansas that they met Ezra Calkins coming along with one of his trains and he bought me of those Navajos. I remember he gave 50 silver dollars for me to the chief. Well, when I told him all that I could remember about myself—of course the people that did the killing scared a good deal of it out of me—he took me to Kansas City where he lived, and went to law and made me his son, because he'd lost a boy about my age. And so that's how we have different names, he telling me I'd ought to keep mine instead of taking his."

She was excited by the tale, which he had told almost in one breath, and now she was eager to question, looking over to see if her father would not also be interested; but the latter gave no sign.

"You poor little boy, among those wretched Indians! But why were your father and mother killed? Did the Indians do it?"

"No, not Indians that did it—and I never did know why they killed them—they that did do it."

"But how queer! Don't you know who it was?"

Before answering, he paused to take one of the long revolvers from its holster, laying it across his lap, his right hand still grasping it.

"It was tiring my leg where it was," he explained. "I'll just rest myself by holding it here. I've practiced a good smart bit with these pistols against the time when I'd meet some of them that did it—that killed my father and mother and lots of others, and little children, too."

"How terrible! And it wasn't Indians?"

"No—I told you that already—it wasn't Indians."

"Don't you know who it was?"

"Oh, yes, I know all of them I want to know. The fact is, up there at Cedar City I met some people that got confidential with me one day, and told me a lot of their names. There was Mr. Barney Carter and Mr. Sam Woods, and they talked right freely about some folks. I found out what I was wanting to know, being that they were drinking men."

He had moved slightly as he spoke and she glanced at the revolver still held along his knee.

"Isn't that dangerous—seems to me it's pointed almost toward father."

"Oh, not a bit dangerous, and it rests me to hold it there. You see it was hereabouts this thing happened. In fact, I came down here looking for a big man, and a little girl that I remembered, whose father and mother were killed at the same time mine was. This little girl was about three or four, I reckon, and she was taken by one of the murderers. He seemed like an awful big man to me. By the way, that's mean whisky your Bishop sells on the sly up at Cedar City. Why, it's worse than Taos lightning. Well, this Barney Carter and Mr. Sam Woods, they would drink it all right, but they said one drink made a man ugly and two made him so downright bad that he'd just as lief tear his wife's best bonnet to pieces as not. But they seemed to like me pretty well, and they drank a lot of this whisky that the Bishop sold me, and then they got talking pretty freely about old times. I gathered that this man that took the little girl is a pretty big man around here. Of course I wasn't expecting anything like that; I thought naturally he'd be a low-down sort to have been mixed up in a thing like that."

He spoke his next words very slowly, with little pauses.

"But I found out what his name was—it was—"

He stopped, for there had been an indistinct sound from where her father sat, now in the gloom of the evening. She called to him:

"Did you speak, father?"

There was no reply or movement from the figure in the chair, and Follett resumed:

"I guess he was just asleep and dreaming about something. Well, anyway—I—I found out afterwards by telling it before him, that Mr. Barney Carter and his drunken friend had given me his name right, though I could hardly believe it before."

"What an awful, awful thing! What wickedness there is in the world!"

"Oh, a tolerable lot," he assented.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Looking Forward.

"Have you any watches with water-proof cases?" asked the young man.

"No," replied the jeweler. "What is your object in wanting a waterproof watch?"

"Oh, I may have occasion to soak it occasionally," answered the young man.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Attempted Train Wrecking.

Owatonna.—Because he was angry at a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad section foreman, Julius Yuse, a resident of this city, took revenge by placing a railroad tie across the main tracks a short distance north of this city. The early morning northbound passenger, a through train from Chicago and heavily loaded, struck the tie, but was not derailed. The pilot of the engine struck the timber and tore a large hole in it, after which it was twisted in such a manner that, instead of lying across the tracks, it passed under the engine, and thus, bumping from side to side, the timber was carried for several hundred feet.

The striking of the tie was reported to the section foreman and from him to headquarters. Two detectives were detailed on the case and arrested Yuse. He at first denied the act, but when taken before Judge Johnson in the municipal court he pleaded guilty to the charge and was held to the June term of the district court.

To Make Turpentine.

Brainerd.—A. L. Hoffman and a number of associated business men will go into the manufacture of turpentine from pine stumps in the near future. Mr. Hoffman has visited Hinkley and has investigated the industry from every phase and he and his associates are satisfied that there will be a good thing not only for themselves but in addition prove of immense advantage to the country in that it will permit the farmers not only to clear their land without expense, but to get good pay for the clearing. It is the intention of the gentlemen to install the central refinery in Brainerd and to put in groups of retorts wherever they can contract for a sufficient number of stumps. It is expected that the enterprise will ultimately represent an investment of $100,000.

Doe Balks Pursuers.

Duluth.—After knocking out one of its pursuers with a blow on the solar plexus, a young doe which made its appearance in the western part of West Duluth, made its escape to the woods unharmed.

The appearance of the animal caused much excitement, and a crowd of men and boys started in pursuit. Near the Asbury church the animal became entangled in a wire fence. Lee McNulty who was one of the foremost of the pusuers put out his hand to grasp the animal when it butted him in the solar plexus, knocking him insensible. Its effort to put McNulty out enabled the deer to free itself from the meshes of the wire, and it soon out-footed its pursuers.

Many Were Hurt.

St. Paul.—The accident report of the labor commissioner for March shows the number of injuries to be the heaviest in six months, the number being 102, while the nearest approach to this record was 101 in October, 1906.

While the March list of accidents is a long one, most of the injuries sustained were of a minor nature, only two fatal injuries being reported. The rest were small cuts, burns, bruises, and so on, and as usual the large percentage of accidents occurred in the railroad shops.

Woman Found Dead.

St. Paul.—Lying head first in a bog, a woman identified as Mrs. O'Donnell was found by one of the employees of a trunk factory, Kentucky and Fenton streets, on the West Side.

Mrs. O'Donnell had been living in a small shanty in the rear of the trunk factory and it is supposed that while returning home late at night she stumbled and fell into the bog holes, many of which are to be found on the West side. Her head and shoulders had been covered and she died from suffocation.

Will Inspect Cadets.

Minneapolis.—Annual inspection of the university cadets by a regular army officer will occur this year at the university on Friday, May 10. Capt. Shelton, of the Eleventh United States Infantry, now detailed to general staff duty, will conduct the inspection, which will last all day. On the next day the cadets will tender a complimentary review to President Northrop.

NEWS NOTES.

Grand Meadow.—An enthusiastic meeting was held in this village to listen to the remarks of William Peyton Mason, secretary and general manager of the "Dan Patch Air Line," relative to the route in their vicinity. About 200 farmers were present.

Faribault.—Bert Ellis was seriously injured while assisting in moving a house in this city. Something had stopped the rollers and Mr. Ellis crawled under the house to investigate and fix the roller, when the house slipped from the roller and fell to the ground, crushing him severely. A heavy beam partly protected him from a fatal accident.

Minneapolis.—The forestry commission has purchased nine pounds of white pine seed and two pounds of pitch pine seed which will be planted in the nursery at the Pillsbury reserve. The seed cost $11 and will yield 200,000 trees, about eighty years being required to bring the trees to a marketable growth, which is a diameter of from twelve to fifteen inches breast high.

Alden.—An unknown man was run over and probably fatally injured by a Milwaukee freight train here. The man, who was about forty-five years old, had been about the village for several days. Both legs were cut off below the knees and although he is still alive, there is small hope for his recovery.

Preston.—Dr. G. A. Love was elected mayor by a majority of 70 over his opponent, Dr. J. S. Phillips. This will be Dr. Love's fifth consecutive term.

Adrian.—Joseph O'Hearn, of Ellsworth, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, but will recover. He had been drinking heavily.

Shooting Scrape.

Hibbing—A shooting affair which narrowly missed being a murder took place here when Joe Conkovitch, 26 years old, is alleged to have fired a shot which wounded a man whose name could not be learned, and who is now in the hospital seriously wounded.

The shooting is said to have been the result of an altercation which took place between Conkovitch and the stranger, in which the former got the worst of it and took refuge in flight. He secured a revolver, and returning, is alleged to have fired point blank at the stranger. The bullet struck him in the forehead, but instead of piercing his skull, glanced off after making a serious wound.

Conkovitch is under arrest. He denies the shooting.

Gets $18,000 for Arm.

St. Paul—A verdict of $18,000, the largest amount ever awarded in Minnesota, it is said, for the loss of an arm, was given by a district court jury to George E. Stiles in his suit against the Northern Pacific railway and Walter Henricks. He sued for $30,000.

Stiles, a brakeman employed by the Northern Pacific, was on a freight train last September that "broke in two" at Detroit, Minn. He went between the separated cars to adjust the air brake apparatus. He had signaled Engineer Henricks not to move the main part of the train until the adjustment had been made. But the engineer backed up too quickly and Stiles' right arm was so severely crushed that it had to be amputated.

Earth Swallows Team.

Winona—Clark G. Corey, who lives in Wiscoy Valley, a dozen miles from this city, lost a valuable team of work horses in a peculiar manner this week, the earth literally opening up and swallowing them. Mr. Corey's hired man was at work in the field with a three-horse team, when suddenly the animals broke through into a hidden sink hole, dropping into a deep cavity. The top horse was pulled out alive, but the other two were dead before they could be rescued. In the early days when the land was first being broken sink holes were found frequently, but now it is very seldom that one is discovered, especially in an old field such as this was.

Found Dead.

Rochester—The infant child of Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell was found dead in its bed. The child had not been ill and apparently had been in the best of health. It had been put to bed in the afternoon for its regular nap. Later, when a caller arrived, and wanted to see the child, the mother went to the bedroom and to her horror found that her baby was dead. The coroner was notified and Dr. F. R. Mosse made a careful examination, but could find no cause for the sudden demise, but it is thought it was due to a hemorrhage.

NEWS NOTES.

Mankato—Stray dogs drove a valuable flock of sheep into the Le Sueur river on George Blaisdell's farm, and most of them were drowned.

Mankato.—Mankato barbers met and agreed to raise the price of shaves from 10 to 15 cents after May 1. It was decided to leave the price of hair cuts alone for the present, until the patrons of the shops get used to the higher price of shaves.

Ross—Section men working on the North-Western road near here uncovered a lot of papers which proved to be those stolen from August Donder some time ago when his safe was blown open at Janesville. The papers were found to be all right, but the money was gone.

St. Hilaire—At a meeting of the council of this village it was decided to award a franchise to G. W. Hooper of Crookston for a local telephone system. He has made a deposit as an evidence of good faith and expects to have the system in working order by August 1.

Minneapolis—Enrollment at the university has passed the coveted 4,000 mark for the first time in the history of the institution. Registrar Pierce announced that the enrollment at present is 4,126. To this number a few more may be added when complete returns from some of the departments are secured.

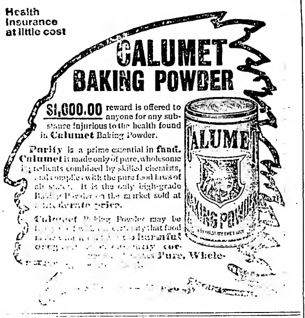
Hinckley—On a wire from a North Dakota sheriff last night, Deputy Marshal Webster arrested Frank Pierce, aged 19, living with his parents here. Pierce recently returned from North Dakota, accompanied by a half-breed boy and when arrested confessed to stealing two horses and selling them. He is in jail awaiting the arrival of the North Dakota sheriff. The half-breed is also in jail.

Crookston.—Fire destroyed the general store of W. H. Cone at Russia, a small town fifteen miles south of this city. There is no fire protection at Russia and the store and all the contents were destroyed. Mr. Cone occupied the upper story as a residence.

Washington.—The receipts of the St. Paul postoffice for the last month aggregated $87,268, which was an increase of 12 per cent over the previous month.

St. Paul—George Knuaff, 18 years of age, living with his parents at Concord and Page street, shot off his right heel while hunting muskrats near McCarron's lake. He says he was carrying the shotgun with the barrel pointed behind, and that the trigger got in his coat pocket. The shot tore the back off the shoe and the entire heel.

St. Peter.—While in session in this city the board of directors of Gustavus Adolphus college for the twelfth time re-elected Dr. J. P. Uhler as vice president of the institution. Dr. Uhler is completing his twenty-fifth year as a member of the faculty.



Health insurance at little cost

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

$1,000.00 reward is offered to anyone for any substance injurious to the health found in Calumet Baking Powder.

Purity is a prime essential in food. Calumet is made only of pure, wholesome ingredients combined by skilled chemists, and complies with the pure food laws of all states. It is the only high-grade Baking Powder on the market sold at a moderate price.

Calumet Baking Powder may be [illegible] that food [illegible] harmful [illegible] cor- [illegible] Pure, Whole- [illegible]

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

[illegible] Thursday evening, an- [illegible] matter in the post [illegible] Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

A LATE SPRING.

No Seeding Done Yet--Work Will Hurry When Commenced.

April 25th and very little seeding done means a late spring, and if a good crop, a late harvest. During the last ten days no work in the fields could be done and before that time very little had been accomplished. The season is much later than usual. A day or two of sunshine will put the fields in fine conditions, however. When conditions are right the farmers will "make the dirt fly" and seeding will be done in short order.

Few of the lakes are free from ice at this time, but it would hardly be a safe proposition to attempt to cross them even on foot. The snow is gone and all that is needed is sunshine and a little warmth to set everything at work.

This should be a good fruit year as the weather has been uniformly cold that no buds have been started on the trees. The need now is continuous warm weather without cold, rainy weather or frost during the time trees are in blossom.

WHEN A GIRL GRADUATES

The Following Article in the Delineator Will Be Appropriate.

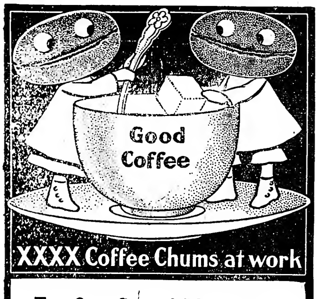
Not so very long ago graduation came but once in a girl's lifetime. Today no less than four distinct and separate graduations mark the upward steps in her education; and as each of these is honored by a public reception given at the school, graduation gowns are required by grils of all ages. This new arrangement makes the wee girlie graduating from the primary into the grammar school quite as important a personage, for the time being, as she who graduates into or out of high school or college.

The thin, brilliant-luster Japanese silks are coming into vogue for children's best frocks, and are being accepted even by old-fashioned mothers who "do not approve of silks for the children." This material is dressy yet inexpensive, since it requires less trimming than washable material.

Girls at the age when they graduate from the grammar school are apt to be awkward—we may as well admit it—and their successful gowning requires careful study.

Graduation gowns as a rule, are pure white: occasionally, however, one sees in the girdle, or in a scarf or a shoulder knot, an expression of the class colors. The materials may be simple or elaborate, ranging from a dainty dimity to chiffon, crepe de Chine or shimmering gauze.

One graduation gown alone no longer meets the requirements of the college graduate. The many festivities crowed into Commencement week demand several gowns of varied character, chiefly in all white.



Good Coffee
XXXX Coffee Chums at work

Try One Cup of This Coffee

You won't pay any more for McLaughlin XXXX Coffee, but you'll get the very best grade of coffee at a reasonable price, because McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always clean—always fresh—always good—always the same quality—in fact, the Standard Coffee.

Sold in full 16-oz. packages.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps this coffee clean and fresh, protected from dust, dirt and foul odors. Each package is one pound full weight.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE
M. SKALA

GARCEAU & ZAISER
J. W. B. NIMESGREN

Notaries Be Careful.

The supreme court of Minnesota has recently handed down a decision that will be of more than ordinary interest to notary publics and to those who employ their services. In this case the appelate court sustained the original decision and directed a judgment of one thousand dollars in favor of the plaintiffs against the sureties of a notary on his bond.

The court holds that no notary has the legal right to certify to a signature unless the party so signing is personally known to him to be the one whose name is signed. Acknowledgements may no longer be taken over the telephone; nor will it be safe to certify to an instrument with the notariul seal and take the fee without personal knowledge of the other party. A notary public in this state is required to give a bond of $2,000, and according to this decision by the court said bond is not a mere matter to form but implies a real liability.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL......

Use Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Children like its pleasant taste, and mothers give it hearty endorsement. Contains no opiates, but drives out the cold through the bowels. Made in strict conformity to Pure Food and Drugs Law. Recommended and sold by all druggists.

Miss Clara Zaiser who has been quite ill for about two weeks past is considerably improved at this writing. The first of the week it was thought that it would be necessary to perform an operation for appendicitis, but after a consultation of physicians it was decided that it would not be necessary at this time.

F. A. Mizen left Wednesday evening for an extended trip through the west and south. Mr. Mizen will travel via the Northern Pacific to Portland, thence down the coast to San Francisco and Southern California, then east as far as New Orleans He expects to be gone about a month and will undoubtedly have a delighful trip.

On Saturday, April 5th, officers were elected in the recently organized town town of Reiner, in the Eleven Towns. The officials elected are: Supervisors, T. G. Helle, chairman; L. L. Rosseland, Ellef Aakre; town clerk, Michael T. Torgerson; treasurer, Reinhart Johnsrud; assessor, Anders L. Kjos; justice of the peace, Martin Anderson, Anton Knudson; constables, John M. Anderson, Torjus Halvorson.

The Class Play of '07, the "Sweet Girl Graduates, was played before a packed house at the Metropolitan opera house last Friday evening. The play was well staged and the members of the caste carried their lines with credit to themselves and to the satisfaction of all who witnessed their first attempt before the footlights. The receipts of the evening were about $100. which after all outstanding accounts were paid left them about $70 net, which will be used in meeting graduating expenses. After the play a social dance was given.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. LaBissoniere attended the installation ceremonies of Knights of Columbus at Crookston Monday. The exercises were great. Fully 400 visiting knights were there from outside lodges, coming from the large cities in Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota. The new chapter starts out with a big membership, After the organization a big reception was tendered the visiting knights and an elaborate banquet was served them by the Catholic ladies of Crookston.

What does the average farmer think of $2,500 gross being produced off six acres North Dakuta land? That's what Hauser Bros. did in 1905 und again in 1906. The Hauser Bros. raise pickles. They raised among other things six acres of cucumbers. The gross sale of the six acres came to $2,500. The land lies three miles west of Fargo between a lake and Sheyenne river. No irrigation and no drainage. The cost of the entire production and picking was less than $500. These men raised an acre of cabbage worth $500. They sold 150 bushels of tomatoes off a small patch, and received an average of 75 cents per bushel. Last year they set out 500 plum trees and will plant more this year. Still the lands on which such crops grow are listed at less than $100 per acre.—Fargo Forum.

Upon the complaint of Ole Homme, County Attorney Germo last week instructed Judge Bishop to issue a warrant for the arrest of Frank Zavoral and Joseph Varlicky, two settlers living out in the new town of Star near Erie postoffice. It appears that a few weeks ago while enroute from Thief River Falls to their claims, Zavoral and Varlicky stopped at the home of Homme which resulted in some trouble. Mr. Zavoral is an old Thief River Falls resident and Varlicky is his brother-in-law. Those who know the circumstances of the case say that a mistake was made in having a warrant issued for their arrest. The warrant has been in the hands of Sheriff Nelson for several days, but as yet no attempt has been made to have it served owing to the bad condition of the roads in that section.—Thief River Falls News.

Merchants State Bank Idea.

You will, I believe, agree with me when I say that wheat growing is no longer profitable in this section.

If not wheat-- what then?

Corn, clover, cows, creameries and a good bunch of hogs to turn your skim milk into money.

There are a few farmers in this neighborhood who are now making money out of cows and hogs.

Most of the farmers in this neighborhood can at once, if they will, own a sufficient number of high grade cows and hogs to place themselves in this money making positon.

There are very few, if any, farmers here who cannot, if they manage right, within a few years time work themselves into this money making position.

This bank has more than eight hundred thousand dollars loaned out for itself and its clients in the Condties of Red Lake and Polk, and therefore it is vitally interested in the devlopment of this section and in the financial welfare of its farmers.

We are here to do our share towards bringing about the change from unprofitable wheat growing to the unquestionable more profitable dairy farming and hog raising. We are always glad to make loans to farmers, whose credit standing warrants it, for the purchase of high grade dairy cows, cream separators, hogs, and for necessary feed.

If the people of this neighborhood will take hold of this proposition with the vigor and determination which a matter of such great bearing upon their prosperity deserves, they can bring about a wonderfull change for the better within the next five years. Not alone a change to much more profitable farming, but also the naturally following increase in land values—an increase of probably fifty to one hundred per cent.

Think it over. Come in and talk it over.

Merchants State Bank
of Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy, Cashier.

BRAY.

The weather has been very good for the last week comparing it with what we are used to.

Iver Johnson transacted business at St. Hilaire Wednesday and Thursday.

C. P. Swanson made a trip to Numedal, last Thursday.

Alfred Johnson was at St. Hilaire Tuesday.

A. S. Wilson of St. Hilaire was around during the week buying cattle from the farmers.

A. E. Anderson drove to St. Hilaire Monday.

Among the Braytes who were in St. Hilaire Friday were Alfred Olson, Mike Ault and Henry Hanson.

Loyd and Willie Crown left for Thief River Falls Monday where they will work in the saw mill during the summer.

Pale, Thin, Nervous?

Then your blood must be in a very bad condition. You certainly know what to take, then take it—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If you doubt, then consult your doctor. We know what he will say about this grand old family medicine.

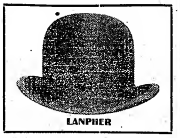
This is the first question your doctor would ask: "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that daily action of the bowels is absolutely essential to recovery. Keep your liver active and your bowels regular by taking laxative doses of Ayer's Pills.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's
HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

$500 In Prizes Given Away

By
Lanpher-Skinner & Co.
Makers of



LANPHER HATS

The makers of the ever popular Lanpher Hats are offering some substantial cash prizes to those who can guess the nearest to the number of Lanpher Hats that will be sold during the spring season of 1907. It will cost you nothing to make a guess and may bring you a good sized cash prize. Try it. Call at Garceau & Zaiser's store and they will tell you all about it.

Bargains in Spring and Summer Dress Goods

THE BUSY STORE

GARCEAU & ZAISER

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.

I want to make your spring suit. I want to show you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than you can get at your local tailors for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00.

My Spring goods have now arrived, and they are the most beautiful fabrics I ever saw.

Write me today for samples and tell me about the kind of clothes you are thinking of getting. By return mail I'll send you a bunch to select from, also self-measurement blanks.

Remember, I have the largest tailoring establishment in the world, that I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money; and I pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave Minneapolis, Minn.

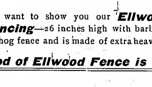
We make farm loans at the lowest possible rate of interest. Funds on hand at all times.---First State Bank, Red Lake Falls.

HOG FENCING

Do You Need
Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb bottom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.

General Hardware

Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

IF YOU TOUCH
your tongue to
ALUM

and look in the glass—you will see the effect—You can't help puckering—it makes you pucker to think of tasting it.

By the use of so called cheap Baking Powders you take this puckering, injurious Alum right into your system—you injure digestion, and ruin your stomach.

AVOID ALUM

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Royal is made from pure, refined Grape Cream of Tartar—Costs more than Alum but you have the profit of quality, the profit of good health.

Frank Jeffers attended to business matters at Thief River Tuesday.

Norman Sebrelter returned Saturday from the cities after a two weeks sojourn.

Don't forget the baseball meeting Saturday evening at the city hall at eight o'clock-

Joseph Brohman, a prominent Lambert farmer, transacted business in the city Tuesday.

Auditor O'Brien is busy with the assessors of the county today, who have assembled to receive their books and instructions.

Wm. Clancy, who has been the stenographer for the Northern Minnesota Milling Co. for the past two months, left Monday for Minneapolis, where he will look up a new position.

Fred Zaiser returned home Tuesday from central Minnesota where he has been looking up contract work on the Glenwood-Duluth extension of the Soo.

Gene Bray of Crookston visited friends in the city Friday last.

Arthur Guilmette has accepted a position as clerk in G. A. Kankel's hardware store.

Mrs. Joseph Miller visited with her sister, Mrs. Nap Miller at St. Hilaire last Thursday.

Miss Mamie Regan returned this morning from a visit with friends at Argyle and Crookston.

Miss Lerain Longton departed last Friday for Maddock, N. D., where she will teach a term of school for the summer season.

D. P. O'Nell spent Saturday night in the city while enroute with his teams to his Norman county farms where he will put things in order for the spring seeding.

Ernest Richard, Tom Lonson, Willis Aekre, and Willie Prichard of the Upper Falls came down last Friday evening to take in the class play "Sweet Girl Graduates."

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCaffrey of Crookston visited with friends here last Friday.

If your lamp chimney smokes go to Spillanes; The Right Store and get some Ruby Oil.

Mrs. E. F. Marshall went to the cities Tuesday night to visit her son, Drew, and other relatives.

Master Carpenter, E. A. Mills of the Great Northern spent Wednesday in the city looking after work in his line for the company.

Mrs. Ed. Bray entertained her sisters Mrs. G. B. Morin and Mrs. Brosseau, of Crookston on Tuesday of this week. Mr. Brosseau accompanied the ladies on their trip to this city.

White Wyandottes are the best general purpose fowl. Have the size and are great winter layers. Eggs from extra fine stock $1.00 per setting.—Fred L. Farley. 27-30

The Local Field---

Band
Concert
Tomorrow night.
The last of the season.

Baseball meeting Saturday evening.

Sam E. Hunt spent Sunday in the city.

County Attorney Germo was in Thief River Falls Monday.

Dentist Argue was up to St. Hilaire Wednesday on professional business.

Oscar Carlson and Arnold Finrow of Plummer were county seat visitors yesterday.

Remember the art exhibition at the High school next Monday afternoon and evening.

C. J. Knox, of Thief River, was a business visitor in the city Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rev. J. S. Hamilton and Prof. John Bursk are conducting a series of revival meetings at Bemidji.

By the time the winter will have relinquished its hold on the spring season, the good old summer time will be with us.

Fred Richards came in from Dorothy last Friday to witness the "Sweet Girl Graduates," and visit with friends and relatives.

Mrs. H. N. Johnson, of Park River, N. D., is expected in the city next week for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Tonpin and family.

A. H. Cowles from Great Bend N. D. arrived in the city the first of the week and will substitute for Agent Mizen of the N. P., while he is enjoying his vacation.

Mrs. Selvan Hall arrived in the city Tuesday from Cass Lake and will visit for a time at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Croupe. She was joined by Mr. Hall yesterday.

T. R. Press:—Mrs. W. B. Fuller and son, Herman, left on Tuesday for Belleville, Ontario, going by way of Chicago and Toronto. They will be absent visiting relatives for a number of weeks.

Joseph Baril, who has been spending the past month in this vicinity, leaves today for his home at Crossfield, Alberta. Mr. Baril is shipping a carload of horses which he will disposed of at that point.

Are you good at guessing? If you are there is a chance to win a big cash prize by making a guess on the number of Lanpher hats that will be sold this spring. Read Gareeau & Zaiser's ad.

Jim Connoughty, who has been braking on the Crookston-Duluth line the past winter, arrived home Thursday, and will assist with the spring work on the farm, after which he will resume his duties with the G. N.

John A. Pokezwinski arrived in the city from Perham Saturday and will work as bartender in the Ed Bray saloon. Mr. Pokezwinski is also a first-class baseball pitcher, having done considerable "heaving" for some of the fast amateur teams in Dakota and will be a welcome addition to the twirling staff of the city.

A. J. Lillo was in from Rhoda Wednesday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

H. H. Zaiser transacted business at Crookston over Wednesday night.

Oscar Carlson and Arnold Finrow were up from Plummer Wednesday.

J. B. Armstrong and L. P. Berthon made a business trip to Crookston last evening.

Banker C. L. Hansen, of St. Hilaire returned Tuesday from a business trip to the Twin Cities.

Pat Sullivan was in the city the first of the week looking for men to work on the river this summer,

Dr. Dunlap came up from Crookston Tuesday to be present at a consultation of physicians in the case of Miss Clara Zaiser.

Eugene Besse of Grand Forks arrived here Saturday enroute to his farm in Louisville township, where he will look after the spring work.

Miss Mayme Linnihan returned home Friday from Crookston, after visiting for a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Lytle at Crookston.

The Big Store calls your attention to their big line of men and boys' clothing bought direct from the House of Kuppenheimer, the home of style and quality.

When you need a pill, take a pill, and be sure it's an Early Riser. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are safe, sure, satisfactory pills. The pills with a reputation. They do not gripe or sicken. They are sold here by all druggist-

When you have glasses fitted take no chances; but have your eyes examined by a Specialist whose ability is unquestioned, Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Iver Kana of Fertile, arrived here Monday to take a position as tinner in G. A. Kankel's hardware store. Mr. Kana comes recommended as a first-class tinner and will no doubt give the patrons of the Kankel store entire satisfaction.

Music for the Antlers club dance on Friday evening was furnished by the Red Lake Falls orchestra. Our sister town on the south may well be proud of this musical organization for it is the equal of many a professional orchestra,—Thief River Press.

Ervey Lachance, a resident of this city five years ago but now of North Yakima, Washington, dropped in on his many friends here Monday. Mr. Lachance has been around the world since leaving here, having visited Japan, the Philippines, the Siberian coast and many other points of interest.

The star route from this city to Lambert via. Terrebonne and Brooks has been discontinued and the patrons at present along the route are served direct from the different postoffices along the route. The goverment is now advertising for bids to supply the Lambert postoffice from Brooks.

Supt. McAnulty was a Dugdale caller Monday.

County Surveyor Wood was in the city the fore part of the week.

C. F. Gray leaves today for Canada where he will spend the summer.

Atty. Farley left Wednesday evening for St. Paul on professional business.

Mrs. Con Short came in from Lillo Tuesday to do some shopping in the city.

Father Roi of Lambert spent several days in the city this week visiting with friends.

Attorney Chas. E. Boughton transacted legal business at Warren the first of the week.

H. Hennemuth went to St. Hilaire Wednesday to look after some repair work on the Red Lake Falls elevator at that place.

D. D. Daly, general agent for the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. was in the city Tuesday looking after business for his company.

Dr. F. F. Fletcher, of Grand Forks, will be at Dr. Wilkinson's office in Red Lake Falls, from April 27th to 29th inclusive. Anyone having dental work should see him at that time.

L. A. Lovenstein, representing Ederheimer, Stein & Co. of Chicago, makers of young men and boys fashionable clothes, spent several days in the city this week calling on the trade.

O. Noel Sr and wife left last evening for North Yakima, Wash., where they expect to put in the most of the coming year and if they find the climatic conditions agreeable will probably locate at that place.

Tim Hastings, one of Crookston's prominent horsemen, was in the city Saturday interviewing old friends and at the same time keeping a weather eye open for anything in the line of fancy steppers.

Report of Examining Committee of the Merchants State Bank

At close of business, April 16th, 1607,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

We, the undersigned members of the Examining Committee of Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., do hereby certify that we have made a thorough examination of the condition of the above named bank, and are of the opinion that the assets of the bank are not carried on the books thereof in excess of their actual value. Items considered of less than book value are enumerated below:

All notes and securities found to be of full par value and amount claimed as booked and cash on hand and in bank, found as carried on books.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake } ss.

We, the subscribers, Examining Committee, for the within named bank, do solemnly swear that the statement herein made is true to the best of our knowledge and belief, and that every item of the assets of said bank, not stated herein, is of book value.

—Samuel Gibeau,
—L. A. Kaufer,
—Chas. N. Bourdon,
Examining Committee.

Sworn and subscribed before me this 18th day of April, 1907.

—J. A. Duffy,
Notary Public, Red Lake Co.

MENS & BOYS CLOTHING

THERE is a Greek anecdote of a humble cobbler pointing out to a great sculptor a serious mistake he had made in the sandal of an otherwise perfect statue. This goes to show that the reputation of those who do something, artists or merchants, is safe only when their work is so perfect and so reliable and so exact that those who scrutinize it closely find it right. The clothing and all the other merchandise we sell is made on this basis. In getting clothes with style and fit like

Kuppenheimer's
-for men-
Eduheimer, Stein's
-for boys-

we do not forget the material. We only buy those that have wearing qualities. Our stock is complete and would compare favorably with stocks in much larger cities.

Boys
$1.50 to $6.50

Young Men's
$5.00 to 25.00

Men's
$5.00 to 25.00

Cravenettes
$15.00 to $22.50

We show all wool Men's Suits at $9.00
in blue serges and fancy cassimeres. We respectfully solicit your inspection.

Everybody says it pays to trade at . .

The Big Store

Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints
The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,
Small Farm Implements
Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

KEEP PERSONAL ACCOUNTS

Strict Record of Receipts and Expenses Invaluable to Women—How to Accomplish This Should Be Part of Every Young Girl's Education.

By KATHERINE LOUISE SMITH.
(Copyright, [illegible], by Joseph B. Bowles.)

No matter what their financial standing, all women need business training of a fundamental nature. To make expenses and receipts balance ought to be part of every girl's education, but too often this is sadly neglected. The young girl is not taught to keep track of her allowance and the married woman uses her husband's money just as she did her father's or her own, with no systematic record of where it goes to.

There are many reasons for this. Until of late, the business faculty has been cultivated in men and the opposite tendency encouraged in women. Women have not handled money. They have not been taught to make out checks, to lend money with proper security, to know the routine of a bank, to understand even the simplest commercial usages that men understand because they have grown up among them.

We may regret when a woman loses her all, when she lends money without security, when she is swayed by feelings of emotion to lend large sums to this or that man because "he is so good to his wife," or "leads in prayer meeting," and when she does not know a check from a draft. We may regret, but the chances are we will shrug our shoulders and say: "But that is just like a woman. What can you expect?" But the question is, would not a man with no business training do the same in her place? When a woman understands commercial uses that are common, every-day facts in the business world, and some part of this world she cannot escape, no matter how secluded her life, her liability to failure will decrease 75 per cent.

Women are not naturally stupid about money affairs. As a matter of fact, when they understand business they are more accurate about handling money than men. Witness the counting of money in our large mints. This is all done by women, and in the treasury department at Washington, not a single man is employed to count money by hand. Four hundred women are engaged for this purpose, and they are selected because they do it accurately and swiftly.

That women know little of business usage cannot be denied. It makes little difference whether a woman is earning her living or attending to household affairs and accounts. Whether she is the producer of money or the distributor who manipulates the money that the breadwinner supplies, it is her obligation to get the worth of every dollar she handles and to learn enough of the business world to protect her own money and any entrusted to her. With the average person, no degree of success can be attained without rightly regulated economy, the proper distribution of funds for expenses and a knowledge of what becomes of money.

Business will not conduct itself successfully, either in the great wide world or the seclusion of home and no matter what the life work or social status, familiarity of business forms is a wise protection against financial embarrassment. Many a woman has made a fiasco of supporting herself and has made home life miserable after marriage because she did not understand the financial problem. Fortunate is the girl who has enough knowledge of business forms to give her assurance and the wife who is familiar with her husband's business affairs. The former will know enough to keep any surplus money she may accrue and the latter will not only be a help to her husband while he is living, but will understand how to attend to what is left at his death, and to face the world in a competent manner.

* * * * *

The necessity of some means of support appeals forcibly to most women. Formerly, women accepted the anomalous position of dependent as a part of their inheritance, because they were women. To-day most women realize that it is well to be equipped for the battle of life, to have some means of support, even if not called upon to use it. Women are learning that there is far more comfort in being independent and earning one's bread and butter than in playing the role of the dependent relative or companion. On the other hand, all the college education in the land cannot make a success of a woman unless she understands that having earned money, it is to be judiciously invested. A salary of several thousand dollars a year or of $500 are equally insufficient if the recipient lives beyond her means or is so ignorant of business forms that she loses it in wild-cat schemes. In other words, insolvency faces anyone who is unacquainted with business forms and usages.

Nothing is dying a surer death than the thought that a woman is incapable of understanding business. With most women the sin of extravagance is committed through ignorance, and this ignorance is the result of the general attitude toward her. The married man who has the honesty and good faith to talk over expenditures and his probable income usually finds that his wife is as willing to make sacrifices as himself. Many a woman regrets lack of confidence on her husband's part, as regards these matters, and no man can blame his family for extravagance if he cannot be frank enough to consult with them concerning the bills to be met, such as rent, light, heat, clothing and incidentals.

In general, business is no respecter of persons. Certain principles are as fixed with the woman as with the man. Honesty is essential to success. So is the thought that time is valuable. It is always advantageous to keep personal accounts and a strict record of receipts and expenses. This is desirable, not alone because it guards against living beyond one's means, but because the bookkeeping encourages the habit of saving. This keeping of personal accounts need not be a complicated matter. Separate pages for debit and credit can form the basis on which the accounts are kept and ingenuity will supply some simple additions. Accounts should be footed up weekly, so that at the end of the month a complete statement confronts one. No matter how trivial the purchase the amount should be put down, for continual failure to record small expenditures will in the end make balancing accounts an impossibility.

On general principles, bills are to be avoided, and it is better to pay cash or to go without. There are several reasons for this. Many of the trials of merchants are induced by the failure of persons to pay bills. Another reason is that many people, men as well as women, will if they can get trusted, purchase with an idea of where the funds are to come from to settle the account. There are reasons enough without the added ones that bills accumulate so that the amount always looks twice as large when presented, and that unpaid bills are a discouragement to the breadwinner.

The payment of a bill calls for a receipt. This is given by the party paid and is in reality a written acknowledgment for money or other value received. It should be kept, for it may be valuable to both parties later in case of dispute or mistake, and it prevents the payment of a bill twice. A written receipt on a blank slip of paper will do, but it is better to use the blank receipt with stubs which can be obtained at any stationer's. Do not hesitate about asking for a receipt. People who understand business will expect to give one. If the matter is overlooked none but an ignorant person will resent being asked for one. A common form is:

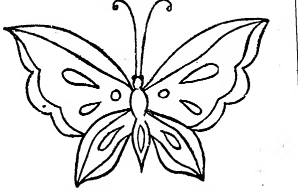
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 11, 1905.
Received from Mrs. Mary R. Thompson, twenty dollars ($20), in full payment of account, dated, Nov. 2, 1905.
$20.00. WILLIAMS & BOWEN.

And the corresponding stub, which is kept by the person receiving the money, reads:

To—Mrs. Mary R. Thompson.
Date—Nov. 11, 1905.
For—Acct. Nov. 2, 1905.
Amount—$20.

When a third party collects the bill he must be authorized to do so and his name must be added. The transaction should be entered into the account book under the heading "Bills Paid." The terms bookkeeping, receipts, balance, etc., may sound formidable to feminine ears, but in reality these are simple processes which can be mastered by anyone who knows how to add, subtract and multiply, and the record of expenditures may prevent difficulties at the time the entry is made and later.

In Shadow Embroidery



This butterfly can be used in a number of ways. For collars, waists or in French and eyelet embroidery also.

THOUGHT HIM A LUNATIC.

Man's Queer Jumble of Words Warranted the Inference.

Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale recently told this story at New Haven's chamber of commerce banquet: A hard drinker was told by his doctor that he could be cured if every time he felt that he must have a drink he would immediately take something to eat instead.

The man followed the advice and was cured, but the habit of asking for food had become so fixed with him that once he was nearly locked up as a lunatic. He was stopping at a hotel and, hearing a great commotion in the room next to his, he peeped over the transom to see what the matter was. He saw, and rushed madly down to the office and shouted to the clerk: "The man in 153 has shot himself! Ham and egg sandwich, please!"—Lippincott's.

SPLENDID APRIL TONIC.

Easily Prepared at Home and Harmless to Use.

This is known as "Blood-Cleaning Time," especially among the older folks, who always take something during this month to clean the blood of impurities and build it up.

The following is the recipe as given by a well-known authority, and anyone can prepare it at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces.

Get these simple ingredients from any good pharmacy and mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Everybody should take something to help the blood, which becomes impoverished and almost sour after the winter season, especially those who are subject to Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney and Bladder trouble.

It is said that one week's use of this mixture will clear the skin of sores, pimples or boils.

This is sound, healthy advice, which will be appreciated by many readers.

HAD NERVE, BUT NO MONEY.

Unlucky Man's Modest Request for Pecuniary Assistance.

Raymond Hitchcock, the comedian, while in New Orleans a few months ago, took the opportunity of going to the races. During the afternoon he cashed several tickets, the result of good guesses. He was feeling happy after the last race, and started for the automobile which was to convey him back to his hotel. As he was about to climb into the machine he felt a hand on his arm, and a man shouted in his ear:

"Hello, Hitchcock, how are you? Hear you put a crimp in the bookies to-day."

Hitchcock blushed and shook hands sheepishly, not recognizing the man, and not wishing to show it.

"Say, I want to speak to you confidentially," said the stranger.

"All right; what is it?" asked the comedian.

"Well, I am up against some hard luck to-day. They cleaned me and I want to get home. Now, don't let any one of these people see you, but slip me enough for car fare, will you?"

"Sure," said Hitchcock, placing his hand in his pocket. Then he paused and queried: "Where do you live?"

"Vancouver," was the answer.

Hitchcock took a flying leap for his machine, and unless the visitors at New Orleans are more gullible, the impecunious one is still looking for car fare.—Harper's Weekly.

ROMANTIC DEVONSHIRE.

The Land Made Famous by Philpotts' Novels.

Philpotts has made us familiar with romantic Devonshire, in his fascinating novels, "The River," "Children of the Mist," etc. The characters are very human; the people there drink coffee with the same results as elsewhere. A writer at Rock House, Orchard Hill, Bideford, North Devon, states:

"For 30 years I drank coffee for breakfast and dinner but some 5 years ago I found that it was producing indigestion and heart-burn, and was making me restless at night. These symptoms were followed by brain fag and a sluggish mental condition.

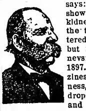
"When I realized this, I made up my mind to quit drinking coffee and having read of Postum, I concluded to try it. I had it carefully made, according to directions, and found to my agreeable surprise at the end of a week, that I no longer suffered from either indigestion, heart-burn, or brain fag, and that I could drink it at night and secure restful and refreshing sleep.

"Since that time we have entirely discontinued the use of the old kind of coffee, growing fonder and fonder of Postum as time goes on. My digestive organs certainly do their work much better now than before, a result due to Postum Food Coffee, I am satisfied.

"As a table beverage we find (for all the members of my family use it) that when properly made it is most refreshing and agreeable, of delicious flavor and aroma. Vigilance is, however, necessary to secure this, for unless the servants are watched they are likely to neglect the thorough boiling which it must have in order to extract the goodness from the cereal." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.



B. Frank Doremus, veteran, of Roosevelt avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been showing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was mustered out of the army, but in all my life I never suffered as in 1897. Headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 34 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural, and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Seek Perfection in Clocks.

The railway commissioners of New South Wales are adopting a system of electrically synchronized clocks.

Garfield Tea, which is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Act, is the best remedy for constipation, sick-headache, and indigestion. It purifies the blood and cleanses the system.

Patent Office Is Behind.

The United States patent office is months behind in its work.

FITS, St. Vitus Dance and all Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for Free $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy.—Goldsmith.

It Cures While You Walk.
Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Nobody does anything well which he cannot help doing; work is only done well when it is done with a will.

Hides, Furs, Pelts.
Cow hides are worth 10c to 11c per lb., horse hides $2 to $4 each, sheep pelts 50c to $1.50, as to size. Furs are very high, especially Mink and Muskrat. To get all they are worth ship to the old reliable N. W. HIDE & FUR CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Energy will do anything that can be done in this world; and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities will make a man without it.—Goethe.

How's This?
We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN,
Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Genius is superior aptitude to patience.—Buffon.

Carpets can be colored on the floor with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES. Ask your druggist. 10c per package.

One of the things you can't buy on credit is experience.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle

It is curious that actors "who lose their heads" don't advertise for them.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

The good or evil we confer on others often recoils on ourselves.—Fielding.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.
Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

Every man is valued in this world as he shows by his conduct that he wishes to be valued.—Bruyere.

U. S. Sheep Dip, and Cattle
Wash & Disinfectant. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. Northwestern Hide & Fur Co., Mpls, Minn.

Other people's happiness gives a pessimist a headache.

RHEUMATISM
AND NEURALGIA
TRADE MARK
ST.
JACOBS OIL
The Proved Remedy
For Over 30 Years.
Price 25c and 50c

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature
of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use
For Over
Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.
900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr. SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food an
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

34 YEARS SELLING DIRECT
Our vehicles and harness have been sold direct from our factory to user for a third of a century. We ship for examination and approval and guarantee safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied as to style, quality and price.
We Are The Largest Manufacturers In The World
selling to the consumer exclusively. We make 200 styles of Vehicles, 65 styles of Harness. Send for large, free catalogue.
No. 838. Light Canopy Top Trap. Price complete, $78.00.
Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., Elkhart, Indiana.
No. 656. Combination Top Buggy and Driving Wagon with [illegible] Style Buggy Seat and Bike Gear. Also extra seat for open wagon. Price complete, $81.50.

The General Condemnation of So-Called Patent or Secret Medicines of an injurious character, which indulge in extravagant and unfounded pretensions to cure all manner of ills, and the National Legislation Enacted to Restrict Their Sale have established more clearly than could have been accomplished in any other way
The Value and Importance of Ethical Remedies.
Remedies which physicians sanction for family use, as they act most beneficially and are gentle yet prompt in effect, and called ethical, because they are of Known Excellence and Quality and of Known Component Parts.
To gain the full confidence of the Well-Informed of the world and the approval of the most eminent physicians, it is essential that the component parts be known to and approved by them, and, therefore, the California Fig Syrup Company has published for many years past in its advertisements and upon every package a full statement thereof. The perfect purity and uniformity of product which they demand in a laxative remedy of an ethical character are assured by the California Fig Syrup Company's original method of manufacture, known to the Company only.
There are other ethical remedies approved by physicians, but the product of the California Fig Syrup Company possesses the advantage over all other family laxatives that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts, without disturbing the natural functions or any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.
This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of Syrup of Figs, and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtlessly it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs; and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for Syrup of Figs, or by the full name, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company, and the same heretofore known by the name, Syrup of Figs, which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.
Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
Louisville, Ky.
San Francisco, Cal.
U. S. A.
London, England.
New York, N. Y.

A SWINE STORY.

One Farmer's Hogs That Made a Great Profit.

The Irish cottager who says that the pig "pays the rint" tells a no more patent truth than is contained in the statements made by Theo. Louis, John Cownie, and other great hog growers, that hog growing is one of the most surely profitable of all branches of farming. Many people seem to think, however, that hogs pay well only in the "corn belt." This I know to be a mistake, writes a correspondent of Farming. My farm is not in the corn belt: on the contrary it is in one of the old states, and we never make any great surplus of corn. Nevertheless, I can make hogs pay well even when prices are down to four or five cents. When up to six cents, profits are a 100 per cent. or more.

The Shelter That Housed 36 Hogs.

Corn is great feed for hogs; for fattening there is nothing better, but it is not wise to depend on corn, except where it makes big yields every year. I cannot do this and here is my method of making cheap pork, and getting good profits: I have three fields well fenced, adjoining each other. They have from eight to ten acres in each, and in each there is a good supply of running water. My hogs, in the latitude of Washington city, spend ten months of the year in these fields. At this writing there is in No. 1 a crop of late cowpeas on half and clover and orchard grass on the rest; in No. 2 there were oats and Canada field peas which have been eaten off; in No. 3 there are only early cowpeas. The hogs ran in No. 1 in spring and early summer, then in No. 2 till they ate the oats and peas, and now they are in No. 3 and will remain till the peas are gone. Then they will spend a large part of the winter in No. 1 on the late cowpeas. There is no kind of forage better adapted to making pork than these.

Last fall I bought among a lot of hogs some half-bred Jersey and "razor-back" sows that had together 36 pigs. I fed the pigs two tons of tankage at a cost of $76, and $20 worth of corn, and let them run in good weather in a potato field that had been dug. They rooted up and ate all the potatoes that had been left. As soon as the clover and grass got up enough in the spring in pasture No. 1, I turned in the pigs. They stayed there till they were six months old and weighed 200 pounds each and the market price was $6.10. This made them average a little more than $12 a head. The money cost of these pigs when sold had been only $4.75 each, showing a gain of $7.90 a head.

FINE HOLSTEIN RECORD.

What a Nebraska Cow Has Done in Twelve-Month Test.

A three-year-old cow owned by the Nebraska Agricultural college was given a 12 months' official test with the result below. Every pound of milk was weighed and tested for butter fat. The cow was milked three times a day for the first six months of lactation and all the feed given her was weighed. The results obtained were especially interesting.

In 365 days this cow produced 18,573 pounds of milk of an average test of 3.34 per cent. butter fat. This amounted to 620 pounds of butter fat for the year, which estimated as butter amounts to 734 pounds. At 25 cents per pound this butter would be worth $181, making a total value of products $228. The value of the milk solids, not fats, at 3 cents per pound would be $47.

The whole cost of the feed for this cow was $71. If the 9,000 quarts of milk had been sold for 4 cents per quart, the income would have been $360, or a net profit over the cost of feed of nearly $290, but as the milk was actually sold for 6 cents per quart, the net profit over the cost of feed was nearly $470. For net profit, this cow stands close to the record, in fact, above any cows that we have ever heard of. Can there be any better argument for quality in a dairy cow?

What Might Be.

H. A. Hopper of the Illinois College of Agriculture has been testing the cows of that state for the last two years. He makes the statement that if all the cows in the state were as good as the best herd he has tested, they would add to the revenue of the farmers of Illinois over $60,000,000 annually. All this loss traces back to the mistaken judgment of the Illinois farmer concerning cows. If he would commence to make a study of cows, their breeds and types, he could correct that judgment.

LEARNING ABOUT HORSES.

Tendency on the Farm Is More Intelligent Breeding.

Many of the young men brought up on the farms are learning more about horses to-day than they ever knew before. They are doing this in the agricultural colleges, where they may take a long course of instruction or a short one. As a result it is certain that we will have better horse breeding in the near future than we have had at the present time. Hitherto the knowledge of the horse in all his bearings has not been extensive among the rank and file of the owners of such animals. Otherwise we would not have seen the aimless breeding that has taken place and which has kept down the per capita value of our horses. This study of the horse is being stimulated by the laws that are being passed by the various states requiring stallions to be registered. The state of Wisconsin is doing more to spread the knowledge of good horse breeding than any other, but there are indications that some of the other states are not far behind, says Farmers' Review. The laws passed have compelled the authorities to make an investigation into the conditions existing in the breeding of horses, and the data accumulated are proving very valuable in instructing those that are most interested in this study. From every agricultural college is going out an influence for better horses on the farms.

CARE OF A CALVING COW.

What Can Be Done to Carry the Cow Safely Over the Period.

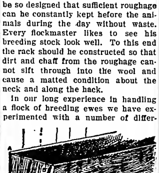
If a cow is a very heavy milker, and in high condition, it would be well to give her light feed for about a week before freshening, to thin the blood a little, as a preventive of milk fever. Keep close watch of her and put her in a box stall at night, so that when she does calve she may have her freedom. After calving give her a warm mash of bran, with a handful of salt scattered on top. Let the calf suck, and then strip her out and put her back in her stall, says a writer in Rural New Yorker. See that she cleans. Do not give her any cold water until after she has cleaned. Work her slowly on to her feed. I do not like to milk a heifer before calving. Let the calf suck once and if the heifer takes kindly to her milker and gives down her milk freely, she is just as well off back in her stall, but if she holds up her milk and wants her calf, let her have it; milk her at the same time of the calf sucking, until she takes kindly to her milker.

INDOOR ROUGHAGE RACK.

Handy Device Which Will Save Feed and Be Convenient for Sheep.

In designing a rack for indoor feeding of sheep, and especially a breeding flock, there are several things to be taken into consideration. In the first place it is desirable that the rack be constructed to take up the least amount of space possible. It should be so designed that sufficient roughage can be constantly kept before the animals during the day without waste. Every flockmaster likes to see his breeding stock look well. To this end the rack should be constructed so that dirt and chaff from the roughage cannot sift through into the wool and cause a matted condition about the neck and along the back.

In our long experience in handling a flock of breeding ewes we have experimented with a number of different designs of sheep racks, hoping to get a good combination of all the desirable qualities of a good sheep rack. About four years ago, writes the correspondent of Prairie Farmer, I constructed one the plan of the design herewith illustrated and find it answers the purpose better than anything yet found.



Indoor Roughage Rack for Sheep.

The rack can be constructed against the wall or away, so that the sheep may feed from both sides. As we have our racks constructed around the outer walls of our sheep barn the one here illustrated is designed for that purpose.

In constructing the rack we first place 2x4s at an angle of about 20 degrees to the base of the siding, leaving a space at the top for feeding of about 20 inches. The rack was then boarded at the ends and faced, as shown in cut. The distance from the floor to E is 18 inches. From E to top of slats is eight inches. At E a trough was constructed for the feeding of grain. Small cleats were toe-nailed in two inches apart. With this small place to get the roughage through the sheep waste very little hay. Grain can be conveniently fed in the trough without difficulty.

Unwise Breeding.

The breeder who pays more attention to shape and color than he does to practical points has something still to learn about the science of poultry raising. It is meat and eggs, not the feathers, that the buying public wants.

ANOTHER WESTERN CANADA RECORD.

The Way in Which a Swan River Farmer Became Wealthy.

Swan River, Manitoba, Nov. 21, 1906.

Two weeks ago we gave an account of the prosperity of a farmer in Western Canada, and this week we reproduce another.

"I have been asked regarding this year's work on my farm, and I herewith willingly submit the following statement:

"Three years ago I purchased an improved farm of 186 acres on Section 9, Township 36, Range 27 west of the First Meridian—two miles from the town of Swan River.

I plowed and cropped 122½ acres of land during this year (1906), 80 acres in wheat, 30 acres in oats, and 12½ acres in barley.

"The cost of putting in and taking off this crop this season is as follows:

Cash paid for blue stone	$ 1.50
Cash paid for binder twine	39.00
Cash paid for hired help	125.00
Cash paid for threshing	175.00
Total	$ 340.00

"Receipts for the year as follows—

80 acres of wheat (yielded 30 bushels per acre)—Total	2,400 bu.
30 acres of oats (yielded 46 bushels per acre)—Total	1,200 "
1 stack of oats in sheaf	200 "
12½ acres barley (48 bu. per acre)	600 "
Crop potatoes	300 "
Hay, tons	15

Sold.

1,168 bu. wheat at 62c	$ 724.16
1,232 bu. wheat in granary at 62c	763.84
300 bu. barley at 35c	105.00
300 bu. barley in granary at 35c	105.00
1,200 bu. oats in granary at 25c	300.00
100 bu. potatoes at 30c	30.00
200 bu. potatoes in root house at 30c	60.00
1 stack of oats in sheaf for feed	50.00
15 tons of hay at $3.00	45.00
Garden roots and vegetables	30.00
Total	$2,213.00
Cost of above, besides my own labor	340.50
Balance	$1,872.50

I have in all, 125 acres ready for crop next year, including 10 acres cleared and broken this season.

Total Assets.

186 acres land, with house, stable and outbuildings, etc.	$5,000.00
Implements	500.00
4 head of horses, and harness	800.00
15 head of cattle	375.00
20 pigs	200.00
Receipts of this season's crop	1,872.00
Total	$8,747.50
Liabilities are	1,000.00
Total assets	$7,747.50

I have made the above amount by farming in Manitoba. I think it has paid. This is my standing to-day. I am a single man, a Canadian, and 26 years of age.

For particulars how to secure low railway rates to the free homesteads of Western Canada apply to any Canadian Government agent.

Prize for the Unmarried.

The latest novelty in bazar attractions is that introduced by the Springside Wesleyan chapel, Rawtenstall, England. A wedding cake was cut up, and in one section was concealed a marriage certificate. It was announced that the bachelor or spinster securing the "chunk" containing the document had the opportunity offered to be married free of cost within the next 12 months by the Rev. J. Bennetts.

For constipation, biliousness, liver disturbances, and diseases resulting from impure blood, take Nature's remedy, Garfield Tea. It is made wholly of health-giving herbs.

Queer Names of Jurymen.

Among those drawn for jury service for the April term of court in Franklin county are: Mr. Button, Mr. Hasty, Mr. Curl, Mr. Lord, Mr. Dyer, Mr. Cook and Mr. Pear.—Kansas City Star.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Japan Exports Much Copper.

Japan exported last year over $11,000,000 worth of refined copper.

Town Belle Criticised.

A town belle got off the train at a small town between Atchison and Topeka last night, says Ed Howe. She shook hands with her left hand, wore a larger hat than the girls who met her, wore pretty loud clothes, chewed gum and when she hit the cinder platform of her home town a lot of people grinned at her and said: "Hello, there!" This town belle was not bad looking, but she couldn't keep her mouth closed even when she was not talking.—Kansas City Journal.

BABY WASTED TO SKELETON.

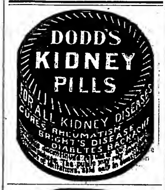
In Torments with Terrible Sores on Face and Body—Tore at Flesh —Cured by Cuticura.

"My little son, when about a year and a half old began to have sores come out on his face. They began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton and was hardly able to walk. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since, and only for the Cuticura Remedies my precious child would have died from these terrible sores. I used only one cake of Soap and about three boxes of Ointment. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 22, 1905."

Some people climb to the top for the purpose of looking down on their neighbors.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

Lots of folks do a thing twice in order to get it done once.



You can identify Alabastine by the trade mark, but you can't fully appreciate all the reasons why you should identify it unless you

Write today for booklet and full information about how you can make your home more beautiful at little expense by using it.

Alabastine is a sanitary wall covering that secures simply wonderful results in a wonderfully simple way.

The Alabastine Co., 910 Grandville Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich., or 100 Water Street, New York City.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

BACKACHE AND DESPONDENCY

MISS LENA NAGEL

Are both symptoms of organic derangement, and nature's warning to women of a trouble which will sooner or later declare itself.

How often do we hear women say, "It seems as though my back would break." Yet they continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, dragging sensations, nervousness and no ambition.

They do not realize that the back is the main-spring of woman's organism and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the feminine organs or kidneys, and that aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

made from native roots and herbs has been for many years the most successful remedy in such cases. No other medicine has such a record of cures of feminine ills.

Miss Lena Nagel, of 117 Morgan St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:— "I was completely worn out and on the verge of nervous prostration. My back ached all the time. I had dreadful periods of pain, was subject to fits of crying and extreme nervousness, and was always weak and tired. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints, such as Backache, Falling and Displacements, and all Organic Diseases. Dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage. It strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache and Indigestion and invigorates the whole feminine system.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free.

GET RICH BY IRRIGATION You can file on 40, 80, 120 or acres of public irrigated land in Idaho. Richest land and most successful irrigated tract in the world. 240,000 acres settled in years. 180,000 open. Easy payments. First opening April 22. Others to follow. Cheap power from Shoshone Falls. Industries wanted. Act at once or you will be too late. Write 1224 First National Bank Bldg, Chicago.

NO MORE MUSTARD PLASTERS TO BLISTER.
THE SCIENTIFIC AND MODERN EXTERNAL COUNTER-IRRITANT.
CAPISICUM VASELINE
EXTRACT OF THE CAYENNE PEPPER PLANT

A QUICK, SURE, SAFE AND ALWAYS READY CURE FOR PAIN.—PRICE 15c.—IN COLLAPSIBLE TUBES—AT ALL DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS, OR BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF 15c. IN POSTAGE STAMPS. DON'T WAIT TILL THE PAIN COMES—KEEP A TUBE HANDY.

A substitute for and superior to mustard or any other plaster, and will not blister the most delicate skin. The pain-allaying and curative qualities of the article are wonderful. It will stop the toothache at once, and relieve Headache and Sciatica. We recommend it as the best and safest external counter-irritant known, also as an external remedy for pains in the chest and stomach and all Rheumatic, Neuralgic and Gouty complaints. A trial will prove what we claim for it, and it will be found to be invaluable in the household and for children. Once used no family will be without it. Many people say "it is the best of all your preparations." Accept no preparation of vaseline unless the same carries our label, as otherwise it is not genuine. SEND YOUR ADDRESS AND WE WILL MAIL OUR VASELINE PAMPHLET WHICH WILL INTEREST YOU.

CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO.
17 STATE STREET, NEW YORK CITY

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD
W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

Should Hens be helped to make a large egg yield? Why not, as well as helping cows to give extra milk?

SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER

is a scientific medicine invented to enable hens get the full benefit from all kinds of food. It's the pioneer of tonics to make hens lay. In use over forty years. One pack, 25c.; five, $1; two-lb. can, $1.20; six, $5.00. Express paid. At all dealers. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

DO YOU BURN KEROSENE?

If so get one-third more light with a "BING GLASS CONE LAMP BURNER." The glass top does it. They are great—fit common lamps. Send your dealers name to-day and 25c for a BING—size No. 1 or 2 post paid. BING BURNER CO. Dept. 44, Minneapolis, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D.C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

Fertile Farming LANDS
Cheap
Easy Terms
In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.

Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.

Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.
Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

FARMS THAT GROW "NO. 1 HARD" WHEAT

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

(Sixty-three Pounds to the Bushel). Are situated in the Canadian West where Homesteads of 160 acres can be obtained free by every settler willing and able to comply with the Homestead Regulations. During the present year a large portion of

New Wheat Growing Territory

HAS BEEN MADE ACCESSIBLE TO MARKETS BY THE RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION that has been pushed forward so vigorously by the three great railway companies.

For literature and particulars address SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or the following authorized Canadian Government Agent: CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Maclan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Mention this paper.

THE FASHIONABLE FEATURE of the season's styles is the JAPANESE EFFECT
in Waists, Blouses, Jackets, etc., etc.
It's the newest thing, and a complete assortment is found only in the up-to-date
Butterick Patterns
10 Cents and 15 Cents Each

A splendidly illustrated sheet of these graceful Japanese Styles will be mailed on receipt of two cents (2c) by

THE BUTTERICK PUBLISHING COMPANY, LIMITED
BUTTERICK BUILDING · NEW YORK

THE DELINEATOR
is the greatest authority on up-to-date fashions for Ladies and Juveniles.
15 Cents per Copy $1.00 per Year

READERS of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicest.

A. N. K.—G (1907—16) 2174.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

[illegible] per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

[illegible] heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1319 Nicollet Ave. Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.

Office over First State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in Kans Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.

DENTIST

Offices in Lallissoniere Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.

At St. Hilaire every Wednesday

Thomas Germo Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys at-Law

Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. [illegible] Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

THE GARDEN SPOT OF WESTERN CANADA
LAST MOUNTAIN VALLEY
THE HEART OF THE GREAT SASKATCHEWAN WHEAT PLAINS
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.
NORTHERN BANK BLDG. WINNIPEG CANADA

TEXAS LANDS We own 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE: and VAN HORNE VALLEY. Texas (one of the most fertile valleys in the state. The Southern Pacific Railroad passes through the Van Horne Valley lands and the proposed line of the Santa Fe will run directly through our Panhandle tract. These lands are exceptionally well located for retail purposes. They were carefully selected, and, having purchased them some time ago, we can quote you prices and terms that are right. LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control of 10,000 acres of this land, which you can do by making a small payment down, and realize a profit of $20,000. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 601-3 Pioneer Press Bldg. St. Paul, Minn.

What is it that tastes as pleasant as maple sugar and relieves coughs and colds? Mothers who have used it will quickly answer: "Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup." The pleasant cold remedy that expels the cold through its laxative action on the bowels. Conforms strictly to the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Contains no opiates. Sold by all druggists.

FIREMEN ARE AT WORK

Begin Preparations In Earnest For the Coming Fire Tournament.

The local fire department held a special meeting at the council rooms Sunday afternoon, and talked over some pending tournament matters.

The question of the erection of a grand stand at the grounds was discussed, and Dan J. Doran was given the contract to erect it. The stand will be 100 feet long and 30 feet deep and will seat a large number of people. It will be so arranged that the occupants can see the races and ball games without moving from their seats, and will be built to stand the test.

But two short months remain before the tournament time, and the firemen will be as busy as bees from this time henceforth. It is planned to hold the firemen's races and ball games on the Buse property in the west part of town, and a fine track will be made for the racing. The committee in charge of the grounds plan on commencing next week to fence in the ground and begin the work of breaking the track. A woven wire fence will be built around the grounds, and everything will be arranged in first class shape. Work on the grandstand will also be commenced shortly.

There is a whole lot of work ahead of the various committees from now on, which must be attended to as fast as possible and the boys should be given all the aid possible by the citizens.

Red Lake Falls will entertain the largest crowd in her history during this June week, and nothing will be left undone to give them the time of their lives while they are here.

Rest is the great restorer. We tire our muscles by exercise and then rest to restore them; yet a great many of us do not stop to think how little rest we give to our stomachs. As a usual thing no part of our bodies is so generally overworked as our digestive organs. A tired and overworked stomach will give signs of distress to which we pay no heed until at last Dyspepsia takes hold. Indigestion is just a warning, and if we heed the warning we can easily avoid further consequences. KODol is a most thorough stomach relief. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach the needed rest and greatly assists in restoring it to its normal activity and usefullness. KODOL is sold on a guaranteed relief plan. It is sold here by all druggists.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the Firat State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF ANDREW R. PETERSON.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Andrew R. Peterson, Decedent:

The State of Minnesota to Mathilda Krane, August R. Peterson and Claus Peterson, all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled: Therefore, You, and Each of You, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 18th day of May, 1907, at 9 o'clock a. m., why said petition should not be granted.

Witness, The judge of said Court, and the seal of said Court, this 22nd day of April, 1907.

(Seal) —N. W. TARRANT.
J. K. [illegible] Probate Judge.

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.

I want to make your Spring Suit. I want to demonstrate to you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than your local tailor would make you for $30.00 $35.00 and $40.00.

I've got my Mail-order Department down so fine that no matter where you live I can fit you, and give as good satisfaction as if I took your order myself.

Write me today and tell me about the kind of a spring suit you have on your mind, and by return mail I'll send you samples of the swellest fabrics you ever saw.

Remember, I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money. You take absolutely no chances in the deal. I also pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,

HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

SPECIALIST

From the

Engelman Medico - Surgical Institute, Detroit. Mich.

Will make their first visit to

Red Lake Falls

And will be at the

Grand View Hotel

Monday and Tuesday May 6 and 7.

Tell Your Sick Friends

Two Days Only

Office Hours:
Monday 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. Tuesday, 9 to 10 a. m.

FREE

This Institute in order to introduce their new Medical Discoveries and X Radium System, sends at its own expense these eminent specialists to give to those who call on the above date, consultation, examination, advice and all medicine required to complete a cure, absolutely free.

These specialists will diagnose your case and give you the benefit of their medical knowledge. There is no experimenting or guess work. You will be told whether you can be cured or not. If your case is curable, they treat you; if incurable they will give such advice as may prolong your life.

Their treatment gives quick relief and positively cures. Being prepared to suit each individual case, the human system is thoroughly cleansed of the disease in a natural and direct manner and improvement is noticed at once; even the worst cases are treated without any inconvenience to the patient or the pursuing of his daily vocation. If you are improving under your family physician do not come and take up their valuable time. They wish to give each one plenty of time, but cannot listen to long stories not pertaining to your case.

They have discarded the old remedies used for ages by the medical world, and which it would be folly to depend upon any longer, for they do not cure, as thousands die depending on them for relief.

The fact that these Specialists have discovered entirely new treatments and natural cures, gives them control of the Nervous System, Heart, Stomach, Lungs, Kidneys, Catarrh, Consumption, Epilepsy, Deafness, Male and Female Weaknesses, Cancers, Tumors, Piles and other Chronic Diseases.

They treat deafness by an entirely new method, and hearing in many cases is restored at once. Catarrh in all its varied forms cured so that it will never return. If you have weak lungs or consumption do not fail to be examined.

All cases treated can and will be cured, no difference who you have seen or treated with heretofore. Thousands who have given up all hope of being cured, now have an opportunity to consult specialists of reputation.

Don't fail to call, as a visit costs you nothing and may save your life

If you suspect kidney trouble, bring a two-ounce bottle of your urine for chemical and microscopical analysis.

REMEMBER:—The free offer is during this visit only and will not be given again. Persons commencing any treatment after this trip will be required to pay, but not one cent will be asked of those commencing treatment during this visit for any medicine necessary to effect a cure; also a positive guarantee to cure will be given to patients accepted under their system of treatment. Those having long standing and complicated diseases, who have failed to get cured and become discouraged, are especially invited to call, as thousands who have given up all hopes can testify to permanent cures obtained.

NOTICE:—Married Ladies without their Husbands and Minors without their Fathers, will positively not be admitted to consultation.

Don't Forget the Date.

KILL THE COUGH AND CURE THE LUNGS

WITH Dr. King's New Discovery

FOR CONSUMPTION COUGHS and COLDS Price 50c & $1.00 Free Trial.

Surest and Quickest Cure for all THROAT and LUNG TROUBLES, or MONEY BACK.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uitbuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March. A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages, on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditiona thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th, A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Mortgagee.
Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota. m28-m9

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uitbuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof,

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Mortgagee.
Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn. mar21-m 2

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather. the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..

BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains

Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 2, 1907 No 31

INDIANS CELEBRATION

39th Anniversary of Settlement of Reservation Will Be Observed.

There will be "heap big time" at White Earth Agency village on the 11th of June next, celebrating with appropriate ceremony the 39th anniversary of the settlement of this fertile and beautiful region by the Chippewas. This anniversary celebration has been an event in the history of the reservation each year, but this year all previous attempts in this direction will be put into the shade. The passage of the law under which restrictions upon title have been removed has placed many of the reservation people in affluence. An appropriation of $1000 was made by congress to enable the reservation people to conduct their celebration with becoming dignity in recognition of the presence of Vice President Fairbanks and other distinguished visitors.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson has been requested to be present at the celebration and has been asked to make a speech. He has accepted and is looking forward to the event with pleasant anticipation. This morning the congressman received a letter from Vice President Fairbanks who said that if no other engagements interfered he would be present.

The committe in charge of the arrangements consists of the venerable head chief, Me-sha-ke-ge-shig, president, who is the sole surviving member of the body of hereditary chiefs who signed the treaty under which settlement on White Earth reservation was made: B. L. Fairbanks, vice president; C. H. Beaulieu, secretary and B. L. Fairbanks, treasurer.

Let Us Clean Up.

Every spring brings with it that ne'er forgotten custom of the good housewife—house - cleaning time, and as well the spring time always brings to mind the fact that the city should come in for its cleaning up time—the removal of all the rubbish that is almost sure to accumulate in the streets and alleys during the long winter months. With the coming of the warm weather it is decidedly necessary for the health of every community that considerable cleaning up of both public and private property be done.

Red Lake Falls should take special pride this year in cleaning up every portion of the city and keeping it clean and attractive during the entire year, for many visitors will be within our gates, and the appearance of our city should co-incide with the beauty of the glens and glades around us. Here where the Clearwater joins with the waters of the Red in the onward rush to the Hudson bay, nature has endowed us with one of the beauty spots of the earth, and we should leave no blemish to mar its beauty.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

SEEDING UNDER WAY

Ground In Excellent Condition and Fine Weather Prevails—Outlook Bright.

The work of seeding was brought to a sudden halt last Friday by the snow storm which was general throughout the northwest. From three to four inches of snow fell in this section, while to the south of us in the neighborhood of the Twin Cities the biggest snowstorm on record for 16 years for this time of the year is reported by the weather bureau at Minneapolis, the fall of snow measuring 12.6 inches at that point.

However, on Monday nearly all traces of the recent snow storm had disappeared, and the farmers lost no time in getting into the fields. The ground is in fine condition and the weather could not be better for seeding operations. The farmers are rushing the work and if the present conditions continue nearly all of the small grain crops will be in by the next ten days. The cold weather has retarded seeding somewhat, although some grain was put in this spring almost as early as a year ago. The first seeding done in this vicinity was on the 20th of April.

While we have had a late spring, with the ground in its present condition prospects for a big crop in this vicinity were never better at this time of the year.

GET OUT AND ROOT

Baseball Organization Perfected Last Saturday Evening for the Coming Season.

A number of baseball enthusiasts met at the city hall last Saturday evening, and perfected the organization of a ball team; J. J. Padden being elected manager and E. G. Buse captain for the season. Ways and means were discussed as to the methods of raising funds for equipment, etc., which was finally left over to be decided later.

On Monday the boys got together and ordered new suits for the entire team. The suits will be black with maroon trimmings and were selected with a view of matching the band and running team suits which are also black, the band suits especially being the object of much favorable comment.

The line-up of the team has not been perfected as yet, and it will take some practice work before this will be definitely decided on, however, every one who is at all interested in baseball is invited to turn out to the practice stunts, and if you can't play the game you can at least brush up your "rooting" proclivities and when the season opens in earnest be ready to help win the game.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

PETITION NUMBER TWO

Started In Circulation On Wednesday of This Week by Thief River Falls.

On Wednesday of this week the people of Thief River Falls started the circulation of the second petition for the removal of the county seat from Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls.

After two years of fruitless fighting, which has put the taxpayers of the county to great expense, Thief River realized that the original petition would never pass inspection, and so devised a clever method for its disposal—by having it stolen—thereby to make way for a new petition and an additional series of expense accounts to saddle upon the taxpayers of the county.

The methods of securing the first petition were so questionable that even Thief River, with their hardened graft fattened county seat committee healers, did not dare to let the petition be brought to a final hearing for fear of the exposure of those square dealing (?) methods with which they have been endeavoring to hoodwink the people of the county for the past two years.

In their zeal to secure signatures to the first petition the Thief Riverites forgot the fact that Red Lake county did not cover all of northern Minnesota and often wandered across its boundary lines, and, with the aid of a liberal application of "Red Eye" and a few sheckels, secured the signatures of any wayfarer who by chance crossed their path. Bearing in mind the advise of the rustic Hoisier, of "git a plenty, while yer gettiug," Thief River never stopped to enquire whether a man was from Texas or Arizona as long as he could be induced to sign his name. Had the old petition been allowed to come up for hearing this is one of Thief River's square deal (?) methods that would have been brought to light, but the discovery of these methods was undoubtedly one of the principal reasons why Thief River caused the petition to disappear.

The fight put up by the up-river burg during the past two years has not been of a nature that would readily induce the taxpayers to enter upon another campaign of the same nature, as the people of the county have learned that the contest, if continued, will not only undoubtedly last for years, but will continue to roll up the burden of expense on the taxpayer.

Withey Promoted.

Steve Withey, one of the most popular conductors on the Great Northern system, has received a promotion which he deserves and which will be highly pleasing to his friends. He will hereafter have entire charge of the work trains at the Bagley gravel pit and began his new duties on Monday last. For several years he has been the passenger conductor on the Greenbush line and his run on that line was taken last week by Conductor Remshart, who heretofore has had the run between Crookston and St. Vincent, and later by "Dad" Clark who had charge of the work train here last summer.

Need No Special Stamp.

Postoffice department officials are looking forward with interest to the putting into effect of the law permitting the transmission of letters and packages for special delivery where the necessary 10 cents postage is attached, in addition to the ordinary postage. The law will become effective July 1st, next, and is intended to do away with the usual special delivery stamp. It is believed at the department that a considerable increase in business will result from the new system of special delivery and that the public will appreciate the saving of trouble in not being required to purchase the familiar blue stamp so long in use.

RALPH IS REAPPOINTED

State Drainage Board Re-Appoints Mr. Ralph As State Engineer.

At a meeting of the state drainage board which consists of the governor, the auditor and the state treasurer, held in St. Paul on Saturday George A. Ralph, of Crookston was reappointed as state engineer for a term of two more years. Mr. Ralph will hereafter be provided with an office in the state capitol and will spend his time there hereafter when not out over the state on drainage matters. The question of an increase in salary for Mr. Ralph was discussed at the meeting and while there was no definite action taken at that time it was the unanimous opinion of the board that Mr. Ralph should receive a larger compensation and it is understood that he will receive an increase of $1,200 per year which will make his salary $3,000 per year. In return for this increase in salary he will be expected to devote his entire time to the work of drainage for the state.

Under the new drainage law the commission will have available $100-000 for state drainage, and it is expected to result this year alone in the placing of drainage contracts that will aggregate $2,000,000. Of the first named amount, $50,000 is for county drainage. For every dollar in aid given by the state the counties must contribute an equal amount. This, with assessments to be levied against benefitted property, Mr. Ralph thinks, will make available about $300,000 a year for drainage work. In several counties drainage contracts involving over $100,000 for each county have already been placed.

State ditches under the new law, are to be paid for out of assessments on abutting and improved swamp lands. Heretofore private corporations holding large wet tracts on speculations, have gained much by state ditches indirectly draining their lands as well as state acreage. The present law assesses costs to private property for immediate payment where such property is bettered, and where state lands are drained, the assessments are added to the price at which the lands are to be eventually sold. Thus the state drainage appropriation to a certain extent, is but a revolving fund, to be used temporarily for immediate expenses of new ditches.

The swamp lands when drained, are the richest and most fertile agricultural lands to be found. State authorities believe this will increase in value from $5 to at least $50 per acre when prepared for agricultural purposes. The swamp land soils have been analyzed under state direction, and declared to be the most ideal for general agriculture of any soils in the state.

Of the 1,000,000 acres of state swamp lands which can be benefitted by drainage, Red Lake county contains 202,240 acres. Itasca has the most, containing 1,590,600 acres, Polk county has 174,000, Beltrami has 1,451,520, St. Louis has 1,192,160, Marshall has 158,240, Norman has 100,000, Roseau has 533,680, Kittson has 184,000, Clay has 230,000. Almost every county in the state has some.

Emardville Loses Fight.

Plummer Pioneer: Yesterday the supreme court handed down a decision in the case of E. Pederson vs. the town of Emardville sustaining the decision of the district court and verdict of the jury in the case.

It will be remembered that Pederson sued the township of Emardville to recover for the board of one Samson Helland, a pauper, and that a verdict was awarded to him in the municipal court at Thief River Falls and later in the district court at Red Lake Falls.

Subscribe for the Gazette.

WILL OPEN JULY FIRST

Official Notice of the Opening of Lands by the Government Is Received.

The Crookston land office received official notice Friday morning from Washington of the opening of the lands in this state which were mentioned in the dispatches some days ago.

Following are the number of acres which will be thrown open in each district: Duluth, 2,666.87 acres; Cass Lake, 6,687.29; and Crookston 219,943.25 acres. It will be seen from this that the land in the Crookston district to be thrown open is much more extensive than that in the other two districts. The land to be thrown open in the Crookston district is out almost directly east of Greenbush. It is in the southeast corner of Roseau county and the northwest corner of Beltrami. The conditions under which this land may be taken is the same as that under the other homestead laws. $1.25 per acre must be paid for the land and homestead entry and duties must be performed on it before title is granted by the government, It is also subject to the drainage tax. These lands will be opened July 1st at 9 o'clock a. m. in the Crookston land office. The officials state that they do not expect to get any schedules or lists of lands for at least three or four weeks.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD

Antoine Lizotte, An Old Resident of This County Passed Away Sunday.

Autone Lizotte, aged 56 years, passed away at his home on Polk street in Crookston Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, death being due to blood poisoning. Mr. Lizotte was wounded severely in the leg forty years ago and the wound has bothered ever since. Lately the wound broke out and it rapidly grew worse causing his death. He has been a resident of Crookston for the past few months only, going there from Louisville, where he owned a farm. He came to Louisville 27 years ago from Canada. He is survived by his wife and eight children, five of whom are married. The children are Joseph who is married and lives at Louisville, Mrs. Mary Bochens who lives at Louisville, Mrs. Amie Brosseau of Crookston, Mrs. Ida Brunelle of Blackduck and Mrs. Laura Mattiau of Grand Forks. Emery, William and Bertha were living at home with their parents. The funeral was held from St. Anne's church Monday forenoon at 9 o'clock, Father Sevigny officiating.

Anthony Paradis has secured a position as stenographer for the Northern Minnesota Milling Co., and on Monday assumed the duties of his new position.

ASSESSORS MEETING

Held at the Auditors Office Last Thursday Afternoon, April 25.

The Red Lake county assessors met at the county auditor's office Thursday of last week to talk over the year's assessments and receive their books and instructions. At the meeting Auditor O'Brien acted as chairman, and S. S. Haislet as secretary.

Real estate will not be assessed this year, except where lands have been proved up and patents issued since June 1st, 1906.

The following maximum valuations of personal property were agreed upon:

Horses, one year old, $10; two years old, $16; three years old, $30; stallions, fine bred mares and race horses, discretion of assessors.

Cattle, one year old, $4; two years old, $7; cows, $10; working oxen, $15; all other cattle, three years old or over, 40 per cent of valuation. Sheep of all ages, $1; hogs of all ages, $2.

Vehicles, 40 per cent of valuation. Sewing and knitting machines, watches, clocks, melodeons, organs, etc., 40 per cent. Household goods, wearing apparel and office furniture, 40 per cent. Farm tools, implements, machinery, threshing machines and engines, 50 per cent. Gold and silver plate, plated ware, diamonds and jewelry 40 per cent. Goods and merchandise, wholesale and retail 50 per cent. Dogs over six months old, $5 to $25 value, 40 per cent.

Concert Best of the Season.

The final indoor concert of the Red Lake Falls Concert band given last Friday evening proved to be all and more than was expected of it by the music loving people of the city. The program consisted of ten of the most popular numbers that the band has put on this season. The cornet solo rendered by Clement Brunelle was handled in a manner befitting a professional and showed that Mr. Brunelle has made remarkable progress in the comparatively short time that he has given his attention to that instrument. After the program Leland E. Healy spoke in a reminiscent mood of the history of the band from the time of its inception down to the present day. At the close of his remarks, Messrs. Armstrong and Berthou, the guests of the evening, were each presented with a handsome embossed fob locket, as a token of remembrance from the band boys. On one side of the locket were embossed the initials of the recipient and on the opposite side the engraving "From the Red Lake Falls Concert Band." "Jim and Paul" responded in a few brief remarks which were greeted with an outburst of applause from the many friends who regret to have them depart from our midst.

After the concert a social dance was given which was greatly enjoyed by all.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

A Business Luxury

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity; and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dudley & Creglow, Publishers

RED LAKE FALLS. • MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

Franklin Stevens Ross, of Oil City, Pa., was shot and killed a few hours before the time set for his wedding, by Miss Belle Stroup, his former sweetheart, who then committed suicide.

A treaty of peace was signed at Amapala by the representatives of Nicaragua and Salvador. Another revolution in Honduras in favor of Manuel Bonilla was started.

The fishing letter Searchlight of Harbor Beach, Mich., was believed to have sunk in Lake Huron with her crew of six men.

Gov. Cummins, of Iowa, in a letter to an editor said he thought it was President Roosevelt's duty to yield to the popular demand and run for the presidency again.

Fire in Allegheny, Pa., destroyed the plant of the Zoeller Packing company, the loss being about $500,000.

Ed Tace, safe blower, who was held in Peoria, Ill., on the charge of blowing the school board safe and destroying the N. C. Dougherty script, escaped from the St. Francis hospital.

Sherwood hall, a frame dormitory connected with Park college, Parkville, Mo., and a one-story frame building used as a dining hall were destroyed by fire. The dormitory was occupied by 30 girls.

A three-story brick building, occupied as a pattern shop and storehouse at the navy yard at Kittery, Me., was ruined by fire.

Spectators at the sportsmen's show in Duquesne gardens, Pittsburg, were thrown into a panic by the bursting of a huge tank containing 100,000 gallons of water.

Theodore Schmitt, one of the best known architects in Ohio, was thrown from an automobile in Cleveland and probably fatally injured.

Three thousand people in mass meeting at Albuquerque united in a protest against the resignation of Gov. H. J. Hagerman of New Mexico, which was requested by President Roosevelt.

Former Gov. Jennings of Florida and President Lincoln Hulley, of Stetson university at DeLand, came to blows in a Tallahassee hotel lobby over a movement in the legislature to secure an amendment in the university's charter to prevent the board of trustees perpetuating itself.

Wolfram C. Fuchs, an X-ray expert of international reputation and one of the original exponents of its use in this country, died at his residence in Chicago of carcinoma, induced by burns received two years ago during his scientific researches.

One man was killed, two seriously burned and the American Insulating Material Manufacturing company's plant damaged to the extent of $25,000 by an explosion of a large blast furnace at Alexandria, Ind.

Capt. N. T. Smith, the veteran treasurer of the Southern Pacific Railway company, died at his home at San Carlos, San Mateo county, Cal. Pneumonia, combined with paralysis, caused death.

Gifts to Kemper hall, Kenosha, Wis., to the amount of $25,000 were announced to clear away outstanding debts of the school and to provide for improvements during the coming summer.

Jasper Maxwell and Mrs. Maude Maxwell were drowned in the Big Sandy river, Kentucky, while fording the stream on horseback. They were married only three days.

New York harbor firemen had a hard fight with a fire which destroyed the freight steamer Pioneer, causing a loss of $75,000.

The pulp mill of the Lake Superior corporation located in the Canadian Soo, across the river from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., burned. The loss is $100,000.

The drought conditions in Cuba are growing worse and the Santiago water supply is cut off.

Antonio Infante died near Santiago, aged 150. He was born 19 years before the American revolution began.

It has been discovered that the fortune left by John Porterfield, the Allegheny banker, is nearer $1,000,000 than $175,000, as he supposed.

Several thousand skilled workmen who had been discharged from the arsenal at Woolwich, England, marched to London and protested to the premier and war secretary.

Samuel Conkle was arrested at Chester, W. Va., charged with selling tickets of a Mexican lottery.

Secretary of War Taft and party returned to Washington from their Caribbean trip.

William T. Davidge, an actor who tried to kill Miss Rosalie D. Wilbert, a trained nurse when she refused to marry him, was sentenced in New York to one year in jail.

Frank H. Butler, a deckhand on the steamer John P. Wilson, was arrested, charged with the murder of little Horace Marvin of Dover, Del.

The Kansas supreme court appointed Judge S. H. Allen, G. H. Whitcomb and Judge T. F. Garver, all of Topeka, receivers for the property in Kansas, said to be worth $250,000, of nine foreign brewing companies.

The chief of the political prison at Odessa was killed by four terrorists, one of whom committed suicide and another was captured.

The British steamer Thornhill was burned at sea, the crew reaching Barbadoes safely.

Pittsburg was alarmed by another virulent outbreak of cerebro-spinal meningitis.

In a letter addressed to Honore Jaxon of Chicago, chairman of the "Cook county Moyer-Haywood conference," President Roosevelt replied to the criticisms of his recent letter in which he referred to Moyer and Haywood, officials of the Western Federation of Miners. He turned the tables on his critics by deploring their attempts to influence the course of justice, and reiterated his condemnation of such bad citizens as Moyer and Haywood, Debs and Harriman.

Charles C. King, former president of the First National bank of Scotland, S. D., alleged wrecker of the institution and accused of having embezzled $21,000, was arrested in Chicago.

Miss Anne T. Jeanes, an aged Quakeress of Philadelphia, gave $1,000,000 for the establishment of a fund for rudimentary schools for southern negroes, and named Booker T. Washington and Hollis Burke Frissell as trustees.

The joint assembly of Rhode Island adjourned without breaking the deadlock in the contest for United States senator, after 81 ballots had been taken.

James Bartlett Hammond, inventor of the typewriter bearing his name and president of the Hammond Typewriter company, was committed to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue hospital, New York, his mind having been wrecked by drugs and liquor.

Dr. John Watson (Ian MacLaren), who arrived at Mt. Pleasant, Ia., to address the students of Wesleyan university, was taken seriously ill with tonsilitis and was removed to a hospital.

Mrs. Charles F. Crisp, widow of Speaker Crisp of the national house of representatives, died at her home, in Americus, Ga., aged 59.

Mrs. Lawson Sheldon, mother of George L. Sheldon, of Nebraska, died at her home at Nehawka.

The Indianapolis Frog & Switch company, a large manufacturing concern owned by Vice President Fairbanks, was destroyed by fire, the loss being $350,000.

The carbarns of the Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth railroad, in Cincinnati, were totally destroyed by fire, the loss being $80,000, fully covered by insurance.

Miss Lora Bryant, the Ypsilanti (Mich.) normal school student whose mysterious disappearance caused a sensation in the Wolverine state, was found at Helena, Mont., unable to explain her departure from Ypsilanti.

Unless demands for an eight-hour day and a minimum wage scale of $3.75 a day are granted by the first of May, a strike of all iron molders along the Pacific coast is expected. About 2,500 men are affected.

Frederick W. Gardner, justice of the peace, and a wealthy resident of Ridgewood, N. J., killed himself with a pistol. Mrs. Gardner followed her husband to the door of an apartment occupied by a young woman. When Gardner saw his wife he killed himself.

The Port Blakeley Mill company's lumber mill at Port Blakeley, Wash., one of the largest in the world, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $400,000.

John Hathaway, an aged farmer living near Danville, Ill., found his empty money chest in the woods near his home. It had held $4,500, the savings of a lifetime.

John Gheres, aged 92 years, died at his home in Mahantonga, Pa. He is survived by a widow, 11 children, 100 grandchildren and 76 great-grandchildren.

The collector of customs at Manila has asked that suit be brought against the Standard Oil company for $19,216 contested duties.

A letter received in London from an official of standing at Peking states that the Chinese revolt is growing more serious, and that the promises of granting reforms have not been kept by the court.

Two sailors stole a tugboat worth $20,000 in New York harbor and were chased by other tugs up the East river for several miles before they were captured.

Fire in the arsenal at Toulon, France, destroyed five large buildings, badly damaged several others, ruined many workmen's cottages and injured 30 persons.

All iron molders on the Pacific coast are expected to strike May 1.

The business portion of Alderson, I. T., was destroyed by fire.

The body of Peter J. Kennedy, a well-known theatrical manager who disappeared in December last, was found in the water off South Brooklyn.

The grand jury at Toledo, O., returned 245 indictments against prominent citizens and concerns engaged in the building trades, for conspiring in restraint of trade.

William January, who was sent to the penitentiary at Leavenworth 12 years ago for robbing a post office and escaped three years later, was arrested in Chicago. He had married and become a prosperous business man.

Four men were burned to death in a fire that destroyed a big livery stable in New York.

The wooden lumber barge Arcadia was lost in a storm on Lake Michigan with her crew of 14.

O. M. Dennett, a New York broker, was arrested on the charge of receiving some of the bonds said to have been stolen from the Trust Company of America by William O. Douglass.

Judge John Edmund Wentworth Addison, who was prosecutor in the Mrs. Maybrick case, is dead in London.

Benedict Gimbel, the Philadelphia merchant who attempted suicide after being arrested in New York, died of his wounds.

In an opinion by Chief Justice Fuller, the supreme court of the United States dismissed the case of Frederick Seymour, alias "Lord Barrington," under sentence of death in St. Louis, for the murder of James P. McCann in June, 1903, thus affirming the decision of the supreme court of Missouri and sustaining the verdict of guilty returned by the trial court.

A portion of the bonds alleged to have been taken from the Trust company of America, of New York, by William C. Douglass, who is under arrest on a charge of larceny, were recovered in an apartment in the Manhattan club.

Enrico Alfano, alleged leader in Italy of the secret and criminal Camorra society of Naples, who was arrested in New York during a police raid on the east side, was turned over to the immigration authorities, by whom he will be deported to Italy.

A band of Servians defeated a band of Bulgarians at Isver, near Uskub, killing and beheading ten of their opponents.

Rev. Dr. William W. Lord, one of the oldest clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal church in this country, and the minister and friend of Jefferson Davis, died at the hotel Clendeaning in New York.

J. G. Lowdon and O. W. Steffens, charged with having misappropriated the funds of a national bank, were found guilty in the federal court at Abilene, Tex., and their punishment fixed at five years in the penitentiary.

Indictments against the Utah Fuel company and six of its employes were returned at Salt Lake City by the United States grand jury. The fraudulent acquisition of title to government coal lands is the offense charged.

An effort will be made to secure one or both of the national conventions of the two great parties for Denver in 1908.

Joseph B. Moore, aged 47, former circuit judge for Lawrence county, Minn., committed suicide by shooting himself through the brain. Despondency over ill health is supposed to have been the cause.

Two children are dead and a third is dying as the result of a fire which burned the house of Charles Bredwell, in the mining town of Mystic, Ia.

Fire partly destroyed the Giles building, 296-300 Wabash avenue, Chicago, and badly frightened the guests of the Auditorium hotel and the Hotel Rensu and the occupants of the Fine Arts building.

A Minnesota senate committee valued the railroad property in that state at $215,000,000 and said the roads earned 18 per cent. on that basis.

The entire plant of the Seacoast Canning company, leased to the American Can company of New York, at North Lubec, Me., was burned. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

The volcano Puyehue in the province of Valdivia, Chili, is yet in active eruption, and new craters have opened. The losses in the neighboring country are enormous, and the inhabitants are panic-stricken. Showers of hot ashes are falling and there are continued earthquake shocks accompanied by subterranean explosions. Earth shocks were felt in the island of Luzon, Philippines; in Charleston, S. C., and in Algeria. On the Atlantic there was an extraordinary storm, presumably caused by seismic disturbances.

It is reported authoritatively in Rome that Mgr. Kennedy, an American, will be made a cardinal to succeed Mgr. Merry del Val.

Capt. Piccono, the commander of the Navigazione Italia line steamer Sirio, which struck on the rocks of Hormigas island, Spain, last August, as a result of which 300 persons were drowned, died at Genoa of a broken heart.

An agreement was signed by the executive committee of the mine owners and the officers of Miners' union No. 220, Goldfield district, which terminated the great lockout and labor struggle of the past seven weeks.

M. Pak Yong Wha, chief of the board of auditors of the imperial Korean household, was assassinated at Seoul.

Twenty-five persons are believed to have been drowned by the foundering of the river steamer Archangelsk while she was crossing the Neva near St. Petersburg. The boat, which was unseaworthy and manned by incompetents, struck an ice floe.

Rev. Leroy A. Belt, D. D., aged 71, ex-president of the Ohio Northern university and prominent in the Methodist church, died at his home in Kenton, O., of heart disease.

Thinking he had killed his son, whom he had floored in a quarrel, William Robinson, of Stamping Ground, Ky., blew out his brains, dying instantly.

James Gilbert, a son of William Gilbert, a wealthy tobacco man of Murray, Ky., committed suicide aboard a train en route from Memphis by swallowing a half ounce of bromidia.

The Methodist Episcopal church of Menominee, Mich., was destroyed by fire. A high wind spread the flames to the Baptist church and the residences of Dr. Phillips, and they were damaged.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, April 20—A reflection of the recent meeting of the North Star Press association in St. Paul was seen today in the unusual action of the senate in suspending the rules three days before the close of the session to advance a new bill over all pending legislation. The bill was introduced at the request of the governor and by Senator Sullivan of Stillwater, and related to the publication of the annual statement of insurance companies in newspapers for greater publicity. The present law calls for such statements to be published in each of the three most populous counties. The new bill says one publication must be in one of the three most populous counties while the other two required may be in legal papers in any county in the state. The bill passed with but 5 votes against it in spite of vigorous protests from Senator George R. Laybourn of Duluth. It is understood the influence of the Home Print Association, the organization of weekly papers, has endorsed the bill as well as the North Star association.

One of the features of today's session was the introduction of the session road and bridge bill, by Senator Frank Clague of Lamberton. This bill merely "cuts the pie" of $400,000 already appropriated in a general bill for the purpose by Senator Canfield.

The Knutson house committee which for a long time past has been investigating ore lands with a special reference to the J. J. Hill deal, has reported to the house. The report reviews the testimony of James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill and shows that the Lake Superior company, which held the extensive ore lands, was in fact a subsidiary company to the Great Northern and was organized because the Great Northern could not, under its charter, hold and work the mineral lands.

The report is signed by Knute Knutson, Burdette Thayer, W. H. Putman, Adam J. Wood and Clarence B. Miller.

St. Paul, April 22—The big legislative events today were the introduction in the house of the omnibus appropriation bill, and the tax levy bill.

The appropriation bill came from the house committee on appropriations in the morning, and its consideration by the house was not completed until shortly before midnight. The bill as introduced, carried an aggregate appropriation of $11,500,000. The total amounts added to the bill during the day were $74,800, while items aggregating $37,900 were cut out, thus leaving a net increase of $36,900. The only large item cut out was an appropriation of $25,000 for a light and power plant for the state fair at Hamline. The state fair appropriations were made a special feature of attack. Every item was contested, the onslaught being led by A. J. Rockne.

The tax levy bill was advanced to the calendar and will be considered tomorrow. It fixes the tax rate at 1.5 mills, which will raise $1,500,000 a year. It is believed by many that the bill will have to be amended to make the rate at least 1.7 mills. The state levy last year was only 1.2 mills.

The senate today passed the road and bridge appropriation on motion of Senator Frank Clague and with practically no opposition. The bill provides $200,000 a year for the next two years, the division of the funds being according to a bill passed yesterday and previously explained.

Two important bills are still pending in conference committees. One is the anti-pass bill, the other the measure creating a state tax commission. It is probable the committees will report on compromises tomorrow.

St. Paul April 23—The legislature remained in session morning, afternoon and night, this being the last date for the passage of bills, and final adjournment will take place tomorrow before noon. The house adjourned at ten minutes to twelve after breaking loose from all restraint. Bills were passed on roll calls, but it is safe to say few knew what they were voting about. Paper wads, small books, bundles of printed bills, sailed through the air and were thrown from one end of the great chamber to the other. The floor was literally covered with spent ammunition. The senate was more sedate and attended strictly to business, though good humor prevailed. The upper body remained in session until considerably after midnight, pushing the clock back for convenience sake and to prove the old saying of "what's the constitution between friends."

Most important action of the day was the passage of the omnibus appropriation bill. The senate spent most of the day considering the measure as it came from the house, and ended by adding $94,000 to various items. During the evening the house ratified the senate amendments without further change. This leaves the total appropriation carried by the bill, $11,630,000. It was thought wise because of the size of the aggregate appropriation, to increase the tax levy, and accordingly the tax levy bill was changed so as to make the rate 1.7 mills.

A very important measure enacted today by both houses, was the conference committee tax bill. It provides for three commissioners at $4,500 each, and permits the state board of equalization to exist in an advisory capacity until 1909. It is said former senator Samuel Lord of Kasson will be one of the commissioners.

Another measure worthy of special mention which was enacted today on report of a conference committee, was the anti-pass bill. In its revamped form, it prohibits not only passes, but franks and special privileges of all sorts from public service corporations to favored ones.

The house today passed the drainage bills which had been amended by the senate. These bills mean much for northern Minnesota. One is relative to a judicial ditch system, one for a county system, one for a state system, and another relative to assessments of costs, private land abutting to be charged for private benefits, state land to have the assessment added to the selling price of the land. An important bill for the city interests which had its final passage in the house was the so-called Mueller law, a copy of the Mueller law of Illinois to permit municipalities to absorb properties of public service corporations by issuance of bonds.

By a bare majority the Sundberg senate bill for state hail insurance passed the house in the shuffle tonight. It secured the necessary 60 votes, with 42 registered against it. It provides for a constitutional amendment which must be submitted to a vote of the people, to permit of an optional acreage tax to be charged against farmers who want state hail insurance.

The sleeping car tax bill came out from conference committee today and was passed by both houses. It provides for a 6 per cent gross earnings tax, or an advalorem tax, at option of the company taxed.

Gov. J. A. Johnson today sent the legislature his second veto. It was against the Wright bill for a wide-open system of pensions for those who fought in the Indian uprisings of 1862.

An important senate bill which passed the house in tonight's hurry, was the one reorganizing the state militia on terms of the federal law, and increasing the term of the adjutant general, the head of the state militia, from 2 to 6 years.

St. Paul, April 23—The legislative session came to a conclusion today. There were pleasantries in both houses, and presentations of gifts to presiding officers and others. In the senate, Senator Albert Schaller voiced the sentiments of his fellow members in eulogizing the presiding officer, Lieut. Gov. A. O. Eberhart of Mankato, and ending by presenting him with a magnificent chest of silver which occupied a place in the aisle in front of the senate. Senator Schaller said he had attended many sessions as a member, but never had one proved as pleasant as this one. He also spoke in the highest terms of the presiding officers fairness as well as ability. Lieut. Gov. Eberhart responded feelingly, and in his remarks took occasion to thank the newspaper men of the senate and the employes for efficient work.

Senator J. F. Calhoun made a brief speech in which he presented Samuels A. Langum of Preston with a cream and sugar silver service. By a rising vote on motion of Senator Schaller, the senate gave expression to a desire that Mr. Langum continue as secretary of the body two years hence.

Following adjournment the senate employes met in a committee room and presented Lieut. Gov. Eberhart with a handsome traveling bag, Sergeant of Arms Ege of Minneapolis with a gold watch, and Mr. Langum with a riding saddle.

In the house, W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow acted as gift spokesman, and gave Speaker Lawrence A. Johnson a gold watch. He also presented in the name of the house, a gold ring to each of the desk force, A. E. Johnson, John T. Jones, Archie Vernon, and Oscar Arneson. Mr. Jones in the name of the desk force, handed Speaker Johnson with a Knights Templar charm.

One important action before adjournment, was the passage of a resolution by John G. Lennon of Minneapolis, calling on the the authorities of the state to increase the assessed valuation of the iron mine properties in the state to $225,000,000. The resolution went through by an overwhelming majority.

St. Paul—The Norwegians are planning to hold a big celebration in the Auditorium on May 17, the Norwegian Fourth of July. Addresses will be given by William Jennings Bryan, Senator Knute Nelson and Governor Johnson. In addition to the addresses there will be music.

Discovery Endangered World.

In the time of Louis XV. of France, a chemist named Depre gave an exhibit on a canal at Versailles of a kind of fire so rapid and devouring that it could not be quenched, water only giving it fresh activity. Louis forbade that the invention should be made public, and the inventor died soon after, carrying the secret with him to the grave.

Always Exaggerate.

We are never so happy or so unhappy as we suppose.—La Rochefoucauld.

Little One's Prayer.

Mary always gets a little piece of candy every day to keep her from being naughty. One day she was naughty, and she did not get her candy. That night when she was going to bed she said her prayers as follows: "Our Father, who art in heaven, please give me my daily candy."

The World's Classification.

Don't call a man a fool because he disagrees with you. A wiser one then either of you may insist upon putting you both in the same class.—John A. Howland.

The Evolution of Household Remedies.

The modern patent medicine business is the natural outgrowth of the old-time household remedies.

In the early history of this country, EVERY FAMILY HAD ITS HOME-MADE MEDICINES. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloes and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic, made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulae for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this wholesome, old-time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home-made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old-time remedies. It was used by the Mennonites, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman, THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Mennonite origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. The sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.

AGE TOLD BY THE PULSE.

From Birth to Death the Beats Have a Steady Decrease.

How old are you? Ask your pulse. The human pulse has a wide range, even in perfectly healthy persons. The female pulse always beats faster than the male, and from birth to death the pulse beats steadily decrease. It has been said by great authorities that the age and sex of a person could be ascertained by the rate of the pulse alone. Babies at birth have a pulse beat of 160 times a minute in case of a girl and 150 in the case of boys. At the age of four or five the pulse beats will have fallen respectively to 110 and 100. Maidens' and youths' pulses average 95 and 90. Mature men and women average 80 and 75. Elderly men and women have an average of 60 and 50. An old woman's pulse rarely, if ever, sinks below 50, but among men a pulse beat below 50 is quite common. There are, however, great variations consistent with health. Napoleon's pulse is said to have beaten only 44 times a minute.

Great Stunt by Geronimo.

In a single day Geronimo, when in his prime, ran 40 miles on foot, rode 500 miles on one stretch, as fast as he could change horses, and so completely wore out the column which finally captured him that three sets of officers were needed to finish the chess, and not more than one-third of the troopers who started were in at the finish, says a writer in Outing.

Wrinkled and crafty and cruel is his swarthy face to-day, but the fire of his infernal energy has died and he is no more than a relic of the Geronimo of whom Gen. Miles said after their first meeting:

"He rode into our camp and dismounted, a prisoner. He was one of the brightest, most resolute, determined men I ever met, with the sharpest, clearest dark eye. Every movement showed power and energy."

Out of His Line.

A man living in the country far from any physician was taken suddenly ill. His family, in great alarm, not knowing what to do, sent for a neighbor, who had a reputation for doctoring cows.

"Can't you give father something to help him?" asked one of the sons.

"Wa-al, I don't know nothin' about doctorin' people."

"You know more than we do, for you can doctor cows. Now what do you give them when they are sick?"

"Wa-al," I allers give Epsom salts. You might try it on him."

"How much shall we give him?" inquired the son.

"Wa-al, I give cows just a pound. Your father is a quarter as big as a cow—give him a quarter of a pound."

No Offense.

First Stranger (on train)—Do you ever quarrel with your wife?

Second Stranger—Never.

First Stranger—Have any trouble with the hired girl?

Second Stranger—Not me.

First Stranger—Don't your children worry you at times?

Second Stranger—No, indeed.

First Stranger—Say, I don't like to call you a liar, but—

Second Stranger—Oh, that's all right. I'm a bachelor.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

A Fatal Bridge.

St. Paul—With the head crushed and both arms and both legs shattered to splinters, the body of an unidentified man was found lying on the railroad tracks beneath the south end of the high bridge at St. Paul. From the clothes it is apparent that the dead man was a laborer, and all circumstances surrounding his death indicate suicide.

The high bridge which stretches across the river above the upper flats, seems to possess a peculiar fascination for those unfortunates who grow to think that life is not worth while. During the bridge's existence thirteen people have jumped or fallen from its dizzy heights. Three men, two who fell from the railing of the bridge, and one who sought to end his life, lived to tell the story, but the other ten met death either in the rushing waters of the river or on the hard ground along the banks.

At its highest point the high bridge crosses the river at a height of 150 feet, and a fall from any section of it is almost certain death. For a person wishing to end his life it is excellently adapted, for it is an easy matter to climb the five-foot iron railing and jump into the river. Twelve victims of the bridge have been men and the seventh a woman, who was the second on the list of suicides.

Loses 31 of His Herd.

Mankato—W. W. P. McConnell, former state dairy and food inspector, during the past winter having charge of a farmers' institute corps, had his fine dairy herd of Jersey cows on his famous Minneopa stock farm tested for tuberculosis. The test made by Dr. Whitcomb, an expert of the state sanitary and live stock board, of which Mr. McConnell is a member, and of approximately 100 animals, mostly pure bred, 31 were condemned and have been shipped to South St. Paul stock yards, where they will be slaughtered. The test was made as the result of the recent slaughter of five or six head from the herd at the local packing house and the condemning of all but one by Dr. [illegible] Pell, the government inspector. The loss is a heavy one to Mr. McConnell, but he was determined to purify his herd. For five or six years he has been supplying the milk to a creamery, having discontinued his milk route, but other milk men occasionally got supplies of him when they were short. When the milk route was in operation it supplied some of the best trade in the city.

St. Paul Man Run Over.

[illegible]—William Mattoke, a brakeman on an extra freight train on the [illegible] road, while assisting in making a flying switch in the yards in [illegible] city, was struck by a stationary car and thrown under a moving car to which he had been clinging. Conductor Peterson, noticing the accident, ran to the prostrate and unconscious man and pulled him part way from under the track before the wheels ran over him. Mattoke's right leg was crushed and had to be amputated at the knee, the bones of his left foot were broken, and he was badly cut and bruised. He is now in a local hospital with chances favorable to recovery. He resides with his parents in St. Paul and is a single man about thirty years old. But for Peterson's prompt assistance he would have been instantly killed.

Starves Cows to Death.

Le Sueur—Charles A. Roche, a prosperous farmer of Ottawa, in this county, was brought here before Municipal Judge Felix A. Borer on complaint made by State Agent John A. Moak of the state humane society, charging Roche with cruelty to animals in that he was neglecting to feed his cows properly and was starving them to death. Roche pleaded guilty to the charge, and, it appearing that two cows were already dead and the others were skeletons, Judge Borer imposed a fine of $30 and costs, which Roche immediately paid. Max Dietel of the local board, lodged the complaint with Agent Moak.

Record for Institutes.

Mankato—W. W. P. McConnell of this city, who has completed his winter and spring work as the head of a corps of state institute conductors, assisted in holding 69 institutes in a territory extending diagonally across the state from the Red River valley to Southeastern Minnesota. The total attendance at the institutes was about 40,000, or an average of 572 at each institute, which is larger than ever before.

NEWS NOTES.

Redwood Falls—United States Senator Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul will deliver an address here on Memorial day.

Minneapolis—Raising his glass with a cheery, "Well, good by, boys," Ernest Bennett drank carbolic acid in the cabin of W. P. Randall, 1729 Second street north, and died half an hour later at the city hospital.

Breckenridge—Fire which started in the old wing of the hospital here did damage estimated at $7,000 before it finally was extinguished. Fortunately there were no patients in this part of the building and there was no one injured.

Royalton—The eight year old daughter of Victor Sawdy is dead as the result of burns. The child and a companion had started a fire in an old tin pail. The girl's mother bade her extinguish the fire, but in doing so the child's clothing took fire.

Mankato—The village council of Vernon Center has awarded a contract to install a water works system in the village, including engine, pump, boiler and tank, for about $5,000.

Mankato—Ralph O. Olson of Allen has purchased the Citizens' bank at Keister and will make it a state bank. Mr. Olson already is engaged in the banking business at Alden.

Royal Arcanum.

St. Paul—Officers of the Royal Arcanum for the Grand Council of Minnesota were elected at the seventeenth annual session. Delegates to the number of sixty were present from Royal Arcanum lodges throughout the state.

The officers for the ensuing year are: Grand regent, Charles T. Boener, of Minneapolis; grand vice-regent, George H. Grant, of Stillwater; grand orator, Frank L. Gregory, of St. Paul; past grand regent, William H. Barber, of Minneapolis; grand secretary, George T. Hughes, of Duluth; grand treasurer, Robert D. Cone, of Minneapolis; grand chaplain, M. J. Mullin, of Duluth; grand guide, Julius E. Fitch, of Albert Lea; grand warden, Daniel W. Drake, of Dover; grand sentry, J. C. McSteen, of St. James; representatives to the supreme council, Robert A. Walker of St. Paul and Frank L. Palmer of Minneapolis; alternates, James Craig of Merriam Park and Edward J. Davenport of Minneapolis.

B. Frank Pay was re-elected a grand trustee for a term of three years. J. W. Natirass of St. Paul was elected to fill the one-year term of C. T. Boener, made grand regent, and B. F. Smith of Minneapolis will fill out the two-year term of M. J. Mullin, elected grand chaplain.

Suicide by Drowning.

Minneapolis—Despondency caused J. F. Gartner to make all arrangements for his own funeral and then take his own life in Lake of the Isles, where his dead body was found by workmen.

The body was found shortly before noon by men engaged on boulevard work, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth street, and was at once removed to the county morgue, where it was positively identified as that of Gartner.

Gartner, who was about 70 years old, went to Hume & Davis, undertakers, a week ago and arranged for his funeral. He told where he was to be buried and selected his casket, saying that he would probably die in a few days. Accustomed to queer requests, the undertakers paid little attention to the matter.

Gartner lived with his daughter, Mrs. Charles Lampe, at 4 Grove place, and was superintending the erection of a dwelling for his son-in-law, W. C. Leber, at Lake of the Isles. He did not appear at the house as usual a week ago and the police were asked to search for him.

Injury by Saw Fatal.

Hallock—Arvid Dahlin is dead from blood poisoning, which was caused by an injury which he received while he was running a slab saw at Williams. He attempted to remove some of the sawdust lying inside the saw, his hand coming in contact with the blade and was nearly severed from his arm. He was taken to Beaudette for treatment and later to a hospital at Winnipeg, where he died. His body has been brought here for burial.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—Central conference of English Evangelical Lutheran churches meets here.

St. Paul—Railway officials say the ruling of the interstate commerce commission on the 100-trip tickets will not be tested in the courts.

Winona—None of the men hurt in the quarry accident at La Moille were fatally injured. The report that three of the bosses were hurt was incorrect.

Mankato—The Blacksmiths' Horseshoers' and Wagonmakers' Association held another meeting in this city, attended by over 100 representatives of those industries, and took in 44 new members.

Little Falls—A big judicial ditch, designed to straighten the course of the Leaf river in Wadena and Otter Tail counties, has been ordered constructed, and dredges will be put at work at once.

Tower—Arthur Johnson, a young man employed as a brakeman on the Tower Lumber company's logging road, was instantly killed near Lake Vermillion. He was coupling cars when one of the logs on a car became loosened and fell upon him, crushing him to death.

Elmore—The large Mud Creek ditch, which is to start south of this town, soon will be commenced. The contract for the excavation of the ditch proper has been let at $66,428.28, and work will begin as soon as the contractor can get the machinery to the place. The job will be completed by Dec. 1, 1908.

Mankato—In spite of the ruling of the county attorney, sustained by the attorney general, that license cannot be legally granted at Dunnell, Martin county, two applications for saloon licenses have been made and will be heard by the council, which is said to be favorable to license. The vote on license was a tie at the election.

Faribault—While the cadets of Shattuck school were at drill during the evening a sneak thief entered one of the rooms in Phelps' cottage and stole articles to the amount of $100 or more. A valuable diamond set scarf pin, some money and other articles are missing. No arrest has yet been made.

Owatonna—Great preparations are being made for the opening of the new city and fire hall here. The third floor is finished off for an auditorium and dance hall and it is here that the festivities commemorating the occasion will be held.

Rochester—After hunting all night in a cold rain a party of 50 citizens and policemen found the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Bay of this city. The little girl wandered into the country in the afternoon and became lost.

Minneapolis—Lawrence A. McIvor dies of heart failure while in St. Paul on business.

FLAG THAT MADE SONG

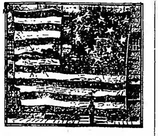
STORY OF ORIGINAL OF "THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER."

Mrs. Hunter, Granddaughter of Commander of Fort McHenry, Gives Her Version—Relic Now in New York City.

New York.—Mrs. Georgiene L. F. G. A. A. Hunter, granddaughter of the Col. George Armistead who commanded Fort McHenry when the British bombarded it during the war of 1812, and when Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," told a reporter the other day what she knew about the history of the original flag.

This, she says, was the private property of her grandfather, Col. Armistead, and has descended to her only brother, Eben Appleton, of this city.

When the fort was being bombarded Key went to the British frigate Minden, one of the bombarding fleet, under a flag of truce. On his way back to Baltimore the next morning he saw the starry flag still flying over the fort. The sight inspired him to write the national ode.



Flag That Inspired "The Star Spangled Banner."

Mrs. Hunter had a picture of the original flag, which shows it to have been an unusually large garrison flag, about 30 feet by 40. It has 15 stripes, as all the national flags had at that time, one stripe for each state.

The stars are well pointed, being 15 in number, except that one has been shot away by a shell. Aside from this rent and another at one corner, also made by a shell, the flag is in excellent condition.

Mrs. Hunter differs with her sister, Mrs. George Livingston Baker, of 6 Westervelt avenue, New Brighton, Staten island, somewhat as to details in the history of the flag.

Some surprise has been expressed at different times that the flag is not now and has not always been in the possession of the national government. Mrs. Baxer explained this by saying that the flag was presented to Col. Armistead by the government after the fight. Mrs. Hunter says that the flag was the private property of Col. Armistead, having been presented to him by a committee of 50 Baltimore citizens a few days before the conflict. When he saw the British fleet approaching he threw it to the breeze.

"Col. Armistead was a brilliant officer," she said. "He was graduated at West Point as a second lieutenant in 1799, became a captain in 1806, major in 1813, brevet lieutenant colonel in 1814. After his defense of the fort on Sept. 12, 1814, he was made a colonel.

"There was never any doubt but that the flag belonged to him. My mother was born in the fort some time before the death of the colonel, which occurred on April 25, 1818. She was named for him, Georgiana. Her marriage to William Stuart Appleton of the Boston family has already been told.

"I remember playing under the flag as a girl. Its history since the fight is one mainly of the occasions when it was exhibited. The last of these was at the sesquicentennial celebration of the city of Baltimore in 1880.

"It was also exhibited at the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia in 1876, and I think at some celebration connected with the Old South Church in about 1875, under the auspices of Commodore Preble. But I forget the raising of the flag at Fort McHenry in 1825 in honor of the visit of Gen. Lafayette.

"The disposition of the flag at my brother's death is problematical. He may leave it to Peabody Institute in Baltimore or to a museum in Washington."

Neither Mrs. Hunter nor her brother nor her sister is connected with any Revolutionary society, although they all take interest in patriotic affairs. Eben Appleton, the owner of the flag, lives in Manhattan borough and is well to do.

IS SMALLEST PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Conducted Solely for Children of Alleged Outlaw.

Madison.—Wisconsin claims to be conducting the smallest public school on the American continent. A single family provides the pupils, six in number, and to give these children an education the state pays a teacher $40 a month. The family is that of John F. Dietz, who has a national reputation as the "Outlaw of Cameron Dam," the man who is fighting an entire state, and its courts, and who is still unsubdued after three years of defiance of the authorities. G. F. Graham is the teacher of this strange school, which is conducted in the Dietz home, the only house for miles around Cameron Dam, the spot in the woods of northern Wisconsin for whose possession the battle began which has made Dietz an outlaw.

Dietz, who was formerly sheriff of Sawyer county, whose officers he is now defying, claims to have the right to collect from the Chippewa River Lumber company a fee for every log which passes through the dam. To enforce his right he drew all the water from the mill pond above the dam, and left timber valued at $20,000 on the banks to rot. The company refused to give in, and sent men to try to dislodge him. He beat off the company's men. Then the courts were appealed to. A party sent to attack him was fired upon and one man slightly wounded. This stopped trouble for a time, until a year ago, when a new sheriff, the first having resigned rather than make another raid, took a party of six Milwaukee men into the wilderness, 50 miles from the county seat. Clarence Dietz, son of the homesteader, was wounded, and one of the raiding party was severely wounded. The others escaped. Since then, however, Dietz has been unable to get into a civilized community without the danger of arrest, so has remained in the wilderness. On the other hand, the officers have tried to starve him out, but he remains steadfast, and during the winter a load of about 2,000 pounds of provisions, collected by admirers of his contest against a corporation, was smuggled past the deputies to his home in the woods.

But while a prisoner in the wilderness, Dietz can still claim the right from the state to educate his children, so Teacher Graham spends school hours every day teaching various members of the family of six children and the rest of the time is free to wander about the woods, hunting and fishing. He is almost in the forest primeval, and wild game is plenty at their very door.

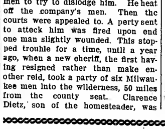
Dietz's family consists of the following, as shown in the accompanying picture, reading from left to right: Stanley, Helen, Leslie, John, Jr., Clarence and Elmyra. Clarence is shown still wearing the bandage which dressed the wound he received in the last battle with the sheriff's posse.

The Dietz Children and Home.

CRADLE OF A PRESIDENT.

Historic Relic Used by John Quincy Adams.

Boston.—The cradle bed of John Quincy Adams has historic interest for all Americans. It is preserved in the museum in Boston and is of the type common at the time Adams was born. It has a wooden box, with rockers and hood of the same material, guiltless of decoration of any sort.



Once Rocked a Future President.

Speaking of cradles, one is reminded that it is said that Francis d'Assisi invented the cradle for the purpose of making plain to the people of his time who could not read the picture of the Nativity. The manger-like cradle used then containing the Christ child gave the ignorant folk an excellent idea of the conditions in Bethlehem on that wonderful Christmas night.

A Home Loving Bird.

Direct evidence of the return of the same individual bird of a migrating species to a particular spot season after season is not easily obtainable, but N. C. Beers believes that he has such evidence concerning a chipping sparrow at Lakewood, N. J. A few years ago he heard a little bird concealed in the top of a maple uttering a peculiar song which he could not recognize. The next season he heard the same peculiar song in a tree but a few yards from the original point. This time he identified the bird, which seemed to have learned a song of its own. The third year he did not visit Lakewood at the proper season to meet his little friend, but the fourth year he heard and saw it again near the same spot. It appeared always to make its summer home in the trees on an area not more than two acres in extent.—Youth's Companion.

Turkish Wealth Wasted.

The aggregate of wealth buried with Turkey's sultans would pay Russia's national debt.

HINTS OF ALL SORTS

Costume Accessories Suggested by Parisian Leaders of Fashion—Newest Blouses.

It is very Parisian to have at least one of those simple little blouse dresses of lightweight cloth, the waist lined or unlined according to your avoirdupois; the drop skirt made separate, to be worn over a pretty light-colored petticoat.

* * *

Kilted skirts, smooth circular skirts and those having a very slight fullness at the waist are popular.

All of the blouses are made with a becoming little white tucker. It is wise to provide one's self with two or three of these, because you can then be always sure of a fresh one. Tuckers, of course, must fasten in the back, so they are made quite separate from the waist. A good way to insure their smoothness is an arrangement of tapes, attached to each corner of the yoke, lying around the waist.

* * *

Blouses themselves fasten in the front, however. Prettily arranged collars finish the neck. Sometimes a shaped fold forms the collar, crossing ingeniously in front, the ends finally tucking away, fichu-like, into the girdle.

Sleeves fell flat from the shoulders and cuffs receive particular attention. Plaitings always give a graceful effect, and whether these or a flat cuff are used a charming touch is given by adding a tiny bit of white to repeat the tucker. Sometimes it is a little inside plaiting of white muslin, or, in the case of cuffs, an outer cuff of embroidery is tacked on.

* * *

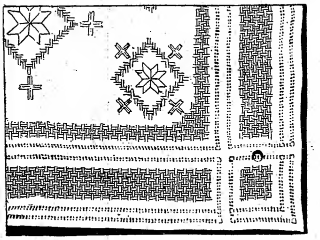
Though narrower girdles are seen on many of the new gowns proper in the blouse waists, the wider girdles still obtain—they do wonders in the way of neatness when there is no lining.

* * *

A wonderfully lovely boa that can do duty all summer is made of tulle fastened into many little ruffles for the collar part, each extending about an inch beyond the other and outlined with a row of half-inch velvet. Long ends of the tulle are cut in points and finished like the ruffles. A pretty touch is given by a flower that catches one end in place, while on the opposite side there is a bunch of foliage or a bow of wide velvet ribbon. These boas are charming in light blue, pink or gray.

Pretty Bedspread Pattern

We give the reproduction of a most ingeniously devised pattern for a bedspread, which was amongst the prize work in a recent competition. Oso-silkie thread is used for the embroidery, the background material being an art canvas of medium texture, in a soft tone of cream. The stars are worked solid, as shown in the illustration, the filling being in white, with an outline of pale emerald green; the effect is exceedingly handsome and very quickly produced. What gives the design its special characteristic, however, is the heavy border of basket or strap work stitch, this being also in white marked out with green, with the stitches set very closely together so as entirely to cover the canvas. The border is about six inches in depth. Had it been worked upon the quilt itself the work would necessarily have been so heavy as to be very fatiguing to do. The expedient was therefore resorted to of working the border in four separate panels, two for the sides and one for the head and foot respectively, and joining them to the center with an entredeux of drawn thread work. The result as regards the finish and general effect is excellent. This plan necessitated, of course, separate squares for the corners and the basket work is continued in these and cleverly mitred. If a rather stronger color note is desirable than is actually given by the work itself, a lining of silk or sateen in the desired shade can easily be added.



HAIR OF BROWN GOLD

That Is to Be the Fashionable Color for the Coming Season—New Headdress.

The fashionable color for hair this coming season is to be the pure gold brown, beloved of youthful poets, writes a correspondent in Paris.

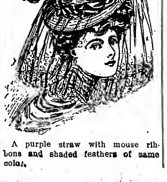
It is always difficult to trace directly back to the actual personage who starts a new fashion; fashions very often seem to start themselves. In the affair of gold brown hair it is possible that we have to thank two famous beauties—one a true Parisienne and the other a Parisienne from New York city. Both of these lovely women have hair of a delicious shade of brown gold, absolutely and entirely natural and difficult beyond words to imitate. On the other hand, it may well be that some autocratic Parisian coiffeur has, under the rose, given this new mode a push forward. There is no color so difficult to imitate as pure gold brown and the attempt to imitate it is very costly and elaborate business.

For the last two years the coiffeurs of Paris have been complaining bitterly of "bad times," etc.; they have found their hands more or less idle since artificial undulations began to go out of fashion and—coiffeurs are quite human.

Many things can be done at home by amateur hands, but hair tinting, except with henna, is not one of them. To tint the hair with henna is a horribly dirty piece of work, but it can be done at home with the help of a clever maid or obliging sister. On the other hand, it is impossible for an amateur to make her hair gold brown otherwise than by the use of peroxide; and peroxide can only be used in small quantities and with the greatest care, for it quickly gives a glittering, unpleasant tone of color which is clearly artificial by daylight.

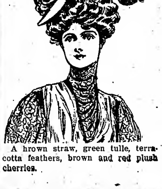
Apropos the hair on the head of a pretty woman—the fashion in the matter of hair-dressing is slowly but surely changing—the low natural-looking headdress is coming in again. We have for some little time back been swaying in this direction; picture hats and dresses have dominated picture headdresses, and more and more it has ceased to be correct to dress the hair stiffly and in artificial undulations, and every effort is made to produce a natural effect.

HAT IN PURPLE STRAW.



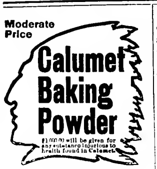
A purple straw with mouse ribbons and shaded feathers of same color.

MUCH LIKED IN LONDON.



A brown straw, green tulle, terra-cotta feathers, brown and red plush cherries.

Moderate Price



Calumet Baking Powder

$1000.00 will be given for any substance injurious to health found in Calumet.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

[illegible] Thursday evening, and [illegible] matter in the post [illegible] Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

[illegible] boost the Firemen's Tournament.

[illegible] recorded that it was the Great Northern railroad that was the [illegible] state to acquiesce in the [illegible] passenger fare bill and the commodity freight rates bill. Every other railroad in the state must follow suit. In other words the Great Northern Railway company has forced the railroads doing business in Minnesota to accept the two-cent fare rate and ten per cent reduction on freight rates without litigation.

Dairying is the best line of farming because it best maintains the fertility of the soil, gives constant and steady employment and produces the best type of manhood. On the dairy farm we find better homes, better social and political conditions and better and higher development of mankind. The opportunities to the present day dairyman are many. The business affords great opportunity for improvements in increasing soil fertility, in securing better farm equipment and in breeding and selection of the working herd. The salvation of the country depends on agriculture and the foundation of all agriculture is the soil. Dairying is greatest wealth producing industry in the country and is needed everywhere, as everywhere there is a constant demand for dairy products.

Wednesday, May 1st, the two-cent passenger bill went into effect, and with its becoming a law the public will be compelled to buy one-way tickets at the two-cent rate. The railroads of Minnesota have decided to refuse all tourist rates, charity rates, clergymen's rates, mileage tickets and reductions of all kinds for all trips between points within the state. The orders issued by the passenger departments of the railroads are for the sale of one way passenger tickets only, and practically every form of reduced rates ever known in the state is cut out. This includes homeseekers' rates for points within the state, party excursion rates and all of the standing excursion rates which apply to merchants' excursions and other concessions of long standing. The roads will refuse to sell mileage for use in Minnesota, and as a result traveling men and all other persons who use the railroads continuously will be compelled to buy one way passenger tickets, at a flat rate of two cents.

The orders of the railroads to their ticket agents, conductors and baggagemen include the following:

All existing passenger fares between points in Minnesota are cancelled April 30th.

Children between 5 and 12 years of age are carried at half rate tickets.

No other reductions between points in Minnesota will be granted and no reduction will be made to clergymen or for charity or to inmates of soldiers' homes.

Clergymen's certificates will not be honored for half rate tickets for trips between Minnesota points.

Homeseekers' rates, party excursion rates, certificate plan, excursion ticket rates, organized party rates will be withdrawn for passage between points entirely within the state.

No mileage tickets will be sold in Minnesota after April 30. Mileage tickets sold previous to May 1 will be honored in Minnesota the same as before, but not on the basis of the money value of the mileage coupon. The mileage books will be honored as though sold at flat rate of 2-cents a mile.

Mileage tickets sold in other states after April 30 will not be good and are not to be honored locally between stations in Minnesota, but may be honored for continuous passage for interstate trips.

Send us the news.

Plummer Pioneer: On next Wednesday the new petition for the removal of the county seat will be started out among the defenseless people of Red Lake county and the only way the average voter can dodge it is to get out of the country for the next sixty days. It is a question if the nesessary number of signatures can be obtained at this time as the people are pretty well tired of the way the last one was handled. About the only thing the average man can see in signing is that it will furnish a bunch of attorneys with a good paying job for a few years to come, and then, if it turns out like it did before the people will be called upon to pay their bills.

BRAY.

Some of the farmers around here have started in with the spring work, but the snowstorm of last Friday stopped it.

Swan Scholin transacted business at St. Hilaire Monday.

A large crowd was in attendance at an auction held last Thursday at the home of the Schumacher Bros. in the northern part of the township. John Schumacher sold out his share of the property as he expects to leave for his old home in Iowa in the near future. His brother, William, expects to stay on the farm.

Richard Larson drove to St. Hilaire on Monday.

Mamie Akerlund came home from Red Lake Falls Saturday for a few days stay.

Badger

Mrs. B. Laurent spent a few days of last week with relatives at Terrebonne.

Miss Josephine Vaudrin is seriously ill with an attack of lagripee. Her many friends will wish her an early recovery.

Owing to the cold weather of last week, Badger's hustlers were obliged to postpone their farm work for a few days.

Donna Laurent and wife were guests at the M. Quesnell home Saturday evening.

Master Harvey Lachance who arrived last week from North Yakima, Wash., called on a few Badger friends last Friday. Harvey was enroute to Poplar River where he expected to meet relatives.

Joseph Fournier of Terrebonne crossed the northern limits of Badger last Saturday on his way to Red Lake Falls.

A number of young and old folks gathered at the D. Lachance home Sunday and spent the evening most pleasantly. "Francois and Baptiste" were among those gathered there and certainly did their duty bravely.

Just at this time the mail order houses are active in flooding the country with big, handsomely gotten up spring catalogs, quoting attractive prices on staple articles and making all sorts of big sounding claims for your cash. They do not offer to exchange their goods for the farmer's eggs, poultry, butter or other produce. The don't trust a penny's worth, but make you pay cash before you get the goods and the freight besides. If anything is wrong with the goods or they do not suit, they will not exchange them for you. They pay no taxes into your town or county treasury, with which our schools are maintained, roads, bridges and sidewalks built. They do not contribute to our churches, charitable institutions, nor to our poor.

Clerk of Court's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Polk. } ss.

Whereas the petition of J. B. Wichterman and others, bearing date of January——1907, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein has been filed in my office.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the Hon. William Watts, a judge of the District Court of the 14th Judicial District in Minnesota, at his Chambers at the court house in the city of Crookston in said county on Saturday, the 25th day of May, A. D., 1907 at 10 o'clock a. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

To the Judge of the District Court, of 14th Judicial District, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the public ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a public ditch along the following described route in the towns of Gully, Chester, in Polk Co., and town of Lambert, in County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.'

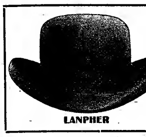
A general description of the proposed starting point and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at a point at the quarter corner between sections 23 and 24, township 150, N. Range 39, W. and running due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 23, 22, 21, 20 and 19 in said township 150 N. Range 39, W. thence due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 24, 23, 22, 21 and 20 in Township 150, N. Range 40, W. until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 20 and 19 of said township 150, N. Range 40, W. thence in a northwesterly direction across the N. E. ¼ of section 19, said township and range, until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 19 and 18 of said township and range, thence in a northwesterly direction across the west half of section 18 and said township and range, entering Red Lake County ditch known as Lambert ditch No. 1. near the corner common to sections 7 and 18, T. 150, N. Range 40, W. and sections 12 and 13, T. 150 N. Range 41 W. thence following down this said Lambert ditch No. 1, to a point in said ditch where said ditch has sufficient capacity to properly carry such waters as may be brought in by said proposed ditch taking its outlet therein.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such public ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred Thirty (230), of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905.

Dated this 30th day of April, A. D. 1907.
—W. A. LANCTOT,
Clerk of the District Court,
14th Judicial District, Polk
m2 County, Minnesota.

Subscribe for The Gazette.

$500 In Prizes Given Away



LANPHER

By Lanpher-Skinner & Co.
Makers of

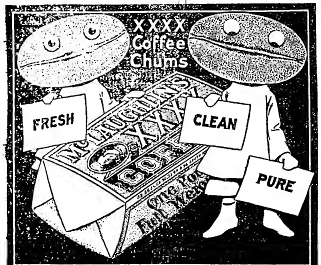
LANPHER

LANPHER HATS

The makers of the ever-popular Lanpher Hats are offering some substantial cash prizes to those who can guess the nearest to the number of Lanpher Hats that will be sold during the spring season of 1907. It will cost you nothing to make a guess and may bring you a good sized cash prize. Try it. Call at Garceau & Zaiser's store and they will tell you all about it.

Bargains in Spring and Summer Dress Goods

THE BUSY STORE
GARCEAU & ZAISER



A Really Good Coffee
At a Reasonable Price

McLaughlin's XXXX comes to you in clean, sanitary packages; always fresh and sweet. Each package contains one full pound of coffee, and it's a good, satisfactory drink every time, for it is always the same.

In fact, it can be called the Standard Coffee.

Do not confuse XXXX with inferior coffees put up in packages.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE
M. SKALA
GARCEAU & ZAISER
J. W. B. NIMESGREN

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's
HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

Don't Grind YOUR LIFE AWAY
Become a demonstrator and earn $5.00 to $10.00 a day. Men or Women. Guaranteed salary if wanted. Household necessity—sells like magic. Our factory working overtime. [illegible] today.
COLONIAL [illegible]

Last Mountain Valley Lands

We own thousands of acres of Choice Selected Land in this district, which is right in the heart of the Great Wheat Plains of Saskatchewan. The richness of the soil in this district is shown in the reports to the Government which give an average of 26½ bushels of wheat to the acre for 1906. The great development of this part of Western Canada has brought about the competition of 3 railways. Ample timber for fuel and fencing. Send 15c for beautiful, new souvenir book, entitled "The Lake and the Land of the Last Mountain Valley." Also 20th Century Atlas of Canada sent with souvenir book. Write to-day. Maps, descriptive matter, etc., on request.

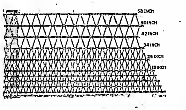
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.
Northern Bank Building, Winnipeg, Canada.

HOG FENCING

Do You Need
Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb bottom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.
General Hardware
Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

The Best of Everything

NORTHERN PACIFIC Through Vestibuled Trains, each way between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, and Superior and North Pacific Coast Points, carry the latest styles of through Pullman Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars, Dining Cars, and handsome Day coaches. Dining Cars run through and meals are served at regular hours each day.

"North Coast Limited"

daily in each direction—Steam Heated; Electric Lighted Library, Buffet, Baths and Barber Shop in its unique Observation Car.

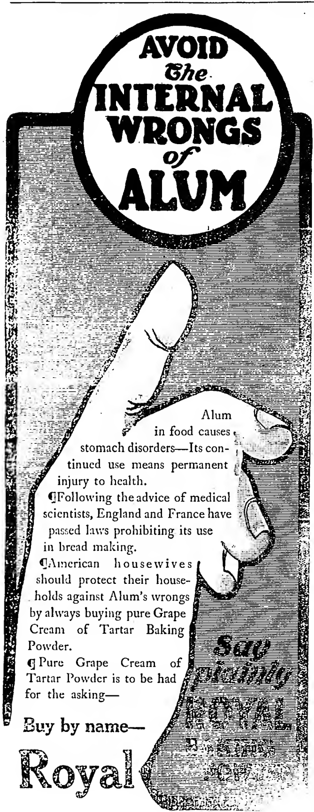
SEND FOR NORTH COAST LIMITED BOOKLET.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Northern Pacific Railway

A. M. CLELAND,
General Passenger Agent
St. Paul, Minn.



AVOID
The INTERNAL WRONGS
of
ALUM

Alum in food causes stomach disorders—Its continued use means permanent injury to health.

¶Following the advice of medical scientists, England and France have passed laws prohibiting its use in bread making.

¶American housewives should protect their households against Alum's wrongs by always buying pure Grape Cream of Tartar Baking Powder.

¶Pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder is to be had for the asking—

Buy by name—

Royal

The Local Field---

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 perecnt.

Helmuth Zaiser went over to Grand Forks last evening on a business trip.

F. L. Farley returned Saturday from a business trip to the Twin Cities.

L. P. Berthon left Monday for a week's business trip to the Twin Cities and Chicago.

A baby girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J, Dufault, of Gentilly, on Sunday, April 28th.

Ernest Buse returned Friday from a two weeks trip to Red Wing and other points in the southern part of the state.

The firemen have added a new hose cart to their equipment. The cart was purchased of the Waterous Engine Co., of St. Paul, and was received Monday.

Tho following marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk of Court Johnson during the past few days: Halvor K. Homme and Thone Knutson of Highlanding; and John Gullingsrup and Marie O. Nord, of Kratka.

The Pereheron stallion, Fred, weight 1700, will stand the season at Guerin Bros. barn. We also have a high grade Jack which will serve at our barn during the season. Anyone wishing horses castrated should give us a call. 31-4 —Guerin Bros.

When a man in search of a home or business location goes to a town and finds everybody full of hope and enthusiasm over the prospects of the place' he, too soon becomes imbued with the same spirit, drives down his stakes and goes to work with equal interest.

S. Hall left Tuesday for Crookston where he has a position at the Wallace drug store in that city. Mr. Hall is an experienced pharmacist and will be a valuable addition to the Wallace clerical force. Mrs. Hall will remain in this city for a few weeks visit.

Frank Jeffers was a St. Hilaire caller Friday.

Father Ambrose was the guest of Father Adolph of Thief River Falls Monday.

P. B. Gaass has been quite ill during the past week, but at this writing is improving rapidly.

Mrs. C. O. Kankel returned Monday from a fortnight's visit with friends at Fertile and Crookston.

Sheriff Nelson went up to Thief River yesterday to transaet business in connection with his office.

The season is late, better go to Spillane's, The Right Store, and get some quick growing garden and flower seeds.

Mrs. E. W. Chamberlain returned Saturday from a two weeks' visit with relatives at New Ulm, Tracy and other points in the southern part of the state.

J. B. Armstrong left last evening for an extended business trip to the Twin Cities, Milwaukee and Chicago. Jim & Paul are both away this week and the store is in charge of Al Pouliot.

When you have glasses fitted take no chances; but have your eyes examined by a Specialist whose ability is unquestioned, Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, May 7. At Grand View Hotel.

Ralph Green, the popular Equality township farmer, spent several days in the city last week looking after business matters. Mr. Green says that he will not put in a very large aerage of wheat this y ar as be believes that diversified farming is the only salvation of the farmer in this country, which he has already demonstrated to be a fact and his example could be followed with profit by many others in this section. Mr. Green was accompanied homo by his daughter, Miss Louis, who will teach a term of school in that neighborhood this summer.

John Doyea was a Thief River visitor Saturday.

County Attorney Germo made a business trip to Crookston on Friday of last week.

Fresh fancy cookies, a big stock just received at Freund's. Call in and see them.

Chas. Bourdon went over to Waubun Wednesday to look after business in the banking line at that place.

H. W. Ollig of Winthrop, came up from that place Wednesday to look after his extensive farming interests in this vicinity.

Pat Sullivan was an over Sunday visitor with friends in this city, and left on Monday to go up the river to bring down the first drive of the season.

County Surveyor Wood came down from Thief River Monday and has been finishing bis work on the Duffy ditch east of town so that the contractor can begin operations at once.

W. G. Smith, proprietor of the Lakeside Hotel at Maple Lake, has leased the building and fixtures to Phil Darcey, proprietos of the Antlers Hotel at Grand Forks, and the latter will run the hotel this summer.

Frank Brouillet left Monday for a few days visit with his parents at Hamilton, N. D. Mr. Brouillet may visit Rochester, before he returns, to have an operation performed for a growth on his nether lip which has been troubling him for some time past.

The condition of Miss Clara Zaiser who has been quite ill for some time past, is such that it was finally decided that an operation would be necessary, and Drs. Dunlap and Smith of Crookston were ealled today and will probably perform an operation this afternoon.

There will be a large class initiation on next Monday, May 6, at the M. B. A. hall and all members are specially requested to be present. The secret work will be given by District Deputy Leighton and a dance social will follow for members only. Members will bring their lunch and insure the success of the occasion by coming to the meeting.

Chas. E. Patterson, of St. Paul, spent several days in this vicinity this week looking over land and will probably invest in a good sized chunk of Red Lake county soil.' Years ago Mr. Patterson and Ed. L. Healy were in business together at Marshall, Minn. Mr. Patterson is now one of the proprietors of the Auto Transfer Line which does business in and between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The fishing season opened yesterday and already the members of the finny tribe are being lured from the depths of their favorite pools. Several fine catches have been reported, and in a few days the nimrods will all be reveling in the delights of the fisherman. One enthusiastic angler reports that he has two quarts of fine old Pickwick bait laid up for his first expedition. We have been camping on his trail for three days but haven't been able to locate the bait.

Here is a receipt of a Minnesota man for killing weeds along the highway: "Take 20 cents worth of white clover, 10 cents worth of timothy and 20 cents worth of blue grass seed, mix thoroughly and sow on both sides of the road." This fifty cents worth of seed will be enough for a mile of road. Now our farmers could not spend fifty cents to better advantage, and this paper would like to see it tried this year.

The New Jersey experiment station recently experimented feeding milk cows with cow pea hay; and found that with the cow pea ration milk was made at the cost of 39.8 per 100 pounds, while the cost on a grain ration was 60 5 cents. On the grain ration the cows produced 8.3 per cent. more milk and 15.2 per cent. more buteer, but comparison of the price of feeds showed a large balance in favor of the cow pea ration. Why not plan to sow a few acres to cow peas next season?

On Wednesday afternoon Mesdames Sivertson, Hunt, Simons and Argue were hostesses at a charming May Day Festival given to about sixty guests at the Odd Fellows hall. The hall was tastily and beautifully decorated in accordance with the old English custom of decorating for the May Day Festival which had become almost obsolete, but has been revived and is becoming decidedly popular again in social circles. Floral and bird contests constituted two of the principal features of amusement, being both unique and instructively entertaining. The first prize in the floral contest, a beautiful fern, was captured by Mrs. Theo. LaBissoniere, while Mrs. Ovide Emard's knowledge of the feathered tribe enabled her to carry of the honors in bird contest, which consisted of a dainty box of bon bons a la duck. Verses and quotations from poems were used to represent the names of the different birds, while rheubus words were used for the flowers. A dainty luncheon was serve and the guests all look back upon the occasion as one of the most delightful of the season.

WANTED!

Carload of POTATOES

Will Load A Car of Potatoes on G. N. Track
Monday and Tuesday, May 6th and 7th

Potatoes must be sound, free from scab. no sprouts on and not too many small ones. We will not be too particular, but we want good potatoes. Will take some in before Monday, but will have to hold sacks until we load up. This will probably be the only car shipped out of here this season. So we advise you to sell now whilst your potatoes are sound and have the weight.

Price 40c Per Bushel

Everybody says it pays to trade at . . .

The Big Store

Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Supt. McAnulty is busy visiting the rural schools throughout the county.

A baby girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kankel on Tuesday, April 30th.

Mrs. Marschand was the guest of Thief River friends the first of the week.

Frank Jeffers returned to Minneapolis Monday, where he will resume bis work on the road for the Miller-Davis Printing Co.

Hereafter grass on state lands will be sold at public auction and that not sold at auction will be disposed of by the county auditor at private sale.

Judge of Probate Tarrant went up to Thief River yesterday to attend to business matters and visit with his numerous friends at that place.

Wanted: Gentleman or lady to travel for mercantile house of $250,000 00 capital. If desiraole the home may be used as headquarters. Weekly salary of $1,092.00 per year and expenses. Address J. A. Alexander, 125 Plymouth Place, Chicago, Ill.

Local tennis enthusiasts are looking for recruits for the court and if a sufficient number can be interested a tennis club will be organized and suitable gronnds secured on which to play during the coming summer. Tennis is one of the finest outdoor games played, and being one in which the ladies can join there should be no difficulty in getting a club started in this city.

The band boys got together Sunday and Photographer Reichel took an excelient picture of the entire band in uniform. There were twenty-seven members represented with Dr. J. E. Argue doing the honors of drum major. The proof brings out every member clearly and the picture when finished promises to be one that will be highly prized by supporters of the organization. Several cuts will be made from the photo and will be used for advertising purposes.

Oscar Carlson and Alad Morisette were over from Plummer Tuesday.

F. E. Hunt spent several days looking after business matters at Brooks last week.

Mrs. P. W. Roark returned to her home at Kellher the first of the week after having spent some time visiting with relatives in this city.

St. Hilaire Spectator: E. M. Hoff concluded a deal this week whereby he becomes the owner of a large farm in Wa sb conntv, N. D., near Adams, and C. A. Jeglum and Arne Thompson, of Adams, become the owners of Mr. Hoff's entire stock of general merchandise. The store is closed this week to take an invoice and it is the intention of the owners to open for business next Monday. C. A. Jeglum, the head of the new firm, is here taking the invoice, but will not remain. He is the cashier of the 1st National Bank of Adams. Mr. Jeglum informs us that it is their intention to close out the stock here and that A Johnson, assistant cashier of the State Bank of Edinburg, N. D., will have charge of the store as manager. Mr Hoff has not yet decided what he will do, but will for the present remain here.

Thief River Press: Patrolman Geo. Jarman has received a letter from Warden Wolfer of the Minnesota state prison, asking for additional information as to the circumstances that lead to the conviction of Charley Erickson, one of the Soo box car burglars, who was in April, 1906, sentenced to two years in the penitentiaty. Erickson has asked the pardon board for his parole. It is more than likely that Erickson will be parolled. Hathaway, of the same gang, was released some two weeks ago and Hagen has completed his sentence. so there seems to be a sentiment among the prison authorities to deal leniently with the young men, who, while reckless and unthinking, were not really vicious They have undoubtedly learned a lesson and no harm will result from setting all at liberty.

Notice of Dissolution.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing between George Dupont of Terrebonne, Minn., and O. Bossonneau of Brooks, Minn., doing business under the firm name of Dupont & Bossonneau has been this day dissolved.

Geo. Dupont will continue the business at the old stand.

Dated at Terrebonne, Minn., this 19th day of April, 1907.

—Geo. Dupont,
—O. Bossonneau.

Miss Clara Johnson came over from Wylie, Friday, for a few days visit with her brother, C. W. Johnson.

Harry Mitchell's
EDITORIAL.

I want to make your spring suit. I want to show you that for $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00 I can make you a better suit than you can get at your local tailors for $30.00, $35.00 and $40.00.

My Spring goods have now arrived, and they are the most beautiful fabrics I ever saw.

Write me today for samples and tell me about the kind of clothes you are thinking of getting. By return mail I'll send you a bunch to select from, also self-measurement blanks.

Remember, I have the largest tailoring establishment in the world, that I absolutely guarantee perfect fit and satisfaction or refund your money; and I pay all express charges, so your clothes cost you no more than if you got them right here in Minneapolis.

Yours truly,
HARRY MITCHELL,
310 Nicollet Ave Minneapolis, Minn.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints
The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,
Small Farm Implements
Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXVIII.—Continued.

He had been all animation and eagerness in the telling of the story, but had now become curiously silent and listless; so that, although she was eager with many questions about what he had said, she did not ask them, waiting to see if he would not talk again. But instead of talking, he stayed silent and presently began to fidget in his chair. At last he said, "If you'll excuse us, Miss Prudence, your pa and I have got a little business matter to talk over to-night. I guess we can go down here by the corral and do it."

But she arose quickly and bade him good night. "I hope I shall see you tomorrow," she said.

She bent over to kiss her father as she went in, and when she had done so, warned him that he must not sit in the night air.

"Why your face is actually wet with a cold sweat. You ought to come in at once."

"After a very little, dear. Go to bed now—and always be a good girl!"

"And you've grown so hoarse sitting here."

"In a little while,—always be a good girl!"

She went in with a parting admonition. "Remember your cough—good night!"

When she had gone neither man stirred for the space of a minute. The little man, huddled in his seat, had not changed his position; he still sat with his chair tilted back against the house, his chin on his breast.

The other had remained standing where the girl left him, the revolver in his hand. After the minute of silence he crossed over and stood in front of the seated man.

"Come," he said, gruffly, "where do you want to go?"

CHAPTER XXIX.

How the Avenger Bungled His Vengeance.

At last he stood up, slowly, unsteadily, grasping Follett by the arm for support. He spoke almost in a whisper.

"Come back here first—to talk—then I'll go with you."

He entered the house, the young man following close, suspicious, narrowly watchful.

"No fooling, now,—feel the end of that gun in your back?" The other made no reply. Inside the door he took a candle from the box against the wall and lighted it.

"Don't think I'm trying anything—come here."

They went on, the little bent man ahead holding the candle well up. His room was at the far end of the long house. When they reached it, he closed the door and fixed the candle on the table in some of its own grease. Then he pointed Follett to the one stool in the little cell-like room, and threw himself face down on the bed.

Follett, still standing, waited for him to speak. After a moment's silence he grew impatient.

"Come, come! What would you be saying if you were talking? I can't wait here all night."

But the little man on the bed was still silent, nor did he stir, and after another wait Follett broke out again.

"If you want to talk, talk, I tell you. If you don't want to, I can say all I have to say, quick."

Then the other turned himself over on the bed and half sat up, leaning on his elbow.

"I'm sorry to keep you waiting, but you see I'm so weak"—the strained little smile came to his face—"and tremble so, there's so much to think of—do you hear those women scream—there! did you hear that?—but of course not. Now—wait just a moment—have you come to kill me?"

"You and those two other hellions—the two that took me and that boy out that night to bury us."

"Did you think of the consequences?"

"I reckon you'd be called paid for, any time any one come gunning for you. I didn't think there'd be any consequences."

"Hereafter, I mean; to your soul. What a pity you didn't wait a little longer! Those other two are already punished."

"Don't lie to me now?"

The little smile lighted his face again.

"I have a load of sin on me—but I don't think I ever did lie to any one—I guess I never was tempted—"

"Oh, you've acted lies enough."

"You're right—that's so. But I'm telling you truth now—those two men had both been in the Meadows that day and it killed them. One went crazy and ran off into the desert. They found his bones. The other shot himself a few years ago. Those of us that live are already in hell—"

He sat up, now animated for the moment.

"—In hell right here. I tell you. I'd have welcomed you, or any other man that would kill me, any time this 15 years. I'd have gone out to meet you. Do you think I like to hear the women scream? Do you think I'm not crazed myself by this thing—right back of me here, now—crawling, bleeding, breathing on me—trying to come here in front where I must see it? Don't you see God has known how to punish me worse than you could, just by keeping me alive and sane? Oh, man! you don't know how I've longed for that bullet of yours, right here through the temples where the cries sound worst. I didn't dare to do it myself—I was afraid I'd make my punishment worse if I tried to shirk; but I used to hope you would come as you said you would. I wonder I didn't know you at once."

He put his hands to his head and fell back again on the pillow, with a little moan.

"Well, it ain't strange I didn't know you. I was looking for a big man. You seemed as big as a house to me that day. I forgot that I'd grown up and you might be small. When those fellows got tight up there and let on like it was you that some folks hinted had took a child and kept it out of that muss, I couldn't hardly believe it; and everybody seeming to regard you so highly. And I couldn't believe this big girl was little Prue Girnway that I remembered. It seemed like you two would have to be a great big man and a little bit of a baby girl with yellow hair; and now I find you're—say, Mister, honestly, you're such a poor, brokedown, little coot it seems a'most like a shame to put a bullet through you, in spite of all your doings!"

The little man sat up again, with new animation in his eyes,—the same eager boyishness that he had somehow kept through all his years.

"Don't!" he exclaimed, earnestly. "Let me beg you, don't kill me! For your own sake—not for mine. I'm a poor, meatless husk. I'll die soon at best, and I'm already in a hell you can't make any hotter. Let me do you this service; let me persuade you not to kill me. Have you ever killed a man?"

"No, not yet; I've allowed to a couple of times, but it's never come just that way."

"You ought to thank God. Don't ever. You'll be in hell as sure as you do,—a hell right here that you must carry inside of you forever—that even God can't take out of you."

Follett slowly put the revolver into its holster and sat down on the low stool.

"I don't know anything about all this hell-talk, but I see I can't kill you—you're such a poor, miserable cuss. And I thought you were a big, strong man, handy with a gun and all that, and like as not I'd have to make a quick draw on you when the time come. And now look at you! Why, Mister, I'm doggoned if I ain't almost sorry for you! You sure have been getting your deservance good and plenty. Say, what in God's name did you all do such a hellish thing for, anyway?"

"We had been persecuted, hunted, and driven, our Prophet murdered, our women and children butchered, and another army was on the way."

"Well, that was because you were such an ornery lot, always setting yourself up against the government wherever you went, and acting scandalous—"

"We did as the Lord directed us—"

"Oh, shucks!"

"And then we thought the time had come to stand up for our rights; that the Lord meant us to be free and independent."

"Secesh, eh?" Follett was amused. "You handful of Mormons—Uncle Sam could have licked you with both hands tied behind him. Why, you crazy fool, he'd have spit on you and drowned every last one of you, old Brigham Young and all. Fighting the United States! A few dozen women-butchers going to do what the whole South couldn't! Well, I am danged."

He mused over it, and for awhile neither spoke.

"And the nearest you ever got to it was cutting up a lot of women and children after you'd cheated the men into giving up their guns!"

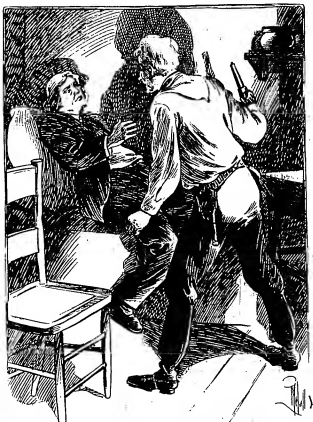
The other groaned.

"There now, that's right—don't you see that hurts worse than killing?"

"But I certainly wish I could have got those other two that took us off into the sage-brush that night. I didn't guess what for, but the first thing I knew the other boy was scratching, and kicking, and hollering, and like to have wriggled away, so the cuss that was with me ran up to help. Then I heard little John making a kind of a squeally noise in his throat like he was being choked, and that was all I wanted. I legged it into the sage-brush. I heard them swearing and coming after me, and ran harder, and, what saved me, I tripped and fell down and hurt myself, so I lay still and they lost track of me. I was scared, I promise you that; but after they got off a ways I worked in the other direction by spells till I got to a little wady, and by sunup they weren't in sight any longer. When I saw the Indians coming along I wasn't a bit scared. I knew they weren't Mormons."

"I used to pray that you might come back and kill me."

"I used to wish I would grow faster so I could. I was always laying out to do it."



"Oh Man, How I've Longed for That Bullet of Yours!"

"But see how I've been punished. Look at me—I'm 50. I ought to be in my prime. See how I've been burnt out."

"But look here, Mister, what about this girl? Do you think you've been doing right by keeping her here?"

"No, no! it was a wrong as great as the other."

"Why, they're even passing remarks about her mother, those that don't know where you got her,—saying it was some one you never married, because the book shows your first wife was this one-handed woman here."

"I know, I know it. I meant to let her go back at first, but she took hold of me, and her father and mother were both dead."

"She's got a grandfather and grandmother, alive and hearty, back at Springfield."

"She is all that has kept me alive these last years."

"She's got to go back to her people now. She'll want to bad enough when she knows about this."

"About this? Surely you won't tell her—"

"Look here now, why not? What do you expect?"

"But she loves me—she does—and she's all I've got. Man, man! don't pile it all on me just at the last."

He was off the bed and on his knees before Follett.

"Don't put it all on me. I've rounded up my back to the rest of it, but keep this off; please, please don't. Let her always think I'm not bad. Give me that one thing out of all the world."

He tried to reach the young man's hand, but was pushed roughly away.

"Don't do that—get up—stop, I tell you. That ain't any way to do. There now! Lie down again. What do you want? I'm not going to leave that girl with you nor with your infernal Church. You understand that."

"Yes, yes, I know it. It was right that you should be the one to come and take her away. The Lord's vengeance was well thought out. Oh, how much more He can make us suffer than you could with your clumsy killings! She must go, but wait—not yet—not yet. Oh, my God! I couldn't stand it to see her go. It would cut into my heart and leave me to bleed to death. No, no, no—don't! Please don't! Don't pile it all on me at the last. The end has come anyway. Don't do that—don't, don't!"

"There, there, be still now." There was a rough sort of soothing in Follett's voice, and they were both silent a moment. Then the young man went on:

"But what do you expect? Suppose everything was left to you, Mister. Come now, you're trying to talk fair. Suppose I leave it to you—only you know you can't keep her."

"Yes, it can't be, but let her stay a little while; let me se her a few times more; let me know she doesn't think I'm bad; and promise never to tell her all of it. Let her always think I was a good man. Do you promise me that. I'd do it for you, Follett. It won't hurt you. Let her think I was a good man."

"How long do you want her to stay here?—a week, ten days?"

"It will kill me when she goes!"

"Oh, well, two weeks?"

"That's good of you; you're kinder at your age than I was—I shall die when she goes."

"Well, I wouldn't want to live if I were you."

"Just a little longer, knowing that she cares for me. I've never been free to have the love of a woman the way you will some day, though I've hungered and sickened for it—for a woman who would understand and be close. But this girl has been the soul of it some way. See here, Follett, let her stay this summer, or until I'm dead. That can't be a long time. I've felt the end coming for a year now. Let her stay, believing in me. Let me know to the last that I'm the only man who has been in her heart, who has won her confidence and her love. Oh, I mean fair. You stay with us yourself and watch. Come—but look there, look, man!"

"Well,—what?"

"That candle is going out,—we'll be in the dark"—he grasped the other's arm—"in the dark, and now I'm afraid again. Don't leave me here! It would be an awful death to die. Here's that thing now on the bed behind me. It's trying to get around in front where I'll have to see it—get another candle. No—don't leave me,—this one will go out while you're gone." All his strength went into the grip on Follett's arm. The candle was sputtering in its pool of grease.

"There, it's gone—now don't, don't leave me. It's trying to crawl over me—I smell the blood—"

"Well—lie down there—it serves you right. There—stop it—I'll stay with you."

Until dawn Follett sat by the bunk, submitting his arm to the other's frenzied grip. From time to time he somewhat awkwardly uttered little words that were meant to be soothing, as he would have done to a frightened child.

When morning brought the gray light into the little room, the haunted man fell into a doze, and Follett, gently unclasping the hands from his arm, arose and went softly out. He was cramped from sitting still so long, and chilled, and his arm hurt where the other had gripped it. He pulled back the blue woollen sleeve and saw above his wrist livid marks where the nails had sunk into his flesh.

Then out of the room back of him came a sharp cry, as from one who had awakened from a dream of terror. He stepped to the door again and looked in.

"There now—don't be scared any more. The daylight has come; it's all right—all right—go to sleep now—"

He stood listening until the man he had come to kill was again quiet. Then he went outside and over to the creek back of the willows to bathe in the fresh running water.

CHAPTER XXX.

Rual Follett's Way of Business.

By the time the women were stirring that morning, Follett galloped up on his horse. Prudence saw him from the doorway as he turned in from the main road, sitting his saddle with apparent carelessness, his arms loose from the shoulders, shifting lightly with the horse's motion, as one who had made the center of gravity his slave. It was a style of riding that would have made a scandal in any riding school; but it seemed to be well calculated for the quick halts, sudden swerves, and acute angles affected by the yearling steer in his moments of excitement.

He dismounted, glowing from his bath in the icy water of the creek and from the headlong gallop up from Bell Wardle's corral.

"Good morning, Miss Prudence."

"Good morning, Mr. Follett. Will you take breakfast with us directly?"

"Yes, and it can't be too directly for me. I'm wolfish. Miss Prudence, your pa and me had some talk last night, and I'm going to bunk in with you all for awhile, till I get some business fixed up."

She smiled with unaffected gladness, and he noticed that her fresh morning color was like that of the little wild roses he had lately brushed the dew from along the creek.

"We shall be glad to have you."

"It's right kind of you; I'm proud to hear you say so." He had taken off the saddle with its gay colored Navajo blanket, and the bridle of plaited rawhide with its conchos and its silver bit. Now he rubbed the back of his horse where the saddle had been, ending with a slap that sent the beast off with head down and glad heels in the air.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ZEAL WITHOUT COMMON SENSE.

Striking Example Related by the Late Dr. Field.

A Presbyterian clergyman was praising the late Dr. Henry Martin Field of Stockbridge, who for 44 years edited the Evangelist.

"Dr. Field did so much good," he said, "because he went about his work diplomatically, sensibly reasonably. I once heard him declare that reformers failed often because the moment they started a reform they dropped common sense. Common sense was swallowed up in zeal. He said that a nerve cure faddist once entered a shop and leading the proprietor to one side whispered mysteriously: 'Ah, my friend, you can do the race untold good if you will only take the agency for our anti-tea preparation. It is warranted to cure in a week the most confirmed and nerve-racked tea tippler. Never again—'

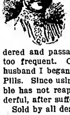
"But the dealer laughed and drew away. 'You have made a mistake,' he said. 'I can't take such an agency as that. Don't you see that this is a teashop?'

"'Oh, no mistake,' said the reformer eagerly. 'It is because you run a teashop that I have sought you out. You come into constant contact with the very people we are trying to reach.'"

A MISSOURI WOMAN

Tells a Story of Awful Suffering and Wonderful Relief.

Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of 603 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says: "Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."



Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

HOW CLASSIC WAS WRITTEN.

Bret Harte's Great Poem Result of an Inspiration.

The war correspondent, Frederic Villiers, has recorded a talk with Bret Harte apropos of the poem, "Dickens in Camp:" "We all felt his loss most keenly in the States," said Harte:

"On hearing of his death (I) sat down about three in the afternoon to write an editorial on the great author. I wrote one and then tore it up. Then another, after much pains, was written. This did not please me, so I tore it up. I wrote yet another and threw it into the waste paper basket; it would not do. It was getting late, and I was now keeping the paper waiting for press. I was drumming on my desk, absolutely without another thought in my head; I had run dry. Suddenly I mechanically began to write and the result was the thing you seem to like so much. Well, Mr. Villiers, you are not far out. I like it, too."

BLOOD GETS SOUR.

Gives Advice and Tells of Simple Home Mixture.

At this time of year, says a well-known authority, the Kidneys become weak, clogged and inactive, failing to filter out the poisons and acids, which sour the blood, causing not only facial and bodily eruptions, but the worst forms of Rheumatism, Nervous and Stomach troubles, Backache and painful, annoying Urinary afflictions.

It is worth anyone's time now to get from some good prescription pharmacy the following ingredients: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after your meals and at bedtime.

This simple home-made mixture will force the Kidneys to normal, healthy action, so they will filter and strain all uric acid and poisonous waste matter from the blood, and expel this in the urine, at the same time restoring the "full blood count"—that is, 95 per cent. red blood corpuscles—which is absolutely indispensable to perfect health.

Little One's Prayer.

Mary always gets a little piece of candy every day to keep her from being naughty. One day she was naughty, and she did not get her candy. That night when she was going to bed she said her prayers as follows: "Our Father, who art in heaven, please give me my daily candy."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Illinois Pheasant Hatchery.

Out of 5,500 English pheasant eggs lately imported by the game commissioner of Illinois 3,000 healthy chicks have been hatched.

Take Garfield Tea in the Spring—it will save you many days of headache, lassitude and general ill health. This natural laxative purifies the blood, cleanses the system and establishes a normal action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

No conquest is so severe as his who labors to subdue himself.—T. a Kempis.

TEXAS GULF COAST LANDS.
No blizzards, no heat prostrations. Growing crops all year. Live Agts. wanted.
THEO. F. KOCH, ST. PAUL, MINN.

It's difficult to make light of the shadow of suspicion.

WEIGHT AND HEALTH

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE NEED THE TONIC TREATMENT.

This Women Took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, Gained Thirty Pounds and Has Been Well Ever Since.

How many women—and men too—are suffering from a general decline in health which the ordinary remedies seem unable to check! How many husbands see their wives wasting away, steadily losing health and beauty, and are powerless to help! Consumption and other germ diseases find in these debilitated systems easy prey, for the lowered vitality is unequal to the task of fighting off the infection of these diseases to which most of us are almost daily exposed.

The symptoms indicating the decline which may have results so fatal could scarcely be better described than in the statement of Mrs. William Manley, of 92 Court street, Utica, N. Y. Her case is a typical one. She says:

"For six months after the birth of my baby, I suffered from sick, dizzy headaches, which seemed like a rush of blood to my forehead, just back of my eyes. Some days they twitched so I could hardly see and black spots floated before them. The least exertion brought on this sickness. My appetite was poor and I was often sick to my stomach.

"If I tried to work my feet soon became swollen, paining me terribly. I had sinking spells and grew pale and nervous. I was so thin that I weighed only 95 pounds.

"One day when at the drug store to get headache powders I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills instead. I soon noticed that my headache was disappearing and my nerves gradually grew stronger. The pills gave me a hearty appetite and I now weigh over 130 pounds. I believe the pills to be the best tonic and builder a woman can take, as they certainly helped me when my condition was critical and I have never been seriously ill since."

The great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills lies in the fact that they actually make new blood and this carries health and strength to every portion of the body. The stomach is toned up, the nerves are strengthened, every organ is stimulated to do its work.

If you are ill and the treatment you are taking does not cure you, write for proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done in similar cases.

Your druggist sells them or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

Paint Your House Right

this time by insisting upon having

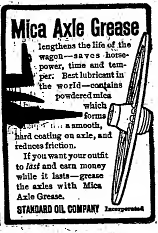
MASURY'S HOUSE PAINTS

which are the paints that

LIVE THE LONGEST

They have greater preservative qualities and will maintain their original appearance years after inferior substitutes have vanished. They have been the standard house paints for sixty-five years and have never failed to give complete satisfaction.

JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO



Mica Axle Grease

lengthens the life of the wagon—saves horse-power, time and temper. Best lubricant in the world—contains powdered mica which forms a smooth, hard coating on axle, and reduces friction.

If you want your outfit to last and earn money while it lasts—grease the axles with Mica Axle Grease.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY Incorporated

THE DRAGGING OF ROADS.

With Very Little Work a Good Roadbed May Be Maintained.

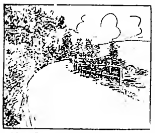
Once more we take up our parable and insist on farmers making preparations to make the best possible roads they can out of the material at hand, which is just plain dirt, and the more clay in it the better.

Farmers are fooling away the great bulk of their road taxes every year by not using a drag. The road drag may be made out of any light wood—pine, cedar, cottonwood, soft maple, box elder. If a post or log is used it should be seven feet long, about six or eight inches thick, sawed in two lengthwise, the two pieces put split side foremost about three and a half feet apart, held together by pieces of hard wood or steel rods. A log chain should be attached to the front and the team hitched to it in such a way that the drag is drawn at an angle of 45 degrees. The drag should be drawn up one side of the road and down the other when the roads are soft. The team used should be the heaviest, slowest-moving team on the farm.

Before Dragging

The use of this will in the first place smooth the roads down, filling up the holes, taking off the bumps, and dragging a little dirt to the middle of the road. In the second place it will allow the winds to blow over it and the sun to shine on it; and the dragged road will be dry a day or two, and, if it has many ruts in it, sometimes a week, before the undragged will be dry.

Do not, however, expect the drag to do any good in sand or in muck, or where there are stones in the road or stumps or much grass, or where the water stands in the ditches on either side. The road drag, declares Wallace's Farmer, is the best road maintainer that has ever been discovered, and not only the best, but the cheapest. It will not take the place of the grader in making the road in the first place, nor will it take the place of the tile ditch which carries off the water, nor will it do in any undrained land. It is not everything in road-making, but for the maintenance of the road after it has once been put in shape it excels every other implement ever yet invented.



After Dragging and Top-dressing.

If farmers don't take hold of this road drag it will not be many years before an attempt will be made to levy on them the expense of making macadamized roads, about three to five thousand dollars per mile, and these macadamized roads will cost more to maintain them than it will to make and maintain a good dirt road with the materials and tools they have on hand.

LOW DOWN WAGONS.

It Will Prove a Most Handy Wagon on the Farm.

I own a low down wagon and will say that it is rightly named by being called a handy wagon, writes a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer. I would not do without one for twice the price of it if I could not get another one. Of course there is a great difference in different makes, as well as in any other thing.

As I own a manure spreader I never use my wagon for that purpose, but I always keep the rack on it. For haying, threshing or shredding they cannot be beaten as the pitchers would tell you, for when my wagon comes to the field they all want to pitch for me.

As to draft, well, they do draw a little harder in some places. Take a gravel road, the wide tires strike more stones than a narrow tire, and a low wheel is harder to roll over a stone than a high, which any sensible man can see, but in the field I can pull my load easier.

The tires on my wagon are four inches wide and I can get over the soft ground better than I ever did before I had it.

In short, the handy wagon is all right if you have the right kind, but some of my neighbors have low wheeled wagons which a team of horses can hardly move when not loaded

DON'T GRUMBLE AT TRIFLES.

Twenty-five Bushels Wheat and Forty-five Bushels Oats Per Acre Are in Western Canada.

Saltcoats, Sask.,
8th December, 1906.

To the Editor.
Dear Sir,

I willingly give you the result of my four and a half years' experience in the District of Saltcoats.

Previous to coming here I farmed in Baldwin, St. Croix County, Wisconsin, and as I have heard a great deal about the Canadian North-West, I decided to take a trip there and see the country for myself. I was so impressed with the richness of the soil that I bought half a section of land about five miles from the town of Saltcoats. I moved on to the land the following June and that year broke 90 acres, which I cropped in 1904, and had 39 bushels wheat per acre. In 1905, with an acreage of 160 acres, I had 24 bushels wheat and 35 bushels of oats per acre. In 1906, with 175 acres under crop, I had 25 bushels wheat and 45 bushels of oats per acre.

From the above mentioned yields you can readily understand that I am very well pleased with the Canadian West. Of course, I have had to work hard, but I don't mind that when I get such a good return for my labor.

To anyone thinking about coming to this country I can truthfully say that if they are prepared to work and not grumble at trifles, they are bound to get on. Some things I would like different, but take the country all round, I don't know where to go to get a better.

Yours truly,
(Signed) O. B. OLSON.

Write to any Canadian Government Agent for literature and full particulars.

GONE FOREVER.

Ten years ago a farmer put his initials on a dollar bill. The next day he went to the nearest town and spent it with a merchant. Before the year was out he got the dollar back. Four times in six years the dollar came back to him for produce and three times he heard of it in the pocket of his neighbors.

The last time he got it back four years ago. He sent it to a mail order house. He never has seen that dollar since, and never will. That dollar bill will never pay any more school or road tax for him, will never build or brighten any of the homes of the community. He sent it entirely out of the circle of usefulness to himself and his neighbors.

Patronize your local merchant who helps you to pay your taxes, support your schools and churches, and lends a helping hand in times of sickness and trouble.

HENS KNEW THEIR BUSINESS.

Never Would They Lay Anything but the Freshest of Eggs.

There is a German dairyman and farmer, whose place is not far from Philadelphia, who greatly plumes himself upon the absolute superiority of his products above all others in the vicinity.

On one occasion he personally applied to a Germantown housekeeper for a transfer of her custom to himself. "I hears dot you haf a lot of drouble with dot dairyman of yours," he said. "Yust you gif me your gustom end der vill be no drouble."

"Are your eggs always fresh?" asked the woman.

"Fresh!" repeated the German, in an indignant tone. "Let me dell you, madam, dot my hens nefer, nefer lay anything but fresh eggs!"

Good Theory, Poor Practice.

To encourage temperance the British admiralty allows 36 cents a month to sailors who forego their daily ration of rum. But, as a sailor who does not wish to drink rum can draw his rations and sell them to other sailors at 80 cents or even more a month, the temperance plan is not so successful as was hoped.

APPENDICITIS.

Not at All Necessary to Operate in Many Cases.

Automobiles and Appendicitis scare some people before they are hit.

Appendicitis is often caused by too much starch in the bowels. Starch is hard to digest and clogs up the digestive machinery—also tends to form cakes in the cecum. (That's the blind pouch at entrance to the appendix.)

A N. H. girl had appendicitis, but lived on milk for awhile—then Grape-Nuts and got well without an operation.

She says: "Five years ago while at school, I suffered terribly with constipation and indigestion." (Too much starch, white bread, potatoes, etc., which she did not digest.)

"Soon after I left school I had an attack of appendicitis and for thirteen weeks lived on milk and water. When I recovered enough to eat solid food there was nothing that would agree with me, until a friend recommended Grape-Nuts.

"When I began to eat Grape-Nuts I weighed 98 lbs., but I soon grew to 115 lbs. The distress after eating left me entirely and now I am like a new person."

(A little Grape-Nuts dissolved in hot water or milk would have been much better for this case than milk alone, for the starchy part of the wheat and barley is changed into a form of digestable sugar in making Grape-Nuts.) Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

(From The Chicago Tribune.)

ADVICE TO RHEUMATICS

Noted Physician Tells How to Prevent and Cure Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

(By Geo. Edmund Flood, M. D.)

If you would avoid Rheumatism and Kidney and Bladder Troubles, be moderate in the consumption of heavy, rich foods, substitute as far as possible soups, broths, fresh milk and drink water—lots of water. Take plenty of time to eat, and don't eat after you have had enough, even if it does taste good. If your work is confining take a moderate amount of exercise each day in the open air.

Of course, neither diet, water, rest nor exercise will cure these afflictions. I advise them as preventives only. For the benefit of the readers of this article who are now afflicted with Rheumatism, Kidney, Bladder or Urinary trouble, and desire to be cured quickly, I give below, complete in every detail, the famous prescription which has made me so successful in the treatment of these diseases. It is the most certain cure for these diseases that I have ever used. It is pleasant to take, it is not expensive, it can be filled by any druggist, and I believe it is the greatest prescription for Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Trouble ever written. It is also a valuable spring tonic and blood purifier. If you are a sufferer, save this, take it to your druggist and have it filled, or get the ingredients and mix them at home.

Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, ½ ounce.

Concentrated Barkola Compound, 1 ounce.

Fluid Extract Prickly Ash Bark, ½ drachm.

Aromatic Elixir, 4 ounces.

Adult dose, take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime; children, one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful after meals.

After you are cured follow the advice I have given you in regard to diet, exercise and water, and you will not need the services of a physician again for these ailments.

Other papers are privileged to copy.

French Sailors Use Drugs.

The extent to which the narcotic habit prevails in the French navy was illustrated a few days ago by the proceedings of a court-martial at Brest. The defendants were half a dozen seamen of ordinary rating, who were charged with a considerable number of robberies. All the men were victims of opium or the the ether habit, or both combined, and were in the habit of bemuddling themselves daily with these drugs and the robberies had been committed to gratify their passion. Severe sentences were passed.

SKIN SORE EIGHT YEARS.

Spent $300 on Doctors and Remedies but Got No Relief—Cuticura Cures in a Week.

"Upon the limbs and between the toes my skin was rough and sore, and also sore under the arms, and I had to stay at home several times because of this affection. Up to a week or so ago I had tried many other remedies and several doctors, and spent about three hundred dollars, without any success, but this is to-day the seventh day that I have been using the Cuticura Remedies (costing a dollar and a half), which have cured me completely, so that I can again attend to my business. I went to work again to-night. I had been suffering for eight years and have now been cured by the Cuticura Remedies within a week. Fritz Hirschlaff, 24 Columbus Ave., New York, N. Y., March 29 and April 6, 1906."

Beet Sugar in the Front.

One hundred years ago the West Indies supplied about one-half of the world's sugar, but the industry is on the decline. The world's crop of beet sugar is now about 6,800,000 tons.

Hides, Furs, Pelts.

Cow hides are worth 10c to 11c per lb., horse hides $2 to $4 each, sheep pelts 50c to $1.50, as to size. Furs are very high, especially Mink and Muskrat. To get all they are worth ship to the old reliable N. W. HIDE & FUR CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

Australians Will Go Back.

Australia has arranged for the repatriation of 1,000 discouraged Australians now in South Africa.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.

Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

Discovery of Alcohol.

Alcohol was discovered in the thirteenth century.

Ship Your Cream to Us.

The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Lies often tread on the toes of the unshod truth.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Some people are too conscientious to preach what they practice.

Old Sofas, Backs of Chairs, etc., can be dyed with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES, fast, bright, durable colors.

It's usually the man who has something to say who doesn't say it.

For Prices on Poultry,

either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

It's difficult for a tight-fisted preacher to hold his congregation.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

A bird in the bush is worth three in the hand—from the bird's viewpoint.

U. S. Sheep Dip, and Cattle

Wash & Disinfectant. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. Northwestern Hide & Fur Co., Mpls, Minn.

The Lutheran church has recently issued a call for 1,000 new ministers to fill vacancies in that denomination.

Pure! Pleasant! Potent! Three interesting facts about Garfield Tea, the Natural laxative. It is made of Herbs and is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drug Law.

Britons Fond of Theatricals.

It is estimated that Great Britain spends $150,000 a day on theaters.

It Cures While You Walk.

Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

United States Leads in Oil.

Of every 100 gallons of illuminating oil used in the world, 54 gallons are produced in the United States.

Famous Book Free.

Every reader of this paper can get free of charge one of Dr. Coffee's famous books which tells of a new method by which persons afflicted with Deafness, Head Noises, Sore Eyes, Failing Sight from any cause, can cure themselves at home at small expense.

Write a letter immediately to Dr. W. O. Coffee, 360 Century Bldg., Des Moines, Ia.

The Rev. W. Arthur Noble of Corea has one of the largest districts in Methodism. Recently he walked 300 miles, the church in one section of his district being near enough for him to do this.

Protective Paint

Pure White Lead Paint protects property against repairs, replacement and deterioration. It makes buildings look better, wear better—and sell better. Use only Pure Linseed Oil and Pure White Lead made by the Old Dutch Process, which is sold in kegs with this Dutch Boy trade mark on the side.

This trade mark protects you against fraudulent White Lead adulterations and substitutes.

SEND FOR BOOK

"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

All lead packed in 1907 bears this mark.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY

In whichever of the following cities is nearest you:

New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia [John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.] Pittsburgh [National Lead & Oil Co.]

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm

Is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at Once.

It cleanses, soothes, heals and protects the diseased membrane. It cures Catarrh and drives away a Cold in the Head quickly. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell. Full size 50 cts. at Druggists or by mail; Trial size 10 cts. by mail. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

A. N. K.—G (1907—17) 2175.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE

Sensible Advice to Women from Mrs. Henry Lee, Mrs. Fred Certia and Mrs. Pinkham.

MRS HENRY LEE MRS. FRED CERTIA

Owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

This is the most critical period of her whole existence and every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time also cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularities, constipation and dizziness are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when this great change may be expected.

Mrs. Fred Certia, 1014 So. Lafayette Street, So. Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the ideal medicine for women who are passing through Change of Life. For several months I suffered from hot flashes, extreme nervousness, headache and sleeplessness. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I had made up my mind there was no help for me until I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my bad symptoms ceased, and it brought me safely through the danger period, built up my system and I am in excellent health. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound unsurpassed for women during this trying period of life."

Mrs. Henry Lee, 60 Winter Street, New Haven, Conn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After suffering untold misery for three years during Change of Life I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wrote you of my condition, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and followed your advice, and to-day I am well and happy. I can now walk anywhere and work as well as anyone, and for years previous I had tried but could not get around without help. I consider your medicine a sovereign balm for suffering women."

Women passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If there is anything about your case you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It is free and has guided thousands to health.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health, actually thousands of women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." It is your duty to yourself and family to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

W. L. DOUGLAS

$3.00 AND $3.50 SHOES BEST IN THE WORLD

W. L. DOUGLAS $4.00 GILT EDGE SHOES CANNOT BE EQUALLED AT ANY PRICE.

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES:

Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

W. L. Douglas shoes are recognized by expert judges of footwear, to be the best in style, fit and wear produced in this country. Each part of the shoe and every detail of the making is looked after and watched over by skilled shoemakers, without regard to time or cost. If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other makes.

W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes. Take No Substitute. Sold by the best shoe dealers everywhere. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively. Catalog mailed free. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

NO PATENT FEE FOR OUR SERVICES

Send for booklet. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., 900 14th St., Washington, D. C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. Estab. 1864.

PROTECT YOUR IDEAS

READERS of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

BATH OF BEAUTY

For Preserving, Purifying and Beautifying the Skin, Scalp, Hair, and Hands.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal, emollient, sanative, antiseptic properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of saponaceous ingredients, and most refreshing of flower odors. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; India, B. K. Paul, Calcutta; So. Africa, Lennon, Ltd., Cape Town, etc.; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave., Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props. Mailed Free, How to Preserve, Purify, and Beautify the Skin, Scalp, Hair, and Hands.

Fertile Farming

LANDS

Cheap
Easy Terms

In the Best Section of the South

Unexcelled for General Farming, Stock Raising, Berries, Fruit and Vegetables.

Cantaloupes, Strawberries, Peaches, Apples, Grapes, etc., give handsome returns.

Cattle need but little winter feed.

HEALTHY CLIMATE.
GOOD WATER.
LONG GROWING SEASON.

Address G. A. PARK, Gen. Im. & Ind'l Agt.

Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

Canadian Government Free Farms

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Over 200,000 American farmers who have settled in Canada during the past few years testify to the fact that Canada is, beyond question, the greatest farming land in the world.

OVER NINETY MILLION BUSHELS

of wheat from the harvest of 1906 means good money to the farmers of Western Canada when the world has to be fed. Cattle Raising, Dairying and Mixed Farming are also profitable callings. Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access. Taxes low.

For advice and information address the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent. CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

FREE To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.

PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT. THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

MY BACK

is so lame, is a common complaint.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

Rubbed on Briskly

removes all lameness and soreness of muscles, and quickly heals cuts, burns, scalds, bites and bruises. Established 1810. 25c., three times as much 50c. All dealers. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

[illegible] per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

The House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute [illegible] Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.

Office over First State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. [illegible], D. M. D.

DENTIST

Office in [illegible] Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.

[illegible] every Wednesday.

[illegible] Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys-at-Law

[illegible] Red Lake Falls. [illegible] Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

TEXAS LANDS We have 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE, and [illegible] VALLEY, Texas, [illegible] the most fertile [illegible]. The [illegible] Pacific Railroad [illegible] Valley lands and the [illegible] Santa Fe will run directly through [illegible]. These lands are exceptionally [illegible] purposes. They were carefully [illegible] purchased them some time ago, [illegible] you prices and terms that are right. LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control [illegible] of this land, which you can do by making [illegible] down, and realize a profit of [illegible]. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 601-3 Pioneer Press Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF ANDREW B. PETERSON.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Andrew B. Peterson, Decedent.

The State of Minnesota to Mathilda Krane, August B. Peterson and [illegible] Peterson, and all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; Therefore, You, and Each of You, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the [illegible] day of May, 1907, at [illegible] o'clock [illegible], why said petition should not be granted.

Witness, The Judge of said Court, and the seal of said Court, this 22nd day of April, 1907.

(Seal) —N. W. TARRANT,
J. K. Harvey Probate Judge.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water caves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open well. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (Pescado cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

The Italian Baby.

No infant receives a warmer welcome to the world or is more happily born than the Italian baby. No infant is the object of more caresses or is more fondly admired. Indeed, no matter how poor the mother and father may be, no matter how large the family, they have very merry times when another son or daughter comes to them. The neighbors are invited in, a feast is prepared, a gallon or two of cheap wine is procured, and the merriment sometimes lasts several days. The Italian considers there are only three great events in the life of man—namely, his birth, marriage and death. These three events never pass without a gorgeous and elaborate celebration. In this simple way they strive to carry out the tender life lesson: "When you were born you wept while those around you smiled. So live that when you die you alone may smile and those around you weep." And so they laugh and drink wine and sing, for they believe it will have an effect upon the life of the quivering form soon to take its place among them.—London Standard.

Machinery of Memory.

The machinery of memory was thus interestingly described by an authority on the brain: "The act of remembering something," he said, "involves a distinct change in the brain substance. The thing to be remembered is recorded by a little nerve cell. The first time the cell does its work an impression is made upon it. But that impression is apt to wear off unless the action of the cell is repeated, and the oftener this is the case the more fixed becomes the impression, or 'cell memory,' as it is called. Suppose that the work of this particular cell is to enable you to recognize a certain smell. If the impression is made but once, the cell may fail to retain it, but if it is repeated several times a lasting impression will be made, and you will recognize the particular odor when you meet with it again."

Southern Wit.

In the early days of the civil war, says Mrs. D. G. Wright in "A Southern Girl In '61," many northern senators were especially violent in their denunciations of the seceding states, occasionally much to the amusement of their listeners.

On one occasion a western senator ended a speech by declaring that were certain threatened events to occur he would "leave this country and join some other nation. Even the Comanches he would prefer to this government in such a case."

Senator Wigfall of Texas rose in answer and stated in a tone of grave remonstrance that he trusted the senator would consider well before he took such a step, "for the Comanches had already suffered too much from contact with the whites."

SPECIALIST

From the
Engelman Medico - Surgical Institute, Detroit, Mich.

Will make their first visit to

Red Lake Falls

And will be at the

Grand View Hotel

Monday and Tuesday
May 6 and 7.

Tell Your Sick Friends

Two Days Only

Office Hours:
Monday 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. Tuesday, 9 to 10 a. m.

FREE

This Institute in order to introduce their new Medical Discoveries and X Radium System, sends at its own expense these eminent specialists to give to those who call on the above date, consultation, examination, advice and all medicine required to complete a cure, absolutely free.

These specialists will diagnose your case and give you the benefit of their medical knowledge. There is no experimenting or guess work. You will be told whether you can be cured or not. If your case is curable, they treat you; if incurable they will give such advice as may prolong your life.

Their treatment gives quick relief and positively cures. Being prepared to suit each individual case, the human system is thoroughly cleansed of the disease in a natural and direct manner and improvement is noticed at once; even the worst cases are treated without any inconvenience to the patient or the pursuing of his daily vocation. If you are improving under your family physician do not come and take up their valuable time. They wish to give each one plenty of time, but cannot listen to long stories not pertaining to your case.

They have discarded the old remedies used for ages by the medical world, and which it would be folly to depend upon any longer, for they do not cure, as thousands die depending on them for relief.

The fact that these Specialists have discovered entirely new treatments and natural cures, gives them control of the Nervous System, Heart, Stomach, Lungs, Kidneys, Catarrh, Consumption, Epilepsy, Deafness, Male and Female Weaknesses, Cancers, Tumors, Piles and other Chronic Diseases.

They treat deafness by an entirely new method, and hearing in many cases is restored at once. Catarrh in all its varied forms cured so that it will never return. If you have weak lungs or consumption do not fail to be examined.

All cases treated can and will be cured, no difference who you have seen or treated with heretofore. Thousands who have given up all hope of being cured, now have an opportunity to consult specialists of reputation.

Don't fail to call, as a visit costs you nothing and may save your life

If you suspect kidney trouble, bring a two-ounce bottle of your urine for chemical and microscopical analysis.

REMEMBER:—The free offer is during this visit only and will not be given again. Persons commencing any treatment after this trip will be required to pay, but not one cent will be asked of those commencing treatment during this visit for any medicine necessary to effect a cure; also a positive guarantee to cure will be given to patients accepted under their system of treatment. Those having long standing and complicated diseases, who have failed to get cured and become discouraged, are especially invited to call, as thousands who have given up all hopes can testify to permanent cures obtained.

NOTICE:—Married Ladies without their Husbands and Minors without their Fathers, will positively not be admitted to consultation.

Don't Forget the Date.

KILL THE COUGH AND CURE THE LUNGS

WITH Dr. King's New Discovery

FOR CONSUMPTION COUGHS and COLDS

Price 50c & $1.00 Free Trial.

Surest and Quickest Cure for all THROAT and LUNG TROUBLES, or MONEY BACK.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20 100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th. A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche
Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Mortgagee.
Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota. m28-m9

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Sixty-Five Dollars ($65.00) interest, which became due May 31, 1906, and which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Douglas Martin and Bessie Martin, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 31st day of May, A. D. 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1905, at 11:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 12 of Mortgages, on page 6 thereof,

And Whereas, It is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter and the Northwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of Section one (1) in township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-three (43) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey eighty (80) acres be the same more or less, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 4th day of May, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the said debt of One Thousand One Hundred Twenty One ($1121.00) Dollars and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated, March 21st, A. D., 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche
Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank)
Wm. J. Brown, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee.
Warren, Minn. mar21-m 2

BULLETIN

Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Mascot

"A Pure Flour."

Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..

BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains

Sample Room In Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel

Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

Minnesota Historical Society
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 9, 1907 No 32

ENRIGHT ANSWERS ENGELSTAD'S LETTER

Black River Township,
May 7th, 1907.

Brother Farmers of Red Lake County:

I had no intention of again giving you my views in print, but the abusive letter signed by P. Engelstad, a so-called "answer" to mine, now being circulated through the county, seems to require a reply.

I was both surprised and sorry that Mr. Engelstad should at the beck and call of Thief River Falls boosters, try to slur and abuse a brother farmer. We farmers have troubles enough without trying to abuse each other to help out some town. If Mr. Engelstad has any views of his own on the county seat question, he is certainly entitled to them, and I am entitled to mine. I have lived and farmed in this county a good many years, and what I've got I earned myself by good, hard labor, and am not dependent upon any man or any town. What I stated in my former letter was honestly stated from a farmer's standpoint, and I don't believe we farmers should look through the colored glasses furnished by either Thief River Falls or Red Lake Falls.

But I am told by those who claim to know, that Mr. Engelstad did not write the "answer" at all; that John Eastman, editor of a Thief River paper wrote it, and Engelstad let them use his name to fool the farmers with; that it appears plainly from the language of the letter, the use of the editor's "we," time and again, and the words "Red Lake Falls gang," so dear to Eastman's heart and pen.

But, whether Engelstad wrote it or not, I leave it to the farmers of this county if he has anything to be proud of, in the act.

He asks, what about the building of the jail and buying of cells and proceeds of jail-bonds? I have inquired and find that the jail has been inspected by every grand-jury, and reported allright; that it has saved the county a good many dollars sheriff's travelling fees, and board of prisoners, board at the Polk county jail being much higher under the law, and also that the money raised by jail bonds was paid over to the contractors upon the order of County Commissioner Hansen of Thief River Falls. If there was anything crooked about it, Mr. Engelstad had better ask Mr. Hansen who is now out circulating the Thief River county sent petition. He might know.

So bitter is Mr. Eagelstad that he even hates the hill on which the jail is built, and so takes his grudge out in dirt.

Mr. Engelstad then states that the $164 paid by the county for costs recently was in the suit started by Wm. Erb against the county. This shows how much you can depend on his statements. He should either look things up before he speaks so he will know what he is talking about, or have Eastman lie for him about something not so easily proven.

The $161 was a judgment against the county auditor in the suit begun by L. A. Kaufer, and was the costs of the Supreme Court trial won by Red Lake Falls. The county auditor was defended by A. A. Miller, employed by Thief River Falls, and I have been shown a letter written by Mr. Miller to the county auditor in which he says that Thief River Falls would pay all costs in that case. When the bill was brought before the county board, Commissioner Shaw of Thief River Falls said his town expected to pay it but had not had time. That was several months ago and they have had lots of time but they have not paid it yet.

Next, as to the Jarman bill of $90. This was work done for Thief River Falls. Jarman put in his bill to the county board, it was allowed by Commissioners Shaw, Johnson and Eckstrom, and ordered paid out of taxpayers money. Red Lake Falls people appealed to the District Court from the allowance of the bill, and the District Court threw it out. The records are there to speak for themselves, where every one may see. If Thief River Falls people have since paid Jarman, it was because they had to, after Jarman had failed to get his money out of us taxpayers.

Next, Mr. Engelstad-Eastman attacks my statement that a change of county seat may mean an additional tax on us farmers of $5.00 to $8.00 per year each for the next 15 years. He argues that as there are 1212 quarter-sections in the county, there must be that many farmers.

If he would look up the last census report, he would find that outside of cities and villages there are just 1974 farmers, which, at $5.00 each per year would make less than ten thousand dollars per year, and if that would pay for the sixty thousand dollar courthouse Thief River Falls intends to make us build, and the ten thousand dollar furniture to furnish it, and the expenses of removal, and interest on the debt, there wouldn't be enough left to pay the Thief River lawyers what they have made us pay already, and what they will stick us for in the future.

In short Mr. Eastman-Engelstad's letter is based on nothing but wind. Every statement I have made is verified by the public records, and if you doubt it, go and look for yourself.

If there is anything wrong with anything I have said I would like to have them SHOW ME.

I am not going to sign any petition or anything else for either Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls, which will get Red Lake county into trouble or into debt. This county seat petition will do both.

Therefore, I believe it is for the best interest of every one of us farmers to REFUSE TO SIGN THE COUNTY SEAT PETITION.

We have a court house in Red Lake Falls which is good enough. We have used it ten years, and it is in better shape now than it was when we first moved into it in 1987. It is paid for and the county don't owe a dollar on it. It's good enough so that you may notice what a scramble there is every election to get offices in it.

But Thief River Falls don't think it is good enough. Why? Because they want us farmers to help them get the county seat to their own town, where there is no court house so they can force the county to build a more expensive one, and tax us sixty thousand dollars for it to help build up their town.

Farmers, if we're going to pay for any buildings, let's have them on our own farms, and spend the money on our roads and bridges.

If there is going to be any fighting, let the two towns fight it out themselves, and pay their own lawyers. —Ed Enright.

SCHEMERS EXPOSED

Sixty Thousand Dollar Court House To Be Built At Thief River.

SIGN THE PETITION AND RAISE YOUR TAXES

A Diabolical Swindle On The Taxpayers Uncovered.

A prominent business man of Red Lake Falls this week received the following letter, which speaks for itself, and shows up the blackest scheme ever put up on the voters and taxpayers of Red Lake county

Crookston, May 4th, 1908

Mr.............

Dear Sir

While passing through Thief River Falls City the other day I overheard something which is of great interest to the people in your town I think, and as I have some property in Red Lake Falls and you did some business for me once I thought I better write you about it. It is about your county seat. I was in the hotel-office in Thief River Falls eading a newspaper. Two well-dressed men sat in the corner near me, talking. I didn't notice them at first, till I heard one speak of Red Lake Falls and say he thought they would soon kill that town off the map. This called my attention as I'd like to sell my town lots there if it's going to be wiped out. The man who spoke seemed to be a local man and the other an outsider, from their talk, though plainly a close friend.

So I listened. I can't tell you all they said but this is the most important. The local man said—yes. Red Lake Falls is giving us a hard fight but we think we've got them ski ned now. And if we do beat them we're going to cinch them so they'll never get the county seat away again. You see, as soon as the election is over, it we win, we'll have the county officers move right up here. We elected them and they have got to do as we say. Then we'll have the county board let the job right away for building a big courthouse, one that will cost enough so the farmers won't want to move it. But, says the other man, if you try to vote bonds for a court house, won't the farmers vote it down? No, says the first one. That's the beauty of it. We've got it fixed so that the county board can issue bonds and build a fifty or sixty thousand dollar courthouse without having any election on it at all.

You see when we started our first petition in 1905, we helped get a law passed in the legislature so that in any county that don't have a court house at the county seat, the county board can issue bonds and build a court house without having a vote taken on it. Our petition was filed April 11th, 1905, and this law was passed three days later. That's why we are in a hurry to get a vote on the county seat. The minute we do, we're going to start buildiog that court house and all the farmers in Red Lake county can't stop us. Of course its been kept awful quiet and the smart fellows at Red Lake Falls never caught on. We were afraid they would try to get the law repealed before we got the county seat but they never found us out. Then they talked lower and I couldn't hear any more.

Please excuse this long letter. I hope it will do you people some good to find out these things. I shall be up in this country again in a month or so and will . all and see you.

Yours truly,
P. A. Blockstad.

Upon receipt of the above letter, search was immediately made for the law referred to, and sure enough, it exists.

The law is chapter 175, of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905 and it was passed April 14th 1905.

Its title is "An act to authorize the board of county commissioners of any county not already owning a county court house, to issue its bonds and to use the proceeds thereof for the building of a county court house."

Its first section is "The board of county commissioners of any county of the state of Minnesota which does not own a court house is hereby authorized and empowered to issue the bonds of said county to such an amount in its judgment as may be necessary, but not exceeding one per cent. of the assessed valuation of its real and personal property, as fixed by the last preceeding assessment for general taxation, for the purpose of building a court house in said county."

There are seven other sections describing ths issue of bonds but nothing making it necessary to have a vote of the people before issuing the bonds.

There you have the scheme, voters and tax-payers. The lid is off and you can see it in all its nakedness.

That's why they want you to sign the county petition.

That's why they want you to vote for Thief River Falls for the county seat. So they can spend your money in putting up a big building to help Thief River grow.

Did you ever realize before, what a beautifully appropriate name Thief River Falls is? Thief city would be even more appropriate.

When they have stolen your sixty thousand dollars to build their fine court house, what are you going to do about it? Going to get out in your fields and dig and groan to pay your double taxes and help Thief River grow?

As they grow rich, you grow poor; as their city spreads your farm dwindles; while their prosperous city people stroll through the fine halls and offices you paid for, you follow the tail of your plow all day in your overalls.

Sign their county seat petition. Let them pat you on the back and tell you how much they like you—till after election. Vote for a change of county seat.

And when the election is over, they will have no more use for you. You'll have to mortgage your cow to get a pleasant look from them.

What are you going to do?

A SUMMER SCHOOL

Red Lake Falls Will Be School Ma'am's Headquarters During July.

A four weeks' session of the summer training school will be held in this city commencing Monday, July 1st and ending Saturday, July 27th, word to that effect having been received by County Superintendent McAnulty from State Superintendent J. W. Olsen last week.

A summer training school is of inestimable value to the teachers of the county and Supt. McAnulty is to be congratulated on the culminate of his efforts on their behalf this year.

The corps of instructors is composed of C. S, Yeager, of Fosston; Marie Ring, of Glenwood; A. M. Dunton of McIntosh, and Mary Gardner of Duluth.

State examinations will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 29, 30 and 31. Supt. McAnulty requests us to announce that parties holding county certificates at this time can not be granted another after the state examinations held the last of July.

Cost of Growing Wheat.

The cost of growing wheat is a question very often discussed and one upon which many people are not reliably informed. An instructive experiment therefore is that by the Superintendent of the Experimental Farm at Brandon dealing with the cost of growing an acre of wheat. The experimental acre on which the test was made gave a yield of 29 bushels at a cost of $7.76. This included every possible item of expense and also two years' rent, or interest at 6 per cent on land valued at $15 per acre. The items were:—Plowing once, $1.25; harrowing twice, 20 cents; cultivating twice, 40 cents; seed (1½ bus) 75 cents: drilling, 22 cents; binding 33 cents; twine, 60 cents; threshing $1.46; teaming to market, four miles, 29 cents; rent or interest, $1.90; wear and tear of implements, 20 cents.

Many farmers, however, estimate that $7 an acre pay expenses.—Emerson Journal.

Badger

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Berry and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walker.

Jos. Perrault of Bogols, was a guest of Miss Rose Lachance Sunday afternoon.

Messrs. Regis Gagnon, Donna Laurent and Michael Quesnell and wives visited at the Louis St. Ives home Sunday evening.

Dolphis Champeau made a brief call at the Falls Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Prudhomme of Gentilly township called at the home of J. Ducharme Sunday.

Miss Cora Laurent entertained a number of Terrebonne friends at her home Sunday evening and all had a most pleasant time.

Fedime Gregoire and family were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Robillard Sunday.

Messrs. Roy Waikef, Fred Berry, Adelard Laurent and Francois La-Bissoniere were among those transacting business at the county seat Saturday last.

GREAT DEVELOPMENT

Creameries in Minnesota Grown from a Half Dozen to 100 In Past Six Years.

In the year of 1900 there were only a handful of creameries in the northwestern part of Minnesota and the growth of this industry in this industry in this section of the Red River Valley is truly remarkable and shows the progressiveness of the farmers of the Northwest. Every creamery which has been established since that time has proved successful and today there are 100 where six or seven years ago at the most there were but a bare half dozen every one thriving and each one sending carloads of butter each year to the eastern markets where it commands a price of from 2 to 5 cents above the market price because it comes from Minnesota, the land of pure air, sunshine and pure water and is known to be the best flavored butter in the world. These creameries represent at the present time hundreds of dollars of investment, when the buildings and equipment are taken into consideration and they are wealth producers which benefit almost wholly the tillers of the soil. Besides this investment of machinery, buildings and other equipment they represent the investment of thousands of dollars of stock which is rapidly being improved by mixing with the best dairy strains in the world.

The following counties in the northwest contain together over 100 creameries: Polk, Red Lake, Clay, Becker, Clearwater, Grant, Beltrami, Hubbard, Wilkin, Norman, Kittson, Wadena, Ottertail, Todd, Marshall.

The following is the list of creameries in Red Lake county with the location and secretaries: Red Lake Falls Creamery Assn., Red Lake Falls, G. F. Henniugs, secy. St. Hilaire creamery, St. Hilaire, N. A. Nelson, secy. Louisville creamery, Louisville, J. Porter, secy. Brooks Creamery Assn., Brooks, O. C. Moore, secy. Clearwater creamery, Lillo, Carl Hanson, secy. Emardville Creamery, Plummer, A. M. Hoss, secy.

Of our neighboring counties Polk has 12 creameries, Roseau 5, Kittson 8, Marshall 10, and Norman 12.

To Complete Survey.

It has been announced that Mr. A. P. Mead and his crew of surveyors expect to continue the work of securing a topographical survey of the lands in this section, they having completed but a portion of the survey last fall. An additional appropriation in addition to the unexpended portion of the original appropriation will enable the work to be carried out successfully and to be covered thoroughly. The surveyors will undoubtedly finish up any uncompleted portion of the work of last year and will then probably go further northeast or perhaps in the country between the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

A Business Luxury

We Make Farm Loans

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity; and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Creglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

[illegible] were killed, four were seriously burned and four others entombed and probably dead as a result of an explosion in the Whipple mine, in the Leap Creek district, West Virginia. Fifty-three other miners narrowly escaped death.

Gen. Baron Kuroki, accompanied by a representative party of Japanese military men, arrived at Victoria, B. C., on board the steamer Aki Maru, on their way to the Jamestown exposition.

Arthur McEwen, chief editorial writer of the New York American and well known throughout the west in journalistic circles, died suddenly at Hamilton, Bermuda, of heart failure.

The Mexican government learns from a prominent person who has just returned from Gautemala that in his opinion, unless all signs fail, Estrada Cabrera will be unseated as president of the republic or will have to fight to retain his office.

Capt. C. DeF. Chandler, United States signal service, and J. C. McCoy, of New York, failed to break the long distance balloon record and to win the Lahm cup. The balloon, which left St. Louis landed five miles north of Golconda, Ill., 130 miles from the starting point.

Forty persons, mostly women, were injured in a fire at 255 Wabash avenue, Chicago. The victims were patrons and employes of a lunch club and jumped or fell from the second story.

John Kells Ingram, the political economist, is dead at Dublin. He was born in 1823 and was an ex-president of the Royal Irish Academy.

Miss Mabelle Gilman, who arrived at New York from Paris, said she and William E. Cory, president of the United States Steel corporation, would be married in New York on May 13.

Near Pablanice, Russian Poland, bandits attacked a carriage containing five Hebrew merchants, whom they shot and killed. The robbers took all the money and valuables of the dead men.

After an inspection of the Russian training squadron at Libau, Minister of Marine Bikoff decided to abandon the idea of sending ships to the Jamestown exposition.

Bitter feeling as a result of an assault on Mrs. Softon, an aged woman, caused a race riot at Greensburg, Ind. Six colored men were badly beaten, one of whom may die.

May day brought strikes of iron workers in San Francisco, teamsters in Los Angeles, machinists in Pittsburg, and various labor organizations in Canada. In Paris there were scenes of violence and disorder and the police had several desperate conflicts with the mobs. In Warsaw a general strike resulted in a complete tie-up of business.

A verdict of not guilty was returned by a jury in the United States court in the case of Athole B. Render, who had been on trial in New York on a charge of perjury.

The planing mill and lumber yard of J. A. Hollinger at Chambersburg, Pa., was burned, entailing a loss of $100,000.

Prince Edward of Wales, eldest son of the prince of Wales, joined the royal naval college at Osborne, Isle of Wight, as a cadet. He will be treated exactly the same as the 400 other cadets.

John L. Morgan, formerly of Chicago, starved to death on the desert in Death valley, according to the story brought to San Bernardino, Cal., by Walter Adams, Morgan's partner.

John Enjeck, while working in a licorice factory in Newark, N. J., fell into a vat of the boiling licorice.

The judicial convention at Decatur, Ill., selected Frank K. Dunn, of Charlestown, as supreme court justice, on the one hundred and forty-second ballot.

The blockade in the harbor at Superior, Wis., is estimated to have cost vessel owners a quarter of a million dollars.

Twenty persons were injured when a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train was wrecked at Plessantview, W. Va.

Attorney General Stead filed the long expected suit of the state against the Illinois Central railroad in the circuit court of LaSalle county.

Secretary of War Taft laid the corner stone of the new Y. M. C. A. building at Dayton, O., and delivered the principal address.

The volcano on the Island of Stromboli is in violent eruption, damaging vineyards and terrifying the peasants.

[illegible] Schmitz made a partial confession concerning graft in San Francisco in the hope of securing lenient treatment.

Five justices of the Michigan supreme court, constituting a majority, decided that the city of Detroit cannot build street railway tracks to be leased to an operating corporation.

Judge McMahon at Hammond, Ind., decided to allow Indiana to destroy the Dearborn Park poolrooms owned by the Smith-Perry-Waits syndicate.

Six colored men were badly beaten by a mob of white men at Greensburg, Ind.

D. Max Gregg, son of Col. H. H. Gregg, a wealthy mine owner of Joplin, Mo., in St. Louis on his honeymoon, was arrested on a charge of having attempted to ship four fish out of Arkansas.

A terrific hurricane swept over a part of Campeche, causing a loss of millions of dollars and the death of several persons.

The seven men who were imprisoned in the Berwind Whits Coal mine near Johnstown, Pa., by a sudden rush of water, were rescued after four and a half days, alive and unhurt, but greatly exhausted.

G. R. Scrugham, manager of the International Policyholders' committee, and two watchers for the same organization were arrested on charges of conspiracy to cause the counting of defective, altered and forged ballots in the recent election of New York Life Insurance company directors. Jacob Frank, an agent for the New York Life, was arrested for forging the names of policy holders.

President Cobrera, of Guatemala, narrowly escaped death when assassins exploded a mine under his carriage. The horses were killed and several men injured.

William January, the federal convict who escaped years ago and was recaptured, was told by his wife the news that President Roosevelt favored his pardon.

The month just ended was the coldest April in the last 26 years and within a degree of the coldest April ever experienced, according to the weather bureau at Washington.

Samuel Rittenour, a foreman at the West Virginia Brewing company plant, at Huntington, W. Va., committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. A few days before Rose Spears, to whom Rittenour had been paying court, ended her life in the same manner because she thought Rittenour had deserted her.

American sailors won all of the places in two international races between the crews of warships in Hampton Roads, but the British tars took first and second places in a third contest.

John P. McManus, editor of the Pilot Rock (Ore.) Leader, and formerly of Pierre, S. D., was acquitted of the murder of Robert Estes, a gambler whom he mistook for a robber.

A Canadian Pacific freight train ran through a small bridge just east of Port Arthur, Ont., carrying to their death Engineer William Fixter, Fireman Veaudrey and Brakesman Villineuve.

Levi C. Lincoln, who is alleged to have confessed that he had embezzled $92,000 since 1890 from the Woonsocket Electric Machine & Power company, of which he was treasurer, was arrested.

George H. Phelps filed a suit at Findlay, O., against the Standard Oil company, its subsidiary companies and directors of the companies asking that they be enjoined from doing business in the state of Ohio, and claiming they are operating against the provisions of the Valentine anti-trust law.

Capt. Charles D. Chandler, U. S. signal corps, and J. C. McCoy ascended from St. Louis in a balloon to make tests and attempt to win the long distance record.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner all the principal officers of the United States navy and foreign navies who participated in the ceremonies attending the opening of the Jamestown exposition.

George H. Cottrell, one of the pioneer captains on the great lakes, died at Marine City, Mich., aged 90 years, after an illness of one week.

Rev. J. D. Simmons, of Parkersburg, W. Va., editor of the Baptist Banner, died of apoplexy.

The government transport Buford sailed from San Francisco with 4,000,000 pounds of flour for the starving Chinese.

Miss Sarah McGowan, 32 years old, was burned to death early in a fire which damaged the five-story tenement at 239 East Thirty-eighth street, New York.

Fire broke out in the Regal hotel, Leesville, La., and spread rapidly, destroying 18 buildings. The loss is estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000.

In a letter to the editor of the Review of Reviews President Roosevelt takes exception to an article on race suicide that appeared in the publication and reiterates his own views on the subject.

John Hamlin, of Grand Island, Neb., has been found guilty of the murder of Rachel Engle, aged 13, and his punishment fixed at hanging.

Fire in Union City, Pa., destroyed the plant of a chair company and other buildings and threatened a large part of the city. The damage was $300,000.

People in Mexico were wildly excited by a report that a mob had stoned the American and Mexican legations in Guatemala City, and Mexican troops were mobilized on the Guatemalan frontier.

Congressman Waldo, of New York, charged that in warships built by private concerns rivet holes had been found filled with soap, putty and wood.

"Eddie" Tate, the safe-blower, who escaped from a Peoria hospital, was arrested in Chicago and told a story making serious charges against former Chief of Police Collins, of that city.

William E. Corey was reelected president of the United States Steel corporation at the annual meeting of the board of directors.

Martha Korais, a comely Prussian girl, was shot and instantly killed in Philadelphia by Franz Endrukst, an enraged lover, who, after murdering the girl, sent a bullet into his own brain, inflicting a wound from which he cannot recover. The girl had refused to marry Endrukat. Several years ago in Prussia he tried to kill her and himself for the same reason.

Secretary Taft told the Cincinnati Business Men's club that he expected the Panama canal would be completed within eight years, and that the United States could not withdraw from Cuba until a year from next September.

Peoria officials surprised the Chicago police by telling them to keep "Eddie" Tate, saying they had not evidence to convict him of blowing the Peoria school board's safe.

The federal court of appeals at St. Paul affirmed the judgment of the lower court by which the Kansas City packers were convicted of accepting rebates and fined $15,000 each.

Capitol Hill, a suburb of Oklahoma City, was flooded by a cloudburst and endangered by the rise of the rivers.

Vice Chancellor B. C. Wiggin, of the University of the South, announced a donation of $60,000 from Andrew Carnegie to be devoted to the erection of a science hall for the university.

Mrs. Louisa Holden of Providence, R. I., while insane, shot and killed her husband, fatally wounded her son and killed herself.

"The Jamestown cup," for the fastest rowing officers in the fleets of America, England, Germany and Austria assembled for the Jamestown exposition, was won by the officers of the American battleship Alabama.

People of Montenegro have revolted and a military government was proclaimed. Armed bands were reported as marching on Cettinje, and serious street fights occurred in Podgoritza, the governor and chief of police of that city being mortally wounded.

Masked men destroyed a sheep camp in Big Horn county, Wyo., with dynamite, killing 700 sheep.

The street car strike in Salt Lake City was settled by the efforts of citizens, the demands of the men being granted.

Several bloody fights occurred in Tegucipalpa between factions of the victorious Honduran rebels and the Nicaraguan troops were compelled to intervene.

One person was killed and 30 persons were seriously injured by an explosion of dynamite at the harbor works at Antivari, on the Adriatic.

Heavy snowstorms prevailed in Wisconsin and Iowa.

John C. Schwartz, former county attorney, prosecuting attorney for two terms and at one time prominent in Republican politics in Cincinnati, died from consumption.

Four people were seriously injured and two cars demolished at Superior, Wis., in a rear-end collision.

Mrs. A. J. Elliott, aged 70, of Everett, Wash., was burned to death at La Crosse, Wis., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. J. Russell, wife of a manufacturer. The accident was caused by the overturning of an alcohol lamp.

The bond robbery from the Trust Company of America in New York which at first was said to involve $50,000, now is said by a trustee to have grown to an $800,000 theft.

Frightened by a policeman entering her Philadelphia home to arrest her husband, Mrs. Josephine Hess, aged 46 years, dropped dead.

David C. Cook, a noted pathfinder and detective, died suddenly in Denver, Col., of heart disease, aged 60 years. He was born in Laporte county, Ind.

Eight men who were working in a new tunnel at the National Cash Register plant, Dayton, O., were painfully burned in an explosion of natural gas. The men were shot out of the tunnel by the force of the explosion.

Two hundred and sixty journeymen plumbers quit work in Milwaukee upon refusal of the Master Plumbers' association to grant a demand for an increase in wages of 50 cents a day.

Bandit Raisuli is reported from Tangier to be fomenting a revolution among the Lakhm tribes in Morocco.

News has reached Rio de Janeiro that the steamer Thornhill with her crew had been lost when the steamer burned.

Frank Kenworthy, of Winchester, Ind., was thrown from an automobile and killed as he was going to see the wreck of a Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad train at Collett, Ind.

Fire destroyed the plant of the National Stove company at Lorain, O. The loss is estimated at $200,000. Four hundred men are idle as a result.

J. R. Dysinger, a contractor of Cleveland, O., while waiting for a car in the Pacific Electric station, Los Angeles, Cal., was robbed of $800.

Baron de Ros, premier baron of England and colonel of the First Life guards, died on his Irish estate, Old Court, Strangford, County Down.

Maude Harrison, the actress, died suddenly of paralysis in New York.

Frank Fitzmaurice, president of the Citizens' bank, of Eagle Grove, Ia., eloped with and married Miss Nellie Ferguson, a nurse who attended him in a recent illness.

Mrs. Mate L. Chester, of Chicago, grand secretary of the Order of the Eastern Star, was instantly killed by a fall down an elevator shaft in a Peoria hotel.

The Central Trades and Labor union of St. Louis refused to indorse a resolution attacking President Roosevelt for his denunciation of Moyer and Haywood, officers of the Western Federation of Miners.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Fight With Wild Beast.

Manksto.—James Mullen, overseer of the county poor farm, tells of a thrilling adventure that he had with a strange animal that he and two other men discovered in a cave on the bank of the Le Sueur river.

With his hired man, Tom Jones, and George Folsom, he was walking along the bluff at about dusk, when they discovered the cavern, about the mouth of which were piled skulls and other small bones of cattle and sheep and smaller animals. They sent Mullen's dog into the cave, and a fierce fight ensued that was terminated by the animal dashing out, followed by the dog. Mullen struck the beast on the head with a spade as it fled past him, but this did not stop it.

After another brief encounter with the dog, the animal made off. Mullen states that it was as large as a mountain lion or leopard, but he could not say what it was. Mullen expressed the opinion that the animal is the same one that has been seen about Lamberton and in this county during the spring, and that recently tried to pull down a steer on the Columbus Ballard farm near by.

To Test Value of Clay.

Mankato.—Prof. N. H. Winchell, the state geologist, and Julius Hortvet, the state chemist, arrived in the city to examine the deposits of blue clay along the banks of the Blue Earth river. They took samples from several points on the banks of the river and examined the surroundings.

The banks of blue clay are believed to be the ones spoken of in the chronicles of Le Sueur, the French explorer, who sent several shiploads of it back to France more than two centuries ago in the belief that it was rich in minerals. Recently there has been a good deal of talk about the mineral deposits in the Blue Earth and Le Sueur river valleys, and the opinion has been expressed that Le Sueur may not have been mistaken.

Gold, copper and precious stones have been found at different points in the valley.

Woman Inspector.

St. Paul.—Mrs. Perry Starkweather of Minneapolis was appointed to the position of inspector for the state labor department, the new position created by the legislature. Mrs. Starkweather has been making a study of the labor laws and the condition of women in this and other states. She drew up the bill which was passed and signed by the governor.

The duty of the woman inspector is to visit places where women are employed and to make recommendations for their welfare. It is said that there are 30,000 women in the state working for wages and that their annual earnings are approximately $9,000,000.

Plant Rainbow Trout.

Faribault.—Ten cans of rainbow trout fry have been received by the Rice County Protective association and have been placed in Fall creek, a few miles east of here. The association also expects to secure about twenty cans of black bass fry and about 2,000,000 young pike to be placed in the lakes near Faribault. The association has had a number of the best lakes seined and many rough fish unfit for use as food were taken out and destroyed.

Nurses' Board Chosen.

St. Paul.—Governor Johnson has named the five members of the state board of examination and registration of nurses. Under the law one member must be a physician and the others graduate nurses. The members selected are: Dr. Jeanette McLaren, St. Paul; Edith Rommell, Minneapolis, president of Hennepin County Nurses' association; Bertha Johnson, St. Paul, surgical nurse city and county hospital; Helen Wadsworth, St. Paul, teacher of dietetics in St. Luke's hospital, and Eleanore Hamilton, Minneapolis. The board will shortly meet to organize.

Memorial Day Order.

St. Paul.—Levi Longfellow, department commander of the Minnesota G. A. R., has issued his order for the annual observance of Memorial day to the G. A. R. posts in the state. As Memorial day comes on May 30, the preceding Sunday, May 26, will be Memorial Sunday, when the posts will attend divine services in a body. He urges May 24 as a day for memorial exercises in the schools.

Didn't Feed Horse.

Minneapolis.—Abraham Jacob, a peddler was sentenced to the workhouse for thirty days for abusing his horse by leaving him in the barn for three days without food or water.

Use of Net Costs $100.

Mankato.—William Meyer of Rapidan was arraigned on the charge of illegal fishing with a slip net in the Blue Earth river at Cable Mill and pleaded guilty. His fine was $100 and costs, which he paid. The charge was preferred by P. H. Jordan, state game and fish warden, who captured six men at Cable Mill fishing with nets. They had three sacks of fish of all kinds, including black bass. Three men escaped in a boat. It was decided to arraign only one, and the others helped pay the fine.

NEWS NOTES.

Freeport.—A number of cases of smallpox are reported in this vicinity.

St. Paul.—Thieves stole the brass hinges from several doors in the court house.

Owatonna.—Sunday baseball will be allowed in Owatonna this season for the first time in many years.

Mankato.—Adolph Seidle captured a large pelican on Swan lake. The bird measured nine feet from tip to tip.

Minneapolis.—Enough beer was sold in this city in April to give the government a revenue of nearly $30,000 notwithstanding the cool temperature.

Minneapolis.—Alexander Coffitt, 60 years old, a resident of Fulda, cut his throat with a razor, dieing almost instantly. Domestic troubles are said to have caused him to committ the deed.

Mankato.—Robert Bird fell thirty feet from the top of a tree, striking the ground and breaking three ribs. He was cutting off the top of a tree when the limb that he was standing on broke.

Mankato.—Frank Ottenbach, accused of misappropriating $1,000 which was intrusted to him by a bank for the purpose of carrying out a business deal, was arrested in Montana and brought back to this city.

Belgrade.—O. O. Liabrooten and his youngest daughter, of Brooten, were struck by the Winnipeg flyer and thrown about a hundred feet. Mr. Liabrooten was instantly killed and the girl was seriously, if not fatally, injured.

Duluth.—Capt. W. H. Singer has returned from Isle Royale and reports that three trappers who wintered at Chippewa Harbor on that island caught nearly one hundred lynx, besides a fair number of other fur-bearing animals.

Crookston.—Arnold Starby, aged 11, was instantly killed in the town of Garden by Albert Singored, aged 16. The boys were playing when Arnold's shot gun was accidentally discharged by Singered, blowing the top of Starby's head off.

Madelis.—Ole H. Erickson, a farmer living five miles southeast of here, shot himself in the temple with a 32-caliber revolver. He was fifty years of age and leaves a widow. No real cause is known, although he had been despondent of late.

St. Paul.—The Duluth & Iron Range railroad has filed with the state its selection of 75,000 acres of state land, almost completing its land grant. The land is almost all in St. Louis county, the rest in Lake and Cook, and none of it bears minerals so far as known.

La Crescent.—Wille, the 3-year-old son of Frank Smith, fell down the cold air draught of the furnace at his father's residence. The only way of rescuing him was by tearing down the chimney, which was instantly done. He was not injured in any way.

St. Paul.—Governor Johnson has announced the membership of the new capitol grounds commission, which will spend $150,000 of state money in the next two years in acquiring new land adjoining the capitol. It consists of J. W. Lusk, R. T. O'Connor and Frank O'Mera, all of St. Paul.

Minneapolis.—For writing the best essay on insurance, Earl W. Huntley of Spring Valley, a member of the senior class, has been awarded the $50 prize offered by Twin City insurance men to university students. His subject was "The Fundamentals of Life Insurance and Its Economic Importance."

Wells.—Someone visited the wood pile of Rev. Reece and helped himself to firewood. He happened to drop a letter from his pocket while picking up the wood and in this way his identity has become known. The preacher offers to return the letter and to suppress his identity if he will return the wood.

St. Paul.—O. M. Hall, of Red Wing, gets the six-year term on the state tax commission, Samuel Lord, of Kasson, gets the four-year term and Franklin McVey, of Minneapolis, gets the two-year term. The three newly appointed commissioners met in Gov. Johnson's office and organized and cut straws to see who was to get the long and short term.

St. Paul.—Game Warden Stevens of Anoka arrested Dolphin Bibeau of Centerville for shooting a duck. Stevens, while driving, saw Bibeau hunting and he stopped behind some brush. Bibeau walked along until he was only a few feet from Stevens; then a mallard flew low and the hunter bagged it. Bibeau was much surprised to hear the game warden's command, "Come with me," before the smoke had died away. His duck cost him a $10 fine and costs, or $17.90.

Mankato.—William Rademacher of Sumpter narrowly escaped receiving fatal injuries in a blacksmith shop. His broncho rebelled at having a "twist rope" on its nose and became very violent, striking promiscuously with its fore feet. The horse planted its sharp shod hoof squarely on his left cheek. One eye was gouged out and the nose scraped from the face.

Morton.—Adolph Knupple, living three miles south of here, cut his throat with a razor in a fit of despondency. He was a well-to-do farmer and had a grown up family. He cannot recover.

IN WESTERN CANADA.

Delicate in the Old Home; Better Health in the New.

Churchbridge, Sask.,
December 1st, 1906.

To the Editor.
Dear Sir,

I came to this country from the State of Wisconsin three years ago, and must say that I am greatly pleased with the outlook in this western country. For my own part I am entirely satisfied with the progress I have made since coming here. I have raised excellent crops of grain of all varieties. Last season my wheat averaged 23 bushels of wheat to the acre, oats 60 and barley 40.

We had a splendid garden this year, ripening successfully tomatoes, muskmelons, water melons, sweet corn and kindred sorts.

The country is well adapted to wheat growing and mixed farming, and to my mind it is the best country under the sun for a man with a family and small means, as it is possible for a man to commence farming operations with much less capital than is required in the older settled countries.

The climate is all that could be desired, being very healthy and invigorating.

My wife came out about six months ago, and although inclined to be delicate in the old home, she has enjoyed the best of health since coming here.

In short, I am more than satisfied with the land of my adoption, and I am also satisfied with the laws of the country.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) JOHN LANGDON.

Write to any Canadian Government Agent for literature and full particulars.

Coach Horses Join Fox Chase.

They had some spirited horses in the old coaching days. Just 100 years ago a remarkable proof of this was given, and fortunately recorded for the astonishment of later motoring generations, in the case of the Liverpool mail coach. Horses were changed at Monk's Heath, between Newcastle-under-Lyme, says the London Tribune.

On this particular occasion a pack of foxhounds was heard in full cry just as the horses from Congleton were freed from the coach, and they started off with the harness on their backs and followed the run to the finish. One of them, a blood mare, stuck close to the whipper-in and took every jump after him through the two hours. And in the evening they took the return coach to Congleton as merrily as if they had been in the stable all the time.

Has Record of Bad Luck.

J. M. Scanlan, a well known writer of San Francisco, poses as the most unlucky man on the Pacific coast. He has established 13 dailies and weeklies in California that have failed. He says that every check he receives either is unsigned or undated. The one lucky event of his life occurred while he was a private in the confederate army. While kneeling behind a low earthwork a cannon ball struck the top of the embankment, covering him with dirt and debris. "If I had been an upright young man I would have been killed," he reported, saluting his superior officer. Friday he regards with much suspicion.

EVEN IF DISCOURAGED

TRY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR YOUR RHEUMATISM.

The Pills Have Cured the Disease in Almost Every Form and Even in Advanced Stages.

Rheumatism is a painful inflammation of the muscles or of the coverings of the joints and is sometimes accompanied by swelling. The pain is sharp and shooting and does not confine itself to any one part of the body, but after settling in one joint or muscle for a time, leaves it and passes on to another. The most dangerous tendency of the disease is to attack the heart. External applications may give relief from pain for a time but the disease cannot be cured until the blood is purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this purpose as their action is directly on the blood, making it rich, red and healthy. When the blood is pure there can be no rheumatism.

Mrs. Ellen A. Russell, of South Goff St., Auburn, Me., says: "I had been sick for fifteen years from impure blood, brought on by overwork. My heart was weak and my hands colorless. I was troubled with indigestion and vomiting spells, which came on every few months. I had no appetite and used to have awful fainting spells, falling down when at my work. I frequently felt numb all over. My head ached continuously for five years.

"About two years ago I began to feel rheumatism in my joints, which became so lame I could hardly walk. My joints were swollen and pained me terribly.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to me by a friend, after I had failed to get well from the doctor's treatment. When I began taking the pills, the rheumatism was at its worst. I had taken only a few boxes, when the headaches stopped and not long afterward I felt the pain in my joints becoming less and less, until there was none at all. The stiffness was gone and I have never had any return of the rheumatism."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured such diseases as nervous and general debility, indigestion, nervous headache, neuralgia and even partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. As a tonic for the blood and nerves they are unequalled.

A pamphlet on "Diseases of the Blood" and a copy of our diet book will be sent free on request to anyone interested.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

AID ART BY FOOTBALL

CARLISLE INDIAN PLAYERS BUILD A MUSEUM.

Proceeds of Games Used to Buy Material and Structure It Put Up Entirely by the Students.

New York.—A mute reproach to the legislators who would have withdrawn the appropriation from the Carlisle Indian school stands at the entrance to the grounds of that institution in the shape of a battlemented building of striking design. It is a monument to the affection of the Indians for their home and of the dogged perseverance with which the red man will follow up an idea. The building is an art school and museum of Indian curios, and was built by Indian boys from the proceeds of the football games of last year, in which the redskin experts of the gridiron did so well.

With the money thus won the boys bought the stone, the lumber, the glass and the other material. The work they did themselves, for the boys learn everything in the mechanical trades at Carlisle. The carpenter work, the doors, sashes, and, in fact, all of the mill work of the building, was turned out in the shops of the school by the boys themselves. Even the plumbing and heating arrangements, all of the latest design, are the work of the boys, while the color effects painting and decorations are the handiwork of Carlisle Indian artists. [illegible] roofing and tin work were all [illegible] the school shops. So, everything about the structure is the Indians' own.

Museum Built by Indian Students.

The interior of the building is gay with the bright colors that the Indians love. Genuine Navajo blankets, in [illegible], of curious Indian patterns, adorn the walls and floors. No store products are these blankets, but the real thing, thick as oriental rugs, soft as wool can be, pliable as velvet and capable of holding water like a bucket, so finely woven is the material.

Spread on the tables in the richest confusion of color are beadwork, Indian saddles, baskets, drawings, paintings and models of various devices used in the home life of the tribesmen. Examples of the burnt leather work of the Indians are to be seen, pictures of the famous chiefs of other days, relics of the redskins who died vowing that their tribes would ever hate the white man with the same implacable hatred that they had shown. It is curious to view the pictures of these fierce old warriors and then turn to the intellectual countenance of Alfred M. Venne, the Chippewa Indian who has charge of the museum and who conducts a Bible class of students at this institution. It is still more remarkable to compare the pictures of Indian squaws of the old days with the dark eyed, placid faced girls who come to the studio to paint, fashion Indian art curios and do the headwork at which they are deft.

Some Exhibits in the Museum.

The building has been named the Leupp Indian Art Studio, in recognition of the friendship, interest and careful nurturing of Indian art by Commissioner Francis E. Leupp. The plans of the building were suggested by various students at Carlisle and the best ideas of those offered were embodied in working plans drawn up by a graduate of the school, George Balenti, a Cheyenne Indian. The entire building, as well as its equipment, remains the property of the athletic association.

WILL HEAD THEOSOPHISTS.

Miss Annie Besant Nominated to Succeed Late Col. Olcott.

MISS ANNIE BESANT.
(Woman Who Will Become Leader of the Theosophists.)

Kansas City, Mo.—Official announcement has been made of the nomination of Mrs Annie Besant as world president of the Theosophical society to succeed the late Col. Henry Steele Olcutt, president-founder of the organization. Col. Olcott, an old New York newspaper man, died recently in India.

On his deathbed he named Mrs. Besant, who had for years been his coworker, to succeed him, a prerogative which he held.

Mrs. Besant is a resident of Benares, India, where she conducts a school for the education of native children.

Mrs. Besant was born in England about 60 years ago. Her husband, a clergyman of the Church of England, was a brother of the famous novelist, Sir Walter Besant. Rev. Mr. Besant and his talented wife have been separated for years. She introduced theosophy to English society, lived down ridicule and established herself strongly by her winning ways. She says Americans make good thosophists because they are a psychic people. Mrs. Besant lives nine months a year in India and usually spends the other three months building up her cult in England. She visits America rarely.

PEDDLING LIVE FISH IN CHINA.

Typical Scene in Many Cities of the Oriental Empire.

New York.—The accompanying picture shows a typical Chinese fish pedler, who is to be met in the thoroughfares in many cities of the empire. His load is by no means a light one. He will be noticed balancing two receptacles, each one containing fish. There is some aversion among Chinese to buying fish that show no signs of life. For that reason the pedler is compelled to keep a stock of both live and dead fish. In the large hamper he has a supply of fish whose life has become extinct, while in the large pail at the opposite end of the pole he has a collection that wriggle about in the water. A big premium is always paid by Chinamen for live fish.

A Chinese Fish Peddler.

Sunflower and the Sun.

"The sunflower," said a naturalist, "is the most deceitful of all plants, for it has fooled six nations.

"Six nations believe that the sunflower turns toward the sun, and so thoroughly are they deluded they call it by a name which bears witness to their error.

"Thus the French call the sunflower tournesol. The Spanish call it girasol. The Italians call it girasole. The Hungarians call it naptaforgo. Each of these words means 'turn to the sun.' The English and Americans don't go quite that far in admitting themselves to be the plant's dupes. They only call it sunflower. They mean by that name, though, quite as much as the other names imply. The belief is general among six nations that the sunflower turns with the sun and always faces the luminary.

"As a matter of fact, there is only one flower that turns or keeps with the sun, namely, the sun spurge."

An Author's Profits.

Lieut. Bilse, author of the famous book, "Aus Einer Kleinen Garnison," received altogether £165 ($825) for his rights. It was admitted that the Austrian rights alone fetched £11,000 ($55,000). An action having been brought against the publishers and lost, it is feared that Lieut. Bilse will not have much of the £165 left.—London Sphere.

At the Box Office.

"Do you wish your usual seats for to-night, Mr, Spioort?"

"No—give me something cheaper."

"When did Mrs. Spinort get back from her visit?"—Cleveland Leader.

CARES OF BUSINESS WOMAN

When Placed Where Accidents Are Likely to Happen, She Should Always Carry Insurance—Laws Relating to Adopted Children.

BY KATHERINE LOUISE SMITH.
(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

There are times when it is desirable for a woman to take out an accident insurance policy. If she is a working woman she may be employed in some store, factory or office building, where conditions are such that there is danger from fire or accident at any time. If she is a moneyed woman she is exposed to accidents on the street and in traveling, in which case she runs the risk of railroad casualties. No matter what her station in life, a woman is daily placed in situations where accidents are liable to happen. There are many kinds of these policies, good for one day or any length of time, and they may be purchased at insurance or railway offices. Where one buys an accident policy just before going on a journey it should be mailed at once to some member of the family or business companion, and not carried on the person, for in event of an accident it might be entirely destroyed.

Five thousand dollars is the amount an accident insurance policy calls for in case of death, and about $25 a year is the premium to pay on this amount. Other amounts are recoverable according to the injuries. For instance, $10 or $20 a week for six months, when one is disabled from one important duty; $200 to $400 for a broken leg; $25 to $50 a week from four to six years for a total disabling injury, and other indemnities too numerous to write in detail. In addition to the indemnity an accident insurance policy pays for surgical operations necessitated by disease or injury, covered under the policy. A feature with most accident companies is that if an insured person receives injuries while riding as a passenger in a passenger street car, steam car, steam vessel, elevator, or in a burning building, the policy doubles for all amounts.

Of course any woman contemplating obtaining an accident policy, and it is always desirable to hold one in traveling, will, if she has time, investigate the company thoroughly before investing. It is interesting to know that the death rate from accidents is greater in the city than in the country, and the average age at death from accident is 34. The months of June, July, August, September and March are most prolific in the number of casualties, for there is more travel and moving at these times of year.

* * * * *

"I desire to adopt a child. Please tell me what formalities are necessary to make it legal?"—A Moneyed Woman.

The laws of the states regarding adoption vary so much that it will be necessary for you to consult a lawyer. You will be obliged to employ one to draw up the necessary papers. You will, of course, be expected to take the child into your family and to treat her as your own. If the child's parents are living, you will have to obtain their consent unless they have given the child to some state institution, such as a children's home. In some of these institutions, after the child has remained a certain length of time it can be adopted without consulting the parents. Adopted children inherit the property of their assumed parents the same as if they were their natural children.

* * * * *

"I have been appointed executor of an estate. Will you kindly tell me what my duties are?"—A Near Relative.

These are your duties in order:

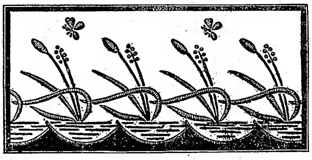
You should see that the deceased is buried in a suitable manner.

You should offer the will for probate, prove the will, file bonds, give notice, make and return an inventory according to the law of the state.

You must collect the property, and after paying debts must dispose of the remainder as the will directs.

You must render an account from time to time until a final settlement of the estate is made. The clerk at the probate office will give you additional information on all these points.

Border Embroidery Design



There are many purposes for which the design may be used: for the ends of towels or towel covers it is particularly suited; it may also be worked on sideboard or dinner-wagon cloths, etc.

One of the many pretty mercerized cottons that are now to be obtained should be used, and it should be of medium thickness; the work is in satin-stitch with the exception of the long stitches that simulate water, and the buttonhole edging the scallops.

FOR THE YOUNG GIRL

Fashion's Stern Decree Is Severe Simplicity in All Details of the Costume.

It has always been one of the heaviest crosses school girls have had to bear to be told that they must not ask for pretty gold and jeweled trifles; that they must wait until their formal bow has been made to smart society before they can hope to revel in the sparkle and gleam of lots of jewels, as did the fair Marguerite. It seems a long wait to the girl in her early teens, and, to tide her over until that rosy time when she is declared a full fledged society bud, the arbiter of fashion and fads, assisted by indulgent mothers, has decreed that this charming young person shall be allowed to have a few ornaments all for her very own. These are simple, of course; the very height of simplicity and chasteness, but they bring a lot of comfort and joy to the girl in her teens and teach her something of the intrinsic and ornamental value of more elaborate effects.

Precious stones, with the exception of pearls, are not for her. She must content herself with those that come in the semi-precious class and with quaint effects in gold and silver.

The present tendency in the way of neck ornaments for the young girl follows that observed in more elaborate ones. Necklaces are quite short and fit close about the throat in a dog collar effect. If they are enhanced with pendants they may be somewhat looser, but short necklaces are indeed very short. There is an excellent reason for having them so for a girl on account of the cut of her decollete. The neck of her frocks is never really low, and there is so little of her neck and shoulders showing above the bodice curve that it can scarcely be termed a decollete.

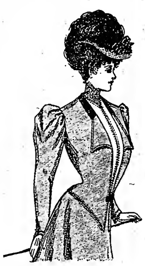
Of Pongee and Straw.

A French idea is the combining of pongee and straw, in their natural shadings for belts, but these, of course, are fashion fantasies and the average woman will prefer more conservative belts.

SNUG-FITTING JACKET

One of the Most Attractive of Season's Designs for Wear in Evening.

This is a simple jacket, to be made up in almost any woolen material. It fits closely into the waist at the sides and back, and hangs loose in front over a plain vest of white cloth, hooked invisibly up the front. The collar is of velvet, but the revers are faced with material. Plain coat sleeves, rather full at the top, and simply stitched round the wrists. The fronts are connected just below the waistline by a velvet tab.



Fancy straw hat, trimmed with an ostrich feather and small roses.

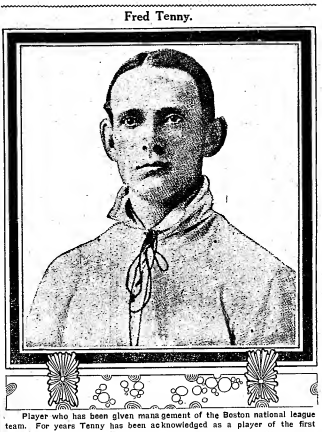
Materials required for the jacket: 2¼ yards 46 inches wide, five-eighths yard cloth, one-quarter yard velvet, four yards lining silk.

Artistic Sofa Pillow.

A very artistic sofa pillow of snuff brown silk, embroidered in shades of lighter brown silk. The center of each wheel is a tiny looking glass.

ON THE GREEN DIAMOND

Fred Tenny.



Player who has been given management of the Boston national league team. For years Tenny has been acknowledged as a player of the first rank.

Left Field is Regarded as Harder Than Right

Ball Players Agree That Center Field Is Easiest Spot in the Garden.

While the Pittsburg Pirates were at Hot Springs a discussion was started as to which of the three outfield positions was hardest to play. Manager Clark argued that the left fielder had the most difficult garden, while Otis Clymer thought the hardest work fell to the right fielder, both agreeing that the center position was at all times the easiest of the three. Along this line, the following from the pen of Jack Ryder, the Cincinnati scribe, is interesting:

"Among outfielders the left station is generally rated as the most difficult to play; that is, when the sunfield is not taken into consideration. The reason for this is that left-handed batters, when they hit to left at all, drive out balls that are harder to handle than any other variety sent to the gardens. When a southpaw hitter cuts one to left, there is a peculiar twist on the ball which often, if it is hit hard, causes it to take a peculiar dive or shoot. Such a ball is not only difficult to judge accurately, but it comes to the fielder dead and hard to hold. A left fielder must have a good pair of hands to negotiate such catches, as the ball has a tendency to break and twist out of the glove, and must be grasped firmly.

"Low-line drives close to the left foul line, especially those hit by a left-hand batter, are the hardest balls to field that are sent to any of the gardens. It is strange, but true, that a right-hand batter hitting to right field does not impart this peculiar twist to the ball, and this makes it a shade easier to play right field than left. Center field is the easiest of the three positions, for a ball hit in that direction has been met fair and square by the bat and sails out on a pretty straight course, with no disconcerting changes in its direction. The middle fielder has more ground to cover than either of his companions, but his catches are comparatively easy."

Of course where there are sun-fields, that alters the argument altogether. Both left fields in St. Louis are notoriously hard to play on account of the fact that the sun blazes right down into the fielder's eyes. Few fans have much idea of the strain on a man who is compelled to play like that day after day, and due allowance should be made for him if his batting falls off under the strain. A sun-fielder is compelled to wear smoked glasses in order to see the ball at all, and the effect of putting these on and taking them off many times during an afternoon is bound to dim the keenness of his optics.

A Conscientious Umpire.

Tommy Connolly, the referee, is one of the most conscientious men in baseball. Connolly is a devout Catholic, attends mass every day, and there are those who insist he missed his calling when he become an umpire; that he should have entered the priesthood. Connolly is a favorite with the players througkout the country.

Many Famous Players Started as Pitchers

Star Ball Tossers Who Began Game in Different Positions in Which They Made Good.

Has the baseball fan ever stopped to consider how many ups and downs the present day stars experienced before they found a position for which they were actually fitted? This has been the case particularly with men who were pitchers and either lost their cunning as slab artists or were not strong enough to keep up with the rest of the crowd. One could name probably half a hundred men who are stars at the present time who were once pitchers or catchers.

Let us start with Willie Keeler. It may not be generally known that Keeler began his career on the diamond as a pitcher. In those days he played with amateur and semi-professional teams in Brooklyn and other Long Island places. Even when Keeler broke into fast company he started as a third baseman. New York had him and could do nothing with him. Then Brooklyn had a crack at this present-day star. But it was not until he reached Baltimore that his real value developed. He was placed in right field, and from then until the present day he ranged first in that position.

Kid Gleason will be remembered as a pitcher. Then he came to New York and developed into one of the best fielding second basemen in the major league.

Callahan, who is playing independent baseball in Chicago, was once a great pitcher. There is Isbell. He ranked high as a twirler until a few years ago. Then he turned to infield work, and is a very valuable man at either first or second.

Remember how Cy Seymour used to whip 'em over at the Polo grounds? But at his best he was erratic. Still, he was valuable as a hitter, and when he left New York he was placed in the infield. At present there are few men who are his equal in fielding or hitting.

Bresnahan began as a pitcher, first in Chicago and then in Baltimore. To-day he is a very valuable man behind the bat. Indeed, he is good in any position when a team is in a pinch.

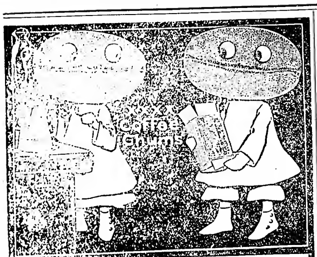
Frank Chance, a catcher, developed into a star first baseman. And it may not be generally known that Mike Donlin broke into baseball as a pitcher. He came to St. Louis from California.

Then there is Bobby Wallace. He was the Clevelands' greatest pitcher in the early '90's. He was and is yet a great infielder. Hal Chase, who has no equal as a first baseman, was a pitcher for a time.

Danny Hoffman was a pitcher in the Connecticut league, and so was Pat Dougherty.

Fares Will Cut Into Profits.

Railroad rate regulations will cut into the profit of the league baseball clubs this season. The various clubs travel about 200,000 miles in a year, spending $70,000. Formerly the clubs were allowed special rates, which meant a saving of from a quarter to a half of the regular fare.



The Longer You Drink It—The Better You Like It

That's because McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always the same—day in—day out always of the same good quality, blended just right, and roasted to a turn—that's satisfaction, and 16 full ounces to the pound is economy.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps the coffee clean and fresh—protected from dust, dirt and foul odors.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE
GARCEAU & ZAISER
M. SKALA
J. W. B. NIMESGREN

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure end Wholesome.

It's All The What That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near oor idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout
Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

Red Lake Falls Gazette

By DUDLEY & CREGLOW.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Crop Conditions.

Backward conditions for seeding in the northwest is beginning to attract some attention, says the Hallock News. The weather reports are for unsettled conditions in the southwest, but in the meantime the crop is steadily going backwards. The drought in Kansas, Nebraska and Texas is very efficient in aiding the advancing prices in wheat. Possibly after all, the farmers who could not ship their grain on account of car shortage last fall, will be well paid for having been obliged to hold their wheat until spring work is done. Altho the weather conditions have not been as favorable in this part of the state as could have been desired the prospects are very good for a fair crop. As a rule it is not the early spring that has brought the best results.

The wheat acreage throughout the Red River Valley will undoubtedly be less than was anticipated some two weeks ago. A greater acreage of barley, oats and flax will be put in and will be as good paying crops, if not more so, than wheat.

The droughth and the "green bug" are raising havoc with the crops in Texas, Kansas, Indiana, Tennessee, Nebraska and in the southwestern part of Illinois. Such being the conditions in the southwest and a backward spring in the northwest, will have a tendency to stimulate the prices of wheat as well as other grain, which will mean a decided gain for the Red River Valley. We can judge the future by the past. There has been several springs in the past fifteen years when seeding has not begun until the first week in May, and we have had an earlier harvest and a far more profitable crop than when seeding was done early in April. This to an outsider would seem rather strange, but it is nevertheless a fact. Because the Red River Valley soil is of such rich and productive nature that when the seed gets into the ground and has the warmth to coax it along it grows with an amazing rapidity.

Another feature which we should not lose sight of and which ought to make us rejoice although we have a backward spring, is that we have 120 hours more of sunshine here in the Red River Valley during the months of June, July and August than they have in Illinois, Iowa and the southern part of the state. This is no guess work, but a fact. That feature and the fertility of the soil account for wheat being matured in less than ninety days in the Red River valley.

As yet farmers in the valley have no cause to worry and we are quite confident by the present outlook that the farmers at least in this county will do as well this year, if not better, than they have done in the past two years.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

Ayer's
Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of [illegible] medicines

Bargains In Skirts

We have some excellent bargains in ladies' and misses' skirts, which we are offering this week.

All the latest fabrics are represented here, and you are assured of securing a perfect model of this season's fashions when selecting from this line. Call and look them over.

THE BUSY STORE
GARCEAU & ZAISER—RED LAKE FALLS

Clerk of Court's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Polk. } ss.

Whereas the petition of J. B. Wichterman and others, bearing date of January——1907, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein has been filed in my office.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the Hon. William Watts, a judge of the District Court of the 14th Judicial District in Minnesota, at his Chambers at the court house in the city of Crookston in said county on Saturday, the 25th day of May, A. D., 1907 at 10 o'clock a. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

To the Judge of the District Court, of 14th Judicial District, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the public ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a public ditch along the following described route in the towns of Gully, Chester, in Polk Co., and town of Lambert, in County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

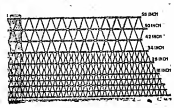
A general description of the proposed starting point and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at a point at the quarter corner between sections 23 and 24, township 150, N. Range 39, W. and running due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 23, 22, 21, 20 and 19 in said township 150 N. Range 39, W. thence due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 24, 23, 22, 21 and 20 in Township 150, N. Range 40, W. until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 20 and 19 of said township 150, N. Range 40, W. thence in a northwesterly direction across the N. E. ¼ of section 19, said township and range, until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 19 and 18 of said township and range, thence in a northwesterly direction across the west half of section 18 and said township and range, entering Red Lake County ditch known as Lambert ditch No. 1. near the corner common to sections 7 and 18, T. 150, N. Range 40, W. and sections 12 and 13, T. 150 N. Range 41 W. thence following down this said Lambert ditch No. 1, to a point in said ditch where said ditch has sufficient capacity to properly carry such waters as may be brought in by said proposed ditch taking its outlet therein.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such public ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred Thirty (230), of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905.

Dated this 30th day of April, A. D. 1907. —W. A. LANCTOT,
Clerk of the District Court,
14th Judicial District, Polk
m2 County, Minnesota.

THE GARDEN SPOT OF WESTERN CANADA
LAST MOUNTAIN VALLEY
THE HEART OF THE GREAT SASKATCHEWAN WHEAT PLAINS
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD
NORTHERN BANK BLDG WINNIPEG CANADA

Subscribe for The Gazette.



HOG FENCING

Do You Need
Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb boftom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.

We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.
General Hardware
Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

When You Plan Your Trip

Call on the Northern Pacific Agent and let him help arrange your journey. He will secure any information you want about his own and connecting lines, and will explain why

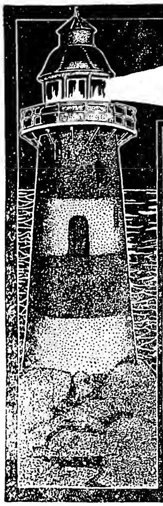
Through Dining Cars
Pullman Standard Sleeping Cars
Pullman Tourist Sleeping Cars
High-back Seat Day Coaches

make Northern Pacific trains so popular with travelers. He will quote you rates, sell you tickets, and make your sleeping car reservations. His services are free.

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent.
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

Northern Pacific Railway
A. M. CLELAND,
General Passenger Agent



AVOID ALUM

AN UNSEEN DANGER IN FOOD

TO GUARD SHIPS against the unseen dangers at sea, the United States Government maintains lighthnuses.

To guard your home against the unseen dangers of food products, the Government has enacted a pure food law. The law compels the manufacturers of baking powder to print the ingredients on the label of each can.

The Gnvernment has made the label your protection—so that ynu can avoid alum—read it carefully, if it dnes not say pure cream nf tartar hand it baek and

Say plainly—

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ROYAL is a pure, cream of tartar baking powder—a pure product nf grapes—aids the digestion—adds to the healthfulness nf food.

Fosston will celebrate the Norwegian Independence day, May 17th.

Mrs. S. Hall left Tuesday for Crookston where Mr. Hall is now located

M. C. Harlow of Thief River Falls transacted business at the court house Tuesday.

The Big Store calls attention to a special sale in ladies spring coats in their ad this week.

Mrs. Herman Adams came down from St. Hilaire Thursday evening of last week for a visit with friends.

Drs. Dunlap and Bertleson, came up from Crookston to assist Dr. Watson in the operation on Miss Clara Zaiser last Thursday.

Last month went down in history as the coldest April recorded in twenty six years, and it begins to look as though the month of May would follow suit.

Karl Korstad was among the passengers who was held up by the wreck Monday evening. Karl put in the time to good advantage hobnobbing with his many friends here.

S. Mireault of Dorothy has rented his farm and Wednesday left for Elbow Lake, this state, where he has secured an agency for the Watkins Medicine Co., of Winona. Mr. Mireault shipped his driving team to that place to use in handling his route.

Commissioner Ed. A. Aubol was among the passengers held up here Monday night by the wreck in the cut. Mr. Aubol was on his way to attend the term of the federal court which convened at Fergus Falls Tuesday, he being drawn to serve on the petit jury.

Theo. LaBissoniere was a Crookston caller over Tuesday night.

P. B. Gaass has sufficiently recovered from his late illness to be around once more.

W. A. Schreiter went up to Thief River today to look after matters demanding his attention.

Wm. Zaiser of Thief River, spent several days in the city the first of the week calling on old friends

Mrs. August Summers of Crookston came up from that place for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Arthur Zaiser.

Dr. Spofford, the eye specialist, was here Tuesday, having resumed his regular visits to this place after a two months absence.

Agent J. L. Tracy went down to Crookston last Friday evening to attend a meeting of the Great Northern ticket agents of the northern division at which time the Ticket Agents Association of the Northern Division was organized and the following officers elected: Chairman, F. D. Bell, Crookston; vice chairman, James P. O'Connell, Warren; secretary-treasurer, W. E. Baker, Thief River Falls. The organization is for the purpose of promoting good fellowship among the members, increasing their efficiency, and coming to a better understanding with the officials of the Great Northern. The very best of feeling prevailed and all present were enthusiastic over the outlook for a great deal of good to be accomplished by the organization. A similar organization has been formed on the Breckenridge and other divisions but none has yet been formed on the Dakota division. Another meeting will be held in June.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Merchant LaBissoniere is transacting business at Grand Forks today.

Adam Schmitz of Grand Forks spent Sunday in this city with his many friends.

Cash Brunelle and wife left Monday after a two weeks visit here, for his claim near Blackduck.

Mrs. H. N. Johnson of Park River, arrived in the city yesterday, for an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Toupin.

Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, June 7. At Grand View hotel. Remember the date if your eyes trouble you.

Terrebonne Town order No. 790, issued in favor of Wm. McAnulty, June 26, 1905, will be paid upon presentation to the treasurer of the town of Terrebonne. Interest discontinues from May 7th, 1907.—L. C. Cadieux, treasurer.

The Percheron stallion, Fred, weight 1700, will stand the season at Guerin Bros. barn. We also have a high grade Jack which will serve at our barn during the season. Anyone wishing horses castrated should give us a call. 31 4 —Guerin Bros.

C. E. Patterson of Marshall, Minn., closed a deal this week for the Theo. Jacobson farm of 320 acres in Lake Pleasant township. Consideration $9000. Mr. Jacobson will crop the place this spring and later move to Marshall. Ed L. Healy of this city, and Mr. Patterson at one time were partners in the mercantile business in Marshall.

The Local Field---

Sheriff Nelson was up to Thief River Monday.

Thomas Glynn of Wylie was in town Wednesday.

Assessor Halslet is busy this week listing the personal property of the city.

Fresh fancy cookies, a big stock just received at Freund's. Call in and see them.

Joe Perras is suffering from a hemorrhage of the lungs and is very low at this writing.

Aug. Moran left Monday for Rolla, N. D, where he will put in the summer working at his trade.

The season is late, better go to Spillane's, The Right Store, and get some quick growing garden and flower seeds.

Miss Carrie Alstadt left Saturday for Sandridge, north of Thief River, near which place she will teach a summer term of school.

Misses Winnie Herron, Agnes Kelly and Annie Swoards came down from Thief River Falls to attend the funeral of Miss Clara Zaiser on Tuesday.

Clement Brunelle left Monday with his brother, Cash, for a week's visit at Blackduck. While there Clement will also push the sales of Brunelle Bros.' popular brands of cigars.

At the regular meeting of the fire department held Saturday the following officers were re elected: H. Hennemuth, chief; M. A. Converse, asst-chief; Fred Borchers, secretary; Geo. F. Hennings, treasurer.

Rev. Herbert W. Knox, pastor of the Presbyterian church left on Tuesday night for a two weeks' visit in the Twin Cities, and at Green Bay and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He expects to return on the 24th or 2th of this month.

During the absence of Rev. Knox, the Sunday morning service at the Presbyterian church will be omitted on next Sunday and also the week following. The Sunday school and Young People's meeting will be held as usual. Next Sunday evening the service will be conducted by the Session of the church and will be in charge of Mr. L. C. Simons.

Joseph Brohman, one of Lambert township's prominent farmers has made a deal with Louis Sieff whereby he trades his farm in Lambert for Mr. Sieff's residence property on 4th street. Mr. Brohman has farmed in this county for twenty-one years and while he has found it profitable, says that he is going to take a rest from the strenuous labors connected with farm life. Mr Brohman and family will probably occupy their new home about the middle of this month

Narcisse Bolduux, a prominent farmer of P[illegible] township was in the city Tuesday renewing old acquaintances and looking after business matters. Mr Bolduux is one of the pioneer residents of the county having settled here some twenty years ago and like many others who have taken advantage of the resources of this country has prospered and today has a well stocked farm of about [illegible] hundred acres of the best land in the northern part of the state.

J. F. Mathews of Dorothy was in town Saturday.

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Banker Hansen of St. Hilaire transacted business in the city, Wednesday.

Father Adolph spent Monday and Tuesday in the city as the guest of Father Ambrose.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Ives accompanied by the little Miss Ives spent several days at the Pirath home the first of the week.

Binford Times: John A Pokezwinski is pitching for the Red Lake Falls (Minn.) team this season. Everybody remembers noisy "Pucks."

Geo. F. Hennings left Monday evening on the belated passenger for a several days business trip to Bemidji, Blackduck and other Red Lake points.

E. H. Gerlach, who is now travelling for the American Tobacco Co., spent several days here the first of the week, visiting with his many friends.

Ed Bray went over to Grand Forks Wednesday, via the N. P., for a short business trip. He will return by the way of Crookston where he will spend a short time among old friends.

Mrs. Matt Maher spent Tuesday in the city as the guest of her sister, Mrs Ed. Bray. Miss Bella Bray accompanied her aunt on her return to Crookston and will also visit at Grand Forks before returning home.

One of the many important changes made in the state game and fish laws by the late legislature is the provision that "the use of artificial lights in spearing pickerel or rough fish is made unlawful during the months of May and June."

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Grace who are well known in this city will be pleased to learn that a healthy girl baby arrived Tuesday of last week at their home in Mount Vernon, Washington. Mr. Grace was at one time connected with the firm of W. A. Marin of Crookston and Mrs. Grace was formerly Miss Nellie Hannay, daughter of J. K. Hannay, of St. Hilaire.

While pulling out of town last Monday afternoon the local G. N. freight met with an accident in the south cut which tied up traffic for several hours. When in about the middle of the cut the front trucks of a refrigerator car jumped the track, turning crosswise, tearing up the track for a couple of rods and finally breaking loose and lodging in the rear trucks. While the damage was comparatively small, it was necessary to call out the wrecking crew from Crookston to clear the right of way. The southbound passenger was delayed here for about six hours and the freight did not get out of town until after two in the morning. The peculiar formation in the cuts in this vicinity makes roadbuilding extremely difficult and the G. N. has no end of trouble in keeping trains on the rails as soon as the frost goes out of the ground.

Answers Death's Summons.

"And with his cycle keen,
He reaps the grain all at a breath
And the flowers that grow between."

Monday afternoon the community was deeply grieved to learn that the grim reaper had once more visited us, and, in his reaping, had gathered unto the harvest one of the fairest "flowers that grow between."

On Monday, May 6th at 1.25 p. m., Clara Dell Zaiser, was called to the land of eternal rest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Zaiser in this city.

Clara Dell Zaiser was born in Red Lake Falls, July 1st, 1887, and was raised from childhood in this city where she was just budding into womanhood, having nearly reached her twentieth birthday at the time of her death. She was a member of the Holy Catholic church and was always to be found among its most active workers. Nature had endowed her with a sweet disposition which commanded the love, respect and honor of all who knew her, and she had so entrenched herself in the hearts of her friends that the community as a whole share the bereavement of her departure.

Miss Zaiser had been ill for about about a month past, from an attack of appendicitis, and although given every assistance known to medical science and loving friends, there was little or no hopes of her recovery after the operation which was performed last Thursday.

Many beautiful flowers were brought by friends and comrades of school days as a tribute to the memory of the departed, and tokens of their love and esteem.

Funeral services were conducted from St. Mary's church and the remains were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery north of this city.

Mrs. Otto Kankel, of Fertile, Mr. C. T. Kankel, of Ulen, and Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Kankel, of Terrebonne, were among the out of town relatives who were present to attend the funeral.

CARD OF THANKS.

Although we feel that we can never repay the kindness of friends and that mere words can not express our appreciation of the assistance rendered during our late bereavement, we take this opportunity of extending our heartfelt thanks to all.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Zaiser and family.

Louis Falardeau, ex-county commissioner from Lambert, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday transacting business and calling on his many friends.

Louis Sieff returned Monday from Montana to look after several business matters of importance. Louis reports his contract work moving along nicely. He will return to Montana in about ten days

P. J. Nimesgren left Monday for Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, where he will put in the summer carpentering and will probably move his family there the coming fall. Mr Nimesgren spent some time in that country about five years ago, and, if he is as favorably impressed with the conditions there this summer as he was at that time, intends to locate there permanently.

SPECIAL SALE OF

Ladies' Spring COATS

Only 8 coats left. Will close them out at special prices. Palmer make, $12 coat velvet collar, all wool, for $8.50

5 regular $10.00 and $12.00 coats for $7.50 to $8.50

Come soon. they won't last long.

Our Men and Boys' Line of Clothing is at Your Service. Our

KUPPENHEIMER SUITS

Will Give You The Right Style

$15.00 to $25.00

Other Makes at from $5.00 to $15.00

CRAVENETTS $15.00 to $22.50

TOP COATS $10, $12.50 and $18.50

Everybody says it pays to trade at . .

The Big Store

Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints

The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,

Small Farm Implements

Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXX.—Continued.

He [illegible] the saddle and bridle into the [illegible], and she followed him.

[illegible] the nature of Mr. Follett's [illegible], his confidence in the soundness of his attitude toward it was perfect. He showed no sign of abstraction or anxiety; no sign of aught but a [illegible] to live agreeably in the present, a present that included Prudence. When the early breakfast was over they went out about the place, through the peach orchard and the vineyard still dewy, lingering in the shade of a plum tree, finding all matters to be of interest. For a time they watched and laughed at the two calves through the bars of the corral, cavorting [illegible] on stiffened legs while the [illegible] mothers cast languishing glances at them from outside, conscious that their milk was being basely [illegible] from the rightful heirs. They picked many blossoms and talked of many things. There was no [illegible] from early morning until high noon, and yet, though they were [illegible], they achieved absolutely nothing.

[illegible] afternoon Prudence donned [illegible] sombrero, and they went to the canyon to fish. From a clump of the yellowish green willows that [illegible] the stream, Follett cut a [illegible] wand. To this he fixed a line and [illegible] hook that he had carried in his hat, and for the rest of the distance to the canyon's mouth he collected [illegible] grasshoppers as lingered [illegible] in his shadow. Entering the canyon they followed up the stream, [illegible] over broken rocks, skirting [illegible] boulders, and turning aside to [illegible] a gorge that narrowed the [illegible] and flung it down in a little [illegible].

[illegible] and there Follett would flicker [illegible] over the surface of a shaded [illegible] it at the foot of a ripple, [illegible] across an eddy, cast it under a [illegible] rock or dangle it in some [illegible] nook by the willow roots, [illegible] himself meanwhile as best [illegible], here behind a boulder, there [illegible] a willow in front of him, again [illegible] flat on the bank, taking care to keep [illegible] his shadow off the stream [illegible] so silently.

[illegible], where she followed, Prudence could see the surface of the water [illegible] with a curling gleam of gold, which would give way to a bubbling [illegible]; then she would see the willow rod [illegible] see it vibrate and thrill and [illegible] the point working slowly over the [illegible]. Then perhaps the rod would suddenly straighten out for a few seconds, [illegible], to bend again, slowly, gently [illegible] mercilessly. Or perhaps the [illegible] continued to come in until it was [illegible] the bank and the end of the line [illegible] by. Then after a frantic [illegible] on the margin of the stream the [illegible] trout would be gasping on the bank, a thing of shivering [illegible] of blended brown and gold and [illegible]. At first she pitied the fish and [illegible] the cruelty of man, but Follett [illegible] other views.

"[illegible]," he said, "a trout is the cruelest [illegible] there is. Look at it trying to swallow this poor little hopper that [illegible] tumbled into the water by accident. It just loves to eat its stuff alive. And it isn't particular. It would just as lief eat its own children. Now you take that one there, and say he was ten thousand times as big as he is, and you were coming along here and your foot slipped and Mr. Trout was lying behind this rock here—hungry. Say! What a mouthful you'd make, pink dress and all—he'd have you swallowed in a second, and then he'd sneak back behind the rock there wiping his mouth, and hoping your little sister or somebody would be along in a minute and fall in too."

"Ugh!—Why, what horrible little monsters! Let me catch one."

And so she fished under his direction. They lurked together in the shadows of rocks, while he showed her how to flicker the bait in the current, here holding her hand on the rod, again supporting her while she leaned out to cast around a boulder, each feeling the other's breathless caution and looking deep into each other's eyes through seconds of tense silence.

Such as they were, these were the only results of the lesson; results that left them in easy friendliness toward each other. For the fish were not deceived by her. He would point out some pool where very probably a hungry trout was lying in wait with his head to the current, and she would try to skim the lure over it. More than once she saw the fish dart toward it, but never did she quite convince them. Oftener she saw them flit up-stream in fright, like flashes of gray lightning. Yet at length she felt she had learned all that could be taught of the art, and that further failure would mean merely a lack of appetite or spirit in the fish. So she went on alone, while Follett stopped to clean the dozen trout he had caught.

While she was in sight he watched her, the figure bending lithe as the rod she held, moving lightly, now a long, now a short step, half kneeling to throw the bait into an eddy; then up again with determined strides to the next likely pool. When he could no longer see her, he fell to work on his fish, scouring their slime off in the dry sand.

When she returned, she found him on his back, his hat off, his arms flung out above his head, fast asleep. She sat near by on a smooth rock at the water's edge and waited—without impatience, for this was the first time she had been free to look at him quite as she wished, and she studied him closely now. He seemed to her like some young power of that far strange eastern land. She thought of something she had heard him say about Dandy: "He's game and fearless and almighty prompt,—but he's kind and gentle, too." She was pleased to think it described the master as well as the horse. And she was glad they had been such fine playmates the whole day long. When the shadow moved off his face and left it in the slanting rays of the sun, she broke off a spruce bough and propped it against the rock to shield him.

And then she sighed, for they could be playmates only in forgetfulness. He was a Gentile, and by that token wicked and lost; unless—and in that moment she flushed, feeling the warmth of a high purpose.

She would save him. He was worth saving, from his crown of yellow hair to the high heels of his Mexican boots. Strong, clean, gentle, and—she hesitated for a word—interesting—he must be brought into the Kingdom, and she would do it. She looked up again and met his wide-open eyes.

They both laughed. "I sat up with your pa last night," he said, ashamed of having slept. "We had some business to palaver about."

He had tied the fish into a bundle with aspen leaves and damp moss around them, and now they went back down the stream. In the flush of her new role as missionary she allowed herself to feel a secret motherly tenderness for his immortal soul, letting him help her by hand or arm over places where she knew she could have gone much better alone.

Back at the house they were met by the little bent man, who had tossed upon his bed all day in the fires of his hell. He looked searchingly at them to be sure that Follett had kept his secret. Then, relieved by the frank glance of Prudence, he fell to musing on the two, so young, so fresh, so joyous in the world and in each other, seeing them side by side with those little half-felt, timidly implied, or unconsciously expressed confidences of boy and girl; sensing the memory of his own lost youth's aroma, his youth that had slipped off unrecked in the haze of his dreams of glory. For this he felt very tenderly toward them, wishing that they were brother and sister and his own.

That evening, while they sat out of doors, she said, very resolutely:

"I'm going to teach Mr. Follett some truth to-morrow from the Book of Mormon. He says he has never been baptized in any church."

Follett looked interested and cordial, but her father failed to display the enthusiasm she had expected, and seemed even a little embarrassed.

"You mean well, daughter, but don't be discouraged if he is slow to take our truth. Perhaps he has a kind of his own as good as ours. A woman I knew once said to me, 'Going to heaven is like going to mill; if your wheat is good the miller will never ask how you came.'"

"But, father, suppose you get to mill and have only chaff?"

"That is the same answer I made, dear. I wish I hadn't."

Later, when Prudence had gone, the two men made their beds by the fire in the big room. Follett was awakened twice by the other putting wood on the fire; and twice more by his pitiful pleading with something at his back not to come in front of him.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Gentile Issues an Ultimatum.

June went; July came and went. It was a hot summer below, where the valley widens to let in Amalon; but up in the little-sunned aisle of Box canyon it was always cool. There the pines are straight and reach their heads far into the sky, each a many-wired harp to the winds that come down from the high divide. Their music is never still; now a low, ominous rush, soft but mighty, swelling as it nears, the rush of a winged host, rising swiftly to one fearsome crescendo until the listener cowers instinctively as if under the tread of many feet; then dying away to mutter threats in the distance, and to come again more fiercely; or, it may be, to come with a gentler sweep, as if pacified, even yearning, for the moment. Or, again, the same wind will play quieter airs through the green boughs, a chamber-music of silken rustlings, of feathered fans just stirring, of whisperings, and the sighs of a woman.

It is cool beneath these pines, and pleasant on the couches of brown needles that have fallen through all the years. Here, in the softened light, amid the resinous pungence of the cones and the green boughs, where the wind above played an endless, solemn accompaniment to the careless song of the stream below, the maiden Saint tried to save into the Kingdom a youthful Gentile of whom she discovered almost daily some fresh reason why he should not be lost. The reasons had become so many that they were now heavy upon her. And yet, while the youth submitted meekly to her ministry, appearing even to crave it, he was undeniably either dense or stubborn—in either case of defective spirituality.

"Say! What a Mouthful You'd Make, Pink Dress and All. He'd Have You Swallowed in a Second."

She was grieved by the number of times he fell asleep when she read from the Book of Mormon. The times were many because, though she knew it not, he had come to be, in effect, a night-nurse to the little bent man below, who was now living out his days in quiet desperation, and his nights in a fear of something behind him. Some nights Follett would have unbroken rest; but oftener he was awakened by the other's grip on his arm. Then he would get up, put fresh logs on the fire or light a candle and talk with the haunted man until he became quiet again.

He knew a few things definitely: that Moroni, last of the Nephites, had hidden up unto the Lord the golden plates in the hill of Cumorah; and that the girl who taught him was in some mysterious way the embodiment of all the wonderful things he had ever thought he wanted, of all the strange beauties he had crudely pictured in lonely days along the trail. Here was something he had supposed could come true only in a different world, the kind of world there was in the first book he had ever read, where there had seemed to be no one but good fairies and children that were uncommonly deserving. Yet he had never been able to get clearly into his mind the nature and precise office of the Holy Ghost; nor had he ever become certain how he could bring this wonderful young woman in closer relationship with himself. He felt that to put out his hand toward her—except at certain great moments when he could help her over rough places and feel her golden weight upon his arm—would be to startle her, and then all at once he would awaken from a dream to find her gone. He thought he would feel very badly then, for probably he would never be able to get back into the same dream again. So he was cautious, resolving to make the thing last until it came true of itself.

Once when they followed the stream down, in the late afternoon, he had mused himself so full of the wonder of her that he almost forgot his caution in an amiable impulse to let her share in his feelings.

"You know," he began, "you're like as if I had been trying to think of a word I wanted to say—some fine, big word, a fancy one—but I couldn't think of it. You know how you can't think of the one you want sometimes, only nothing else will do in place of it, and then all at once, when you quit trying to think, it flashes over you. You're like that. I never could think of you, but I just had to because I couldn't get along without it, and then when I didn't expect it you just happened along—the word came along and said itself."

Without speaking she had run ahead to pick the white and blue columbines and pink roses. And he, alarmed at his boldness, fearing she would now be afraid of him, went forward with the deep purpose of showing her a light, careless mood, to convince her that he had meant nothing much.

The little bent man at the house would look at them with a sort of helplessness when they came in, sometimes even forgetting the smile he was wont to hide his hurts. He was impressed anew each time he saw them with the punishing power of such vengeance as was left to the Lord. He could see more than either of the pair before him. The little white-haired boy who had fought him with tooth and nail so long ago, to be not taken from Prudence, had now come back with the might of a man, even the might of a lover, to take her from him when she had become all of his life. He could think of no sharper revenge upon himself or his people. For this cowboy was the spirit incarnate of the oncoming east, thorned on by the Lord to avenge his church's crime.

Then in the night would come the terrors of the dark, the curses and groans of that always-dying thing behind him. And always now he would see the hand with the silver bracelet at the wrist, flaunting in his face the shivering strands of gold with the crimson patch at the end. Yet even this, because he could see it, was less fearful than the thing he could not see, the thing that crawled or lurched relentlessly behind him, with the snoring sound in its throat, the smell of warm blood and the horrible dripping of it, whose breath he could feel on his neck and whose nerveless hands sometimes fumbled weakly at his shoulder, as it strove to come in front of him.

He sat sleepless in his chair with candles burning for three nights when Follett, late in August, went off to meet a messenger from one of his father's wagon trains which, he said, was on its way north. Fearful he was the meaning of his presence, he was inexpressibly glad when the Gentile returned to save him from the terrors of the night.

And there was now a new goad of remorse. The evening before Follett's return he had found Prudence in tears after a visit to the village. With a sudden great onrush of pity he had taken her in his arms to comfort her, feeling the selfishness strangely washed from his love, as the sobs convulsed her.

"Come, come, child—tell your father what it is," he had urged her, and when she became a little quiet she had told him.

"Oh, Daddy, dear—I've just heard such an awful thing, what they talk of me in Amalon, and of you and my mother—shameful!"

He knew then what was coming; he had wondered, indeed, that this talk should be so long in reaching her; but he waited silently, soothing her.

"They say, whoever my mother was, you couldn't have married her—that Christina is your first wife, and the temple records show it. And, oh, Daddy, they say it means that I am a child of sin—and shame—and it made me want to kill myself."

Another passion of tears and sobs had overwhelmed her, and all but broken down the little little man. Yet he controlled himself and soothed her again to quietness.

"It is all wrong, child, all wrong. You are not a child of sin, but a child of love, as rightly born as any in Amalon. Believe me, and pay no heed to that talk."

"They have been saying it for years, and I never knew."

"They say what is not true."

"You were married to my mother, then?"

He waited too long. She divined, clear though his answer was, that he had evaded, or was quibbling in some way.

"You are the daughter of a truly married husband and wife, as truly married as were any pair."

And though she knew he had turned her question, she saw that he must have done it for some great reason of his own, and, even in her grief, she would not pain him by asking another. She could feel that he suffered as she did, and he seemed, moreover, to be pitifully and strangely frightened.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ANSWERS TO THE CURIOUS.

No, Amateur Thespian, the heavy man is not a stage wait.

An Old Subscriber is informed that wives are not like beefsteak—you cannot make them tender by beating them.

A Lover—The way to open the door to a successful courtship is very simple. All you have to do is ring the belle.

If Epicure wants the best way of avoiding indigestion through mince pie, the remedy is easily learned. Don't eat it.

A correspondent who signs herself "Fastidious" wants to know how to convey a delicate hint to a lady guest who persists in using cigarettes. If she smokes, put her out. This applies equally whether she smokes cigarettes or sets herself on fire.

Easy Mark asks the surest way of detecting counterfeit notes. Try to get to serve a term on the grand jury, and then you will know how to find true bills.

It is hard to answer your question without further data, Lily Bell. The fact that your heart flutters strangely and that you are always blushing, may be either signs that you are romantically in love or that you have indigestion.

Worried Wifie—If buying a new bonnet is a crime in you husband's eyes, just charge it to him.—Baltimore American.

Fellow Travellers.

A Greenwich man tells of a Connecticut farmer who, after having driven a lot of hogs to Greenwich, sold them for precisely what had been offered him before he left home.

"You don't seem to have made much by bringing your hogs down here," remarked the man who tells the story.

"Well, no," replied the agriculturist, dejectedly, "I ain't made no money, but then, you know," he added, his face brightening, "I had the company of the hogs on the way down."—Harpers Weekly.

Worth Considering.

"Mrs. Weatherby permits her cook to use the parlor when she has callers."

"Mercy! I should never consent to anything of that kind."

"Well, I don't know. It may not be such a bad idea. I had a friend once whose cook entertained a policeman in the kitchen while a burglar was carrying away nearly everything in the front part of the house."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Advantage of Elaborate Diction.

"You say he accused you of being untruthful?"

"That's what happened," answered Plute Pete, with much embarrassment.

"And lives to tell the tale?"

"Well, you see he used long words in such a roundabout way that he was out o' town before I had figgered out exactly what he meant."—Washington Star.

Deep Disappointment.

"Yes," said one Cincinnati heiress to the other, "her parents are fearfully disappointed in the match she made."

"For what reason?"

"She married a man who plays pinochle instead of baccarat."—Washington Star.

DETERMINED.

Molly—How are you going to reform him?

Dolly—Marry him.

Molly—Goodness! Does he need such heroic treatment as that?

The Old, Old Story.

Of mystic "new-thought" cults I've tried
In vain to be a scholar,
Only to learn that, "after all,"
It takes hard work to earn the dollar.
—Judge.

Discouraging News.

Yeast—Dinizulu, the Zulu chief, has a graphophone with which he entertains his guests, and also an organ of English build on which he himself performs.

Crimsonbeak—No wonder missionaries are getting more scarce.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Viewpoint.

"What do you think of Secretary Taft's decision that a mother-in-law is not part of a man's family?"

"He's right. If the majority of them are like mine, she's the whole show."—Baltimore American.

The Ruling Passion.

"Brokerly borrowed money from me this morning," said Little. "He told me he wanted to buy a pocketbook."

"Oh, I see," exclaimed Large. "He was getting something for nothing."—Harper's Weekly.

Pe-ru-na Relieves Spring Catarrh.

MISS DORA HAYDEN.

"Without hesitation I write to thank you for the great relief I have found in your valuable medicine, Peruna, and will call the attention of all my friends suffering with catarrh to that fact. Besides I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering with catarrh in any form."—Miss Dora Hayden, 819 6th St., S. W., Washington, D. C.

A Case of Spring Catarrh.

Mrs. N. P. Lawler, 423½ N. Broadway, Pittsburg, Kas., writes: "Last spring I caught a severe cold, which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick, and could neither eat nor sleep well.

"A member of our club who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna advised me to try it, and I did so at once. I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it. In three days I felt much better, and within two weeks I was in fine health. Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

"Agin It."

A female canvasser the other day came with a petition to an old farmer in the country and politely asked him if he would sign it. The old man eyed the document for a while with suspicion and then asked:

"What is it?"

"It is a petition in favor of a woman's movement," she replied insinuatingly.

"Then I'm agin it," said the farmer, with the emphasis of a man who had some domestic infelicity. "A woman who's allus a-movin' is allus a-gettin' in trouble. If you've got anything to keep her still, I'll sign it."—Cassell's Journal.

The Eternal Feminine.

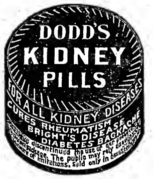
The sons of men rule the world, but the daughters of men govern it through them. It is woman who founds society in its artificial aspects. It is woman who creates class distinctions and insists on maintaining them. It is woman who imbues man with desire to emulate, who instils into him social ambition that inevitably brings in its train the restless fever of acquisition, the madness of greed, the ambition for power through financial success. It is woman who is at once the social bulwark, the autocrat and the snob.—Woman's Life.

Drew Copious Floods of Tears.

A physician in Portland, Ore., estimated that 2,048 teaspoonfuls of tears, or two gallons in all, were shed in one night by the audience that heard Savage's "Madam Butterfly" in that city recently.

Prince Fond of Boxing.

Prince Waldemar of Denmark is a capital boxer and is ever ready to put on the gloves.



SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXX.—Continued.

He carried the saddle and bridle into the house, and she followed him.

[illegible] the nature of Mr. Follett's [illegible], his confidence in the soundness of his attitude toward it was perfect. He showed no sign of abstraction or anxiety; no sign of aught but a desire to live agreeably in the present—a present that included Prudence. When the early breakfast was over they went out about the place, through the peach orchard and the vineyard still dewy, lingering in the shade of a plum tree, finding all matters full of interest. For a time they watched and laughed at the two calves through the bars of the corral, cavorting giddily on stiffened legs while the bereaved mothers cast languishing glances at them from outside, conscious that their milk was being basely diverted from the rightful heirs. They picked many blossoms and talked of many things. There was no idle moment from early morning until high noon; and yet, though they were very busy, they achieved absolutely nothing.

In the afternoon Prudence donned her sombrero, and they went to the canon to fish. From a clump of the yellowish green willows that fringe the stream, Follett cut a slender wand. To this he fixed a line and tiny hook that he had carried in his hat, and for the rest of the distance to the canyon's mouth he collected such grasshoppers as lingered too long in his shadow. Entering the canyon, they followed up the stream, clambering over broken rocks, skirting huge boulders, and turning aside to [illegible] a gorge that narrowed the [illegible] and flung it down in a little [illegible].

Here and there Follett would flicker his bait over the surface of a shaded pool, loose it at the foot of a ripple, [illegible] to an eddy, cast it under a [illegible] rock or dangle it in some [illegible] nook by the willow roots, [illegible] himself meanwhile as best he could, here behind a boulder, there behind a willow in front of him, again lying flat on the bank, taking care to keep even his shadow off the stream [illegible] so silently.

[illegible] where she followed, Prudence [illegible] the surface of the water [illegible] with a curling gleam of gold, which would give way to a bubbling splash; then she would see the willow rod bend, see it vibrate and thrill and [illegible] the point working slowly over [illegible]. Then perhaps the rod would suddenly straighten out for a few seconds, only to bend again, slowly, gently, [illegible] mercilessly. Or perhaps the point continued to come in until it was well over the bank and the end of the line close by. Then after a frantic splashing on the margin of the stream the conquered trout would be gasping on the bank, a thing of shivering gleams of blended brown and gold and pink. At first she pitied the fish and [illegible] the cruelty of man, but Follett had other views.

"[illegible]," he said, "a trout is the cruelest [illegible] there is. Look at it trying to swallow this poor little hopper that [illegible] tumbled into the water by accident. It just loves to eat its stuff alive. And it isn't particular. It would just as lief eat its own children. Now you take that one there, and say he was ten thousand times as big as he is, and you were coming along here and your foot slipped and Mr. Trout was lying behind this rock here—hungry. Say! What a mouthful you'd make, pink dress and all—he'd have you swallowed in a second, and then he'd sneak back behind the rock there, wiping his mouth, and hoping your little sister or somebody would be along in a minute and fall in too."

"Ugh!—Why, what horrible little monsters! Let me catch one."

And so she fished under his direction. They lurked together in the shadows of rocks, while he showed her how to flicker the bait in the current, here holding her hand on the rod, there supporting her while she leaned out to cast around a boulder, each feeling the other's breathless caution and looking deep into each other's eyes through seconds of tense silence.

Such as they were, these were the only results of the lesson; results that left them in easy friendliness toward each other. For the fish were not deceived by her. He would point out some pool where very probably a hungry trout was lying in wait with his head to the current, and she would try to skim the lure over it. More than once she saw the fish dart toward it, but never did she quite convince them. Oftener she saw them flit up-stream in fright, like flashes of gray lightning. Yet at length she felt she had learned all that could be taught of the art, and that further failure would mean merely a lack of appetite or spirit in the fish. So she went on alone, while Follett stopped to clean the dozen trout he had caught.

While she was in sight he watched her, the figure bending lithe as the rod she held, moving lightly, now a long, now a short step, half kneeling to throw the bait into an eddy; then off again with determined strides to the next likely pool. When he could no longer see her, he fell to work on his fish, scouring their slime off in the dry sand.

When she returned, she found him on his back, his hat off, his arms flung out above his head, fast asleep. She sat near by on a smooth rock at the water's edge and waited—without impatience, for this was the first time she had been free to look at him quite as she wished to. She studied him closely now. He seemed to her like some young power of that far strange eastern land. She thought of something she had heard him say about Dandy: "He's game and fearless and almighty prompt,—but he's kind and gentle, too." She was pleased to think it described the master as well as the horse. And she was glad they had been such fine playmates the whole day long. When the shadow moved off his face and left it in the slanting rays of the sun, she broke off a spruce bough and propped it against the rock to shield him.

And then she sighed, for they could be playmates only in forgetfulness. He was a Gentile, and by that token wicked and lost; unless—and in that moment she flushed, feeling the warmth of a high purpose.

"Say! What a Mouthful You'd Make, Pink Dress and All. He'd Have You Swallowed in a Second."

She would save him. He was worth saving, from his crown of yellow hair to the high heels of his Mexican boots. Strong, clean, gentle, and—she hesitated for a word—interesting—he must be brought into the Kingdom, and she would do it. She looked up again and met his wide-open eyes.

They both laughed. "I sat up with your pa last night," he said, ashamed of having slept. "We had some business to palaver about."

He had tied the fish into a bundle with aspen leaves and damp moss around them, and now they went back down the stream. In the flush of her new role as missionary she allowed herself to feel a secret motherly tenderness for his immortal soul, letting him help her by hand or arm over places where she knew she could have gone much better alone.

Back at the house they were met by the little bent man, who had tossed upon his bed all day in the fires of his hell. He looked searchingly at them to be sure that Follett had kept his secret. Then, relieved by the frank glance of Prudence, he fell to musing on the two, so young, so fresh, so joyous in the world and in each other, seeing them side by side with those little half-felt, timidly implied, or unconsciously expressed confidences of boy and girl; sensing the memory of his own lost youth's aroma, his youth that had slipped off unreeked in the haze of his dreams of glory. For this he felt very tenderly toward them, wishing that they were brother and sister and his own.

That evening, while they sat out of doors, she said, very resolutely:

"I'm going to teach Mr. Follett some truth to-morrow from the Book of Mormon. He says he has never been baptized in any church."

Follett looked interested and cordial, but her father failed to display the enthusiasm she had expected, and seemed even a little embarrassed.

"You mean well, daughter, but don't be discouraged if he is slow to take our truth. Perhaps he has a kind of his own as good as ours. A woman I knew once said to me, 'Going to heaven is like going to mill; if your wheat is good the miller will never ask how you came.'"

"But, father, suppose you get to mill and have only chaff?"

"That is the same answer I made, dear. I wish I hadn't."

Later, when Prudence had gone, the two men made their beds by the fire in the big room. Follett was awakened twice by the other putting wood on the fire; and twice more by his pitiful pleading with something at his back not to come in front of him.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Gentile Issues an Ultimatum.

June went; July came and went. It was a hot summer below, where the valley widens to let in Amalon; but up in the little-sunned aisle of Box canyon it was always cool. There the pines are straight and reach their heads far into the sky, each a many-wired harp to the winds that come down from the high divide. Their music is never still; now a low, ominous rush, soft but mighty, swelling as it nears, the rush of a winged host, rising swiftly to one fearsome crescendo until the listener cowers instinctively as if under the tread of many feet; then dying away to mutter threats in the distance, and to come again more fiercely; or, it may be, to come with a gentler sweep, as if pacified, even yearning, for the moment. Or, again, the same wind will play quieter airs through the green boughs, a chamber-music of silken rustlings, of feathered fans just stirring, of whisperings, and the sighs of a woman.

It is cool beneath these pines, and pleasant on the couches of brown needles that have fallen through all the years. Here, in the softened light, amid the resinous pungence of the cones and the green boughs, where the wind above played an endless, solemn accompaniment to the careless song of the stream below, the maiden Saint tried to save into the Kingdom a youthful Gentile, of whom she discovered almost daily some fresh reason why he should not be lost. The reasons had become so many that they were now heavy upon her. And yet, while the youth submitted meekly to her ministry, appearing even to crave it, he was undeniably either dense or stubborn—in either case of defective spirituality.

She was grieved by the number of times he fell asleep when she read from the Book of Mormon. The times were many because, though she knew it not, he had come to be, in effect, a night-nurse to the little bent man below, who was now living out his days in quiet desperation, and his nights in a fear of something behind him. Some nights Follett would have unbroken rest; but oftener he was awakened by the other's grip on his arm. Then he would get up, put fresh logs on the fire or light a candle and talk with the haunted man until he became quiet again.

He knew a few things definitely: that Moroni, last of the Nephites, had hidden up unto the Lord the golden plates in the hill of Cumorah; and that the girl who taught him was in some mysterious way the embodiment of all the wonderful things he had ever thought he wanted, of all the strange beauties he had crudely pictured in lonely days along the trail. Here was something he had supposed could come true only in a different world, the kind of world there was in the first book he had ever read, where there had seemed to be no one but good fairies and children that were uncommonly deserving. Yet he had never been able to get clearly into his mind the nature and precise office of the Holy Ghost; nor had he ever become certain how he could bring this wonderful young woman in closer relationship with himself. He felt that to put out his hand toward her—except at certain great moments when he could help her over rough places and feel her golden weight upon his arm—would be to startle her, and then all at once he would awaken from a dream to find her gone. He thought he would feel very badly then, for probably he would never be able to get back into the same dream again. So he was cautious, resolving to make the thing last until it came true of itself.

Once when they followed the stream down, in the late afternoon, he had mused himself so full of the wonder of her that he almost forgot his caution in an amiable impulse to let her share in his feelings.

"You know," he began, "you're like as if I had been trying to think of a word I wanted to say—some fine, big word, a fancy one—but I couldn't think of it. You know how you can't think of the one you want sometimes, only nothing else will do in place of it, and then all at once, when you quit trying to think, it flashes over you. You're like that. I never could think of you, but I just had to because I couldn't get along without it; and then when I didn't expect it you just happened along—the word came along and said itself."

Without speaking she had run ahead to pick the white and blue columbines and pink roses. And he, alarmed at his boldness, fearing she would now be afraid of him, went forward with the deep purpose of showing her a light, careless mood, to convince her that he had meant nothing much.

The little bent man at the house would look at them with a sort of helplessness when they came in, sometimes even forgetting the smile he was wont to hide his hurts. He was impressed anew each time he saw them with the punishing power of such vengeance as was left to the Lord. He could see more than either of the pair before him. The little white-haired boy who had fought him with tooth and nail so long ago, to be not taken from Prudence, had now come back with the might of a man, even the might of a lover, to take her from him when she had become all of his life. He could think of no sharper revenge upon himself or his people. For this cowboy was the spirit incarnate of the oncoming east, thorned on by the Lord to avenge his church's crime.

Then in the night would come the terrors of the dark, the curses and groans of that always-dying thing behind him. And always now he would see the hand with the silver bracelet at the wrist, flaunting in his face the shivering strands of gold with the crimson patch at the end. Yet even this, because he could see it, was less fearful than the thing he could not see, the thing that crawled or lurched relentlessly behind him, with the snoring sound in its throat, the smell of warm blood and the horrible dripping of it, whose breath he could feel on his neck and whose nerveless hands sometimes fumbled weakly at his shoulder, as it strove to come in front of him.

He sat sleepless in his chair with candles burning for three nights when Follett, late in August, went off to meet a messenger from one of his father's wagon trains which, he said, was on its way north. Fearful he was the meaning of his presence, he was inexpressibly glad when the Gentile returned to save him from the terrors of the night.

And there was now a new goad of remorse. The evening before Follett's return he had found Prudence in tears after a visit to the village. With a sudden great onrush of pity he had taken her in his arms to comfort her, feeling the selfishness strangely washed from his love, as the sobs convulsed her.

"Come, come, child—tell your father what it is," he had urged her, and when she became a little quiet she had told him.

"Oh, Daddy, dear—I've just heard such an awful thing, what they talk of me in Amalon, and of you and my mother—shameful!"

He knew then what was coming; he had wondered, indeed, that this talk should be so long in reaching her; but he waited silently, soothing her.

"They say, whoever my mother was, you couldn't have married her—that Christina is your first wife, and the temple records show it. And, oh, Daddy, they say it means that I am a child of sin—and shame—and it made me want to kill myself."

Another passion of tears and sobs had overwhelmed her, and all but broken down the little little man. Yet he controlled himself and soothed her again to quietness.

"It is all wrong, child, all wrong. You are not a child of sin, but a child of love, as rightly born as any in Amalon. Believe me, and pay no heed to that talk."

"They have been saying it for years, and I never knew."

"They say what is not true."

"You were married to my mother, then?"

He waited too long. She divined, clear though his answer was, that he had evaded, or was quibbling in some way.

"You are the daughter of a truly married husband and wife, as truly married as were any pair."

And though she knew he had turned her question, she saw that he must have done it for some great reason of his own, and, even in her grief, she would not pain him by asking another. She could feel that he suffered as she did, and he seemed, moreover, to be pitifully and strangely frightened.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ANSWERS TO THE CURIOUS.

No, Amateur Thespian, the heavy man it not a stage wait.

An Old Subscriber is informed that wives are not like beefsteak—you cannot make them tender by beating them.

A Lover—The way to open the door to a successful courtship is very simple. All you have to do is ring the belle.

If Epicure wants the best way of avoiding indigestion through mince pie, the remedy is easily learned. Don't eat it.

A correspondent who signs herself "Fastidious" wants to know how to convey a delicate hint to a lady guest who persists in using cigarettes. If she smokes, put her out. This applies equally whether she smokes cigarettes or sets herself on fire.

Easy Mark asks the surest way of detecting counterfeit notes. Try to get to serve a term on the grand jury, and then you will know how to find true bills.

It is hard to answer your question without further data, Lily Bell. The fact that your heart flutters strangely and that you are always blushing, may be either signs that you are romantically in love or that you have indigestion.

Worried Wife—If buying a new bonnet is a crime in you husband's eyes, just charge it to him.—Baltimore American.

Fellow Travellers.

A Greenwich man tells of a Connecticut farmer who, after having driven a lot of hogs to Greenwich, sold them for precisely what had been offered him before he left home.

"You don't seem to have made much by bringing your hogs down here," remarked the man who tells the story.

"Well, no," replied the agriculturist, dejectedly, "I ain't made no money, but then, you know," he added, his face brightening, "I had the company of the hogs on the way down."—Harpers Weekly.

Worth Considering.

"Mrs. Weatherby permits her cook to use the parlor when she has callers."

"Mercy! I should never consent to anything of that kind."

"Well, I don't know. It may not be such a bad idea. I had a friend once whose cook entertained a policeman in the kitchen while a burglar was carrying away nearly everything in the front part of the house."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Advantage of Elaborate Diction.

"You say he accused you of being untruthful?"

"That's what happened," answered Plute Pete, with much embarrassment.

"And lives to tell the tale?"

"Well, you see he used long words in such a roundabout way that he was out o' town before I had figgered out exactly what he meant."—Washington Star.

Deep Disappointment.

"Yes," said one Cincinnati heiress to the other, "her parents are fearfully disappointed in the match she made."

"For what reason?"

"She married a man who plays pinochle instead of baccarat."—Washington Star.

DETERMINED.

Molly—How are you going to reform him?

Dolly—Marry him.

Molly—Goodness! Does he need such heroic treatment as that?

The Old, Old Story.

Of mystic "new-thought" cults I've tried
In vain to be a scholar,
Only to learn that, "after all,"
It takes hard work to earn the dollar.
—Judge.

Discouraging News.

Yeast—Dinizulu, the Zulu chief, has a graphophone with which he entertains his guests, and also an organ of English build on which he himself performs.

Crimsonbeak—No wonder missionaries are getting more scarce.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Viewpoint.

"What do you think of Secretary Taft's decision that a mother-in-law is not part of a man's family?"

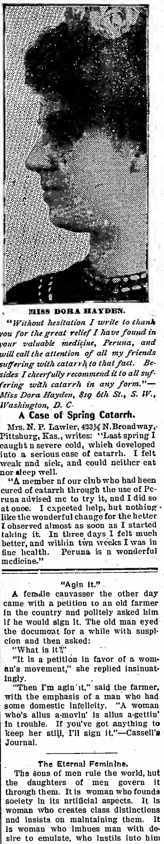
"He's right. If the majority of them are like mine, she's the whole show."—Baltimore American.

The Ruling Passion.

"Brokerly borrowed money from me this morning," said Little. "He told me he wanted to buy a pocketbook."

"Oh, I see," exclaimed Large. "He was getting something for nothing."—Harper's Weekly.

Pe-ru-na Relieves Spring Catarrh.



MISS DORA HAYDEN.

"Without hesitation I write to thank you for the great relief I have found in your valuable medicine, Peruna, and will call the attention of all my friends suffering with catarrh to that fact. Besides I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering with catarrh in any form."—Miss Dora Hayden, 819 6th St., S. W., Washington, D. C.

A Case of Spring Catarrh.

Mrs. N. P. Lawler, 433½ N. Broadway, Pittsburg, Kas., writes: "Last spring I caught a severe cold, which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick, and could neither eat nor sleep well.

"A member of our club who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna advised me to try it, and I did so at once. I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it. In three days I felt much better, and within two weeks I was in fine health. Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

"Agin It."

A female canvasser the other day came with a petition to an old farmer in the country and politely asked him if he would sign it. The old man eyed the document for a while with suspicion and then asked:

"What is it?"

"It is a petition in favor of a woman's movement," she replied insinuatingly.

"Then I'm agin it," said the farmer, with the emphasis of a man who had some domestic infelicity. "A woman who's allus a-movin' is allus a-gettin' in trouble. If you've got anything to keep her still, I'll sign it."—Cassell's Journal.

The Eternal Feminine.

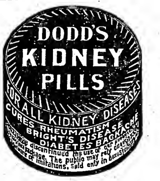
The sons of men rule the world, but the daughters of men govern it through them. It is woman who founds society in its artificial aspects. It is woman who creates class distinctions and insists on maintaining them. It is woman who imbues man with desire to emulate, who instils into him social ambition that inevitably brings in its train the restless fever of acquisition, the madness of greed, the ambition for power through financial success. It is woman who is at once the social bulwark, the autocrat and the snob.—Woman's Life.

Drew Copious Floods of Tears.

A physician in Portland, Ore., estimated that 2,048 teaspoonfuls of tears, or two gallons in all, were shed in one night by the audience that heard Savage's "Madam Butterfly" in that city recently.

Prince Fond of Boxing.

Prince Waldemar of Denmark is a capital boxer and is ever ready to put on the gloves.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
CURES RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature
Brent Good
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

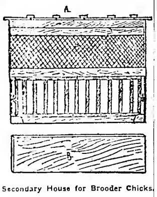
INTENTIONAL DURLICATE EXPOSURE

COOP FOR HENS AND CHICKS.

Type of Construction Used by Ontario Agricultural Station.

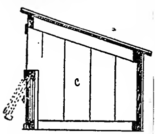
The authorities of the Ontario Agricultural college have devised n coop which they recommend for the hen and chicks. It is so devised that it gives plenty of air both day and night, and during the night in particular can be so closed that small animals cannot get in to disturb either hen or chicks. A good idea of the front of the coop is shown at A in the accompanying illustration.

The upper part is covered with wire netting and the lower part with slats so that the chicks can come in or go out at will. B is a board which is made to fit over the slats and can be fastened in place by thumb buttons on either side of the coop.



Secondary House for Brooder Chicks.

A good idea of the end sections is shown in C. The size may be mado to suit the owner, but it hss been found by the Ontario authorities that a coop two feet high in front, 15 inches high in the rear and two or three feet long works very satisfactorily. The portion of the coop covered with wire netting is one foot wide.



Another House for Young Chicks.

As shown at C, the front is movable so that when the chicks are large enough the hen can leave the coop during the day time.

SOLAR WAX EXTRACTOR.

Rays of Sun Used in Rendering the Wax.

A solar wax extractor is needed in every apiary and several are kept running in many large apiaries. Extractors which render wax by steam are also used. To the latter class belongs the improved Swiss wax extractor. This improvement, invented in Switzerland and improved in America, consists of a tin or copper vessel with a circle of perforations in the bottom near the sides to let in steam from a boiler below and within this upper vessel nnother receptacle—the comb receiver—made of perforated zinc. Within n few years wax extractors employing the heat of he sun nnd known as solar extractors have coms into general use. The essential features in all the forms that have heen devised are a metal tank with a glass cover and usually a wire cloth strainer under which is placed the receptacle for the wax, the whole so arranged as to enable one to tilt it at such an angle as will catch tbe direct rays of the sun. The effectiveness of the solar extractor is increased hy having the glass doubled nnd adding a reflector, such as a mirror or a sheet of bright metal.—Exchange.

CHICK CHAT.

Fine, clean grit should he the first thing eaten by little chicks.

Early maturity for market means considerable in making up the profits.

Felch says the light hrahma will grow a broiler to weigh two pounds at eight weeks of age.

A pound of naphthaleen dissolved in n gallon of coal oil makes an excellent lice paint for the roosts.

Stale (hut not moldy) hread moistened with milk is one of the best first foods for chicks and ducklings.

A poorly bred thoroughbred is worse than a scrub. Scrub treatment will make scrubs of thoroughbreds.

Stale and dirty water is a frequent cause of howel trouble in the enrly youngsters; provido clean water in clean dishes.

The "spring chickea" should ho hatched not earlier than February, nor later than May. The market weight is two to three pounds.

Strong parents make strong chicks—strong chicks nre active and quick growing—quick growth makes the juicy, meaty broiler and roaster.

Set two hens at the same time; then, if the hatch is not large, all the chicks can be given to tho most motherly hen nnd the other set again, or given her liberty.

(From The Chicago Tribune.)

ADVICE TO RHEUMATICS

Noted Physician Tells How to Prevent and Cure Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

(By Geo. Edmund Flood, M. D.)

If you would avoid Rheumatism and Kidney and Bladder Trouhles, be moderate in the consumption of heavy, rich foods, substitute as far as possihle soups, hroths, fresh milk and drink water—lots of water. Take plenty of timo to eat, and don't eat after you havo had enough, even if it does taste good. If your work is confining take a moderate nmount of exercise each day in tho open air.

Of course, neithsr diet, water, rest nor exercise will cure these afflictions. I advise them ns preventives only. For tho henefit of the readers of this article who aro now nfflicted with Rheumatism, Kidney, Bladder or Urinary trouble, and desiro to he cured quickly, I give below, complete in every detail, tho famous prescription which has mado me so successful in the treatment of these diseases. It is the most certain cure for these diseases that I have ever used. It is pleasant to take, it is not expensive, it can he filled by any druggist, and I believe it is the greatest prescription for Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Trouhle ever written. It is also a valuable spring tonic and blood purifier. If you nre a sufferer, save this, take it to your druggist and have it filled, or get the ingredients and mix them at home.

Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, ½ ounce.

Concentrated Barkola Compound, 1 ounce.

Fluid Extract Prickly Ash Bark, ½ drachm.

Aromatic Elixir, 4 ounces.

Adult dose, take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime; children, one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful after meals.

After you are cured follow tho advice I have given you in regard to diet, exercise and water, and you will not need tho services of a physician again for these ailments.

Other papers are privileged to copy.

STUDENT MADE HIS POINT.

No Douht the Policeman Understood What He Meant.

W. H. Mallock, the well-known English writer and political economist, said at a dinner in New York, apropos of a new definition of socialism: "I find that definition rather confusing. It reminds me of the young Oxford student's badinage with the policeman. 'Officer,' said the youth late one night, 'I'd like to ask you a question.'

"'Very well, sir.'

"'Does the law permit me to call you an ass?'

"'You move on,' ths officer growled.

"'But stop a hit,' continued the youth. 'Does the law permit me to call an ass a policeman?'

"'The law don't say nothing about that,' was tho gruff reply.

"'Then,' said the youth, 'good-night, Mr. Policeman.'"

BABY IN TERRIBLE STATE.

Awful Humor Eating Away Face—Body a Mass of Sores—Cuticura Cures in Two Weeks.

"My little daughter broke out all over her hody with a humor, nnd we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, hut she continued to grow worse. Her hody was a mass of sores, and her little face was heing eaten away. Her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighhors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and hefore I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, nnd my little one's face and body were ns clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars, instead of seventy-five cents. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Cohurn St., Akron, O., Aug. 30, 1905."

Chamois Skins from Sheep.

Chamois skins in a majority of cases, according to a United States consular report recently issued, are really an oil tanned sheep or lamh skin lining. The supply of skins from tho chamois is very limited. Enough could not hs ohtained in a year to supply the United States for more than a single day, a fair average crop from Switzerland heing only about 5,000 to 6,000 skins. The chamois skin is heavier than the skin of the sheep or lamb, and much coarser. For strength and durability the chamois is preferahle, hut for ordinary use and nppearance the oil-tanned sheepskin lining would, in most instances, he preferred.

English Ribbon Trade Flourishing.

The English rihbon trade is said to be now in a more flourishing condition than it has heen in many years, owing to the huge demands the dressmakers and milliners are making upon the output of the manufacturers.

TEXAS GULF COAST LANDS.
No blizzards. no heat prostrations. Growing crops all year. Live Agts. wanted.
THEO. F. KOCH, ST. PAUL, MINN.

Cereal Crop Worth $2,000,000,000.

The United States cereal crop of 1906 aggregated 5,000,000,000 hushels, valued at $2,000,000,000.

For more reasons than one, Garfield Tea is the best choice when n laxative is needed: it is Pure, Pleasant to take, Mild and Potent. Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Law.

A fast young man is seldom ahle to keep up with his running expenses.

"THE MARRYING SQUIRE."

Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., Has Married 1400 Couples.

Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., has fairly earned the title "The Marrying Squire," hy which he is known far and wide, having already married some 1400 couples. Ten years ago he was Deputy County Treasurer. "At that time," said Justice Law, "I was suffering from an annoying kidney trouble. My hack ached, my rest was hroken at night, nnd the passages of the kidney secretions were too frequent and contained sediment. Three hoxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1897, and for the past nine yenrs I have heen free from kidney complaint and backache."

Sold hy all dealers. 50 cents a hox. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Premier's Ticket Aided Murder.

A Russian journal tells the story of how the murderer of Gen. Lunnitz, prefect of St. Petershurg, obtained admission to the semi-official party at which the deed was committed. After the crime all the guests were detained and their tickets were examined. There was ono ticket the rigthful owner of which was not present. It wns no other than that of Premier Stolypin himself. The murder had heen committed under cover of the invitation ticket of no less a personags than the prime minister. The premier had not heen ahle to go, and his ticket fell into the hands of a member of tho secret police named Nnkolene. He resold it to ths revolutionists for $16,000.

Prohahly He Is Not.

W. Bourke Cockran at a St. Patrick's day dinner told a story of an Irishman who was talking nhout the case of Baring Gould, whose ohituary was recently printed hy mistake, Mr. Gould still heing happily in circulation: "So," said the Irishman, "they've printed the funeral notice av a man that ain't dead yet, hov they? Fnith, an' it's a nice fix he'd he in now if he was wan o' thim people that helaves iverything they see in the papers."

Puritans No Longer in Control.

The changed character of Boston's population could not be more typically illustrated than in the reading of the names of the committees of the Boston common council. As the Patriots' day committee, for example, President Barrett selects Councilmen Rachkowsky, Santosuosso and Purcell.—Boston Traveler.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.
Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

A pretty girl is as fond of drawing attention ns a political officeholder is of drawing a salary.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

The reward for a good deed done is a having done It.—Emerson.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cohh, St. Paul, Minn.

It isn't the fault of the fair sex if a secret remains a secret.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES color more goods, per package, than others, and the colors are brighter and faster.

It is curious how a modest actress will appear in a threadbare play.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

A had imitation is often better than the real thing.

Krause's Cold Cure.
For cold in head, throat, chest or back. Best remedy for La Grippe. Druggists, 25c.

Work of Cupid in Germany.

The numher of marriages in the German empire in 1905 was 485,906.

U. S. Sheep Dip, and Cattle Wash & Disinfectant. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. Northwestern Hide & Fur Co., Mpls, Minn.

Nature makes occupation a necessity to us; society makes it a duty; habit may make it a pleasure.—Capelle.

FITS, St. Vitus Dance and all Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for Free $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Queen Alexandra, after a residence of 45 years in England, has visited the tower of London. She is said to have been "much interested in what she saw."

Shake Into Your Shoes
Allen's Foot-Ease. It cures painful, swollen, smarting, sweating feet. Makes new shoes easy. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores. Don't accept any substitute. Sample FREE. Address A. S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Youthful Head of State.

The Hon. Richard McBride, premier of British Columhia, whose government has emerged successfully from a general election, is the youngest prime minister in King Edward's dominions. He is only 36, and he achieved the premiership four years ago, after having held a suhordinate office as minister of mines.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The deepest sympathy man can show to man is to help him do his duty.—Mulock.

MRS. C. E. FINK

HEALTH OF WOMEN

In this nineteenth century to keep up with the march of progress every power of woman is strained to its utmost, and the tax upon her physical system is far greater than ever.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers few drugs were used in medicines. They relied upon roots and herhs to cure weaknesses and disease, and their knowledge of roots and herbs was far greater than that of women today.

It was in this study of roots and herhs that Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., discovered and gave to the women of the world a remedy more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

is an honest, tried and true remedy of unquestionable therapeutic value.

This medicine made from native roots and herbs contains no narcotics or other harmful drugs and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any medicine the world has ever known, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the laboratory at Lynn, Mass., which testify to its wonderful value.

Mrs. C. E. Fink, of Carnegie, Pa., writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— "I wish every suffering woman would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write to you for advice. It has done me a world of good and what it has accomplished for me I know it will do for others."

When women are troubled with Irregularities, Displacements, Ulceration, Inflammation, Backache, Nervous Prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of her vast volume of experience she probably has the very knowledge that will help your case.

Most Difficult of Artist's Studies.

B. W. Leader, R. A., considers that to nn artist clouds are the most difficult of all studies.

It is a pity to be ill! Take Garfield Tea, the laxative exactly suited to the needs of men, women and children; it is made wholly of herhs; it purifies the hlood, eradicates disease, overcomes constipation, brings Good Health.

Life, misfortune, ahandonment, poverty are the fields of hattle which have their heroes—obscure heroes, who are sometimes grander than those who win renown.—Victor Hugo.

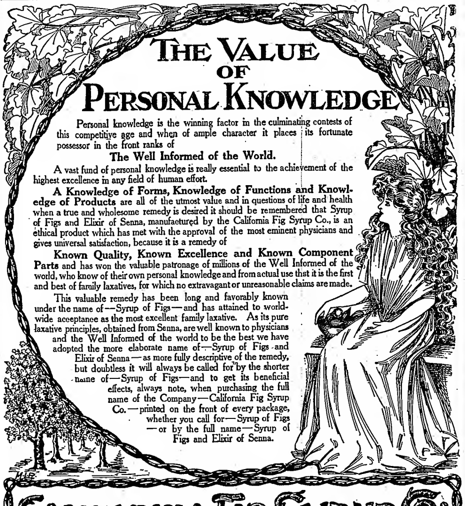
We Want Your Cream.
Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

The archdiocese of Cologne, Germany, is the largest in the world, with a Catholic population of more than 2,000,000.

Hides, Furs, Wool, Pelts, Etc.
To get full value, ship to the old reliable N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Usually a woman of uncertain age remains at a certain age for a long time.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears The Signature Of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.



THE VALUE OF PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

Personal knowledge is the winning factor in the culminating contests of this competitive age and when of ample character it places its fortunate possessor in the front ranks of

The Well Informed of the World.

A vast fund of personal knowledge is really essential to the achievement of the highest excellence in any field of human effort.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value and in questions of life and health when a true and wholesome remedy is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Excellence and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual use that it is the first and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,
U.S.A.
LOUISVILLE, KY. LONDON, ENGLAND. NEW YORK, N.Y.

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH
Ely's Cream Balm
is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once. 50c.
Ely Bros., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

MASURY'S HOUSE PAINTS
are indisputably the safest and most economical paints to buy because they have been in use for more than sixty-five years and have never failed. They are Guaranteed Pure Linseed Oil Paints cover a greater surface per gallon than inferior paints, and are so much more durable that paints offered in substitution should be promptly rejected.
MANUFACTURED BY
JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

THE CANADIAN WEST IS THE BEST WEST
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
The testimony of thousands during the past year is that the Canadian West is the best West. Year by year the agricultural returns have increased in volume and in value, and still the Canadian Government offers 100 acres FREE to every bona fide settler.
Some of the Advantages
The phenomenal increase in railway mileage—main lines and branches—has put almost every portion of the country within easy reach of churches, schools, markets, cheap fuel and every modern convenience.
The NINETY MILLION BUSHEL WHEAT CROP of this year means $60,000,000 to the farmers of Western Canada, apart from the results of other grains and cattle.
For advice and information address the SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Government Agent.
CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

POULTRYMEN!
Do you want strong, healthy chicks?
Then mix with your feed
SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER
The original medicine to make hens lay. Causes perfect assimilation of food, keeps poultry healthy, and increases egg production in fall and winter when prices are high.
One pack, 25c.; five, $1; two-lb. can, $1.20; six, $5.00. Express paid. At all dealers.
I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

READERS of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

DO YOU BURN KEROSENE?

If so get one-third more light with a "BINO GLASS CONE LAMP BURNER." The glass top does it. They are great—fit common lamps. Send your dealers name to-day and 25c for a BING—size No. 1 or 2 post paid. BING BURNER CO. Dept. 44, Minneapolis, Minn.

LIVE STOCK AND MISCELLANEOUS ELECTROTYPES
In great variety for sale at the lowest prices by A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO., 73 W. Adams St., Chicago

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D.C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

BOOM GRAIN CONTEST

Northwestern Agriculturist Devotes Much Space to Last Year's Grain Contest.

The last number of the Northwestern Agriculturist, a farm paper published at Minneapolis, contains an excellent writeup of the grain contest which was inaugurated last year and the wheat section of which was won by Olaf Nelson, a St. Hilaire boy and an attendant of Crookston Agricultural college. Young Nelson of St. Hilaire won $20 through the contest and his picture occupies the most prominent place in the May issue of the Agriculturist. A letter which he wrote to the Agriculturist is also published in the issue and the accompanying writeup explaining the contest and also the one which will be held this year is so good that the Gazette will reproduce it. The Agriculturist says:

The well-meant cry, "back to the soil" and the constant protest against the boys' and girls' leaving the farms for the life of the city or the town are well enough in themselves but they too often appeal with little persuasive force to the ambitions of youth. To a boy who sees visions of an easy road to fortune in urban business and an avoidance of drudgery of the dirt, and to the girl who dreams of society and the theatres and all the gaits of the city, merely preaching that the farm is safer and better is a feeble way to hold the children down to plowing and cooking.

There is a better way and that is open their eyes to the fascination of growing their own crops and re[illegible] for their own agricul[illegible].

There is the key to the worth of the grain growing contests for boys and girls, inaugurated last year, under the direction of Prof. D. D. Mayne, principal of the Minnesota School of Agriculture. It is due to the Farmers Club, comprising the alumni of the School and College of Agriculture, that prizes aggregating $1,000 are given, the money being provided by the members of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce. The individual prizes vary from $50 down to $3.33, making thirty-eight prizes for the best exhibits in each class, or a total of nearly 100 cash prizes for the youthful competitors.

County contests are held in each county, usually in connection with the county fairs, then the three best in each county may compete in the state contest held in connection with the annual meeting of the Minnesota Agricultural Society in January. There are also cooking and sewing contests held at the same time.

Details of the coming contest may be obtained by addressing Prof. D. D. Mayne, Agricultural College, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Following is the letter which young Nelson wrote to the Agriculturist and it will be noticed that the young man is very pleased with the Crookston Agricultural school. The letter will undoubtedly do a great deal of good in advertising the school.

"Ed. N. W. Agriculturist: According to your request I hereby send my photograph. I have not written an essay, as I did not take notice of the date of planting and harvesting, so the only thing I could say is that the wheat was a selection of the Minnesota No. 169, a blue stem wheat originated at St. Anthony Park. It was raised on my father's farm, located on the bank of the Red Lake river in section 29, township of River Falls, Red Lake county.

"I was born in Mason, Wisconsin, Feb. 1st, 1887, and came with my parents to Red Lake county in 1889 and have lived here ever since.

"I have just finished my first term in the School of Agriculture at Crookston, where I and one of my sisters have been attending.

"I cannot praise the school enough nor give Professor and Mrs. Robertson the credit they deserve, and as to what I intend to be, will say that any one attending the Agricultural School cannot help getting interested in farming.

"I am sure that a farmer with a well managed farm has one of the most interesting occupations a man can have. Olaf F. Nelson."

St. Hilaire, Minn.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, Interest, which became due February 25th, 1906, and the sum of Two Hundred Twenty-One ($221.00) Dollars, Interest, which became due February 25th, 1907, each of which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John F. Campbell and Mary Campbell, his wife, Mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of February 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1905, at 9:20 a. m. in book 35 of mortgages on page 370 thereof,

And Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable,

And Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does duly elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice,

And Whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely:- The Southeast Quarter, and the South Half of the Southwest Quarter, and the Northeast Quarter of the Southwest Quarter, and the Southeast Quarter of the Northwest Quarter all in section Twenty Four (24) in township one hundred fifty three (153) North of range forty four (44) West of the 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey three hundred twenty (320) acres, be the same more or less, in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1907, at eleven o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy Seven and 20-100 ($3877.20) Dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Seventy Five ($75.00) Dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage, in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 25th. A. D. 1907.

De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank,)
Mortgagee.

Wm. J. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Warren, Minnesota. m28-m9

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF ANDREW R. PETERSON.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Andrew R. Peterson, Decedent:

The State of Minnesota to Mathilda Krane, August R. Peterson and Claus Peterson, all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; Therefore, You, and Each of You, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 18th day of May, 1907, at 9 o'clock a. m., why said petition should not be granted.

Witness, The judge of said Court, and the seal of said Court, this 23rd day of April, 1907.

(Seal) —N. W. TARRANT,
Probate Judge.

J. K. Hannay.

When in the City stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

☞House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

Thomas Germo. Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys at-Law

Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

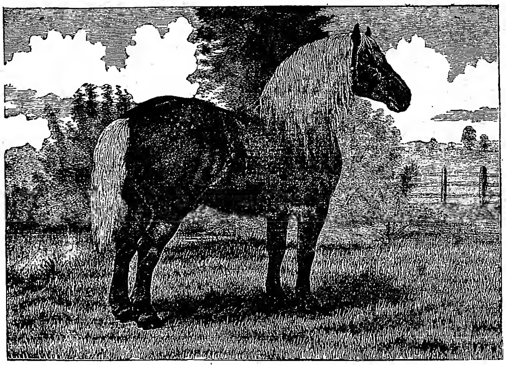
Send us the news.

The Celebrated Percheron Stallion

BRABO

Age 6 Years--Weight 1850

Will stand for the season of 1907 at L. C. Cadieux's farm in Terrebonne, adjoining mill.



CERTIFICATE OF PEDIGREE:

This is to certify. that the Percheron Stallion BRABO, is registered in the Percheron Stud Book of America, and that his record number is 29,137. Color: dark steel gray. Pedigree: Foaled May 30, 1901; bred and owned by Feller and Landes of Cissna Park, Illinois; got by Wenona Bright Light 22443, he by Wenona Black Watch 22442, he by Merveillo 10272, he by Extrador 4525, he by Favora 1542 (765), he by French Monarch 205 (734), he by Ilderim (5301), he by Valentin (5301), he by Vieux-Chaslin (713), he by Coco (712), he by Mignon (715), he by Jean-LeBlanc. Dam. Lacenta III 21336. Second Dam Madame Lucenta 3256.

TERMS--$13 for live colt. $5 for single service. If two mares are bred service will be $11 for the second colt.

For further particulars or other information call on or address

TERREBONNE STALLION CORPORAT'N

L. C. CADIEUX, Manager TERREBONNE, MINNESOTA. JOS. LAURENT, Secretary

BULLETIN

Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Let The Gazette Do Your Printing.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 16, 1907 No 33

EXPLODED IN HIS HAND

Nine-Year-Old Son of Leo Steinert Seriously Injured at School Last Friday.

The nine-year-old son of Leo Steinert received injuries last Friday afternoon that will cause him the loss of two fingers.

During the intermission hour of school at noon last Friday after the children were returning from their meals, several of the smaller boys, among them were young Leo Steinert and Henry Bourdon, were playing in the alley back of Beausoliel's barn and found a bunch of dynamite caps. Henry Bourdon discovered them and not knowing what they were distributed them among the boys, giving young Leo quite a number. School had been called and was sitting in his when he commenced picking it with a knife, the cap exploding in his hand, tearing the fingers fearfully.

The child was a pupil in Miss Lamb's department and upon hearing the report she hurried to Prof. Chamberlain's room and notified him of the accident, she supposing he had shot himself with a pistol. In the meantime all the pupils had fled from the room and Sidney Belair hurried the boy to Dr. Lemieux's office, where the wounds were dressed and two fingers amputated, the thumb at the first joint and the index finger at the second joint. The young lad also received injuries in and about the face that will disfigure him for some time, not permanently. One finger nail was driven completely thru the upper lip.

At this writing the boy is getting along nicely and no serious complications are likely to set in.

JOSEPH EUCLID PERRAS

Respected Citizen Passed Away Last Friday.

Joseph Euclid Perras, proprietor of the Central house in this city, died at his home last Friday evening at 8 o'clock, after an illness of but two weeks, from hemorrhage of the lungs.

Deceased came to this county in 1880 from Michael, P. Q., with his parents, locating in Terrebonne. He lived there until five years ago, when he moved to Red Lake Falls, and about a year ago engaging in the hotel business, conducting it satisfactorily up to the time of his sickness. He was 30 years and 11 months old.

He leaves besides a mother and brother in this city, a brother, Arthur, in North Yakima, Washington; brother Max, in Lambert township, and a sister, Louisa, in Butte City, Montana.

The funeral services were held from the St. Joseph's church, on Monday and the remains were taken to the cemetery in Terrebonne, where it was laid to rest by the side of five others of the family. The pall bearers were P. F. Pouliot, Noel Delorme, Joseph Kersting, Eli Emard, Nels Latandresse and Simon Paul.

THE ANNUAL TAX SALE

Auditor O'Brien Disposes of Big Bunch of Property at His Office on Monday.

Monday of this week County Auditor O'Brien held the annual sale of property on which taxes remain delinquent for the year 1905.

About 1500 descriptions were offered for sale and about 450 were sold, mostly all farm property, amounting in all to about $5000.

The bidding was quite spirited, and besides the local capitalists several bidders were present for foreign parties. Following were the buyers present: F. H. Welcome and G. Vandertook of Thief River Falls, J. A. Duffy, A. P. Toupin, P. B. Gaass, Theo. Garceau, L. C. Simons and M. O. Sortedahl of this city.

The sale was highly satisfactory to the auditor and demonstrated that Red Lake county property is still in big demand.

MUST BE MISTAKEN.

Weather Forecast Amiss--More of the Beautiful Monday.

"Fair and warmer" has been the weather forecast in the city dailies for the past week. After reading that one naturally turned to the window and gazed out to see the ground covered with snow and snowflakes lazily falling as if not a thought or care was given to the supposedly near approach of summer. The old saying that "winter lingers in the lap of spring" does not seem to quite meet the situation at this time. In fact winter is assiduously wooing summer and is in a fair way to win her. Monday morning and evening the thermometer registered at and below the freezing point, and it was no exception, and snow was still falling. Few days so far could farmers put in a full day in the fields. Notwithstanding this the wheat and oats have practically all been seeded in this county and farmers are preparing for barley, flax and corn planting which will follow as soon as possible.

To the farmer who has a lot of stock and who is short of feed, the late spring is almost a disaster. At this season farmers are usually looking forward to turning stock in the pasture in a few days. Now, however, there is not a sign of grass, but a warm shower and bright days would bring feed on with a rush. The late season may force farmers to sow less wheat and more oats and barley in many localities, which may not be a misfortune.

Time to Pay.

It is well to remember that the first half of the real estate taxes must be paid on or before May 31, to avoid a penalty of ten per cent. Half your taxes can be paid at this time and the remainder before the first of November. Treasurer Taudberg reports that tax payments have been exceedingly brisk thus far in the month and looks to see the books fairly well cleaned up by the first of June.

SHOT HIS BOY BROTHER

Young Son of Walter McAndreas of Highlanding Shot and Killed His Boy Brother.

The four-year-old son of Walter McAndreas of Highlanding township was shot last Monday by his his nine-year-old brother.

It seems that the two boys left the house Monday morning to go to the river, which is near by, to do some hunting as was their usual custom, and upon their arrival discovered a musk-rat swimming in the water. The older boy, who was carrying the gun, a 22-calibre rifle, raised it to his shoulder and was taking aim, the rat at the same instant diving into the water. The boy failed to fire and replacing the gun on his shoulder forgetting to uncock the hammer, started off the younger brother following. They had gone but a short distance when in some manner the gun was discharged, the bullet entering the left temple finding its way out in the forehead. He lived from nine o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon.

The funeral services were held at Thief River Falls and was buried on Tuesday.

The family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in the untimely and unwarning death of their little son.

SAW MILL AT PLUMMER

Plummer Will Have One To Begin Work Next Next Spring Says the Pioneer.

J. C. Parker, of the Donald Land and Lumber Co., of Bemidji, was here during the first part of the week looking after the building of a new boom in the Clearwater river here and fixing up the dam. The new boom is built for the purpose of holding a big drive of cedar, railroad ties and pulp wood which this company is bringing down the river at present and which will be landed here. The pulp wood will be shipped to a big paper mill at Neenah, Wis., and the ties and cedar will be loaded on the cars here and shipped to various points as desired by the purchasers. This work will, Mr. Parker thinks, keep a good sized crew of men busy here for several months.

Outside of the Thief River Falls mill this will be the only one on the Winnipeg line of the Soo railroad and of late the rumor has been current that the Thief River Falls mill will not be run for more than another season, perhaps only this season, as their supply of logs is nearly exhausted. If this should prove true the Plummer mill will be the only mill on the line and there is no question but that there will be a splendid market for the mill's product.

Mr. Parker was superintendent for the old Clearwater logging company in the early days; he built the old dam at Plummer and knows every point in connection with the logging business on this river. Such being the case there would seem to be little room for doubting the truth of his statement regarding the establishment of a new mill here.—Plummer Pioneer.

NO SPEARING.

A number of bills were passed at the last legislature relating to game and fish. Game wardens may arrest parties violating the game law now, without a warrant. It is unlawful to use artificial lights in spearing pickerel or rough fish during May and June. The purpose of that provision is to protect bass during the spawning months, it being a common practice for unprincipled persons to spear bass under the cover of night during this season.

There is no change as to the open season for pike and bass, the former being lawful game for the fisherman after May 1, and the open season on bass beginning the 29th of May.

MAY GET FAIR JOBS

Local Band Organization May Get Two Big Jobs Again This Year.

The city papers in their mention of the coming state fair and the musical organizations to be present had the Red Lake Falls band among the number.

Tho' the board of directors have closed no contract with the fair managers it is very probable that the city's pride will get the job. If the deal goes thru our band will perhaps have the last three days' engagement.

Manager Tracy also expects to get the Winnipeg job this year. Last year the band played at the Winnipeg exposition and the managers were so pleased with the work that they were desirous of securing the band again this year.

A band of about twenty-five pieces will be taken to both fairs and band practice will be indulged in from now on to round out the organization in perfect trim.

The band is proving an excellent advertisement for Red Lake Falls and every day practical demonstration of the advisability of continuing the support given by the citizens is brought forcibly to mind.

It is likely that a large number of our citizens will accompany the band as usual.

SOME NEW ROAD LAWS

After This Year Town Boards Will Have to Elect Road Inspectors.

A pamphlet calling attention to changes in the road laws will be soon issued by the state highway commission. The most important road legislation adopted this year was the law abolishing town supervisors and substituting therefor town inspectors of highways. The act is made effective at once, but the overseers elected for this year will have to serve out their terms, so the law will not go into effect until next year. Then the town boards will have to elect a man to supervise the work and supersede the six or eight men who are annually elected at the town meeting to have charge of the road work.

The section of the law reads as follows:

"The office of town road overseer is herewith abolished, and in place thereof the town board shall appoint a competent road builder as road inspector, who shall have charge under the direction of the county superintendent of highways of the construction and maintenance of all roads and bridges in the town. He shall hold office during the pleasure of the town board. He may appoint one or more competent assistants subject to the approval of the town board. The compensation of road inspector and assistants shall be fixed by the town board. Before entering upon his duties he shall give bond to the town, approved by the town board, in the sum of $100, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties.

The other sections of the law relates to the county supervisor, but this was amended so that it is only a shadow of what the highway commission wanted. The commission had intended to do away with the county surveyor entirely and compel county commissioners to elect a county superintendent of highways. As the law stands the county boards "may" elect such a supervisor, who may also be the county surveyor.

This section reads as follows:

"The county board may appoint a competent surveyor and road builder, as county superintendent of highways, who may be the present county surveyor and whose compensation shall be fixed by the county board. Such superintendent shall survey, lay out and superintend the construction and maintenance of all roads, bridges and ditches, and do the work and have the power of the present county surveyor. He shall hold office for two years or until his successor is appointed and qualified. Before entering upon his duties he shall give bond to the county approved by the county board, in the sum of $1,000, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties."

WILL HAVE NICE LINEUP

Team is Made Up of Good Men And They Will Do Things This Summer.

That Red Lake Falls is going to have one of the fastest base ball teams in this part of the state is an acknowledged fact and is shown by the proposed lineup.

Last Sunday the boys took advantage of the fine weather and went out on the field to do some stunts. Notwithstanding the fact that both the in and out field were soft, some good fast work was pulled off. The boys were assigned the positions they had played previous years and tho' some changes may be made by Captain Buse it is safe to predict that all will be for the betterment of the team. Real practice will begin as soon as the suits arrive which will be this week perhaps, and each player will be assigned his position. The probable lineup will be as follows:

Norman Schreiter, the catcher, is one of the fastest in this part of the state. Norm has done some backstop work on the pharmacy team at the U and will undoubtedly do some good stunts this season.

John Pokezwinski will occupy the box. "Pucks," as he is familiarly known, is a new man in the city, but comes well recommended as a box artist. He has pitched for crack teams in Dakota, and will no doubt prove an enigma to some of the heavy hitters in other teams.

E. G. Buse, the captain, has signed himself to play first base. From that position, Erney says he will be able to keep his weather eye open on all the players. (He also says that he will be near the umpire, but this must be on the q. t.)

Second base will be covered by Louis Padden, a recent arrival from St. Paul. Lew is a fast man and will be found in the game and playing ball all the time.

Harry Healy will be assigned the base nearest home. Harry needs no introduction to the fans in this part of the state having won an enviable reputation as a fast infielder. He also catches and pitches and will be put in to relieve either one of the regular battery at times.

The outfield will also be well taken care of. Billy Ericson in the left garden and Carl Peterson in center. Both are good men and a ball hit anywhere outside the infield is like falling in a well.

The short stop and right field positions are vacant at present, but with Fred Richards, Ralph and Verne Healy, Walter Buse and Albert Lafreniere to pick from those positions will be filled satisfactorily.

With this lineup, Red Lake Falls people can be assured of witnessing some fine sport in the baseball line this season. Manager Padden is of the opinion that a game can be arranged for on Memorial Day.

Rev. I. T. Aasead, of Thief River Falls, conducted services in the Norwegian Lutheran church here Sunday, returning to his home Monday morning.

IS TIME TO GET BUSY

Memorial Day But Two Short Weeks Off—Red Lake Falls Should Observe It.

But two weeks yet remain until Memorial Day, and if Red Lake Falls intends to observe the day this year as they have in the past it is high time to get busy.

The day is but a few years away when the final remnant of the old guard who fought that this country may be perpetuated will have passed to the great eternity, and while we still have a few of the old boys with us it should be a pride for the people to commemorate this great day.

Red Lake Falls has unlimited talent to get up a program for that day, and from what expressions The Gazette has heard the sentiment is strongly in favor of doing something that will be a credit to the city.

Concerted action is necessary now, however, and unless something is done at once the celebration cannot amount to much.

IN OUTDOOR CONCERT

Red Lake Falls Concert Band Will Appear in Outdoor Concert.

The summer season, that part of the northern Minnesota climate that excels any like climate in the world, will soon be with us in all its glory, and with the many enjoyable events coming with it the least by any means will not be the open air concerts by the Red Lake Falls concert band, which will commence the last week in May and continue at intervals of two weeks during the coming several months.

The band's work the coming summer will be pleasing to the people here and the stranger within the gates on the concert dates. Notwithstanding the several changes in the directorship during the winter months the band has put on a polish that will show off to excellent advantage in the outdoor work. Manager Tracy announces that he has a director coming here within a week or ten days. R. C. Hoge is his name and comes from Des Moines, Iowa. He comes well recommended as a first class musician and director.

No Faith In Their Promises

Plummer Pioneer: Several cruisers for Thief River Falls are working the eastern part of the county with their new county seat petition. Several parties from the country have called at this office and told us that they had met these fellows but had refused to sign their petition because they had found out that Thief River Falls had not kept their promises of two years ago in the fight on the old county seat removal petition. Such being the case they had no faith in any more of their promises from that town and they were well enough satisfied to leave the county seat where it is and save any additional taxes. This is the view taken by many of those who signed the old petition and it is entirely justifiable from the standpoint of the county taxpayer.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

A Business Luxury

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity; and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

FOR AN INDIAN LUNCHEON

Very Pleasing Entertainment Which Brought Forward Some New Ideas—Pseudonym Party Will Be Found Enjoyable by Both Old and Young Guests.

The affair, which was a recent function, afforded a very unique entertainment. The invitations were printed on birch bark, the size of a visiting card, and were sent by mail in tiny brown envelopes.

On arriving the guests were seated at small tables, in the center of each was a birch bark canoe filled with spring flowers; the canoes were first filled with sand and thus weighted they stood upright nicely. For place cards there were realistic tomahawks, the name written on the handle.

The menu was simple, but delicious. Chicken croquettes, new potatoes in cream, olives, green peas in white paper cases, tiny hot rolls, salted nuts in diminutive Indian baskets, ice cream with strawberries, cake, coffee. After the repast the hostess passed colored prints of Indians (souvenir post-cards) pasted on light gray cardboard. Pencils were attached by strips of leather ornamented with beads. The words, "The Indian in Literature," gave the guests a clew as to the scheme provided for their amusement.

On a large table the following objects puzzled the brains of the contestants:

1. A birch bark canoe, containing two Indian figures seated, with name "Mona" on canoe. (Ramona.)
2. Picture of Longfellow on one corner of card bearing prints of an Indian brave and an Indian girl. (Hiawatha.)
3. The word "La" over the picture of the czar. (Lazarre.)
4. An Indian moccasin. ("Last of the Mohicans.")
5. A snow shovel. ("The Pathfinder.")
6. A leather stocking. ("The Leatherstocking Tales.")
7. A doll's corset and a bow and arrow. ("The Deer (dear) Slayer.")

For prizes there were Indian baskets and beadwork and small pieces of pottery.

As the hostess had but recently returned from Arizona she had many fine specimens of Indian work which added greatly to the interest of the afternoon.

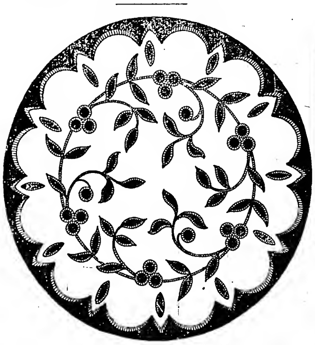
A Pseudonym Party.

It would seem as if by this time that all of our readers must be familiar with contests similar to this one, but there is a constant demand for just such schemes, so this may be just what some of the younger readers are looking for. Write the following pseudonyms on cards and give an alloted time for writing the true names. Appropriate souvenirs are books, by any of the authors mentioned, or their photographs framed.

1. The Rail-splitter.—Abraham Lincoln.
2. Old Buena Vista.—Zachary Taylor.
3. Max O'Rell.—Paul Blouet.
4. The Iron Duke.—Wellington.
5. The Hero of the Nile.—Lord Nelson.
6. "H. H."—Helen Hunt Jackson.
7. "Boz."—Dickens.
8. The Grand Old Man.—Gladstone.
9. Timothy Titcomb.—J. G. Holland.
10. The Melancholy Dane.—Hamlet.
11. Artemus Ward.—J. G. Browne.
12. Bard of Avon.—Shakespeare.
13. Hosea Bigelow.—James Russell Lowell.
14. Marion Harland.—Mrs. Terhune.
15. Genial Autocrat.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.
16. Quaker Poet.—Whittier.
17. Sage of Concord.—Emerson.
18. The Learned Blacksmith.—Elihu Burritt.
19. Iron Chancellor.—Bismarck.
20. George Eliot.—Mrs. Lewis.
21. Mark Twain.—S. L. Clemens.
22. Wizard of the North.—Sir Walter Scott.
23. Ouida.—Louise de la Ramee.

MADAME MERRI.

Doily That Will Wear Well

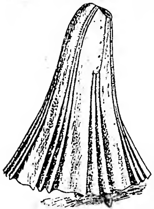


A pretty effective doily that will wash and wear well is shown here; it is of good firm French cambric worked with white embroidery cotton in open holes; the edge is scalloped and worked over in buttonhole-stitch. The open holes must be run out exactly to the outline, then cut in the center with a pair of sharp scissors; sometimes a small piece may be cut quite out in the center; the edges of cambric should then be turned under with the needle, then worked in sewing-over stitch. Cut the superfluous material away from the buttonhole edge after the work is finished.

FOR WEAR ON STREET

Skirt That Will Make Up Successfully in Almost Any Kind of Woolen Material.

Skirts with pleats such as this make up successfully in almost all woolen materials of not too thick a quality, and it should be unlined. In making up the pattern care must be taken in turning in the edges of side breadths so that the curve at the top of pleats is kept a nice shape. Four buttons are sewn on each side. Two pleats are stitched down about half way, and being well folded under fall nice and full in the unstitched part.



Materials required: 6¼ yards 46 inches wide, eight buttons.

SLEEVES ARE LONGER

The Full and Three-Quarter Lengths Seen in French and American Garments.

A great many of the dainty sheer blouses sent over by the French makers, show a long sleeve instead of the inevitable short sleeve used last summer. The short sleeve is still with us, but it is more often of three-quarter length than of elbow length, and while the very dressy blouses are usually somewhat short of sleeve the long close cuff of fine tucking is very popular.

Many American blouse makers recognizing this fact are turning out models of the French type whose chief charm is in the fineness of their material, the excellence of their cut, and the profusion of very fine tucking lavished upon them. This tucking is made to take the place of insert lace and embroidery upon many fine blouses, and such models have perhaps a greater charm for morning wear than have those which are more elaborate and more cobwebby of composition.

The plaited front frills of lingerie and lace which have received the name of Marie Antoinette are very frequently introduced upon these tucked blouses; and in this case a finish of the same lace used upon the frills is applied to collar and cuffs, or perhaps the neck is finished only with a band and is meant to be worn with one of the popular embroidered collars.

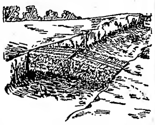
ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

PLAN TO PREVENT EROSION.

Use of Spoiled Hay That Has Been Baled Will Do the Trick.

Farmers in some sections suffer much from the effect of erosion of their lands. Ditches formed by overflow water I have found can be cheaply filled by bales of hay or straw placed across the ditch so as to form a dam. The ditch may then be plowed in or a little earth piled against the bales and succeeding rains will complete the work.

The bales should be laid flat and carefully fitted after manner shown in the illustration, says a correspondent of Prairie Farmer. The bottom of the ditch should be leveled so that the bales will set firmly on the ground and the banks dug off so that they will be reasonably perpendicular. Next all crevices must be trampled full of earth.



The Bales in Place.

If one bale will not reach across the ditch more may be used. If two bales are used they should be added so as to press against each other and against the bank as shown in the cut. If put in this way no support will be required, the force of water will only crowd the bales against the bank and keep them firmly in place.

If more than one tier of bales is required the ditch should be filled level with the top of the first tier before another tier is laid.

Masonry or concrete would of course make a better job, but the bales are not so expensive. I use damaged hay or straw which I have had baled for the express purpose of use in this manner.

If the bales are properly placed nature fills the ditch. Water goes through the bales as readily as through a sieve, but all particles of earth are held back until the ditch is filled to the top of the bales.

GLEANINGS.

Give the hog a chance to be clean.

The farm of the good farmer improves in productiveness from year to year.

After all, the grain and roughage grown on western farms are the cheapest and best feeds for fattening stock, and especially for fattening steers.

The best time to plant corn is when the ground is warm enough; but the surface should be so dry that the dirt will not stick to the planter wheels.

Take quick and good care of the trees and shrubs as they come from the nursery. Don't leave them lying about in the wind and sun to dry out. Protect the roots. Dig big holes, spread out the roots carefully and cover with fine dirt, and your stuff ought to start right off growing.

Grass and grain form a good combination for pork making. If the grass is blue grass so much the better, as that is rich in muscle-making food. The best grain is that not too heavy in starch. In some parts of Europe barley is used for finishing hogs on grass, and produces an excellent meat.

Push the Corn.

All corn growers have noticed that if corn is planted at just the right time, that is to say, when the ground has warmed up sufficiently, and the moisture is not too deep, the seed sprouts quickly and often within two days you can see the young plants in the rows. Growing crops, like young live stock, need a quick, vigorous start, and then they need pushing along during the whole season. The harrow will do more telling work right now than any other implement. Don't be afraid of harrowing too much. Harrow before planting, and when the plants begin to peep through the ground harrow with the rows. If thorough work is done, the ground will be kept clean, and is in much better condition than if cultivators were started early. More thorough harrowing is done, the cultivators need not start till the corn is six or eight inches high.

Land Good for Something.

All land is good for something. If it has been so badly cut up by rains that it cannot be brought under the plow or cannot be used for pasturage, it may still be used for the growing of certain kinds of trees. There are trees that will grow in gullies and on the poorest of soils. It is better to have them occupying the ground than to have unsightly gullies and clay banks lying baked in the sun. A group of trees will at least lend beauty to the landscape while they are young and value to the farm when they are old.

A Good Ration for Calves.

Sam McKelvie of Nebraska feeds his calves the first year equal parts of bran, corn and meal and oats, with all the alfalfa they want. That ration ought to make them hump.

The way of the transgressor is a well-beaten path.

All Cloth Hats, Children's Dresses, etc., made to look like new with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES.

Capacity to think rarely precedes the attempt to act.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
The largest Creamery in the Northwest.
Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Anyway, the rolling stone doesn't get into the mossback class.

TEXAS GULF COAST LANDS.
No blizzards, no heat prostrations.
Growing crops all year. Live Agts. wanted.
THEO. F. KOCH, ST. PAUL, MINN.

A man doesn't mind getting the worst of it as much as he dislikes seeing the other fellow get the best of it.

Hides, Furs, Wool, Pelts, Etc.
To get full value, ship to the old reliable N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Most women are proud of their ability to humble a man's pride.

We Want Your Cream.
Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Just His Luck.

"Hello!" said Borem, "I just thought I'd drop in on you to-day to—"

"I thought you would, too," interrupted Merchant.

"You did? Now that's strange, because—"

"Not at all; this is the busiest day I've had for weeks."

Labor of the Novelist.

"The way of the novelist must be hard," said a librarian of an uptown branch. "The other day an immaculately gotten up individual came into the library and announced that he was a writer with a specialty of dialect stories. We got him several books that he asked for, and little by little he took me into his confidence. 'I want the Scotch dialect for the stern father,' he explained; 'then when I've got enough of that I want some dialect for a sea captain, and then I want a duke—or maybe you can tell me, would a duke drop his h'e'?"—N. Y. Sun.

A Fish Story.

"Trout protection! Nonsense!" said a gunner of local eminence. "Trout are amply able to protect themselves. Look at their depredations among ducks, for example, and you will agree with me that it's the birds that need protection. It's a common thing for a trout to jump from the water, seize a duck by the neck, drag the unfortunate fowl into the depths sufficiently to leave its feet sticking in the air, where it can get no purchase upon the universe, and thus drown it. Then the trout picks the feathers from the bird, eats it at its leisure and swims away out of the jurisdiction of the courts. Are there any fishermen? None? Too bad. This would be a match for one of their fish stories."

PUT RELIGIOUS DUTY SECOND.

Stern Laws of Business Come First, Says Austrian Court.

An interesting case at law, which centered on the observance of an old Jewish custom, was decided in Vienna recently. A merchant, says the American Israelite, discharged a clerk on account of neglect of duty. Among the charges against him was that he came to the store late in the morning because he attended service at the synagogue in order to say Kaddish—the prayer for the dead—for his father. The clerk argued that it was his privilege and his duty to say the prayer for his departed father, while the merchant, who was also a religious man, maintained that "if Moses had known that a man had to pay 8,000 gulden a year rent he would have made different laws." The judge would not allow such an argument, but decided in favor of the merchant, "because the daily attendance at the synagogue could not be considered the right of the clerk without the consent of the employer."

FRIENDS HELP

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have as delicious an article as Postum.

"Another lady, who had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years, found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum twice a day. She was wholly cured. Still another friend told me that Postum Food Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking Postum.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

SEEDING COMMENCED IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Prospects for a Large Acreage to Be Sown in Wheat.

St. Paul, April 24, 1907.—Word has been received at the office of the Canadian Government in St. Paul that seeding has commenced at various points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The heavy snowfall during the past winter has left the ground in splendid shape for successful seeding operations. The fine weather of the past few days has taken much of the frost out of the ground and during next week there will scarcely be a district in which the seeder is not being operated. The most optimistic conditions exist and in all districts the farmers are busy getting things in shape. There will be a very large acreage sown in spring wheat, oats and barley. At many points throughout the three provinces the newcomers are busy unloading their stock and effects, working night and day in order to get on their farms and become active agencies in the effort to make the year 1907 the banner year in grain producing in Western Canada. As compared with districts many hundred miles further south than this, it will be seen that Western Canada ranks amongst the first in the line of seeding operations for the present year. It is safe to say that farmers who get in their crop before the 20th or 24th of May, will receive magnificent returns. A number of those coming in this spring, who had not their land prepared last fall, will break up enough land to get in a crop of oats and barley and probably some flax. This, together with the vegetables they will plant, will give them ample food for themselves and stock during the coming summer and winter. These early seeding operations are not confined to one district, but are spread over a country 900 miles long by 400 miles in width.

The agents of the Canadian Government, located at different points throughout the United States, are busy giving information regarding the many new districts that are being made available for settlers. Low railway rates, information and literature are given on application to the agent, whose name appears in advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

ADVANTAGE A WIDOW HAS.

At Least They Don't Have to Sit and Watch Husband's Flirt.

"I saw such a pretty woman at a disadvantage the other night," the little real widow was saying. "She was married. She was sitting at a table with some other pretty women and handsome men and her husband. Her husband began to flirt outrageously with one of the women. I wish you could have seen the look that came over her face. Everybody in the room saw how distressed she was.

"Now, what I want to know is this. Why didn't she go to work and flirt with one of the handsome men to get even? Anyone of them was quite ready and willing, but, no, wives never seem to be able to do that. They just sit ready to cry, with everybody noticing.

"That's the advantage we real widows have over wives. We don't have to sit and watch our husbands flirting with other women. We know where they are, and we also know that whatever they may chance to be doing, they are probably not flirting."

FAMILY'S SKIN TROUBLES.

Eczema, Heat Rash, and Scalp Affections Afflict Different Members, But Cuticura Cures Them.

"My wife had eczema for five or six years. It was on her face and would come and go. We thought we would give the Cuticura Remedies a trial.. We did so and she has never had a sign of eczema for four years. I myself used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment some time ago for falling hair. I now have a very heavy head of hair. We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. Mr. H. B. Springmire, 323 So. Capitol Street, Iowa City, Ia., July 16, 1905, and Sept. 16, 1906."

No Cause for Alarm.

The honeymoon had bumped the humps.

"You know, John," said the young wife, "that I used to be your typewriter."

"Um—yes," grunted John.

"Well," she continued, "I wish you would discharge the girl you have now and hire a man in her place."

"Huh!" rejoined hubby. "I hope you don't think I would make a fool of myself twice in the same way."

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

"Our Best Society."

Governess (in Smart Set family)—Why, how loving you children are! Such affection between brother and sister is delightful to see.

Clive—Yes'm. We're playin' grown-ups. I'm the husband an' Barbara she's the maid.—Puck.

The Small Buyer of Paint who takes care that the Dutch Boy trade mark, shown below, appears on every keg of white lead he buys, is perfectly protected; as perfectly as if he were a railroad official buying hundreds of tons, and with a corps of chemists at his back to see that no adulterant is palmed off on him.

Pure White Lead and Pure Linseed Oil are absolutely necessary to good painting.

SEND FOR BOOK
"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

All lead packed in 1907 bears this mark

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY
in whichever of the following cities is nearest you:
New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia (John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.), Pittsburgh (National Lead & Oil Co.)

Be generous in judging the faults of others. Most of us can only see our own shadows.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

The easiest way to interest a woman in a one-dollar article is to mark it down from $1.50 to $1.29.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

It goes without saying that a talking machine does not say without going.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.
Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

Learning without thought is labor lost; thought without labor is perilous.—Confucius.

Kill the Flies Now
before they multiply. A DAISY FLY KILLER kills thousands. Lasts the season. Ask your dealer, or send 20c to H. Somers, 149 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

This year's convention of the American Federation of Catholic societies will be held in Indianapolis, July 14 to 17.

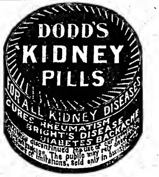
It Cures While You Walk.
Allen's Foot-Ease is a certain cure for hot, sweating, callous, and swollen, aching feet. Sold by all Druggists. Price 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

The Tokio Nichi Nichi remarks that "one day's pay for an American workman in San Francisco represents a fair monthly stipend for a Japanese."

Garfield Tea, Nature's Remedy, brings relief from many ailments; it overcomes constipation, regulates the liver and kidneys, purifies the blood and clears the complexion. It is made of Herbs, and is absolutely Pure.

Immense African Dry-Dock.

At Port Florence, on the shore of the great lake Victoria, which is the chief source of the Nile, there is a dry-dock cut out of solid rock by natives who had never before done much serious work. The dock is 250 feet long, 48 feet wide and 14 feet deep. It is 3,700 feet above the level of the sea, or nearly three times the altitude of Lake Chautauqua.



Help the Horse
No article is more useful about the stable than Mica Axle Grease. Put a little on the spindles before you "hook up"—it will help the horse, and bring the load home quicker.

MICA AXLE GREASE
wears well—better than any other grease. Coats the axle with a hard, smooth surface of powdered mica which reduces friction. Ask the dealer for Mica Axle Grease.
STANDARD OIL COMPANY
Incorporated

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C.

Sporting Gossip.

The season of 1907 promises to be the most successful in baseball history. There are more professional clubs under the national agreement, which is the supreme government of baseball today, than at any time since the league consisted of eight clubs, 40 years ago. Listed under the head of the legitimate there are 30 professional baseball leagues throughout the United States, and these will average seven clubs to the league. That gives us 210 professional baseball clubs to entertain the sport loving people from the cosmopolitan cities to the small hamlet. These clubs will try out and employ regularly 20 players during the season. That means that 1,200 professional ball players are on the pay roll of the various clubs, and through the support of the public $[illegible],000, or nearly $1,000,000, is paid out to the boys and men throughout the country, who can dexterously catch and hit a ball. Aside from the professional players so listed, there are hundreds of semi-professional leagues, in which the players receive salaries ranging from $50 to $100 a month. If it were possible to reach anything like an accurate aggregate of the money paid out in this way, it is very likely that the salaries paid to ball players would easily reach $1,500,000. This year the Tri-State league and other small organizations have been brought into the "legitimate" baseball fold, and in nearly every city of the United States preparations are being made for a prosperous season. New stands are being built in nearly all the minor league cities, and the towns which could formerly present nothing more than a skinned diamond have gardeners at work laying sod for a grass field. Moreover, a pride in the general appearance of baseball fields has entered the entire country, and in a few years the unpretentious baseball parks will resemble public parks, so great has been the tendency toward the artistic and beautiful.

Walter Clarkson in 1901 played his first season as a professional. He signed with the New York American club in 1904 and joined the team after the close of the college term in June. In addition to being the captain of the Harvard team Clarkson had for four years been the best pitcher in college. In his four years he only lost five games—three to Princeton and one each to Georgetown and Williams. He did not prove the phenomenal pitcher his over-enthusiastic friends expected him to be in the American league, and was farmed out to the Jersey City club for 1905. That season he made such a creditable record that he was recalled by New York for further major league trial. In the latter part of the 1906 season he came to the front and did such good work that he aroused hopes of developing into a permanent fixture on New York's pitching staff for 1907.

Walter Clarkson.

"The Cleveland club," said Ned Hanlon the other day, "reminds me altogether too much of the old Philadelphia team, which had big Ed Delehanty, Lajoie, Flick and other great batsmen. The Quakers always started off at a great clip, threatening all kinds of things. But they never finished anywhere.

"Why? Because, in midsummer, when the crack pitchers of the opposing clubs in the league had rounded into shape and were going along at their best, the heavy hitters of the Philadelphia club were at a disadvantage, and they had nothing to fall back on. In modern baseball, pure and simple slugging will not carry any team through a season to a final victory. There will always be some pitchers that the sluggers cannot hit consecutively. Then the team to win must fall back on team work.

"I take it that the Cleveland club, like the old Quakers, has no resource in reserve. When its policy of straight, hard hitting does not avail, it is all at sea. The old Philadelphia club was supposed to be the strongest in the league, and it was so, in pure mechanical ability, but it never won any pennants. For the same reason I do not believe that Cleveland will be able to capture the American league flag this season, or any other, so long as nothing but straightaway baseball is relied on."

EITHER WAY.

A traveler lately returned from Ireland has a story illustrating the ready wit of the Irishmen. An old gardener, meeting his employer, touched his finger to the tip of his cap and said:

"Good morning, yer honor, oi had a fine dreme of ye last night."

"Indeed, Michael!" remarked the employer. "What was the dreem?"

"Oi dreamed that ye gave me a fine box o' tobaccy, an' that her ladyship, yer honored wife, gave me a bumble wife a can o' th' best tay."

"Ah, Michael, but you know dreams always go by contraries."

"Thin," said Michael, "maybe ye'll be after givin' me wife th' tobaccy an' her ladyship 'll give me th' tay."—Harper's Weekly.

GETTING RID OF IT.

Mr. Flubdub—What's the use of keeping that old umbrella around? It's no good.

Mrs. Fubdub—All right. I'll lend it to somebody.—Philadelphia Press.

His One Joke.

My Uncle John with joy will fill
With this one witty sally:
"I know a man whose name is Hill—
Of course he has a valet."
—Judge.

No Cause for Alarm.

The honeymoon had bumped the bumps.

"You know, John," said the young wife, "that I used to be your typewriter?"

"I'm—yes," grunted John.

"Well," she continued, "I wish you would discharge the girl you have now and hire a man in her place."

"Huh!" rejoined hubby. "I hope you don't think I would make a fool of myself twice in the same way."—Chicago Daily News.

Still in a Pout.

"Well," said he, anxious to make up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in this parcel?"

"Not very," replied his wife, indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world."

"Ah! I suppose it's those new collars you said you needed."

Strictly Technical.

"Isn't that patient of yours an all-around athlete?"

"Yes, and his afflictions are entirely consistent."

"What do you mean?"

"He has a running sore, a jumping toothache and a fighting chance to get rid of both."—Baltimore American.

A Success.

"Has the social season been a success?"

"To some extent," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I should judge that the money I put into it was enough to guarantee it against being a financial failure."—Washington Star.

His All.

Rambling Waggles—I was robbed last night, and I reckon that about 53 articles were stolen from me. Everything I had in the world.

Policeman—Fifty-three articles?

Rambling Waggles—Yes, a pack of cards and a corkscrew.

Dissatisfied Heir.

"Your ailment," remarked the physician, "is merely one of the ills that flesh is heir to."

"Yes, I suppose so," rejoined the patient. "By the way, doctor, what are your charges for breaking a will?"—Chicago Daily News.

No Health There.

Mrs. De Fashion—So you were at Health Springs during the summer. How did you like it?

Mrs. De Style—Well, the place is pretty enough, but I didn't think much of the water. It didn't taste bad at all.—N. Y. Weekly.

That Might Be.

"Who is that man?"

"He's an alienist."

"I wonder why they call them that?"

"I guess it's because their views are so alien to fact and reason."—Baltimore American.

Highly Improbable.

Editor—I wish I knew what our lady readers want.

Assistant—Why don't you send out a circular letter and ask them?

Editor—Great heavens, man, do you suppose they know?"—Puck.

On Some Vessels.

"A ship's officer must be very alert these days," remarked the traveler.

"Yes," answered the old salt; "a man has to be pretty quick to beat the passengers to the boats in case of accident."—Washington Star.

TEN YEARS OF PAIN.

Unable to Do Even Housework Because of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Margaret Emmerich, of Clinton St., Napoleon, O., says: "For fifteen years I was a great sufferer from kidney troubles. My back pained me terribly. Every turn or move caused sharp, shooting pains. My eyesight was poor, dark spots appeared before me, and I had dizzy spells. For ten years I could not do housework, and for two years did not get out of the house. The kidney secretions were irregular, and doctors were not helping me. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me quick relief, and finally cured me. They saved my life."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

FIRST TO CROSS PACIFIC.

Side-Wheel Steamer Aroused Much Interest in Japan.

"I saw the first steamship flying the American flag that ever crossed the Pacific ocean enter the harbor of Hongkong," said Frederick R. Sterling, a merchant of Hongkong.

"That vessel was the Colorado, and it landed in Hongkong in 1869. It was the first day of January, and there was a big crowd of people of all nationalities to see her. Being a side-wheeler of the old-fashioned type, she was a curiosity. At the request of Isaac J. Allen, the American consul general, the ship gave an excursion around the island on which the city is situated. I was among the 1,200 on board. It was a gala day. Whistles blew, people shouted, and numerous small sailing boats and tugs escorted us.

"As I remember now, the vessel belonged to the Pacific Mail Line and called from San Francisco. She made the trip of 8,000 miles in 30 days, and when she arrived was in perfect trim and good order. Everybody realized that it means the beginning of the great development of the Pacific."

Justified.

"You are charged with having knocked your wife down, blacking her eyes and loosening two of her teeth. Have you anything to say for yourself?"

"She had it comin' to her, yer honor."

"What did she do or say that could in any way justify such treatment on your part?"

"She said I didn't love her no more."—Houston Post.

Her Chief Worry.

"Well, poor girl," said Mrs. Merryet, "you have been married just long enough now to begin to experience your husband's shortcomings."

"Yes," replied young Mrs. Galley, "but his short-comings don't bother me as much as his long goings and stayings."

MORE BOXES OF GOLD

And Many Greenbacks.

325 boxes of Gold and Greenbacks will be sent to persons who write the most interesting and truthful letters of experience on the following topics:

1. How have you been affected by coffee drinking and by changing from coffee to Postum?
2. Give name and account of one or more coffee drinkers who have been hurt by it and have been induced to quit and use Postum.
3. Do you know any one who has been driven away from Postum because it came to the table weak and characterless at the first trial?
4. Did you set such a person right regarding the easy way to make it clear, black, and with a snappy, rich taste?
5. Have you ever found a better way to make it than to use four heaping teaspoonfuls to the pint of water, let stand on stove until real boiling begins, and beginning at that time when actual boiling starts, boil full 15 minutes more to extract the flavor and food value. (A piece of butter the size of a pea will prevent boiling over.)

This contest is confined to those who have used Postum prior to the date of this advertisement.

Be honest and truthful, don't write poetry or fanciful letters, just plain, truthful statements.

Contest will close June 1st, 1907, and no letters received after that date will be admitted. Examinations of letters will be made by three judges, not members of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd. Their decisions will be fair and final, and a neat little box containing a $10 gold piece sent to each of the five writers of the most interesting letters, a box containing a $5 gold piece to each of the 20 next best, a $2 greenback to each of the 100 next best, and a $1 greenback to each of the 200 next best, making cash prizes distributed to 325 persons.

Every friend of Postum is urged to write and each letter will be held in high esteem by the company, as an evidence of such friendship, while the little boxes of gold and envelopes of money will reach many modest writers whose plain and sensible letters contain the facts desired, although the sender may have but small faith in winning at the time of writing.

Talk this subject over with your friends and see how many among you can win prizes. It is a good, honest competition and in the best kind of a cause, and costs the competitors absolutely nothing.

Address your letter to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., writing your own name and address clearly.

INDIANA PEOPLE IN WESTERN CANADA.

What Shall We Do?—I've Got to Build Granaries.

A letter written to a Canadian Government agent from Tipton, Indiana, is but one of many similar that are in the hands of the Canadian government agents whose privilege it is to offer one hundred and sixty acres of land free, and low railway fares. But here is a copy of the letter:

"Tipton, Ind., Nov. 28, 1905.

"At your earnest solicitation a party of us from Tipton left May 15 for Western Canada. Our interviews with you and a careful study of your literature led us to expect great things of your country when we should arrive there, and we were not disappointed. We went prepared to make a careful examination of the country and its resources, and we did so. At early dawn the second morning out of Tipton we awoke in a new world. As far as the eye could reach was an apparently limitless expanse of new sown wheat and prairie grasses. The vivid green of the wheat just beginning to stool out, and the inky blackness of the soil contrasted in a way beautiful to see. An hour or two later we steamed into Winnipeg. Here we found a number of surprises. A hundred thousand souls well housed, with every convenience that goes to make a modern up-to-date city—banks, hotels, newspapers, stores, electric light, street railways, sewerage, waterworks, asphalt pavements, everything. With eyes and ears open we traveled for two thousand miles through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, going out over the Canadian Pacific railway, via Calgary to Edmonton, and returning to Winnipeg over the Canadian Northern railway. In the meantime we made several side trips and stopped off at a number of points where we made drives into the surrounding country. On every hand were evidences of prosperity. The growing wheat, oats, rye, flax, barley, not little patches, but great fields, many of them a square mile in extent; the three, five and sometimes seven-horse teams laying over an inky black ribbon of yellow stubble, generally in furrows straight as gun barrels and at right angles from the roads stretching into the distance, contrasted strangely with our little fields at home. The towns both large and small were doubly conspicuous, made so, first by their newness and second by the towering elevators necessary to hold the immense crops of wheat grown in the immediate neighborhood.

The newness, the thrift, the hustle, the sound of saw and hammer, the tents housing owners of buildings in various stages of completion, the piles of household effects and agricultural implements at the railway stations waiting to be hauled out to the "Claims," the occasional steam plow turning its twenty or thirty acres a day, the sod house, the unpainted house of wood, the up-to-date modern residence with large red barn by, all these were seen everywhere we went, an earnest of prosperity and wealth to be. We talked with men and visited their places that four years ago was unbroken prairie. Their houses, barns, implements and live stock were the equal of anything in Tipton County, and why not, when they were raising five, ten and twenty, yes, in one instance, forty thousand bushels of wheat a year. The fact that such large yields of wheat are raised so easily and so surely impressed us very favorably. And when we saw men who four or five years ago commenced there with two or three thousand dollars, and were now as well fixed and making money much easier and many times faster than lots of our acquaintances on Indiana farms fifty years cleared and valued at four times as much, we decided to invest. So we bought in partnership a little over two thousand acres, some of it improved and in wheat.

Before leaving Indiana we agreed that if the opportunities were as great as they were represented to be, that we would buy, and own in partnership a body of land, and leave one of our number to look after and operate it. This we accordingly did.

Just before time to thresh I received a letter from him. "What shall we do?" said he; "I've got to build granaries. There's so much wheat that the railways are just swamped. We can't get cars and the elevators are all full. I never saw anything like it." In reply we wrote, "Good for you. Go ahead and build; your story sounds better than the letters we used to get from our friends in Kansas when they bewailed the fact that the hard wheat had been destroyed by the chinch bugs and the corn by hot winds, and that they must sell the stock for means to live on. Yes, build by all means." And he did, and our wheat put in by a renter made twenty-seven bushels per acre.

Very truly yours,
(Sd) A. G. BURKHART.
(Sd) J. TRELOAR-TRESIDDER.
(Sd) WALTER W. MOUNT.

It sometimes happens that other people have as good an opinion of a man as he has of himself—after he is dead.

Instead of experimenting with drugs and strong cathartics—which are clearly harmful—take Nature's mild laxative, Garfield Tea! It is made wholly of Herbs. For constipation, liver and kidney derangements, sick-headache, biliousness and indigestion.

A fruit tree in the back yard is worth two family trees in a glass case.

Don't Sneeze Your Head Off.

Krause's Cold Capsules will cure you almost instantly. At all Druggists, 25c.

Fraud is the recourse of weakness and cunning.—Gibbon.

MISS ADELAIDE NICHOLS

PERIODS OF PAIN

While no woman is entirely free from periodic suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Irregularities and pain are positive evidence that something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to serious derangement of the feminine organism.

Thousands of women, have found relief from all periodic suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, as it is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science.

It cures the condition which causes so much discomfort and robs that period of its terrors. Women who are troubled with painful or irregular functions should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Miss Adelaide Nichols of 324 West 22nd Street, New York City, writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"If women who suffer would only rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound their troubles would be quickly alleviated. I feel greatly indebted for the relief and health which has been brought to me by your inestimable remedy."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints such as Falling and Displacements, and Organic Diseases. Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole feminine system. For the derangements of the Kidneys of either sex Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

34 YEARS SELLING DIRECT

Our vehicles and harness have been sold direct from our factory to user for a third of a century. We ship for examination and approval and guarantee safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied as to style, quality and price.

We are the Largest Manufacturers in the World selling to the consumer exclusively. We make 200 styles of Vehicles, 65 styles of harness. Send for large, free catalogue.

No. 815. Light Extension Top Surrey. Price complete, $73.50.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co. Elkhart, Indiana

No. 653. Top Buggy with Late Style Stanhope Seat, Bike Gear and 1¼ in Guaranteed Cushion Tires. Price complete, $73.00.

WINCHESTER

"NEW RIVAL"
LOADED BLACK POWDER
Shotgun Shells

The important points in a loaded shell are reliability, uniformity of loading, evenness of pattern, hard shooting qualities and strength to withstand reloading. All these virtues are found in Winchester "New Rival" loaded black powder shells. Ask for them the next time.

THEY HELP MAKE BIG BAGS

HOUSE PAINTS

that defer repainting for the longest possible period, best preserve the woodwork of your house and maintain their original appearance for the greatest length of time, are the most economical paints to buy. You can be sure of these qualities only by insisting upon

MASURY'S
HOUSE PAINTS

Manufactured for sixty-five years by the house of

JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

NEW WHEAT LANDS IN THE CANADIAN WEST

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

5,000 additional miles of railway this year have opened up a largely increased territory to the progressive farmers of Western Canada and the Government of the Dominion continues to give ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE to every settler.

THE COUNTRY HAS NO SUPERIOR

Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access; taxes low; climate the best in the northern temperate zone. Law and order prevails everywhere.

For advice and information address the SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Vienna Sausage

unequalled for their delicious taste. They are put up in most convenient form for ready serving, requiring only a few minutes preparation. They have a fine flavor and freshness which will please every one.

An Appetizing Dish.—Drop a tin of Libby's Vienna Sausage in boiling water until heated (about 15 minutes) and serve as taken from the tin on a small plate garnished with lettuce leaves.

Ask your grocer for Libby's and insist upon getting Libby's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

FREE

To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.

PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT. THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills. They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

Croup

is the mother's nightly dread for her little ones. It may cause spasmodic contraction of the throat muscles, and strangle a child unless prompt relief is gotten. The relaxing power of our has saved more lives than any other remedy in cases of croup, when used as directed in the wrapper of each bottle. Our method is free to mothers. 25 cents, three times as much 50 cents. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm

is quickly absorbed. Gives Relief at Once. 50c.

Ely Bros., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

PROTECT YOUR IDEAS DON'T DELAY TO APPLY FOR PATENT

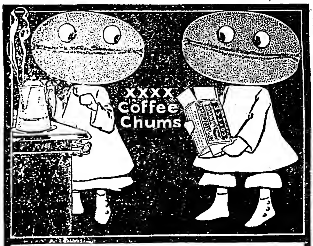
Send for FREE BOOKLET and learn why. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., 900 14th St., Washington, D. C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. ESTABLISHED 1864.

NO PATENT, NO FEE FOR OUR SERVICES

$4 a day SURE

Easy work with horse and buggy right where you live in handling our ironing and fluting machine. One agent says: "Made $50 in 8½ days." We pay $75 a month and expenses; or commission.

PEASE MFG. CO., Dept. P Cincinnati, Ohio.



The Longer You Drink It–The Better You Like It

That's because McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always the same—day in—day out—always of the same good quality, blended just right, and roasted to a turn—that's satisfaction, and 16 full ounces to the pound is economy.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps the coffee clean and fresh—protected from dust, dirt and foul odors.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE GARCEAU & ZAISER
M. SKALA J. W. B. NIMESGREN

Mascot

"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..

BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RE LAKE FALLS, MINN

Red Lake Falls Gazette

Published weekly, Thursday evening, entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Badger

D. Champeau drove to Terrehonne Saturday on a business mission.

Mrs. Dan Boyd accompanied by Miss Aurore Ducharme, transacted business at the Falls last Friday.

Henry Laurent of Terrebonne accompanied by Anna Quesnell of this place, spent Sunday as guests at the Stephen Quesnell home at Lich Pitack.

Mr. and Mrs. Berry called at the Havens home Sunday afternoon.

Messrs. Adelard Laurent and Dolphis Champeau and wives and Miss Cora Laurent visited at the home of Joseph Laurent of Terrebonne Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Damasse Lachance entertained a number of friends at their home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Champeau and daughter, Miss Mildred spent Sunday evening at the A. Laurent home.

Philip Demerais and lady attended mass at Red Lake Falls Sunday and visited with relatives the remainder of the day.

BRAY.

Gust Dahlen drove to St. Hilaire Friday.

Mike Ault has been busy during the past week engaging cattle for his herd during the summer.

A cream station has been established at Emil Larson's place and most of the farmers of this vicinity have started to haul their cream.

Miss Clare Limhlom was at St. Hilaire Monday.

Charley Eckstein and Henry Schneider of Wylie were in Bray Sunday.

The boys around here have started practicing baseball now.

The town board went around the township Thursday looking over the pieces of road which will need fixing during the summer.

E. J. Akerlund made a trih to Hill Top last Sunday.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF ANDREW R. PETERSON.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, In Probate Court.

In the matter of the estate of Andrew R. Peterson, Decedent:

The State of Minnesota to Mathilda Krane, August R. Peterson and Claus Peterson, all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; Therefore, You, and Each of You, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 18th day of May, 1907, at 9 o'clock a. m., why said petition should not be granted.

Witness, The judge of said Court, and the seal of said Court, this 23rd day of April, 1907.

(Seal) —N. W. TARRANT,
J. K. Hannay. Probate Judge.

My Hair is Scraggly

Do you like it? Then why be contented with it? Have to be? Oh, no! Just put on Ayer's Hair Vigor and have long, thick hair; soft, even hair. But first of all, stop your hair from coming out. Save what you have. Ayer's Hair Vigor will not disappoint you. It feeds the hair-bulbs; makes weak hair strong.

The best kind of a testimonial—"Sold for over sixty years."

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's SARSAPARILLA. PILLS. CHERRY PECTORAL.

Last Mountain Valley Lands We own thousands of acres of Choice Selected Land in this district, which is right in the heart of the Great Wheat Plains of Saskatchewan. The richness of the soil in this district is shown in the reports to the Government which give an average of 26¼ bushels of wheat to the acre for 1906. The great development of this part of Western Canada has brought about the competition of 3 railways. Ample timber for fuel and fencing. Send 15c for beautiful, new souvenir book, entitled "The Lake and the Land of the Last Mountain Valley." Also 20th Century Atlas of Canada sent with souvenir book. Write to-day. Maps, descriptive matter, etc., on request.

WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.
Northern Bank Building, Winnipeg, Canada.

The Scheuerman Skirt.

The Scheuerman Skirt.

Bargains In Skirts

We have some excellent bargains in ladies' and misses' skirts, which we are offering this week.

All the latest fabrics are represented here, and you are assured of securing a perfect model of this season's fashions when selecting from this line. Call and look them over.

THE BUSY STORE
GARCEAU & ZAISER RED LAKE FALLS

Clerk of Court's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Polk. }

Whereas the petition of J. B. Wichterman and others, bearing date of January——1907, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein has been filed in my office.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the Hon. William Watts, a judge of the District Court of the 14th Judicial District in Minnesota, at his Chambers at the court house in the city of Crookston in said county on Saturday, the 25th day of May, A. D., 1907 at 10 o'clock a. m.

A true copy of said petition is as follows, to-wit:

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

To the Judge of the District Court, of 14th Judicial District, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the public ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a public ditch along the following described route in the towns of Gully, Chester, in Polk Co., and town of Lambert, in County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at a point at the quarter corner between sections 23 and 24, township 150, N. Range 39, W. and running due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 23, 22, 21, 20 and 19 in said township 150 N. Range 39, W. thence due west following the quarter line thru the center of sections 24, 23, 22, 21 and 20 in Township 150, N. Range 40, W. until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 20 and 19 of said township 150, N. Range 40, W. thence in a northwesterly direction across the N. E. ¼ of section 19, said township and range, until it reaches the quarter corner between sections 19 and 18 of said township and range, thence in a northwesterly direction across the west half of section 18 and said township and range, entering Red Lake County ditch known as Lambert ditch No. 1, near the corner common to sections 7 and 18, T. 150, N. Range 40, W. and sections 12 and 13, T. 150 N. Range 41 W. thence following down this said Lambert ditch No. 1, to a point in said ditch where said ditch has sufficient capacity to properly carry such waters as may be brought in by said proposed ditch taking its outlet therein.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such public ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred Thirty (230), of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905.

Dated this 30th day of April, A. D. 1907. —W. A. LANCTOT,
Clerk of the District Court,
14th Judicial District, Polk
m2 County, Minnesota.

Moderate Price

Calumet Baking Powder

$1,000.00 will be given for any substance injurious to health found in Calumet.

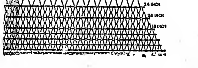
Subscribe for The Gazette.

HOG FENCING

Do You Need Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb poftom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.

General Hardware

Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

When You Plan Your Trip

Call on the Northern Pacific Agent and let him help arrange your journey. He will secure any information you want about his own and connecting lines, and will explain why

Through Dining Cars
Pullman Standard Sleeping Cars
Pullman Tourist Sleeping Cars
High-back Seat Day Coaches

make Northern Pacific trains so popular with travelers. He will quote you rates, sell you tickets, and make your sleeping car reservations. His services are free.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Northern Pacific Railway

A. M. CLELAND,
General Passenger Agent
St. Paul, Minn.

When the Children come home from School

They usually want something from the pantry

You remember the hunger you had—Home cooking counts for much in the child's health; do not imperil it with alum food by the use of poor baking powder.

Have a delicious, pure, home-made muffin, cake or biscuit ready when they come in. To be sure of the purity, you must use

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Royal makes a difference in your home—a difference in your health—a difference in your cooking.

ROYAL is absolutely Pure.

County Surveyor J. K. Wood came down from Thief River Falls Monday evening to do some work at the court house.

L. P. Berthon returned home Saturday morning from his ten days' business visit at Chicago and the Twin Cities. His partner, J. B. Armstrong, who joined him in Chicago stopped off in Minneapolis on the return trip to take in the convention of Knights of Pythias and look after some other matters. He is expected home tomorrow.

It was feared for some time yesterday afternoon that the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Tarrant had wandered away from home and fallen into the river aud was drowned. A diligent search was made thru the brush and along the riverside, finally discovered sleeping on the sand under the Klondyke bridge.

The work of grading the race track and base ball field for the tournament was commenced yesterday morning. Surveyor Wood was out and surveyed the track and then teams and men were put to work at plowing and grading. The committee intend to put forth every effort possible to make it one of the best race tracks in the association, and by the time the tournament opens it will be in tip top condition.

The rear of the small drive of logs for the Grand Forks mill passed thru here Sunday, and a large number of townspeople went down to see the wanagan "jump the dam." As soon as Foreman Sullivan gets the drive in boom at Grand Forks he will proceed to Red Lake, where he will start down the big drive of the year. Strange as it may appear the water in the Red Lake river is lower at present than it has been at this season for several years past, and the drivers have found it slow work to keep the logs moving.

Ovide Cailler, of Gentilly township, Polk county, and Miss Eva Benoit, daughter of Mrs. H. Benoit, of this, were married at St. Joseph's church Sunday afternoon at three o'clock by the Rev. Father Fayolle, in the presence of the members of the families. In the evening a wedding reception and feast was held at the A. L. Roy home, and the young people were showered with congratulations. They left on the evening train Monday for Crookston and will reside on a farm near that place with an uncle of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Christ Eickhoff of Crookston announce the engagement of their daughter, Flora Wilhelmina Eickhoff, to J. Arthur Williams of Grand Forks. The wedding will take place Monday afternoon, June the third, at four o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 510 Front street. Miss Eickhoff, who is a sister of Mrs. Arthur Zaiser of this city, is one of Crookston's most popular girls and there is much regret expressed over the fact that we are about to lose her from our community. Miss Eickhoff has been employed as bookkeeber for the Singer Sewing Machine company, for the past two years. Mr. Williams is an express agent at Grand Forks. The young couple are planning on taking a wedding trip and will be "at home" after July 10th at 410 Seventh avenue and Chestnut street, Grand Forks. There will be a little entertainment in Miss Eickhoff's honor during the next few weeks.

Musicale Program

The following program will be given by the music class of Sr. Cecilia, at the Metropolitan opera house, Monday evening, May 20th.

Opening Chorus..............................Glover
Class—"Gathering Flowers in May."
Duet............................Dellbes
"Pizzicati"
Cora Paul, Leah Latendresse
Solo..............................Mathews
(a) "Vesper Hymn"
(b) "Melody"
Donald Marshall
Solo.............. "March" .... Hale
Hazel Bourdon
Duet...... "The First Ball" .. ...Streabbog
Dora and Ervey Toupin
Solo.... "O'er Hill and Dale ......Bergthal
Rosalba Lemieux
Solo......... "To the Fairest" ....Petri
Gerda Floan
Song..................................Metzle
"Welcome Merry Springtime"
Rosalba Lemieux, Emma Hance.
Solo.... "Sweet Remembrance" ...Pratt
Kathleen Spillane
Recitation, "How Tommy Raised the Wind."
Maurice Brunelle
Solo.. "Gleaming Star of Heaven" ..Wurtele
Ethel Bourdon
Song ..... "I'm a Hunter Free" .....Reyloff
Ervey Toupin
Solo........ "Falling Waters" ....Truax.
Myrtle Armstrong
Duet........"Joyous Return".. ....Ringuet
Ethel Bourdon, Gerda Floan
Solo......................................
(a) "L'Avalanche"..........Heller
(b) "Valse"...............Engelmann
Igna Hanry
Mandolin and Guitars.............Waldman
"Little Fisherman"
Misses B. Lafreniere, Eva Beaudro.
Della Daleho
Solo...............“Air Varie" ....Kern
Lea Latendresse
Recitation.... "A White Lily" ....Wright
Lucy Mathias
Solo—(a) "Sounds of Springtime"... Wenzel
(b) "Venitian Gondolas"... ... Wachs
Alice Riechel
Vocal Trio.. "The Distant Chimes" ..Glover
Louise Paradis. Lea Latendresse
Monica Zeh
Solo...."Leybach's Fifth Nocturne"
Miss Eva Paradis
Solo...... "Flowers of Spring" ......LaFarge
Cora Paul
Duet........"Galop de Concert" ....Blake
Eva Paradis, Lea Latendresse
Accompanist—Eva Paradis.

There will be no reserved seats.

The Local Field---

Nightwatchman Lizee visited Plummer Monday.

Rev. Father Barris of Lambert was in the city Tuesday.

Big Joe Morisette was in from Plummer Monday night.

W. A. Schreiter was a business visitor at Thief River yesterday.

Mrs. G. Somers of Crookston is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Arthur Zaiser.

Fresh fancy cookies, a big stock just received at Freund's. Call in and see them.

V. M. Higinbotham attended to business matters in Brooks and Gentilly this week.

County Auditor J. B. O'Brien was a caller at St. Hilaire Friday, shaking hands with his old friends.

Mrs. C. L Grey, who is conducting a millinery store at St. Hilaire, spent Sunday with her daughter here.

Fred Craig, of East Grand Forks, general agent for the Duluth Brewing company, spent Tuesday in the city.

Miss Bertha Lafreniere went to Thief River Falls Saturday and remained until Monday evening with friends there.

George Singer, a prominent resident of Rhoda, on the reservation, spent Tuesday and yesterday here attending to business matters.

Clem Brunelle returned home Tuesday from Blackduck after spending a week there attending to business matters and visiting friends and relatives.

Fred Richards was in from Dorothy and spent Sunday with his many friends. Fred has only three more weeks of school, when he will return to spend the summer in Red Lake Falls.

Fred Zaiser left last Thursday evening for Royalton, near which place he has a grading contract on the new Soo line. Several men from here accompanied him, and they will put in the next few months slinging dirt in good shape.

Miss Mabel and Master Wilbur Gervais arrived Saturday from Olympia, Washington, to spend a month or more with their relatives and oldtime friends here. They are children of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Gervais, formerly residents of this place, and their visit will undoubtedly be highly enjoyable.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Presbyterian church will hold a business meeting at the church parlors. Wednesday, May 22nd, at 2:30 p.m. Every lady of the congregation is earnestly requested to be present as business of great importance will be transacted.

WANTED

Information regarding good farm that is for sale and which can be bought of owner. No agents need answer. Wish to hear from owner only willing to close his own deal and save buyer paying big commission and fancy price to some agent. Would also like to hear of good small business for sale by owner.

Address INFORMATION DEPARTMENT Locator Publishing Co. Minneapolis, Minn.

Marcus Johnson is in the city on business this week.

Register of Deeds Quist spent Sunday at Thief River Falls.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Drew Marshall came up from St. Paul yesterday for a week's visit at his home.

The Royal Neighbors will hold a meeting at their hall on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

James E. Ford arrived home Saturday morning from a several days' sojourn at the Twin Cities.

Julius Pleth and Oscar Carlson drove over from Plummer Friday and spent the day here on business.

Miss Bella Bray returned home Monday from a several days' visit with her grand parents at Grand Forks.

Miss Agnes Kelly returned to her home at Thief River Falls Saturday after a several days' visit with friends here

The following letter remains unclaimed in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls for the week ending May 11, 1907: Jessie Perish.

James Egan left Monday evening for Dickinson, North Dakota, to spend a few days looking up some real estate deals he is interested in.

Geo. F. Hennings departed yesterday for Williston, N. D., where he will look after some business for the bank. He expects to return either Sunday or Monday.

A limited amount of timber to cut on shares. Also an amount to be grubbed and will give all the wood. Will take in cattle to pasture. Shorthorn bull for service. See S. L. Ely, sec. 14, town of Red Lake Falls.

The Gazette is in receipt of a letter from Frank Brouillet, at the Rochester hospital where he went to have an operation performed on his lip. Mr. Brouillet says he is getting along nicely, being in the hospital but four days. He will remain in Rochester for some time yet before returning home.

Last evening was the first time this season the running team of the fire department were able to get out and do any practicing, owing to the severity of the weather. They intend to put in every evening possible and by tournament time will be able to maintain the reputation they have so well established in previous years.

The Arizona Stockman says: "Dehorning calves is such a simple operation that it is difficult to explain why it is ever postponed until the calves are fully grown and the necessity arises for sawing them off. To dehorn, secure a pencil of caustic potash at a drug store. When the calf is three or four days old locate the little knot which indicates the young horn, wet it and rub it with the pencil, held in a gloved hand. That is all there is to the operation. It constitutes but a few minutes work and causes no pain to the animal.

N. J. St. Aubin was a caller in Crookston over Sunday.

Damon's Colored Musical Company. Opera house, June 4.

Merchant LaBissoniere spent last Friday night at Crookston.

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Nap Miller was here from St. Hilaire over Sunday, guests of relatives and friends.

Attorney Frank A. Grady was a professional caller at Thief River Falls Monday.

Mrs. Wm. Eickhoff, of Crookston, visited at the home of her daughter, Mrs Arthur Zaiser, yesterday.

Robt. Eitel of Marshall, Minn., was an arrival yesterday morning and will make an extended stay looking after his land interests here.

Carl Pochart of Marshall, Lyon county, who owns several farms in this neighborhood, has spent the past week here looking after his interests.

Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, June 7. At Grand View hotel. Remember the date if your eyes trouble you.

Mike Keeley, an old Euclid boy, was killed in the Great Northern yards at Duluth, while doing some switching last Monday. He was a brother of Mark Keeley, conductor on the work train here last summer.

"Bad Bill" Ittner, of football fame, won added laurels last Saturday in the field meet between Minnesota and Nebraska. He won first place in the discus throw and second in the shot put, Weller of Nebraska winning first.

The Percheron stallion, Fred, weight 1700, will stand the season at Guerin Bros. barn. We also have a high grade Jack which will serve at our barn during the season. Anyone wishing horses castrated should give us a call. 31-4 —Guerin Bros.

"Where's that d—d fire shovel, Mary?" asked a Sycamore man to his wife as he entered the sitting room after a search for the implement. "I'll be d—d if I know, dear," she sweetly replied, and the lesson went home with such a distinct thud that he raised his right hand and swore off.

The six o'clock dinner given by Mrs. E. F. Marshall last Saturday evening was one of the prettiest, and most enjoyable affairs which has taken place in the city for some time. An elaborate seven course dinner was served for fourteen invited guests, seven ladies and seven gentlemen. At the conclusion of each course each gentleman was to move one seat to the right and was granted the privilege of talking, entertaining the ladies the best they knew how, not knowing what was in store for them. When the seven courses had been completed a voting contest was held among the lady guests to decide who of the gentlemen was the most entertaining. After the count of the votes H. H. Zaiser was awarded the prize, a novel match holder. A short program of songs and music was then indulged in. Those present were Misses Alice Coughlin, Etta Garceau, Ella Hansen, Mary Lamb, Louise Twinum, Eliza Trudo, Laura Detert aud Messrs. Dr. Watson, H. W. Anderson, Lee Healy, Sam E. Hunt, N. C. Schreiter, L. D. Padden and H. H. Zaiser.

SPECIAL SALE OF

Ladies' Spring COATS

Only 8 coats left. Will close them out at special prices. Palmer make, $12 coat velvet collar, all wool, for $8.50

5 regular $10.00 and $12.00 coats for $7.50 to $8.50

Come soon, they won't last long.

Our Men and Boys' Line of Clothing is at Your Service. Our

KUPPENHEIMER SUITS

Will Give You The Right Style

$15.00 to $25.00

Other Makes at from $5.00 to $15.00

CRAVENETTS $15.00 to $22.50

TOP COATS $10, $12.50 and $18.50

Everybody says it pays to trade at . . The Big Store Big in Size but little in prices

THEO. LaBISSONIERE, Proprietor.

This is the Time of the Year

When you begin to think about a new coat of paint for the house, you want a paint that will not only brighten and beautify the home, but will withstand sudden changes in the weather without cracking and pealing---a paint that will last. There is but one brand of paint that we can guarantee to last---

Heath & Milligan's Ready-Mixed Paints
The Best Prepared Paint Made

A full line of these famous paints always on hand. SEE OUR SAMPLES.

We have have received a large shipment of

Barb Wire,
Small Farm Implements
Building Material, Etc.

We make a specialty of always being ready to furnish figures on hardware supplies for buildings and contract work where hardware is used, and it will pay you to call and get prices before purchasing.

SPORTING GOODS...

Our line of sporting goods is the largest to be found in the city and we take a special pride keeping our stock complete and up-to-date. We have everything you want in

Fishing Tackle, Base-ball Goods, Guns and Amunition, Etc.

We would be pleased to have you call at any time and look over these goods, they are for your inspection whether you wish to buy or not.

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dudley & Creglow, Publishers

RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

[illegible] building in Kansas [illegible] by Rev. George [illegible] a tractor, was killed; [illegible] piano teacher, prob- [illegible] and 15 other persons [illegible] The property loss was [illegible]

Under adequate police protection, [illegible] were run for six miles in San Francisco the mob being kept back [illegible]. There was no shooting, [illegible] four men were injured.

Striking longshoremen in Brooklyn attacked strikebreakers and a bloody fight with the police ensued, many men being badly injured.

George B. Cox, former Republican leader in Ohio, came out for Taft for the presidential nomination, adding his advice that the party in Ohio secure harmony by nominating Foraker for the senate and A. L. Harris for governor.

Congressman H. A. Cooper withdrew from the senatorial race in Wisconsin.

[illegible] Wood at Boise overruled the [illegible] of Haywood's counsel for a [illegible] particulars and the way was [illegible] the beginning of the trial.

[illegible] G. Ross, former United States senator from Kansas, whose [illegible] President Andrew Johnson [illegible] impeachment, died at Albuquerque, N. M.

Attorney General Bonaparte recommended that John William January, alias Charles W. Anderson, be paroled July 19, 1907. The president approved the attorney general's recommendation.

The business section of Barnesboro, Pa., was almost wiped out by a fire that members of the Black Hand were suspected of having started.

Tommy Burns, of Los Angeles, won the heavy-weight championship of the world from "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien before the Pacific Athletic club at Los Angeles, after 20 rounds of fighting that was for the most part a foot race.

The French steamer Poitou went ashore off the coast of Uruguay and many of her 300 passengers and crew jumped overboard in panic. It was believed about 100 were drowned.

H. Clay Pierce, head of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, surrendered himself in St. Louis on the indictment returned against him in Texas charging perjury, and was released on bonds.

Gov. Magoon appointed Cuban delegates to the second peace conference at The Hague as follows: Antonio De Bustamente, Gonzalo De Queseda, the Cuban minister to the United States, and Manuel Sangully. Ovestes Ferrera has been made secretary to the legation.

Shriners at Los Angeles selected St. Paul for the conclave of 1908, the dates being July 13 to 18.

The British government decided to give Jamaica $750,000 and guarantee a loan of $1,000,000 to assist the people of Kingston.

Twenty-five congressmen arrived at Honolulu on the transport Buford.

Mrs. Mary Vito and her mother, Mrs. Maria Brignoli, were literally slashed to pieces with razors in New York. Giovanni Vito, the husband of the younger woman, is under arrest charged with the crime.

Rev. Father George F. Arenth, 32 years old, rector of Holy Angels cathedral of St. Cloud, Minn., died at the St. Francis hospital in Pittsburg.

Lieut. Col. George Vincent Fosbery, inventor of the paradox gun, an automatic revolver, is dead in London.

Twenty-nine St. Louisans have been subpoenaed to appear before the federal grand jury at Denver, Col., to tell what they know of a supposed scheme to combine a large number of coal land claims under the control of some syndicate whose identity has not been publicly established.

Maj. Boykin, a negro officer, was shot and killed from ambush at Orange, Tex. Negroes are blamed for the affair, as well as for firing upon two white men seated on a stage.

Clyde St. Clair, son of a prominent citizen of Independence, Mo., was shot and killed by Van Tappan, his intimate friend. The two quarreled over a girl.

Civil and criminal suits will be brought against the grafters responsible for the Pennsylvania capitol scandal, by Attorney General Todd.

Seated on a couch beside her lover, Hattie Garree, of Lima, O., fatally shot herself with his revolver, because they had quarreled.

Mrs. Mary Hurley, of Winona, Minn., formerly prominent in society but for several years a recluse, was found dead.

The jury that heard the case against Victor Roland O'Shea, of Chicago, charged with killing his wife, disagreed and was discharged.

A pitched battle between strikebreakers in the uniforms of car inspectors and strikers and their sympathizers was fought in San Francisco for more than an hour. Eight men were shot, among them a policeman, and one of the wounded men died in the night.

A strike of employes of the Chicago & Joliet electric road was averted by concessions to the men.

Burglars blew three safes in Oliver, Ga., and escaped with considerable money.

The case against Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, who killed former Senator Arthur Brown, was continued at Washington until October 7. Her counsel said her defense would be insanity.

The will of the late James Henry Smith was made public in New York. The value of the estate is estimated at not more than $25,000,000. The widow is left $3,000,000 in lieu of her dower; all his nearest kin receive legacies and St. Luke's and the Orthopoedic hospitals, of New York, are given $100,000 each. His nephews, George Grant Mason and William Smith Mason, are the principal beneficiaries of the estate, receiving two-thirds and one-third, respectively, of the residue.

The North Coast Limited, eastbound train No. 22 on the Northern Pacific railway, was held up by two masked men near Welch's Spur, a siding 18 miles east of Butte, Mont. Engineer James Clow was shot and killed and Fireman James Sullivan was shot through the arm. Several suspects were arrested.

Garland Moore, who killed Clara West at Springfield, Mo., because she jilted him, was found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary.

Irvine L. Lenroot, of Superior, Wis., withdrew from the senatorial race without making any requests as to the future course of his followers.

"Lyndhurst," the pretentious home of Mrs. William Thaw in Pittsburg, Pa., has been mortgaged for $100,000. The mortgage was made some time ago. It is held by the Fidelity Title & Trust company and will mature in three years.

Indictments charging violation of the Elkins anti-rebating law were handed down by a federal grand jury in New York against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, the Ontario & Western railroad, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and the Western Transit company.

Fire in the Woollensack building, Canal and Washington streets, Chicago, caused a property loss estimated at $275,000. Five men were injured by dropping from the lower end of a fire escape.

William A. Clark, Jr., youngest son of former Senator Clark, was married at Butte, Mont., to Mrs. Alice T. Medin, divorced wife of Marco J. Medin, a business man of Butte.

The life insurance companies intimate that they will withdraw from Texas when the new insurance law of that state becomes effective June 1.

Certain persons have voluntarily restored to the government between 1,000 and 2,000 acres of valuable coal lands in Colorado, acquired irregularly.

Four trainmen were killed, four others were injured and three passengers were hurt in a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Wheeling, W. Va.

Excavation for the month of April in Culebra cut of the Panama canal amounted to 879,527 cubic yards, and at the Gatun lock site to 108,000 cubic yards.

Walter C. Davis, a San Francisco carpenter, went insane and murdered a family of six persons with whom he resided.

William O. Rice, a telegraph operator in Washington, after a quarrel killed his wife, shot his baby and committed suicide.

Alex R. Chisolm, former paying teller, charged with having embezzled $100,000 from the First National bank of Birmingham, Ala., was convicted and sentenced to ten years in prison.

The Irish bill, giving Ireland a certain measure of Self-government, was introduced in the house of commons by the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Birrell.

The town of Bocas del Toro, Panama, was practically destroyed by fire.

Charles Harris, a negro farm hand, who shot and seriously wounded Hayden Pearson, a farmer, at Dearing, Ga., was lynched by a crowd of 40 unmasked men.

The entire leper colony of D'Arcy Island, B. C., consisting of eight Chinese, has been sent back to China.

Charles E. Halliwell, vice president of the American Tobacco company, and one of the heaviest stockholders in the corporation, died suddenly of apoplexy at New York city. He was reputed to be worth $20,000,000.

Dr. John Watson ("Ian Maclaren") the noted author, clergyman and lecturer, died at Mount Pleasant, Ia., of an abscess in the ear, after an illness of two weeks.

Eleven of the 13 Italians who had been on trial at Wilkesbarre, Pa., charged with "Blackhand" crimes were declared guilty. The other two defendants were acquitted.

The body of Horace Marvin, Jr., which was found lying in a pool of water less than half a mile from where he was last seen playing on March 4, was interred in "Bay Meadow Lawn," on the Marvin farm, near Dover, Del. It is believed the lad wandered away and died of exhaustion.

Frederick W. Wertheimer, 34 years old, manager of the Hotel Fairfax, Norfolk, Va., committed suicide by shooting in his apartments in the Hotel York, New York. In a note to his wife he said he feared illness would drive him insane.

The Illinois house passed the new Chicago charter bill and the local option bill.

Seven battalions of Turkish troops, about 6,500 men, were practically annihilated in a battle with rebels in the province of Yemen, Turkish Arabia.

Gen. Juan Estrada, of the Nicaraguan army, was appointed commandant of Peurto Cortez, in place of the Honduran commandant.

Three thousand operatives of textile mills in the state of Orizaba, Mexico, went on strike and only a large force of rurales kept them from violence.

Ernest McPherson, aged 26, son of a prominent cotton manufacturer of Ontario, Canada, was drowned in the plunge at Gregson Springs, Mont.

George W. Sheppard, probably the largest man in the central states, weighing 535 pounds, died at Jacksonville, Ill., of paralysis. He was 51 years old.

Counsel for William Haywood, at Boise, Idaho, argued for a bill of particulars that would disclose the state's case, and were opposed by Senator Borah for the prosecution.

A storm of wind and rain which was general throughout a considerable area in northern Texas and which at some places assumed the proportions of a tornado, resulted in the loss of at least three lives, the injury of many other persons and great damage to property and crops. Several villages were wiped out.

A strike of 350 laborers in the Havemeyer Sugar Refining company's plant in Brooklyn was attended with some disturbance which the police reserves were called upon to quell.

A sanguinary quarrel between a band of Kabyles and a number of phosphate miners from the Methoula mine in Algerie resulted in the killing of 15 men and the wounding of many more.

Six men, alleged to be the leaders of the mob that lynched a negro at Sterrett, I. T., on March 31, were arrested at Durant and Sterrett by the United States marshal and held for the grand jury without bail on the charge of murder.

James Leftwich, a wealthy cattleman of Loco, I. T., and candidate for state senator on the Democratic ticket, shot and killed T. J. Clark, also a wealthy cattleman, as the result of a feud.

Allie Beeson, 16 years old, daughter of a farmer living near Cassville, Mo., was rendered unconscious by falling hail, and may die.

Rev. Henry Bryant, a colored preacher of Bridgeport, O., was killed in Grand Rapids, Mich., by a folding bed closing and breaking his neck.

The street car motormen and conductors of San Francisco struck for an eight-hour day and a flat wage of three dollars. The company announced that it would operate its cars with nonunion crews, calling on the authorities for protection if necessary.

Max Francis Klepper, artist and illustrator, died at his home at Flatbush, N. Y. He was an animal painter of note, 46 years old.

Miss Harriett T. Haskell, for 40 years head of Monticello seminary for young ladies at Godfrey, Ill., died of heart trouble, aged 72.

Dr. George Collins, a young physician of Cincinnati, on his way to that city to be married, died in a Pullman car of a north-bound train at Montgomery, Ala.

A dispatch from Klamath Falls, Ore., says Count Otto von Walderstein, who was reported killed at Willows, Cal., is alive and well at Klamath Falls.

Three children named Dominique were burned to death in Blind River, Mich.

Fire in the printing plant of the Blanchard Press New York, did $125,000 damage.

The trial of three former employes of the Shelby Steel Tube company, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government by supplying defective boiler tubes for war vessels, was begun in Pittsburg. One of the defendants pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence.

Theodore Nemoyer brought suit against the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railway company in Chicago, to enjoin it from doing business in Illinois, and asking an accounting and the appointment of a receiver.

More than 100 Italians in Buffalo, N. Y., attacked a motorman who ran his car through a parade, and were routed by a score of police after a bloody battle.

Ten persons were injured when a Santa Fe passenger train was derailed at Norborne, Mo.

In a letter read before the Central Federated Union of New York, President Roosevelt stated that if evidence is submitted to him showing that there has been a miscarriage of justice for or against Moyer and Haywood, awaiting trial at Boise, Idaho, charged with the murder of former Gov. Steuenberg, he will bring such evidence to the attention of the attorney general for such action, if any, as it may be in the power of the federal authorities to take. The communication was the formal reply of the president to the committee of the union which called upon the president in Washington.

George B. Butler, portrait painter, died at his home, near Croton Falls, N. Y. He was in his seventieth year.

King Carlos of Portugal will visit Argentina after his trip to Brazil early next year, according to a cable dispatch from Lisbon.

Gen. J. K. Hudson, a prominent soldier and newspaper man of Topeka, Kan., died of heart failure.

A stubborn fire, 150 feet in the air, was successfully fought in the sixth and seventh stories of the porkhouse of the Schwartzechild & Sulzberger company, Chicago. The loss was about $100,000.

GOVERNMENT VICTORY OVER "DRUG TRUST"

DECREE ENTERED AT INDIANAPOLIS ENJOINS COMBINE FROM CONTINUING OPERATIONS.

PRICE AGREEMENTS AND BLACKLISTS PROHIBITED

Threats and Other Means of Enforcing Rates Barred—Must Not Discriminate or Publish Names—Injunction Is Perpetual.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 10.—The so-called "drug trust" was perpetually enjoined Thursday from continuing its operations by the entering of a decree in the United States circuit court for the district of Indiana on the complaint of the United States government filed by John B. Kealing, United States district attorney. The defendants, 92 in number, who are the members, officers, directors, agents and attorneys of the National Association of Retail Druggists, the National Wholesale Druggists 'association, tripartite proprietors, "blacklist manufacturers," "direct contract proprietors," "wholesale contract proprietors" and Charles C. Bombaugh, are perpetually enjoined from combining and conspiring to restrain trade in drugs, fix prices by agreement, blacklist retailers who cut prices, or to refuse to sell to any retailer on equal terms.

Blacklists Are Forbidden.

All publication of blacklists is forbidden and all contracts and agreements covered by the charges are declared void. The direct contract serial number plan is prohibited as well as the securing of the adoption of schedules for the sale of drugs.

Charles C. Bombaugh was charged in the bill of complaint with being engaged in printing and circulating lists called blacklists, which contained the names of druggists throughout the country who sold proprietary articles and medicines at prices less than those which the alleged combination ordered.

As charged, he would send a list each month to every retail and wholesale druggist in the United States who belonged to the association of those accused of cutting prices and as a result of this these "aggressive cutters," as they were called, could not buy goods.

It was further charged that those accused of cutting prices on proprietary medicines were unable to purchase any kinds of drugs from the members of the several associations. All such practices are perpetually enjoined.

Hits "Direct Contract" Men.

The "direct contract proprietors" are enjoined from continuing the direct contract serial plan and from cooperating with any of the other defendants in carrying out such a plan. They are enjoined from requiring any dealer from entering into a contract restraining trade in the articles of their manufacture and from placing serial numbers on the retail packages for the purpose of keeping records and tracing sales and from requiring the vendee to keep records of and report sale by serial numbers. All acts tending to restrict the free purchase of the articles or their manufacture are forbidden.

The same prohibitions are ordered against the "wholesale contract proprietors" and they are further enjoined from securing the adoption of schedules for the sale of the articles of their manufacture and of other articles in any market.

One Suit Is Dismissed.

Attorneys for William D. Freeman, a member of the "wholesale contract proprietors," at the last moment asked for further delay and wanted to proceed to trial. Special Counsel Charles W. Miller and Addison C. Harris for the government, in order to prevent postponement, dismissed the suit as to Freeman.

"We shall be able to take care of Mr. Freeman in another case," said Mr. Miller to the court. The decree was signed by Judge A. B. Anderson exactly one year from the filing of the suit by the government.

The decree entered Thursday was dictated by the government attorneys and agreed to by the defendants. With the entering of the decree the litigation came to an end with a complete victory for the government.

Seven Drowned In Wreck.

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 10.—An official report from the government authorities on the spot say that all the passengers, mostly French immigrants, of the French steamer Poitou, wrecked off San Jose Ignacio, were wrecked with the exception of 13. Seven of these are known to have been drowned and six are classed as missing.

Sues Railroad for $150,000.

Kansas City, Mo., May 10.—Attorneys for Jose V. Dorsal, Mexican consul in Kansas City, brought 15 suits in the circuit court Thursday against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway for damages aggregating $150,000 because of the death of 15 Mexican laborers killed in the railroad collision near Volland, Kas., Jan. 2, 1907.

William Vail Brokaw Dead.

New York, May 10.—William Vail Brokaw, member of the well-known firm of Brokaw Bros., died suddenly at his home in this city. Heart disease was the cause of his death. Mr. Brokaw was 75 years old and retired from active business three years ago.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

Fish Substation.

Winona.—Winona is to have a government fish substation, and there is every reason to believe that it will be established early in the present summer. The decision to have the substation established here is due largely to the efforts of Congressman James A. Tawney, whose interest in the matter was awakened by the Winona County Fishermen's association.

Recently the federal commissioner sent R. S. Johnson, the superintendent of the fish hatchery at Manchester, Iowa, to Winona to make an investigation, and Mr. Johnson has reported favorably. Congressman Tawney has written to Commissioner Bowers, calling his attention to the favorable report, and to a promise of last winter. Definite action is expected soon.

This will be the only government substation in the state, and will be a great benefit to the state, as the small bass and pike saved and cared for here can be shipped to waters in different parts of the state or elsewhere. Samuel Fullerton of the state game and fish commission has expressed himself as delighted at the prospect of the establishment of the substation here, as he believes this is one of the best headquarters that could be found for work along the upper river, and for distribution.

A Vanished City.

Le Sueur.—Ottawa, Le Sueur county, Minn., is dead, vanished, gone, as a municipal corporation. At a vote of the citizens taken pursuant to law for the purpose of dissolving the corporation about four-fifths of the vote was to the affirmative.

"To be, or not to be," was the interrogation Ottawa put to itself, and when the votes had fallen as silently, chill and cold as the flakes of a belated snow storm that was whitening the earth outside, the deed of self-effacement was complete and Ottawa was no more forever.

Ottawa was one of the oldest towns in Minnesota. It was, in its lifetime, located where the pallid corse now lies, on a beautiful, tree-shaded, rock ribbed site on the banks of the Minnesota river, on the Omaha road, seventy miles south of the Twin Cities and twenty miles north of Mankato.

It had shops, creameries, quarries, a graded public school and similar things, but it was filled to overflowing with wandering and glibbering phantoms of the rudely dispelled dreams of greatness in the past.

Two Men Drowned.

St. Paul.—Fred Hill and Darwin Truax of St. Paul Park, in attempting to drive across the Rock Island bridge near Inver Grove when it was open, were drowned in the Mississippi river. The bridge had started to swing to allow a steamboat to pass down stream. When the bridge tender heard the vehicle approaching he rushed to the open gate, but the two men did not heed him and in the darkness they rushed to their death.

The first intimation that the family of either men received of the accident was the arrival of the horse, without carriage or harness, at the Hill home at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The horse had evidently swam to the shore, landing about half a mile below the bridge.

Mr. Hill was twenty-eight years of age and was a farmer living with his mother, Mrs. Abbie Hill, one mile northeast of St. Paul Park. Mr. Truax was a well digger, forty-five years old, well known in the country south of St. Paul. He was married and leaves five children.

Win Claim Filed in 1800.

St. Peter.—After the lapse of more than a century since the original claim accrued William Cox, Mrs. Irene Buell and Eugene Cox, children of the late E. St. Julien Cox, have received from the estate of their grandfather, a prominent figure in the Revolutionary war, checks representing their share of an allowance made by the United States government on account of their French spoliation claims. The Cox claim rested upon damages inflicted upon French war vessels in reprisal between 1793 and 1800 for alleged violations of treaty pledges made between the United States and France. Cox was the owner of several vessels that cruised against the French, and this is the second allowance the heirs have received.

NEWS NOTES.

Owatonna.—The annual meeting of the Steele county business men and farmers was in progress at the court house in this city, the meeting being conducted by the American Society of Equity. W. C. Webber of Rochester made an address on the conduct of business, and the management of up-to-date farms.

Mankato.—Health Officer Bjelland to-day suspended the order requiring that dogs be muzzled. It is considered that the danger of more cases of rabies developing is past.

Minneapolis.—Mrs. Patrick Gibbons 73 years old, of 503 Main street northeast, was probably fatally burned as the result of a lamp explosion in her home.

St. Peter.—Twenty young men at Gustavus Adolphus college have formed a debating society which is proving one of the most popular student organizations at the institution.

Butter Scoring.

Minneapolis.—The first scoring in the six months educational contest for buttermakers will take place June 1. Circulars announcing the dates of the scorings will be sent out in a day or two by E. K. Slater, dairy and food commissioner.

Several new features will be introduced in the contest this year. Butter will be scored in two classes, butter from whole milk creameries, and butter from hand separator cream. Butter arriving after the date set for the scoring will be given only a complimentary score. The butter this year will be shipped directly to the dairy and food department, where cold storage facilities have been provided.

Butter will be tested for moisture and a report of this will be made. That the buttermakers may know how they stand, a postal card will be mailed immediately after the scoring, and the complete card later. Inspectors J. C. Joslin and H. T. Sondergard will score the butter each month and will score separately and average the scores.

Girl of Three is Heroine.

Le Sueur.—President Carson N. Cosgrove, of the state agricultural society, reports the following remarkable act of Maysie, the three-year-old child of Frank Murphy, who is in charge of one of Mr. Cosgrove's farms. Maysie has a sister only 15 months old. During the temporary absence of the mother from the house the sister fell into a tub of water that was standing on the floor and disappeared beneath the surface. Instantly Maysie ran to the tub, plunged her hands into the water and drew the baby's head to the surface. Although she was unable to do more than this with her feeble strength, she held the child's face out of the water and screamed lustily for help, which soon came.

The Vicksburg Monument.

St. Paul.—Governor Johnson and his staff will leave on May 22 for Vicksburg, Miss., where they will take part in the dedication of Minnesota monuments May 24.

The monuments mark the location of the Third, Fourth and Fifth Minnesota volunteer infantry and the First Minnesota artillery in the seige, and have been erected under the direction of a commission consisting of General L. F. Hubbard, General C. C. Andrews and Thomas P. Wilson. One large shaft commemorates the Minnesota dead on the field, and markers show the ground attained by the different regiments in charges.

For the Battleship.

St. Paul.—Governor Johnson is being besieged by applications from jewelers who want to supply a silver service for the battleship Minnesota. Under the omnibus appropriation bill he is made dispenser of a $10,000 memorial for the battleship. The memorial may be of any form he chooses, but a silver service is the customary offering from a state that is sponsor for a battleship. The governor has taken no steps yet to make a selection.

Runs Down Handcar.

Duluth.—A locomotive running light on the Missabe road near Iron Junction on the Messaba range ran down a handcar on which were three men and one of them, John Johnson, received injuries from which he died in a hospital here. Christ Johnson sustained a crushed leg and he will be a hopeless cripple for life. Gus Gustafson, the other man, was not severely hurt. The men on the handcar inadvertantly put their vehicle on the wrong track.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul.—Railroads are figuring on new scheme to take place of mileage books, which are impracticable under new law.

Minneapolis.—The University of Minnesota baseball team lost the last game of the series with Winnipeg, Northern league team, the salaried men winning by a score of 6 to 1.

Winona.—Charles Ruppert, a retired farmer, formerly residing in the Waumandee valley in Wisconsin, but who makes his home in Winona and is reputed to be worth $100,000, was swindled out of $2,640 here on the old three-card monte game. He won all right, but the other fellows got the money.

Mankato.—State Auditor Iverson has made a change in the superintendent of the Minneopa State Park, naming W. R. Williams to succeed J. B. Hodge, who has held the position since the park was established. Mr. Williams has resided in the county for fifty years, and owns a farm adjoining the park. His selection receives general approval.

St. Paul.—West St. Paul adopted a home rule charter and elected city officers. The charter was adopted with 10 votes to spare, the total vote cast being 367, of which 263 were in favor of the adoption of the charter. The affirmative vote at the election is necessary for the adoption of the charter.

St. Paul.—Northern Pacific crop report shows that seeding is a couple of weeks late.

Minneapolis. Six months' educational contest for buttermakers will begin June 1.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXXI.—Continued.

When Follett came riding back that evening he saw that Prudence had been troubled. The candle-light showed something in her dark eyes and in the whitened corners of her mouth. He was moved to take her in his arms and soothe her as he had seen mothers do with some sorry little children. But instead of this he questioned her father sharply when their cornhusk mattresses had been put before either side of the fireplace for the night. The little man told him frankly the cause of her grief. There was something compelling in the other's way of asking questions. When the thing had been made plain, Follett looked at him indignantly.

"Do you mean to say that you let her go on thinking that about herself?"

"I told her that her father and mother had been rightly married."

"Did she think you were fooling her in some way?"

"I can't be sure—"

"She must have, or she wouldn't be so down in the mouth now. Why didn't you tell her the truth?"

"If only—if only she could go on thinking I am her father—only a little while—"

Follett spoke with the fling of a sudden resolution in his voice.

"Now, I'll tell you one thing, Mr. Man[illegible], something has got to be done by some one. I can't do it because I'm under a promise, and so I reckon you ought to!"

"In a little time! Oh, if you only knew how the knives cut me on every side and the fires burn all through me!"

"And think of the knives cutting the girl, making her believe she has to be ashamed of her mother. You go to sleep now, and try to lie quiet; there's not anything here to hurt you. But I tell you one thing—you've got to toe the mark."

CHAPTER XXXII.

[illegible] on Service in Box Canyon Is Suspended.

He waited with a new eagerness next day for their walk to the canyon. But Prudence, looking at him with eyes that sorrow was clouding, said that she could not go. He felt a sharp new resentment against the man who was letting her suffer rather than betray himself, and he again resolved that this man must be made to "toe the mark" to "take his needles," and that, meantime, the deceived girl must be effectually reassured. Something must be said to take away the hurt that was tugging at the corners of her smile to draw them down. To this end he pleaded with her not to deprive him of the day's lesson, especially as the time was now at hand when he must leave. And so ably did he word his appeal to her sense of duty that at last she consented to go.

Once in the canyon, however, where the pines had stored away the cool green of the night against the day's heat, she was glad she had come. Far better than being alone with that strange new hurt, was it to have beside her this friendly young man, who somehow made her feel as if it were right and safe to lean upon him, despite his unregenerate condition; and presently there, in the zeal of saving his soul, she was almost happy again.

Yet he seemed to-day to be impatient under the teaching, and more than once she felt that he was on the point of interrupting the lesson to some end of his own.

He seemed insufficiently impressed even with the knowledge of astronomy displayed by the prophets of the Book of Mormon, hearing, without a quiver of interest, that when at Joshua's command the sun seemed to stand still upon Gibeon and the moon in the valley of Ajalon, the real facts were that the earth merely paused in its revolutions upon its own axis and about the sun. Without a question he thus heard Ptolemy refuted and the discoveries of Copernicus anticipated [illegible] years before that investigator was born. He was indeed deplorably inattentive. She suspected, from the quick glances she gave him, that he had no understanding at all of what she read. Yet in this she did him injustice, for now she came to the passage: "They all did swear unto him that whoso should vary from the assistance which Akish desired should lose his head; and whoso should divulge whatsoever thing Akish should make known unto them should lose his life." This time he spoke up.

"There it is again—they don't mind lopping off heads. They were sure [illegible] men—don't you think so?"

As he went on talking she laid the book down and leaned back against the trunk of the big pine under which they sat. He seemed to be saying something that he had been revolving in his mind while she read.

"I'd hate to have you think you have been wasting your time on me this summer, but I'm afraid I'm just too downright unsanctified."

"Oh, don't say that!" she cried.

"I couldn't even join your church—" Her face became full of alarm.

"—only for just one thing;—I don't care very much for this having so many wives."

She was relieved at once. "If that's all—I don't approve of it myself. You wouldn't have to."

"Oh, that's what you say now—" he spoke with an air of shrewdness and suspicion—"but when I got in you'd throw up my duty to me constant about building up the kingdom. Oh, I know how it's done! I've heard your preachers talk enough."

"But it isn't necessary. I wouldn't—I don't think it would be at all nice of you."

He looked at her with warm sympathy. "You poor ignorant girl! Not to know your own religion! I read in that book there about this marrying business only the other day. Just hand me that one."

She handed him the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants," from which she had occasionally taught him the Lord's word, as revealed to Joseph Smith.

He Took Her Small Brown Hand In His.

The revelation on celestial marriage had never been among her selections. He turned to it now.

"Here, right in the very first of it—" and she heard, with a sinking heart—"'Therefore prepare thyself to receive and obey the instructions which I am about to give unto you; for all those who have this law revealed unto them must obey the same; for behold! I reveal unto you a new and everlasting covenant: and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned, for no one can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory.'

"There, now!"

"I never read it," she faltered.

"And don't you know they preach in the tabernacle that anybody who rejects polygamy will be damned?"

"My father never preached that."

"Well, he knows it—ask him."

It was proving to be a hard day for her.

"Of course," he continued, "a new member coming into the church might think at first he could get along without so many wives. He might say: 'Well, now, I draw a line in this marrying business. I'll never take more than two or three wives, or maybe four.' He might even be so taken up with one lady that he'd say: 'I won't even marry a second wife—not for some time yet, that is—not for two or three years, till she begins to get kind of houseworn.' But then after he's taken his second, the others would come easy. Say he marries, first time, a tall, slim, dark girl,"—he looked at her musingly, while she gazed intently into the stream in front of them.

"—and then say he meets a little chit of a thing, kind of heavy-set like, with this light yellow hair and pretty light blue eyes, that he saw one Sunday at church—"

Her dark face was flushed now in pained wonder.

"—why then it's so easy to keep on and marry others, with the preachers all preaching it from the pulpit."

"But you wouldn't have to."

"No, you wouldn't have to marry anyone after the second—after this little blonde—but you'd have to marry her because it says here that you 'shall abide the law or ye shall be damned, saith the Lord God.'"

He pulled himself along the ground closer to her, and went on again in what seemed to be an extremity of doubt:

"Now, I don't want to be lost, and yet I don't want to have a whole lot of wives like Brigham or that old coot we see so often on the road. So what am I going to do? I might think I'd get along with three or four, but you never can tell what religion will do to a man when he really gets it."

He reached for her small brown hand that still held the Book of Mormon open on her lap, and took it in both his own. He went on, appealingly:

"Now, you try to tell me right—like as if I was your own brother—tell me as a sister. Try to put yourself in the place of the girl I'd marry first—no, don't; it seems more like your sister if I hold it this way—and try to think how she'd feel when I brought home my second. Would that be doing square by her? Wouldn't it sort of get her on the bark? But if I join your church and don't do that, I might as well be one of those low-down Free-will Baptists or Episcopals. Come, now, tell me true, letting on that you're my sister."

She had not looked at him since he began, nor did she now.

"Oh, I don't know—I don't know—it's all so mixed! I thought you could be saved without that."

"There is the word of God against me."

"I wouldn't want you to marry that way—if I were your sister."

"That's right now, try to feel like a sister. You wouldn't want me to have as many wives as those old codgers down there below, would you?"

"No—I'm sure you shouldn't have but one. Oh, you couldn't marry more than one, could you?" She turned her eyes for the first time upon him, and he saw that some inward warmth seemed to be melting them.

"Well, I'd hate to disappoint you if you were my sister, but there's the word of the Lord—"

"Oh, but could you anyway, even if you didn't have a sister, and there was no one but her to think of?"

He appeared to debate with himself cautiously.

"Well, now, I must say your teaching has taken a powerful hold on me this summer—" he reached under her arm and caught her other hand. "You've been like a sister to me, and made me think about these things pretty deep and serious. I don't know if I could get what you've taught me out of my mind or not."

"But how could you ever marry another wife?"

"Well, a man don't like to think he's going to the bad place when he dies, all on account of not marrying a few more times. It sort of takes the ambition out of him."

"Oh, it couldn't be right!"

"Well, now, I'll do as you say. Do I forget all these things you've been teaching me, and settle down with one wife—or do I come into the Kingdom and lash the cinches of my glory good and plenty by marrying whenever I get time to build a new end on the house, like old man Wright does?"

She was silent.

"Like a sister would tell a brother," he urged, with a tighter pressure of her two hands. But this seemed to recall another trouble to her mind.

"I—I'm not fit to be your sister—don't talk of it—you don't know—" Her voice broke, and he had to release her hand. Whereupon he put his own back up against the pine tree, reached his arm about her, and had her head upon his shoulder.

"There, there now!"

"But you don't know."

"Well, I do know—so just you straighten out that face. I do know, I tell you. Now, don't cry and I'll fix it all right, I promise you."

"But you don't even know what my trouble is."

"I do—it's about your father and mother—when they were married."

"How did you know?"

"I can't tell you now, but I will soon. Look here, you can believe what I tell you, can't you?"

"Yes, I can do that."

"Well, then, you listen. Your father and mother were married in the right way, and there wasn't a single bit of crookedness about it. I wouldn't tell you if I didn't know and couldn't prove it to you in a little while. Say, there's one of our wagon trains coming along here toward Salt Lake next Monday. It's coming out of its way on purpose to pick me up. I'll promise to have it proved to you by that time. Now, is that fair? Can you believe me?"

She looked up at him, her face bright again.

"Oh, I do believe you! You don't know how glad you make me. It was an awful thing—oh, you are a dear—" and full upon his lips she kissed the astounded young man, holding him fast with an arm about his neck. "You've made me all over new—I was feeling so wretched—and, of course, I can't see how you know anything about it, but I know you are telling the truth." Again she kissed him with the utmost cordiality. Then she stood up to arrange her hair, her face full of the joy of this assurance. The young man saw that she had forgotten both him and his religious perplexities, and he did not wish her to be entirely divested of concern for him at this moment.

"But how about me? Here I am, lost if I do and lost if I don't. You better sit down here again and see if there isn't some way I can get that crown of glory."

She sat down by him, instantly sobered from her own joy, and calmly gave him a hand to hold.

"Well, I'll tell you," she said, frankly. "You wait awhile. Don't do anything right away. I'll have to ask father." And then as he reached over to pick up the Book of Mormon—"No, let's not read any more to-day. Let's sit a little while and only think about things." She was so free from embarrassment that he began to doubt if he had been so very deeply clever, after all, in suggesting the relationship between them. But after she had mused awhile, she seemed to perceive for the first time that he was very earnestly holding both of her hands. She blushed, and suddenly withdrew them. Whereat he was more pleased than when she had passively let them lie. He approached the matter of salvation for himself once more.

"Of course, I can wait awhile for you to find out the rights of this thing, but I'm afraid I can't be baptized even if you tell me to be—even if you want me to obey the Lord and marry some pretty little light-complected, yellow-haired thing afterwards—after I'd married my first wife. Fact is, I don't believe I could. Probably I'd care so much for the first one that I'd have blinders on for all the other women in the world. She'd have me tied down with the red ribbon in her hair—" he touched the red ribbon in her own by way of illustration—"just like I can tie the biggest steer you ever saw with that little silk rug of mine—hold him, two hind legs and one fore, so he can't budge an inch. I'd just like to see some little, short, kind of plump, pretty yellow-haired thing come between us."

For an instant she looked such warm, almost indignant approval that he believed she was about to express an opinion of her own in the matter, but she stayed silent, looking away instead with a little movement of having swallowed something.

"And you, too, if you were my sister, do you think I'd want you married to a man who'd begin to look around for some one else as soon as he got you? No, sir—you deserve some decent young fellow who'd love you all to pieces day in and day out, and never so much as look at this little yellow-haired girl—even if she was almost as pretty as you."

But she was not to be led into rendering any hasty decision which might affect his eternal salvation. Moreover, she was embarrassed and disturbed.

"We must go," she said, rising before he could help her. When they had picked their way down to the mouth of the canyon, he walking behind her, she turned back and said: "Of course you could marry that little yellow-haired girl with the blue eyes first, the one you're thinking so much about—the little short, fat thing with a doll-baby face—"

But he only answered: "Oh, well, if you get me into your church it wouldn't make a bit of difference whether I took her first or second."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

No More Arguments for Him.

It was the blissful half-hour after dinner and a group of workmen were beguiling the time with an argument on some question or other.

An interesting deadlock had been reached when one of the men on the losing side turned to a mate, who had remained silent during the whole of the debate.

"'Ere, Bill," he said, 'you're pretty good at a argyment. Wot's your opinion?"

"I ain't a-goin' to say," said Bill. "I threshed the matter out afore with Dick Grey."

"Ah!" said the other, artfully, hoping to entice him into the fray, "and what did you arrive at?"

"Well, e-eventually," said Bill, "Dick 'e arrived at the orspital an' I arrived at the perlice station."—Stray Stories.

OLD WALL ROUND CITY

CAMPECHE, MEXICO, AS ROMANTIC AS ANCIENT SPAIN.

High Walls of the Once Important Seacoast Town of Yucatan Are as Strong To-day as When Finished in 1769.

Mexico City.—In stories of Unknown Mexico, which sweep in and out of one's view and bearing, there is here and there a touch that makes its lasting impression. Ancient Indians, long dead civilizations, and ruined abbeys all have their own peculiar interest, general in a way, but in the final analysis of chief interest to the archaeologist. But there are other tales of old Mexico which are calculated to thrill or at least interest every reader. Such a story would be that of a walled city, still such a city as it was when the walls were built, and now tinged with the romance of the old days which has been softened by imagination and the forgetting of unpleasant things. Here in Mexico is located at least one such city, and, probably without doubt, the possessor of the only ancient walls which still retain their shape, are still unbroken, and still serve in some measure as a part of the city's life. Campeche, the ancient capital of the penitentiary colony of Yucatan is to-day surrounded by the same walls which the Spanish garrisons of the vice-regal days erected in the substantial fashion of the past as a protection against marauding Indians and organized bands of Spanish and Mexican convicts.

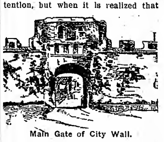
Campeche is one of the most interesting of hot country capitals. Once the great outlet of the rich peninsula of Yucatan, the city is now but little more than a quiet hot-country town.

Campeche is one of the oldest capitals of Mexico. Although the chief port of the criminal colony of Yucatan, the histories tell also of its exports of the riches of the tropics to the great ports of Europe. It was most prominent in the eyes of seamen as the last sight of Mexico, often of America, in the long trip across the Atlantic. As such, it was a port which was watched closely by the pirates who infested the sea in those days when the broad American waters were known as the "Spanish Main." To it came the rich Spanish galleons from Vera Cruz and Coatzacoalcos, and from it, with enriched cargoes, they sailed for Cuba and for Spain. It was a great city in those days, when the ships could come close into its shallow but well protected harbor, and as such it was well guarded and garrisoned.

The work on the wall was begun in 1692, and an inscription over the principal gate states that it was completed in 1769, having been 77 years in building. In form and walls spread over an irregular seven-sided polygon, with bastions at each of the corners, and massive octagonal forts at the water's edge. The walls are eight meters, or 26 feet high, and are four meters or 12½ feet thick, all of solid masonry, apparently as strong to-day as when they were built, with the exception of the four or five places where the walls have been thrown down to make way for roads communicating with the outside.

A moat, now almost obliterated, once surrounded the walls, and was an added protection from surprise. It is worthy of note that in the accounts presented to Carlos IV in 1769, the cost of the fortifications of Campeche are placed at $225,024.

As the only walled city in Mexico, Campeche demands a very special attention, but when it is realized that those walls are perfect, that their gray, softening grimness is real and not a stage effect, and that old Spain itself has no more romantic pictures than those to be found about those very walls, one feels that the sight is worth the long trip, and even worth the walks in the sun (though it is easy to let the sun convince one otherwise). The frowning bastions of the corners, where once protruded the old iron cannons which are now stuck muzzle-down in the corners of the gates, the forward walls of the main gate, where riflemen could pick off the parties of attacking Indians or convicts, and the rare old main gate itself, with its little lookout, the balcony windows from which the challenges once came, are all touches which one does not realize can be encountered anywhere but in Europe. Yet here in Campeche they stand, as romantic and silent and natural as though they had been built in the days of El Cid and not in the more prosaic epoch of Charles the Fourth, when walls were a questionable protection, and chivalry was of the type of Don Quixote.



Main Gate of City Wall.

ARMY VETERAN RETIRED.

Gen. Wade Has Served Country for Nearly 50 Years.

Washington.—Maj. Gen. James F. Wade was retired from active service a few days ago, having reached the age limit, 64 years. Forty-six years of this time he has devoted to the service of his country.

At the opening of the civil war he enlisted in the Twenty-ninth regiment, which was organized in this part of the state. Shortly afterward he was made first lieutenant in the Sixth United States cavalry. He was in active service through the entire war—serving for some time on Gen. Sheridan's staff, and also with Gen. Pleasonton. Toward the close of the war he was in command of the Fifth volunteer colored cavalry. He received many brevets for gallantry and was mustered out of the volunteer service April 15, 1866. He did not join his regiment, the Sixth United States cavalry, but took a leave, and while spending the summer in Jefferson, was offered a majority in the Ninth United States colored cavalry. He was with that regiment 13 years, serving most of the time in Texas and New Mexico.

GEN. JAMES F. WADE.
(Army Officer Recently Placed on the Retired List.)

In 1879 he was promoted to Lieut. Col. of the Eighteenth cavalry, and served with that regiment in Texas and Arizona, until 1887, when he was promoted to colonel of the Fifth cavalry, with service in the Indian Territory and Texas, until 1897, when he was made a brigadier general and placed in command of the department of Dakota, with headquarters at St. Paul, Minn. At the opening of the Spanish war he was made major general of volunteers and sent south to assist in the organization of troops, hoping and expecting that he would be sent to Cuba.

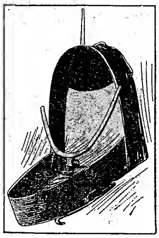
At the end of the war, he was mustered out of the volunteer service and returned to St. Paul. In 1901 he was ordered to the Philippines and served there nearly four years. During that time he was appointed major general in the regular army and was in command of the division of the Philippines for more than a year. Upon his return to the United States he was placed in command of the division of the Atlantic, headquarters on Governors Island, N. Y., for the remainder of his term of active service.

CRADLE ROCKED BY THE WIND.

The Gilyak Baby Is Put to Sleep in Odd Contrivance.

New York.—"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" has no significance among the Gilyaks, who live in the northern part of the Island of Saghalin. Their cradles are not rocked by hand. They are suspended instead from the swinging branches of trees outside in fine weather, just as they were in the days of Peter the Great. It is said that Russia's famous ruler was when a child rocked to sleep in a cradle of this kind, as shown in the accompanying picture.

The cradle of the Gilyak baby is made from pieces of bark bent to the required shape and fastened together by thongs of deerskin. There are a hood and two rings from which to suspend the cradle, but there are no rockers or springs.



A Wind Cradle.

On fine days the Gilyak mother suspends the cradle from the branch of a slender tree rocked by the wind and puts her baby to sleep there without having to do any cradle-rocking herself. In disagreeable weather it is different. The cradle is suspended from the rafters indoors.

The Murray Cure

To be Incorporated and Enlarged by Mr. Murray's Family.

The announcement of the sudden death of Edwin Murray, founder of the Murray Cure at Minneapolis, Fargo and Seattle, was a shock to many thousands of people who knew of the good work of the Murray Cure

Mr. Murray's family, the widow two grown sons and a daughter, will continue to conduct the Institute at Minneapolis. One of the sons has begun the study of medicine to fit himself as a drink cure specialist. In the meantime the house physicians and corps of attendants and employes will remain the same.

For over seven years the Murray Cure has demonstrated that the drink habit can be cured. If you have a friend that needs the Murray treatment, send him at once to the Murray Cure Institute. If the drink habit has a hold on you that you cannot break without help, remember we can help you.

Call or write, Murray Cure Institute 1319 Nicollet Ave, Minneapolis, or 321 So. 13th St., Fargo, N. D.

When in the City stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

The House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

DR. N. M. WATSON

Physician and Surgeon

Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON

Physician and Surgeon

Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.

DENTIST

Offices in Lallissoniere Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.

At St. Hilaire every Wednesday,

Thomas Germo, Co. Atty. Fred L. Farley

GERMO & FARLEY

Attorneys at-Law

Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

[illegible] BLOOD & CO'S CARRIAGE [illegible] WAGON PAINTS

[illegible] COAT OF BLOOD'S CARRIAGE PAINT WILL PAINT YOUR BUGGY, [illegible] SLEIGH, PORCH CHAIRS, [illegible] RENEW THE [illegible] FARM WAGONS & [illegible] WAGON PAINT.

([illegible] DEALERS)

[illegible] PAUL, MINN.

TEXAS LANDS We own 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE; and VAN HORNE VALLEY, Texas, one of the most fertile valleys in the state. The Southern Pacific Railroad passes through the Van Horne Valley lands and the proposed line of the Santa Fe will run directly through our Panhandle tract. These lands are exceptionally well located for retail purposes. They were carefully selected, and, having purchased them some time ago, we can quote you prices and terms that are right. LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control of 10,000 acres of this land, which you can do by making a small payment down, and realize a profit of $10,000. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 601-8 Pioneer Press Bldg, St. Paul, Minn,

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water caves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open wall. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (l'escado cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

The Italian Baby.

No infant receives a warmer welcome to the world or is more happily born than the Italian baby. No infant is the object of more caresses or is more fondly admired. Indeed, no matter how poor the mother and father may be, no matter how large the family, they have very merry times when another son or daughter comes to them. The neighbors are invited in, a feast is prepared, a gallon or two of cheap wine is procured, and the merriment sometimes lasts several days. The Italian considers there are only three great events in the life of man—namely, his birth, marriage and death. These three events never pass without a gorgeous and elaborate celebration. In this simple way they strive to carry out the tender life lesson: "When you were born you wept while those around you smiled. So live that when you die you alone may smile and those around you weep." And so they laugh and drink wine and sing, for they believe it will have an effect upon the life of the quivering form soon to take its place among them.—London Standard.

Machinery of Memory.

The machinery of memory was thus interestingly described by an authority on the brain: "The act of remembering something," he said, "involves a distinct change in the brain substance. The thing to be remembered is recorded by a little nerve cell. The first time the cell does its work an impression is made upon it. But that impression is apt to wear off unless the action of the cell is repeated, and the oftener this is the case the more fixed becomes the impression, or 'cell memory,' as it is called. Suppose that the work of this particular cell is to enable you to recognize a certain smell. If the impression is made but once, the cell may fail to retain it, but if it is repeated several times a lasting impression will be made, and you will recognize the particular odor when you meet with it again."

Southern Wit.

In the early days of the civil war, says Mrs. D. G. Wright in "A Southern Girl In '61," many northern senators were especially violent in their denunciations of the seceding states, occasionally much to the amusement of their listeners.

On one occasion a western senator ended a speech by declaring that were certain threatened events to occur he would "leave this country and join some other nation. Even the Comanches he would prefer to this government in such a case."

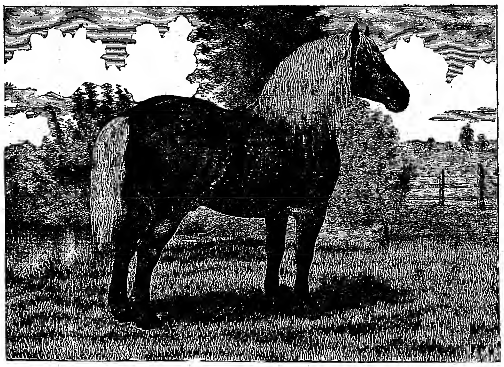
Senator Wigfall of Texas rose in answer and stated in a tone of grave remonstrance that he trusted the senator would consider well before he took such a step, "for the Comanches had already suffered too much from contact with the whites."

The Celebrated Percheron Stallion

BRABO

Age 6 Years--Weight 1850

Will stand for the season of 1907 at L. C. Cadieux's farm in Terrebonne, adjoining mill.



CERTIFICATE OF PEDIGREE:

This is to certify, that the Percheron Stallion BRABO, is registered in the Percheron Stud Book of America, and that his record number is 29,137. Color: dark steel gray. Pedigree: Foaled May 30, 1901; bred and owned by Felier and Landes of Cissna Park, Illinois; got by Wenona Bright Light 22443, he by Wenona Black Watch 22442, he by Merveillo 10272, he by Extrador 4525, he by Favora 1542 (765), he by French Monarch 205 (734), he by Ilderim (5301), he by Valentin (5301), he by Vieux-Chaslin (713), he by Coco (712), he by Mignon (715), he by Jean-LeBlanc. Dam. Lacenta III 21336. Second Dam Madame Lucenta 3256.

TERMS--$13 for live colt. $5 for single service. If two mares are bred service will be $11 for the second colt.

For further particulars or other information call on or address

TERREBONNE STALLION CORPORAT'N

L. C. CADIEUX, Manager TERREBONNE, MINNESOTA. JOS. LAURENT, Secretary

BULLETIN

Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

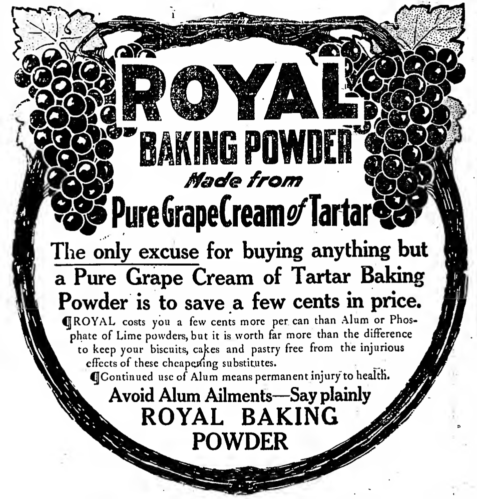
MAIN STREET, - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Let The Gazette Do Your Printing.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 23, 1907 No 34



ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Made from
Pure Grape Cream of Tartar

The only excuse for buying anything but a Pure Grape Cream of Tartar Baking Powder is to save a few cents in price.

¶ROYAL costs you a few cents more per can than Alum or Phosphate of Lime powders, but it is worth far more than the difference to keep your biscuits, cakes and pastry free from the injurious effects of these cheapening substitutes.

¶Continued use of Alum means permanent injury to health.

Avoid Alum Ailments—Say plainly
ROYAL BAKING POWDER

END OF SCHOOL DAYS

Class of '07 in Active Preparation For Debut into the Real World

At the Metropolitan opera house, on Monday evening, June 3, will occur the annual commencement exercises of the Red Lake Falls high school, when six bright students, five maidens and one boy, will receive the sheep-skins they have so deligently toiled for.

The class of '07 has been an active one since their entry into high school work four years ago, and at the many stepping stones encountered as they have progressed toward the goal their conduct has been brilliant and decidedly pleasing to their friends.

The class week exercises will begin with the baccalaureate sermon at St. Joseph's church on the evening of Sunday, June 2, at 7:30, when the Rev. Father Fayolle will talk to the members of the class and the public on the importance of the life before them.

Monday evening, June 3, the commencement exercises will be held at the opera house when the class will appear in final program a fitting close to their school duties.

The date of the Junior banquet is Wednesday evening, June 5. The alumni will likely entertain the class of '07 during the week also.

The program for commencement night will be as follows:

(a) March......"Floating Along"
.........................Buffington
(b) Flower Song, "Tulips and and Pansies"......C. W. Bennet
Orchestra
Invocation.........................
Vocal Solo...............A. Strelezki
"Happy Days"
Miss Pauline Nieland
Salutatory....................Oration
"Lest We Forget"
Alice L. Ericson
Oration ..."Pursuit of Happiness"
Paul T. Brunelle
Saxaphone Solo..........Maritana
"Grand Fantasia"
Mr. Leland Healy
Oration................"Preparation"
Viola A. Longtin
Class History and Will, "By the Fireside"
Edna C. Swanson
Vocal Duet....................Smith
"O! That We Two are Maying"
Mesdames Marshall and Knox
Class Prophecy................Poem
Ina M. Lianihan
Oration..................Validietory
"The Last Leaf"
Lucy B. Hunt
Cornet Solo ....John Hartmann
"Grand Fantasia, Pretty Jane"
Mr. Clement Brunelle
Presentation of Diplomas......
......Prof. E. W. Chumberlain
Vocal Solo................Selected
Mrs. Dr. Hendricks
Benediction....................
Overture,.................Solomon
"Reminiscences of the South"
Orchestra

To Uphold Memorial Day.

A act prohibiting the desecration of Memorial Day was passed at the recent session of the legislature and it shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. It reads as follows: "That the desecration of 'Memorial Day,' the 30th day of May of each year, by the playing of games of ball, cricket, football, and other like games, or by horse racing, bicycle racing, automobile racing, or any other sports calculated to attract attention to such games or sports and away from the memorial character of said day, within one-half mile of the place where memorial services are in progress, is hereby prohibited and made unlawful during the hours from 10 o'clock in the forenoon to 3 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, and all saloons and other places where intoxicating liquors are sold, shall be closed on said day between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon in all cities, villages and towns where memorial exercises are held."

THE OPEN AIR CONCERT

First Outdoor Band Concert of the Season Will Be Given Next Tuesday Evening.

The first open air band concert of the season will be given ne[illegible] Tuesday evening at the city [illegible] square and one of the largest [illegible] of the year will be out to listen to the sweet strains of the finest band in the northwest. The program is excellent throughout and there will not be a dry number in the entire list of selections. These popular concerts always draw big crowds of the home people who know what they are, and they are an excellent advertisement for the city with the people who chance to be here.

Following is the program, pin it in your hat and come out next Tuesday evening:

March........................Bagley
"National Emblem"
Selection...... ....Recker
"Popular Jingles"
Intermezzo..............Buffington
"Floating Along"
March......... ....Ramsdell
"The Adventurer"
Selection......................Verdi
"La Traviata"
Waltz....:...................Rosas
"Impassioned Dreams"
March....................Clement
"The Annihilator"
L. P. Bertbon, Director.

Beautify Your Premises

One can derive more comfort and satisfaction from living in a home that is neat, clean and orderly within and without than he can from an existence in one that is the very opposite. At this time of the year it is in order to "clean up." The housewife attends to so much of it as concerns the interior of the building wherein the family dwell, and it is not for mere man to attempt to instruct her in her duties in the premises. Besides, the matters over which she exercises exclusive jurisdiction are peculiarly private in their nature, with which the public have no concern. On the other hand, the community as a whole is interested in the outward appearance of business and dwelling houses, and the condition and appearance of yards, streets and alleys. Unsightly premises are offensive to every one who loves the beautiful, and decaying refuse in addition to being an eyesore is positively dangerous to public health. Householders, however, should not be content with merely removing from their premises that which is ugly and repulsive, but should also take steps to enhance their beauty, and no better way can be found of doing so than by the cultivation of trees, shrubs and flowers. It is an easy method, too, for nature does most of the work and man is only required to lend a little of his assistance from time to time in improving the conditions under which nature is to do her part.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

SUICIDE AT THIEF RIVER

J. H. Wer[illegible]lein Commits Suicide by H[illegible]ing Last Friday at Thief River.

[illegible]. H. Werstlein, a cattle buyer [illegible]nd a former butcher, of Thief River Falls, committed suicide last Friday afternoon by hanging himself.

Mr. Werstlein's mind had been slightly unbalanced on several different occasions for the past four years and about a month ago was again taken down with the weakness. When in that condition he was in the habit of remaining in the house fearing that someone was coming to take him away. Last Friday afternoon at four o'clock he left the house and went to the barn supposedly to care for and feed the stock. He remained there and the members of the family not suspecting anything unusual let him remain, until the supper hour when they called him and receiving no response went to the barn and not seeing him instituted a search on the first floor but to no avail and then ascended to the hay loft where he was discovered hanging to a cross beam in the cupola.

The fact is evident that he went to the barn with the intent purpose of committing suicide. He had taken a heavy plank and stretched it across in under the eaves of the roof and then stood on a barrel and after placing the rope around his neck, kicked the barrel out from in under him. Money troubles and reverses are assigned as the motive for his rash deed. He was a man of about 50 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

Coroner Belair was called and went up to Thief River Saturday morning. An inquest was deemed unnessary.

TIMOTHY REGAN DEAD.

Father of Ed. Rogan, of This City, Died at Crookston Saturday.

Timothy Regan who came to Crookston in 1884, died at his home on Jackson avenue, Jerome's addition on Saturday afternoon at 3:30. Mr. Regan had been a sufferer from asthma for the past three years and since he has taken sick with the disease he has been unable to work. Previous to that time and during all his residence in Crookston with the exception of the past three years he has been an employee of the Great Northern railroad.

He wus born in Tipperary county, Ireland and was 63 years of age. Forty years ago he was married to Margaret English, also of Tipperary county, and they had six children, four of whom are living. They are John Regan who lives in Crookston, Ed Regan of this city, Mrs. Tony La Briere of Edmore, N. D., and Mrs. Frank Aadrist of Crookston. Two sons preceded him to the great beyond. They were Michael who died in Crookston eleven years ago and Daniel who died a year ago last December. His wife survives him.

CROP OUTLOOK IS FINE

S. M. Sivertson, of This City, Returned From Investigation Trip Through North Dakota.

At this time of the year and this year especially, every person in the northwest is vitally interested in the crop outlook for the present year, and while any forecasts or prophecies for the future are based on surmise to a certain extent, yet the season is far enough advanced at the present time to warrant the forming of opinions by those who keep in touch with conditions and are familiar with conditions as they have existed in the past. These opinions, coming from one who is in the grain business and who has been in that business for years should carry considerable weight. S. M. Sivertson of this city returned last Saturday from an extended trip through the state of North Dakota, where he has been making careful investigation and diligent inquiry as to the crop conditions as they exist in that state at the present time. In talking to a Gazette representative Mr. Sivertson said: "I have visited the whole state of North Dakota and I believe that the stories which have been sent out from that state to the effect that there is a prospect of only half a crop there are entirely without foundation. Seeding is practically over in every section of the state with the one exception of a little corner in the northeast part taking in very little more than Pembina county. There will be a short crop in that county because of backward and unfavorable weather but fifteen per cent of a falling off in the crop for this year will be absolutely the outside figure, judging, of course from present conditions. As for the Minnesota valley, Mr. Sivertson believes that this will be one of the best crop years in its history.

Celebration at Brooks

The village of Brooks will observe St. John's Day, June 24, in a right royal manner. Arrangements are already under way for one of the grandest times ever held in the village. Horse races, foot races, sack races, base ball games, etc., are planned and an effort will be made to get the Red Lake Falls band to come out for the day. It is a foregone conclusion that anyone attending the celebration at Brooks the 24th of June, will be well repaid for his time and expense in the amusements.

Commissioners to Meet

The board of county commissioners will meet in special session next Monday afternoon. Besides the allowing of several bills, they will act on six school petitions, four of which are asking to be set off and two to be organized. The petitions for new districts come from out on the reservation. They will probably be in session about a day.

ON CHARGE OF LARCENY

John Meising, of Thief River Falls, Arrested at Crookston Tuesday Night.

County Attorney Germo went to Thief River Falls yesterday to try one Johnnie Meising, on a charge of grand larceny. A hearing was held and Meising was allowed time to employ counsel, the case to be heard today, at Thief River. The story of the case is as follows:

Meising was arrested Tuesday night as he stepped from the Greenbush train at Crookston, by Captain Vonderheck of the Crookston police force. Late Tuesday afternoon the police force of Thief River Falls wired the Crookston police to be on the lookout for Meising, as he was wanted at the upper Falls on a charge of grand larceny. They wired in a good description of the man and the officer had no trouble in identifying him as he stepped from the train. He put up a good bluff of injured innocence but the captain was not to be bluffed and he spent the night in the Crookston jail. He was searched at the station and about $58 was found on his person. $30 of this had been stuffed down in the toes of his shoes and some of it had been hidden in the lining of his trousers. The police are sure that this is all the man had on his person and they believe that he had an accomplice with whom he divvied up. He is charged with having stolen $125 from one Minnie Smith, a proprietor of a house of ill fame at Thief River Falls. She had the money in a bureau drawer and found the drawer rifled. Meising is a piano player and he has been frequenting saloon and low houses at Thief River Falls for some time. When put in the sweat box, Wednesday morning at the Crookston police station he declared that he had found the money in an outhouse, but this is thought to be a manufactured story. He was taken back to Thief River yesterday morning.

Base Ball Sunday

Manager Padden of the ball team has arranged for a ball game to be played on the home grounds with the Thief River Indians next Sunday afternoon. This is the first game of the season and our boys expect to start the season right. The new suits arrived this morning from Chicago.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

A Business Luxury

We Make Farm Loans

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity; and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Creglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. . MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

Abraham Ruef, former political boss of San Francisco, astounded that city by pleading guilty to extortion. He will be sent to prison. In a remarkable statement he bared his soul, telling of the political ring he created and how, unwillingly, he says, it drew him into a maze of corruption.

The president plans criminal action against E. H. Harriman for his railway deals based on finding of special investigators.

Clashes between counsel during examination of jurors in Haywood trial at Boise forced the court to interfere and presages a bitter contest.

Storms and frost in various localities caused damage, snowfall in the northwest establishing a new record.

Judge Wood at St. Louis decided H. Clay Pierce must be delivered to a Texas sheriff, but he appealed and was held in $10,000 bonds.

The Illinois senate passed a resolution to adjourn to October 15 without taking action on the deep waterway bill and it becomes known that the interests of a big Joliet power company blocked legislation.

Secretary Wilson says that Chicago packers are heartily cooperating in enforcing the pure food law and that their plants are models of sanitary conditions.

Twenty-one persons are placed in the roll of heroes by the Carnegie hero fund commission of Pittsburg, which awards medals to those who risked their lives for others, or to relatives of those who died in performing heroic deeds.

Bad river, south of Ashland, Wis., has overflowed its banks and is the highest in years. The village of Odanah is flooded and one-third of the inhabitants have been forced from their homes.

The village of Finch, Ont., has been almost wiped out by fire. On Monday night there was a $50,000 blaze, which started up again Tuesday night, causing additional damage of $80,000.

Fire at McConn, N. D., destroyed the St. Anthony and Dakota elevator, the Imperial elevator, the Great Northern depot, a house and barn and a box car. Loss $30,000.

The sheriff destroyed $5,000 worth of liquor in the street at Independence, Kan. The liquor was seized some time ago from saloons in the county. The destruction was witnessed by an immense crowd of people.

Oliver Dalrymple says the wheat acreage of North Dakota is greatly reduced owing to the backward season. The total crop of the country will be 100,000,000 bushels short, he says.

Later returns from the Austrian elections show enormous gains by the socialists and anti-Semites.

The extensive forest fires which have been raging in President and Lane Grove townships, Venango county, Pa., covering an area of ten square miles, are believed to be under control. The timber loss is estimated at $75,000.

President Roosevelt received Rear Admiral Huet De Bacellar, commanding the Brazilian fleet now at Hampton roads, and the personal officers of his fleet and his staff, who are the guests of the United States government.

William Kenney, an employe of the Walker distillery at Walkerville, Ont., just across the Detroit river from Detroit, was drowned in a vat of whisky mash.

Of five Italians who came to Cranesville, near Amsterdam, N. Y., from Schenectady to seek work on the construction of the barge canal, three were drowned by the capsizing of a boat in which they were rowing across the Mohawk river.

On a plea of guilty to a charge of murder in the second degree John Stapp, 15 years of age, was sentenced by Judge Williams in St. Louis to 99 years in the penitentiary.

Russian reactionists met and demanded stringent laws for the guarding of public safety.

Witnesses at the senate investigation of the Brownsville affray at Washington testified to seeing the negro troops firing their guns during the riot.

The supreme court of Kansas granted a writ to oust Peter Everhardy, mayor of Leavenworth, from office for failure to enforce the laws against saloons and other resorts.

Thieves stole a searchlight weighing 200 pounds from the top of a building in Chicago.

Elias Hartz, a famous "goosebone" weather prophet, of Reading, Pa., whose predictions usually came true, died at the age of 92 years.

Two masked highwaymen held up a station agent of the Chicago Metropolitan elevated road and escaped with $12.

A soldier of the czar's guard reveals a plot to kill the emperor.

The Missouri supreme court affirmed the death sentences imposed on Convicts George Ryan, Harry Vaughan and Edward Raymond, who broke out of the penitentiary November 24, 1905, and killed guard John Clay in resisting recapture. The three will be hanged on June 27.

The German reichstag passed the third reading of the commercial modus vivendi between the United States and Germany. The bill will now go to the emperor for his signature.

Regarding the alleged shortage of $12,000 in the accounts of Cashier W. C. Wallace, of the Columbus, O., post office, who shot himself. Postmaster Krum said: "We have found nothing as yet to warrant a suspicion. If there is a shortage it is in the stocks and we are only now beginning an investigation of that end."

Mrs. Minnie Mallow was taken to the Springfield (O.) city hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the breast which she declares was self-inflicted. Her husband, D. F. Malloy, was locked up on suspicion.

The Western Association of Bottle Manufacturers is in session at Pittsburg, Pa., with a committee of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of America for the purpose of readjusting the wage scale.

The annual state convention of the Knights of Columbus was held at Evansville, Ind., about 10 delegates being present.

The Archer block at Rochester, N. Y., was burned. The Stecful, Straus & Connor company, wholesale clothiers, lost $125,000; the Wheeler-Green Electric company, $50,000; and the owner of the building $75,000.

An interesting feature of the next Republican national convention will be a reunion of the delegates to the national convention in Chicago in 1880, who, for 36 ballots, supported Grant for the presidency for a third term. The call for the reunion has been issued by Col. A. M. Hughes, of Columbia, Tenn., the only surviving member of the Tennessee delegation to the 1880 convention.

It is rumored that Corey, president of the United States Steel corporation, had resigned and that A. C. Dinkey, president of the Carnegie Steel company, would succeed him.

Two hundred men, women and children, led by ministers with their Bibles in hand, marched to the courthouse at Mays Landing, N. J., where the grand jury was about to be convened, and sang and prayed against Sunday liquor selling.

Orrin W. Potter, retired steel magnate, who recently underwent an operation, is said to be critically ill at his home in Chicago. His recovery is doubtful, physicians say, because of his advanced age. He is 70 years old.

M. von Radewitz, second secretary of the German embassy, was fired upon twice by Town Marshal Collins, of Glen Echo, a small hamlet in Maryland, while speeding through the place in his automobile. The second secretary stopped his machine, alighted and informed the marshal he was immune from arrest, and would make complaint to the secretary of state.

The militia took charge of the jail at Brunswick, Ga., to protect a negro, Lee Holmes, who is charged with killing A. A. Sands at Darien Junction. Sands was a prominent white man.

John W. Gates has resigned as a director of the National Bank of North America and has sold his holdings of the stock of that bank. The interest in his withdrawal from the directorate of the bank lies in the fact it was the only financial institution with which he was connected as a director.

The large flour mills at Chihuahua, Mexico, owned by Ambassador Creel, were destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000.

The anti-bucket shop bill passed the Pennsylvania senate by a vote of 36 to 1.

The Presbyterian ministers of Pittsburg have "resolved" that Gaston La Touche's painting, "The Bath," which was awarded first prize at the annual international art exhibition of the Carnegie Institute, won't do.

Thirty-one persons were killed and more than a score injured in the wreck of a special train on the Southern Pacific at Honda, Cal., bearing Shriners from Reading, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y., and their families. The train was derailed by a defective switch and the cars smashed.

Coroner's jury at Santa Barbara, Cal., was unable to determine cause of the wreck which killed 21 Shriners.

Four Kansas City ice companies were fined on aggregate of $32,500 and one concern was ousted from the state for violating the Missouri anti-trust law by Judge Walter A. Powell in the circuit court at Independence, Mo. Similar cases against four other companies were dismissed.

W. E. Corey married Mabelle Gilman, the dancer, a few minutes after midnight Tuesday morning in a private chapel in the Hotel Gotham, New York.

Fight for the Gould millions is to be the principal feature of Mrs. Howard Gould's suit for legal separation.

Chicago experienced the hottest day of the year on Monday.

The distillery and grist mill of the H. Corby company at Belleville, Ont., were destroyed by fire, originating, it is believed from spontaneous combustion. The loss is placed at $250,000.

Mrs. Mattie Connelly, of Maysville, Ala., killed her son-in-law, Frank Albright, because he went home drunk and drove out his family.

The heads of the steamship companies in New York included in the International Mercantile Marine company served notice upon the striking longshoremen that unless the latter returned to work within a week their places would be filled.

Ambassador Bryce and Baron Kuroki assisted in the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Jamestown.

William O. Douglass, the confessed thief of $80,000 in bonds from the Trust Company of America, in a further confession said he had intended, on the advice of a lawyer, to steal $1,000,000 and use it to force forgiveness of smaller thefts.

Radicals in the duma again were defeated by the constitutional democrats in a debate over the execution of four men at Moscow, which is called judicial murder.

Recommendation of the passage of the deep water way bill made to both houses of the Illinois legislature by the state commission.

King Alfonso opened the new Spanish parliament, reading a message from the throne in which he promised reforms in the state administration.

Wheat market soared above one dollar on Monday in the most sensational opening trade that the Chicago board of trade has witnessed in many a year. European grain markets were stirred by sensational crop developments and light shipments from exporting countries.

Arkansas legislature further complicated the life insurance business in the state by passing the Wingo law.

Constitutional lawyers at Springfield, Ill., believe that the public utilities article of the new Chicago charter is invalid.

Speaker Cannon told Peoria people he believed in a ship canal clear to the gulf.

Russell Sage $10,000,000 Foundation was formally organized by election of officers, several well-known charity workers joining in the project.

A conference between Hill and Harriman interests at St. Paul failed to settle the question of Spokane freight rates.

Three watchmen failed to discover fire in $700,000 steamer City of Cleveland, at Detroit, till it was too late and boat was entirely destroyed.

London audience hooted and jeered Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern after the performance of "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Commercial modus vivendi with United States passed second reading in German reichstag despite sharp attack.

Ambassador Reid gave a dinner to Sir Wilfrid Laurier which was attended by representatives from all parts of British empire.

Supreme court held eight-hour law constitutional and dismissed Kansas irrigation suit.

Postmaster General Meyer denied United States would not consent to delay the date for the taking effect of the union postal convention.

Senator Dick calls off the proposed "harmony" conference in Ohio.

Crazed by liquor, Italians in railway yards near Hammond, Ind., engaged in a bloody riot.

Tree fruit crops in the southwest were reported to be practically destroyed by the late frosts and other fruit and berries badly damaged.

The city jailer of Newport, Ky., was arrested in a raid on a crap game and was locked up in his own jail.

Ninety Mexican miners lost their lives in a fire in the Lenares copper mine at Velardena, in the state of Durango.

Queen Victoria, of Spain, gave birth to a son and the entire country rejoiced. The baby was formally presented to the court and diplomats by the king, who also proclaimed a public holiday and pardoned thousands of prisoners.

The newly-born Spanish prince was named Alfonso Pio Christino Eduardo.

Senator Foraker issued a statement saying that he was making no deal with anyone, but he would accept the results of the Ohio Republican convention.

Fire in Perry, Ia., destroyed four business buildings, the loss being $25,000.

State Senator Charles H. Hughes, of Illinois, died at Excelsior Springs, Mo. He was thrown from his horse recently, and sustained the injury which caused his death.

Services commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the inauguration of the Salvation Army of St. Louis were conducted by Commander Eva Booth.

Mrs. Agnes Berlow Houser, wife of Daniel M. Houser, of St. Louis, president of the Globe Printing company, publishing the Globe-Democrat, died from the effect of a self-inflicted bullet wound in the right temple.

Engineer N. B. McGinnis and Fireman Sullivan were killed in a wreck of a passenger train on the Southern Pacific in New Mexico.

Rev. W. M. P. Richards, a colored pastor of Carlisle, Ky., was shot and killed and his alleged murderers, a man and woman, were threatened with lynching.

Unknown persons set off a charge of some high explosive under the house of Samuel Cook, a negro, at Ruston, La., blowing the house to pieces and killing Cook and four other negroes.

Lieut. Gov. Sherman, of Illinois, was appointed by the president as a member of the Spanish treaty claims commission.

Edward Kemeys, noted sculptor of wild animals, died at his home in Washington.

James R. Palmer, aged 97, who operated the first bus line in New York city, was present at the laying of the first rail of the first railway in the United States and was once an intimate friend of Henry Clay, died in Chippewa Falls, Wis.

Writs of ouster were issued by the supreme court of Kansas against the Western Union Telegraph company and the Pullman company for not complying with the Kansas corporation laws.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

The State Fair.

Minneapolis—The heavy work under contemplation at the Minnesota State Fair grounds was forwarded at a special meeting of the board of managers, held at the secretary's office, when preliminary plans for new Poultry building and the Dairy building were examined and the sewerage system was outlined.

Mr. Alban of Thori, Alban & Fisher, the architects of the two new buildings, explained the preliminary plans and discussed details with the board members. As a result of the conference the plans will be altered in some respects and specifications will be drawn at once. In a general way the Dairy Building will be about 110 by 150 feet in size and the Poultry Building 160 by 180. Both will be of brick and of simple though attractive design.

A. R. Starkey, engineer in charge of the St. Paul sewers, appeared before the board and explained plans for the sewerage of the grounds. He recommended a project for pumping the fair grounds sewage through a special pipe line to the sewer at Prior avenue and will prepare detailed plans for this work as well as for system for the grounds proper. The department will do this for the fair grounds at the bare cost of the draughtmen's work. It is probable that specifications will be ready for the sewer work in ten days.

As the building plans will be ready about the same time several large contracts will be let shortly and the grounds will be very busy with numerous gangs of men at work by June 1st.

After disposing of the office business the board inspected the work in progress on the fair grounds—the grading about the grand stand and speed barns and the new Manufacturers building.

Mannix is State Printer.

St. Paul.—Joseph T. Mannix, the veteran Minneapolis newspaper man, was elected state expert printer at a meeting of the state printing commission.

A. N. Dare of Elk River, who has filled the position for the past four years, presented his resignation, having deferred it at the request of the commission till the legislative session was over. He was asked to remain until August 1, when the present contracts expire, and consented to do so. Mr. Mannix was then unanimously elected, and will assume his duties August 1. The salary is $2,100 a year.

The commission will meet June 4, to open bids and award contracts for state printing for the next year.

$20,000 Fire at Rush City.

Rush City.—Fire originated in the Johnson block and destroyed the entire block, together with one or two buildings of less value. For a time it was feared the town would be wiped out. The estimate of the loss is $20,000.

The Johnson block contained two banks, the Rush City State bank and the First National bank. It also contained the city electric light plant, two telephone offices and the offices of many professional men, besides some stores. The block was the principal business structure of the village.

A Spectacular Suicide.

Minneapolis.—While a hundred or more bewildered people stood by unable to stop him from carrying out his purpose, Joseph Montour, sixty-five years of age, leaped to his death in the Mississippi river from the steel arch bridge.

The old man was despondent over the illness of his wife and his inability to secure employment. He had been melancholy for some time before he made up his mind to take his life. Though he has never threatened to kill himself, his daughters and sons were fearful that he would do so.

NEWS NOTES.

Rush City.—Herbert J. Broom, manager of the electric light plant was taken to Minneapolis in a serious condition from burns received in a peculiar accident. While dozing in a chair in the Grant hotel office Mr. Broom slipped off the chair and fell into the fireplace in which a brisk coal fire was burning. In falling his head struck one of the andirons, rendering him unconscious. When he was found soon after he had received numerous burns about the head and shoulders.

Mankato.—To get drunk the sixth time, officially, cost Lester Duffy, a farmer living near this city, $100 and forty days' confinement in the county jail.

Minneapolis.—The biggest mortgage ever filed in Hennepin county was recorded when the J. I. Case company filed a mortgage on its property for $3,500,000.

Spooner.—Orders have been received in Spooner and Brandell from Sheriff Thomas Bailey of Bemidji that all gambling must cease. This order applies to the entire county, and as a result the professional gamblers have packed up their outfits and decamped. Even the slot machines have been stored or sent away.

Duluth.—The Madison school building was damaged to the extent of $20,000 by fire. It is believed that the fire originated from defective wiring. The damage is covered by insurance. The building is practically a total loss.

Insurance Companies Must Pay.

St. Paul.—Insurance companies will not escape paying the registry tax on mortgages on real estate in this state. The attorney general's department gives the opinion that the provision which was supposed to exempt insurance companies from paying the tax cannot be construed in that way, but holds that the insurance companies will have to pay the tax when filing mortgages. The law exempts mortgages taken by persons or corporations which pay a commuted tax in lieu of all other taxes, but as the 2 per cent tax which the insurance companies pay is not in lieu of all other taxes the provision does not apply to them.

Kills Self in Hospital.

Duluth. — Joseph Richards, forty years old, of Culver, Minn., committed suicide in St. Mary's hospital. Richards was taken to the hospital suffering from a general breakdown. The nurse that attended him brought him some egg-nog and left the glass with him. Richards broke the glass and cut his throat with the sharp, ragged edge of one of the pieces. The patient was found bleeding to death, and it was too late to save him.

Find Guide's Body.

Brainerd.—Edward Archibald, one of the best known guides in this vicinity, whose headquarters were at the Kabekona resort, was found dead at Birch Point, between Girl lake and Woman lake, by a party which had gone in search of him. Archibald had been missing for a week. It is believed that the guide lost his way and that death was due to exposure. He was fifty-five years old, and his relatives are supposed to reside in Montreal, Canada.

NEWS NOTES.

Bertha.—The house of Paul Dallman, who resides three miles southwest of Bertha, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Mr. Dallman and family escaped without injury.

St. Paul.—A reward of $550 for the capture of Tony T. Deloretes is offered by Gov. Johnson. Deloretea disappeared after the murder of Samuel Ibsen at Holman, Itasca county, on Sunday, May 5.

Truman.—The general store of Senator W. A. Hinton was badly damaged by fire. The damage to the building is about $2,000, and on the stock about $10,000. The insurance will nearly cover the loss.

Duluth.—Charles R. Little shot himself with suicidal intent at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Little, and died instantly. He was for years superintendent of the Merrill & Ring sawmill at West Duluth.

Parkers Prairie.—A barn on the farm of Swen Hemquist was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Three horses, four cows and a number of hogs were cremated, and farm machinery and grain were destroyed, the loss being total.

Winona.—Edward W. Willians, a wealthy shoe manufacturer got a divorce from his wife on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, altho Mrs. Williams is an active worker in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animals.

Duluth.—Bernice Morris, four years old, died as a result of scalds received. She tipped over a pail of boiling hot water upon herself and died after suffering great agony. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morris.

St. Paul.—Two rural mail routes leading from Sauk Centre—Nos. 7 and 8—have been ordered discontinued after the trip of June 15. Most of the work will be done by four of the remaining routes, while some of the patrons of route 7 will receive their mail from Melrose. There are not enough patrons on these routes to warrant their continuance.

Washington. —The application of Thomas B. Clement, former president of the First National Bank of Faribault, for a writ bringing the case in which he is under prosecution to the supreme court of the United States for review, has been denied by that court. Clement is under sentence of eight years' imprisonment in connection with the charge of misapplying the funds of the bank.

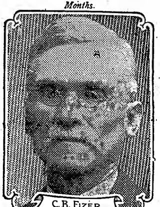
St. Paul.—The body of a woman, badly decomposed, was found floating in the river at St. Paul Park by William Bowman. It was clad in ribbed underwear, a heavy woolen skirt, black stockings and high-heeled black shoes, considerably worn. So badly had the body suffered from the water that it was impossible to discover any marks of identification, the authorities being unable even to determine the color of the hair.

Duluth.—Martin Hensted of Virginia is under arrest here by the federal authorities charged with having passed worthless and counterfeit money. A great number of spurious nickels have been used to feed slot machines at Virginia and elsewhere on the range. Hensted is bound over to await the action of the federal jury in July.

St. Paul.—An unindentified man about sixty years of age was struck by a train on the Soo road at Cardigan Junction, near New Brighton, and instantly killed. The body was badly mangled.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved In Three Months.



C.B. FIZER.

MR. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble for ten years past.

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain.

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

Pe-ru-na For Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Geo. H. Simser, Grant, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about four years. I had kidney trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time.

"This summer I got so very bad I thought I would try Peruna, so I wrote to you and began at once to take Peruna and Manalin.

"I took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and now I feel better than I have for some time.

"I feel that Peruna and Manalin cured me and made a different woman of me altogether. I bless the day I picked up the little book and read of your Peruna."

It is the business of the kidneys to remove from the blood all poisonous materials. They must be active all the time, else the system suffers. There are times when they need a little assistance.

Peruna is exactly this sort of a remedy. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service at a time when they were not able to bear their own burdens.

SHOWED PRESENCE OF MIND.

Nervy Act of Well Drillers Averted Fearful Disaster.

Two oil well drillers, Earl Sheets and Frank Winks, near Carl Junction, underwent an experience last week that would make a "feature" for a life and death melodrama, says the Kansas City Star. The two men were superintending the shooting of a well. Three hundred quarts of nitroglycerin had been brought to the well to be used in the shot.

A "shell" containing 30 quarts had been lowered, but it stuck in the well. The operators thought they could shove the can on down in the well by letting the baler down in the well on top of it. The plan appeared to have worked all right, and the baler was drawn up out of the well, and part way up toward the top of the derrick before the horrified spectators noticed that the can of deadly explosive had caught in the baler and was then dangling in the air, ready to fall.

Just as Sheets and Winks looked up, the shell came loose and started toward the ground. Realizing that if it ever hit the ground these 30 quarts of nitro would explode and kill everyone in the vicinity, the two men with presence of mind, ran under it and caught it in their hands. If they had failed in this, not one of the spectators would have "lived to tell the story."

ZEAL THAT WAS MISDIRECTED.

Housekeeper Meant to Please Employer, but Alas!

"Such an article," said H. P. Judson, the new head of the University of Chicago, in declining a rather unusual interview, "would be not only futile but even in a mild way harmful. It would be like the work of the careful housekeeper. There was an old general who had brought home from the war a splendid flag—a flag all torn with bullets, faded with fierce suns and stained with the dust and blood of battle. This superb trophy hung over the mantel in his library. Well, one unlucky day he engaged a new housekeeper and the next week missed his flag. He rang at once. 'Where is that flag of mine?' he said, pointing anxiously to the empty space on the wall.

"'I have been working on it, sir,' the housekeeper answered. 'I've washed it thoroughly and sewed up all the rents and darned all the holes and when I bring it back to you, sir, I'm sure you'll say it looks as good as new.'"

An Indian's View of an Organ.

After a while curiosity led me back to the sod house, and I saw for the first time how the white woman pumps so much air into a box that when she presses on the top board it howls convulsively. I forgot my bashfulness so far as to listen openly and enjoy the operation, wondering much how the white man puts a pair of lungs into a box, which is furnished with a whole set of black and white teeth, and when he sings to it it appears to answer him. This is how the white people teach their children to do things, I thought.—From the Outlook—Dr. Charles A. Eastman's "Schooldays of an Indian."

Then She Takes the Lines.

The young girl's air was pensive. "To-morrow," she said, "Reginald will conduct me to the altar. There—" Smiling, she lighted another cigarette, "—his leadership will end."

CROMWELL KEEPS INN.

BEARS STRIKING RESEMBLANCE TO MAN WHO RULED ENGLAND.

Said to Be a Lineal Descendant of the Great Oliver—But He Does Not Know or Care About His Ancestry.

London.—When a famous old English [illegible] changed hands the other [illegible] considerable interest was aroused by the announcement that the new landlord's name was Oliver Cromwell, and that he claimed to be a lineal descendant of the protector. It was added, moreover, that he bore quite a striking resemblance to a statue of the [illegible] man outside Westminster hall and that all these statements are true I am able to testify as the result of a visit which I have just paid to the modern Oliver Cromwell.

It is in the ancient town of High Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, about 30 miles west of London, that he has just established himself as landlord of the Red Lion hotel. The building, said to be almost 200 years old, stands in the main street of the quaint village, and with a huge red lion over the portico still presents the appearance of a typical old English coaching house.

It is owned by Lord Carrington, and that famous parliamentarian, Benjamin Disraeli, made his first speech from the doorstep of the hotel. It was the most of those which followed it, a famous speech. Disraeli said that his opponents stood on his acres, "but I," said the future prime minister of England, "stand on my head." The crowd cheered the sentiment, but not all of them, for one threw a rotten egg which soiled the speaker's satin vest. Disraeli wiped the contents of the egg from his dress and threw them on the [illegible], remarking, "There will my opponents be when the poll is declared." It may be noted, by way of parenthesis, that despite his caustic oratory, Disraeli was defeated in this attempt to gain a seat in parliament as a radical from High Wycombe.

The new proprietor of the "Red Lion," who is now having the limelight of publicity turned upon him because of his likeness in name and [illegible] to the great protector, does not [illegible] fully to appreciate the interest attaching to his alleged ancestry.

[illegible] asked him to give me some [illegible] his genealogical tree he [illegible]. "I have never bothered [illegible] about it. Some 30 years ago, when Thomas Carlyle was writing his [illegible] of Cromwell he sent a man [illegible] regarding my pedigree. All [illegible] definitely was that my grandfather's name was Oliver Cromwell. Of course he wasn't the great [illegible], for he lived some 250 years [illegible] my grandfather's family lived [illegible]—I myself was born at Egham in Surrey—and members of the protector's family are said to have settled in Surrey.

"Some time after Carlyle's man had interviewed me I received a note from the great historian informing me that I was undoubtedly a lineal descendant of Oliver the Great. I never had any genealogical diagram or explanation of the connection, and my claim or belief is based principally upon this assurance of Carlyle's. As I say, the matter never bothered me much, for I don't know what advantage it would be to me to prove my descent if it were possible. No, I don't know whether Carlyle mentioned me in his book or not, for I never read it.

"Last October," Oliver Cromwell continued, I received a letter from a Mrs. Melvina Warham Brewster of OLIVER CROMWELL.

(Descendant of Great Protector Who Keeps an Inn in England.)

Houston, Tex., regarding the Cromwell family. Here is part of her letter:

"'My grandfather, Oliver Cromwell of Charleston, S. C., who died in 1812, was the third of his line from the emigration to America after the restoration. To-day the last of the name is Lewis Cromwell of Elkhart Mines, Md.'"

Whether Oliver Cromwell of High Wycombe is or is not a lineal descendant of that remarkable man who ruled England for five years as protector, he has emulated the deed of his alleged ancestor by disposing of the King's Head. At one time the new landlord of the "Red Lion" while in the building trade, was entrusted with the reconstruction of the famous "King's Head" inn near the Guildhall in London. He rebuilt the hostelry; the "King's Head" disappeared and it was said of him by everybody in the Old Jewry, that twice in the history of England had Oliver Cromwell disposed of the King's Head.

DOG RACING IN MICHIGAN.

Every Boy in the Upper Peninsula Owns a Team of Dogs.

[illegible], Mich.—One of the most popular forms of winter entertainment in the upper peninsula of Michigan is dog racing. Several of these kind of derbys are held every winter. Ski tournaments are frequent, but they do not overshadow the dog races.

Typical Dog Team and Load.

At Negaunee the annual dog race was held, not very long ago, and was witnessed by thousands of people.

There were 19 entries, all of whom appeared in several heats, and most of the races were close. All the runs were down the grades on either end of Iron street, but in spite of this fact the smaller dogs had difficulty in getting over the course.

There were numerous fights, particularly at the starting points, and occasionally two or more dogs would get into a mixup midway down the street or just before reaching the tape.

No more amusing sight can be imagined than a dog race. Usually at the start there is trouble. At the word "go" some of the dogs get into a fight and require the immediate attention of their drivers. The more peaceably inclined get away during the altercations of their opponents, and thus obtain a commanding lead. There is a great overturning and bumping when the rushing mass of dogs cross a railroad track or ditch.

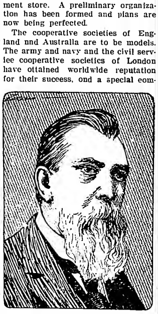
The handling of the dogs and sleighs at these points is most skillfully done and causes great merriment among the spectators.

Dog teams are very common in Northern Michigan and there is a scarce in a town where there is not from 100 to 200 dog teams owned by boys who find them very useful. In some cases these outfits prove a source of considerable income to the owners, who use them for hauling wood, etc.

FEDERAL EMPLOYES ORGANIZE.

Washington.—The first cooperative experiment ever tried in the nation's capital is an attempt by the 35,000 government employes of Washington to reduce the excessive cost of living by organizing a cooperative department store. A preliminary organization has been formed and plans are now being perfected.

The cooperative societies of England and Australia are to be models. The army and navy and the civil service cooperative societies of London have attained worldwide reputation for their success, and a special committee is now in communication with their managers to get details.



DR. A. PATTON.
(President of Government Employes Co-operative Concern.)

During the past ten years the cost of living in Washington has increased from 17 to 25 per cent., while the salaries of government employes have remained stationary. The consequence is that government employes are praying for panic times. They say if this terrible prosperity continues they will be ground into the earth.

The plan for the new store is to sell the goods at current market rates, and then to return the profit to members. Ten per cent. will be set aside as a sinking fund to improve the store. An experienced man will be chosen for manager and will be paid a good salary.

EDMUND'S LOVE.

"Before I give you my answer," she said, "there is one thing that you must tell me. Don't answer hastily. I want the truth. Have you ever proposed to any other girl?"

He looked down at the floor, and drew a deep, long breath. It was evident that he was sorely troubled. Turning to her at last with an appealing look he begged:

"Don't compel me to answer that question. Is it not enough that I love you with all my heart and with all my soul? I have never loved any other girl. I will confess that I may have thought I did, but I know now that it wasn't love. I never knew what love was until I met you."

"No," she firmly declared, "you must tell me all. I insist on knowing her name and when and how it happened."

"If it must be," he groaned, "I will confess everything. Mabel Fletcher and I were alone in the Osgood's conservatory, and somebody closed the door, locking us in. The poor girl seemed so distressed about it that I asked her to be my wife. Luckily, Mrs. Osgood missed us, and let us out after we had been imprisoned for ten or fifteen minutes. Now I suppose you will despise me. Ah, why did you compel me to tell you? I assure you I was actuated only by pity. Oh, of you could only believe me when I say that without you my life will be a miserable failure. If you would only—"

"Did she refuse you?"

"No. That's the worst of it. She said, 'Yes,' and still thinks that she and I are going to be married."

"Take me, Edmund. Oh, I am so happy."

Careful Circulation.

"Aren't you afraid your persistent refusal of a nomination will hurt your prospects?"

"Certainly not," answered the eminent politician. "If I hadn't friends enough to overcome a little obstacle like that I would not stand a show of being elected, anyhow."—Washington Star.

Pity the Poor Dogs!

Miss Pechis—I'm in a quandary. He declares if I refuse him he'll go to the dogs.

Miss Wise—Well, you certainly can't sacrifice yourself for a worthless fellow like him. You must consider your own welfare.

Miss Pechis—O! of course, but then, on the other hand, I'm very fond of dogs.

Extravagance No Bar.

He knew she was extravagant, but he had the nerve to propose, nevertheless.

"Why do you want to marry me?" she asked, after the manner of her sex.

"I'm afraid I'll acquire a bank account if I don't," he explained.—Chicago Daily News.

Overruled.

The Maid—And do you make love to every girl you meet the same as you do to me?

Young Lawyer—My dear young lady, it is unprofessional to ask a question that would tend to incriminate the witness.—Chicago Daily News.

JUST THE VERY THING.

Poet—I'm sure I don't know what to do with this poem. The editor says it's utter slush, and even my friends pronounce it nonsense.

Friend.—Well, I'll tell you—why don't you have it set to music?

The Sadness of It.

Fred—Oh, woe is me! I'm a victim of heart failure.

Joe—Why, how is that?

Fred—I was going to ask old Gotrox for the hand of his daughter last night, but my heart failed me.—Chicago Daily News.

Listening on a Party Line.

Hubby—Why didn't you come to the door and let me in?

Wife—I couldn't, George. Our neighbor was talking to somebody and I was at the phone.

A Parting Shot.

"Professor," said a senior, trying to be pathetic at parting, "I am indebted to you for all I know."

"Pray don't mention such a trifle, was the reply.—Punch Bowl.

Happy.

Old Friend—And have you been happy in your second marriage?

Octogenarian—Yes, ever since I lost my hearing.

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTION.

"Miss Prittly," said the young lawyer with the high brow and the Henry Clay forelock, "let me ask you a hypothetical question. Suppose that a young man of excellent habits and increasing income—a young man who believed himself fully capable of making a woman happy—were to appear before a young woman who had eyes of rare and radiant luster and hair of the texture and glory of spun gold; whose lips were more perfect than Hogarth's line of beauty; whose cheeks held a tint that put to shame the magnificent pink of the rose-petal—a young woman whose culture and charm easily placed her immeasurably above all other women in the world, and he were to ask this young woman if she would"—

"Oh, Mr. Blackstone!" she whispered, sinking into his arms. "Yes!"—Judge.

FEMININE AMENITIES.

Miranda—Last evening Reggie called me dear!

Myrtilla—Yes, he probably thinks you are—at any price!—New York Press.

Her Revenge.

There was a young woman named Lulu,
Who wished a rich man to come woo Lu.
But as none showed desire,
She got made as fire,
And went off and married a Zulu.
—Baltimore American.

The Reason.

Assistant—I understand your private secretary has got a raise in salary. Queer he has never mentioned it."

Proprietor—Not at all. It's his faculty for keeping his mouth shut that got him the raise."—Detroit Free Press.

Totally Different Character.

"He must be a good fellow."

"Nonsense! Where did you get that idea? He never goes to a club and—"

"But his wife says he's a very good fellow and when a man's wife—"

"Oh! That's another thing. There's a big difference between a 'very good fellow' and a 'good fellow.'"

Knew Neither Nurse Nor Baby.

"What a bright little thing!" exclaimed the society woman, patronizingly, cooing at the baby out for an airing in the park. "Whose little one is this?"

"Yours, ma'am," replied the nurse. "I'm the new nurse that kem yistherd'y."

Too Many Friends.

"Your husband has a host of friends," said the complimentary acquaintance.

"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins, "but I wish so many of them weren't the kind that give you tips on the races."—Washington Star.

Might Have Been Worse.

Green—The measly cur called me all the names he could think of.

Brown—Well, that wasn't so bad.

Green—Oh, it wasn't, eh?

Brown—No. It showed that his remarks were not the result of the thoughtlessness.—Chicago Daily News.

Same Old Job.

Merchant—What are your six boys doing now, Uncle Hiram?

Uncle Hiram—Ain't none of 'em doin' nothin' but Jim.

Merchant—What's Jim doing?

Uncle Hiram—Loafin', ez usual.—Chicago Daily News.

An Early Beginner.

Smith—Jimson is certainly a progressive individual.

Jones—Progressive! Why, he's downright lazy.

Smith — Well, he's progressive enough to have spring fever long before winter ends.

Wise Boy.

Musical Lady—Wouldn't you like to be able to sing and play, my little man?

Johnny—No; I wouldn't like to have people say such horrid things about me as they do about you.

Curtailed Facilities.

"What makes you think those jurors are not thoroughly informed about the case?"

"They have been locked up every night and not permitted to read the newspapers."—Washington Star.

No Excuse.

Tommy—It's too bad yer grandmother died day 'fore yesterday.

Benny—Why so?

"Why, dere's a corkin' game on dis afternoon!"—Yonkers Statesmen.

FOR BRIDAL LUNCHEON

Pretty Party Given for Attendants at Wedding—Mother's Clever Suggestion That Made "Coming of Age" Celebration Memorable—Magazine Game Something New.

The guests were the attendants at the wedding which took place the week this luncheon was given by the matron of honor. All the appointments were apropos of the event to follow. For the centerpiece there was a circular path of rice, the edges defined by small trees found in the toy department. In the center of this was a little automobile with the dearest of doll bride and groom, a tiny trunk, hatbox and suit case, all marked with the initials of the bride and groom-elect. Around the path a procession of bridal attendants marched, even to the "bride" and her "father," the ring-bearer and flower girls.

The places were outlined with wreaths of myrtle and pink sweet-peas and pink slippers held candied puffed rice at each place. From a beautiful gilded circular basket suspended over the table by pink tulle a pink ribbon radiated at each place; these streamers were pulled at the close of the repast and brought forth a pink kid jeweler's box for each containing the bride's souvenirs for her maids which were little finger rings containing the initials and date on two golden hearts. They were especially made and very pretty.

For a Boy's Twenty-first Birthday.

A fond mother devised and carried out this clever stag party in honor of her only son's coming of age.

The favors were toy watches and little canes had the place cards tied to the handles. Red carnations, the favorite flower of nearly every man, were used in the center of the table and one was laid at each plate. The candies were red and had very simple shades.

This very plain menu was served but each dish was a special favorite of this mother's lad. Vegetable soup, bread sticks, beefsteak with mushrooms, baked potatoes on the half shell, which means scooping out the potatoes after cutting in halves, mixing with cream, butter and sometimes the yolk of an egg, replacing and browning in the oven, spaghetti and tomatoes. No salad, but for dessert there were individual apple pies, a la mode, which means a big spoonful of ice cream on top; olives, nuts, cheese and coffee. There were cigars ginger ale and a big bowl filled with all kinds of fruit. A birthday cake with 21 red candles was brought in after the dessert and served with the coffee.

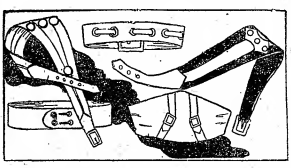
A Magazine Game.

A hostess at the social meeting of a literary club planned this unique entertainment. The programmes passed were in shape of little booklets, the outside covers decorated with pen and ink sketches after the manner of magazines. The answers are all the names of current magazines.

1. One hundred years old.—Century.
2. Santa Claus.—St. Nicholas.
3. An eminent minstrel.—Harper.
4. Public place in Rome.—The Arena.
5. Veracity.—Truth.
6. One who sketches.—Delineator.
7. A noted fairy.—Puck.
8. Sailor's hoodoo.—Black Cat.
9. Dispenser of Justice.—Judge.
10. A prospect.—Outlook.
11. What we cling to.—Life.
12. A citizen of the world.—Cosmopolitan.
13. A boy's jackknife.—Youth's Companion.
14. Hash.—Review of Reviews.
15. A needle-book.—Woman's Home Companion.
16. Prosperity.—Success
17. Money the trusts want.—Everybody's.
18. Resident of New York.—Metropolitan.
19. The suburbs.—Country Life in America.
20. What we are proud to be.—American.
21. We should take every year.—Outing.
22. What song we all should know.—National.
23. Our coming men.—American Boy.
24. What dudes try to set.—Style.
25. What a rich man is.—Independent.

MADAME MERRI.

Some of This Season's Belts



The new leather belts differ from those worn a season or so ago, in that the narrow, stiff band belts are quite superseded by those of flexible leather, the new designs being shown in a great many delightful colorings and original effects. One of the best models seen was made of soft leather cut very wide, but made to adjust itself closely to the figure with the wrinkled snugness of a mousquetaire glove. At the back and in the front are large buckles in gilt or silver. This model comes in almost every coloring, and should be matched in shade with the coat and skirt gown which it is to accompany.

As brown is so popular this season, delightful belts are to be had in soft suede leather in a beautiful wood brown, and those in gray are also charming. A great many of the fancy belts seen show designs in steel and steel beads, and artistic buckles in silver studded with semi-precious stones add to the fascinations of these more elaborate belts.

The belts sketched show some of the most desirable models suitable for street costumes. One design which is becoming to almost any figure shows a straight, rather wide, crush belt of soft leather, fastening with two gold hooks passing through gold eyes.

Another design shows a threaded effect, narrow straps of leather being threaded through round eyelets as a decoration. The three other belts sketched show desirable designs in the wider belts.

FILLING OUT HOLLOWS

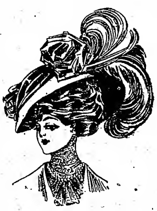
Some Easy Exercises Which Will Do Much to Help the Thin Girl Become Plump.

To put flesh on the shoulders, try this exercise night and morning:

Raise the arms to the level of the shoulders, stretched outward, with palms of hands turned up. Bend the arms at elbows until the hands touch the shoulders. Grip the shoulder tight, inhaling while counting seven. Now hold the breath while counting four and draw down hard on the point of the shoulder with all the strength you can put into arms and hands, the elbow pointing downward. Exhaling, and still gripping and pulling, count four more. Then loosen the grip slightly on the shoulder, count seven as before and repeat the pulling movement on the shoulder, as given above. Repeat this exercise at least ten times without taking the hands from the shoulders, and gradually increase until you can reach a record of 20 times. Bear in mind that the drawing down movement is made while holding the breath four counts and exhaling four counts. While inhaling the hands grip the shoulders more lightly. This exercise fairly draws the hollows out between the neck and the point of the shoulder and gives curved lines in their place.

Second, stand straight with the chest high and the head thrown back. Clasp the hands behind the body, with the palms turned outward and the thumbs touching the body. This position, if taken correctly, throws the chest high and gives the perfect Grecian bend to the figure. Now loosen the thumbs, but do not unclasp the hands, and turn them slowly at the wrists until the palms are down and the thumbs apart and out. Make sure that you are standing firmly on your feet; then bend slowly at the waist line, keeping knees stiff, and raise the clasped hands as far as possible toward the front or above the head. Swing the hands back and forth, still clasped, while you count 20. When first taking this exercise resume the normal position of hands and body after counting 20. Later on you will be able to rest by merely stopping the swinging motion. This exercise puts flesh on the upper part of the arms as well as on the chest, shoulders and throat.

HAT OF PARISIAN DESIGN.



Leghorn hat with croux of mauve ribbon and blue and mauve feathers.

When a girl turns a fellow's head does she have to marry him behind his back.

Health Insurance at little cost

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

$1,000.00 reward is offered to anyoao for nny substaace injurious to the health found ia Calumet Baking Powder.

Purity is a prime essential in food. Calumet is mndo only of pure, wholesome ingredients combined by skilled chemists, aad complies with the pure food laws of all states. It is tho only high-grade Baking Powder on tho market sold at a moderate price.

Calumet Baking Powder mny be freely used with the certainty that food made with it contains no harmful drugs—it is chemically correct and makes Pure, Wholesome Food.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

Published weekly. Thursday evening. entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

Badger

Fine seeding weather, eh?

Mrs. R. Walker entertained a few lady friends at her home last Sunday.

Miss Aurore Ducharme visited a few days of this week with relatives and frisnds at Red Lake Falls.

Frank LaBissoniere and Anna Quesnell transacted bnsiness at the Falls last Saturday.

Mr. Edmond Quesnell is at present a guest at the home of his uncle, M. Quesnell.

A large number of old and young folks spent Sunday evening at the M. Quesnell home. Those present were: Messrs. Adelard Laurent, Robert Quesnell and Jack Remich and wives, Messrs. Edmond, Archie and Joseph Quesnell, Henry and Horace Laurent, Peter and Albert Lachance and Albert Trudeau and the Misses Lizzie and Rose Qnesnell, Cora Laurent, Rosalba Lachance and Lorena Quesnell. A good time was had.

Mrs. A. Laurent made a flying trip to the county seat Tuesday.

BRAY.

Most of the farmers of this vicinity have finished seeding wheat and oats.

Chas. Lindquist transacted business at St. Hilaire, Friday.

Some of the farmers have been busy hauling wheat the latter part of the week on account of the raise in price.

A. E. Anderson and Ed. Crown was at St. Hilaire Monday.

C. P. Swanson drove to Wylie Saturday.

Gilbert Pederson of Park River, N. D., a former Brayite has been around here visiting with friends and relatives.

Alfred Johnson drove to Wylie last Tuesday.

Halvor Hanson was at St. Hilaire Friday.

Notice to Stallion Owners.

The legislature, at its recent session, passed a law regulating the public service of stallions. Owners of stallions nsed for public service are now reqnired to have the name enrolled and the pedigree examined by the Stallion Registration Board, at the Agricultural college, St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, and to secure from the Board a license certificate. The law is operative at once nnd stallion owners should secure a license certificate at the enrliest possible date.

Full information and a copy of the law can be obtained by addressing the Secretary of the Board, Prof. Andrew Boss, St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, Minn.

Use McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee Every Day Because—

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always uniform in quality and properly blended and roasted.

You dc not get good coffee one day and poor coffee the next.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps this coffee clean and fresh, protected from dust, dirt and foul odors. Each package is one pound full weight.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE GARCEAU & ZAISER

M. SKALA J. W. B. NIMESGREN

DIET DELUSIONS.

They Come Down to Us From the Old Barbarous Tribes.

Some diet delusions are of most modern date, whilo others are of most respectable antiquity. Among the latter is that very ancient survival, tho notion that particular foods are "good" for particular things or effects.

This is an almost direct descendant of the notion, held with greater or less unanimity by nearly all savage and barbarous tribes, that the flesh or viscera of birds and animals possessing particular qualities will be likely to produce the same qualities in those who eat them.

Thus Nero used to banqnet on nightingales' tongues in the bope of improving his voice, and the savnge cut out and devoured the heart of the bear, the liver of the buffalo, etc., believing that the strength and courage of theso animals would thereby be transferred to himself.

It is probable that tha most grewsome of ancestral rites—cannibalism—was largely due to the same belief, although, of course, in Neanderthal days primitive man would have no moro hesitancy about eating his enemy after he had killed him than he would in devouring n bear or a deer.

In fact, the early converts of the missionaries in the South Sea islands referred to their favorite dish as "long pig." Every known race has at some time been cannibal.—McClure's Magazine.

Magyar Music.

Of Magyar art music seems to have gained the widest admiration, and it is certain that musical executants of the first order, and in the case of Liszt of unique grandeur, have justified part of the expectations with which musical Europe has long looked upon Hungary. Magyar music can be likened to nothing more aptly than to the exclusively Hungarian river Theiss. Capricious and majestic, teeming with life and silting up for miles, surrounded by charming fioriture of water lilies and alder trees and suddenly again by poisonous marshes and swamps, such is the Theiss, such is Hungarian music—stirring, bewildering, unspeakably saddening, inexpressibly exhilarating. It is the music of rhapsodic souls, of intoxication, of the battlefield, of wild war dances nfter the victory. But, like the great river, it cannot be regulated. —Nineteenth Century.

Sunlight For All the Leaves.

The telegraph plant of India has n method all its own for catching the sunshine. Each of its leaves is composed of three leaflets. The larger terminal one erects itself during the day and turns sharply down at night, while the other two smaller leaflets move constantly day and night, describing complete circles with a peculiar jerking motion like the second hand of a watch. Occasionally they rest for a period and then go on again, thus bringing every part of every leaf to the full action of the sunlight.

Mere Trifles.

"Folks all well this morning, Tommy?" asked n friend of the family.

"Yes'm," replied Tommy.

"I am glad to hear it. The last time I heard from them your papa was suffering from rheumatic gout and your mamma bad neuralgia."

"Oh, yes, they've still got 'em. I thought you meant was any of us sick."

The Gentleman.

It is possible for every man to assume an elegant manner, but the true gentleman is nature's own nobleman, who never forgets to be polite to every one, and it is as easy to discern the assumed from the innata good breeding as it is to distinguish pasta from diamonds.—Dickens.

The Test.

The Soulful Girl—What is the trua test of poetry? The Poet—Well, if one can get a poem accepted that is written on both sides of the paper he may rest assured that it is n good thing.

Every man is valued in this world as ha shows by his conduct that he wishes to be valued.—Bruyere.

The Osprey.

Allusion is often made, especially in fashion journals, to "osprey" feathers. Few words have been more loosely bandied about than this bird name. The Roman nuthor Pliny's "ossifraga" (bone breaker) has been identified with the lammergeyer, a vulture that is reputed to break np bones too big for it to devour whole by dropping them from a height upon rocks. But both "ossifrage" and "osprey," a newer form, came to be applied to quite another bird, the fish hawk, which is now the true "osprey." Yet the "osprey" feathers—more properly egret feathers, or aigrettes—do not come from this bird, but from the egret, or lesser white heron.

With n Home.

Tha great millionaire looked np impatiently.

"Well," he said, "what is it?"

"I desire, sir," the young man faltered, "to marry yonr daughter, provided"—

The other frowned.

"Provided what?"

"Just provided," murmured the youth.

Vocabularies.

The English language, according to a German statistician who has mada a study of the comparativa wealth of languages, heads the list with the enormous vocabulary of 260,000 words; German comes next, with 80,000 words; then Italian, with 75,000; French, 30,000; Turkish, 22,500, and Spanish, 20,000.

PINK LEMONADE.

The Story of Its Introduction to the Circus Public.

"Old Peter Conklin, the clown," said a circus official, "was the first to give pink lemonade to the world.

"It dates back to 1857, when Conklin was travelling in the south with Jere Mabie's big show. Conklin had a dispute with Mabie and jumped the show down in Texas. I've had the story right from his own lips. He bought a couple of mules and an old covered wagon, some tubs, tartaric acid, a lemon, a bushel or two of peanuts and started in the refreshment business. He followed the circus with his wagon, and every time the tents were pitched he would mount n box nnd harangue the crowd with:

"Here is your ice cold lemonade,
Made in the shade.
Stick your finger in the glass;
It'll freeze fast.

"The lemonade sold splendidly, and he couldn't wait on the people fast enough. One day he was surrounded by n mob scrambling for 'the juice,' when his water supply rnn out. There were no wells or springs at hand. He rushed into the big tent, but there was ne'er a drop of water to be had. In his excitement he invaded the dressing tent. Fannie Jamieson, the bareback rider, was wringing out a pair of pink tights, the aniline dye coloring the water a very pretty shade. Conklin didn't stop to nsk any questions. He grabbed up the tub and ran. Into the tub he threw some acid and the property lemon and called out:

" 'Come quickly. Buy some fine strawberry lemonade.'

"His sales were doubled that day, and since then no well regulated circus is without pink lemonade. However, we do not make it the same way now, and sometimes strawberries are used as well as lemons."—Exchange.

BRUNSWICK STEW.

A Gastronomic Triumph With a National Reputation.

This celebrated stew originated in Brunswick county, Va., from which it takes its name—a county most famous in antebellum days for its perfect cuisine and gastronomical predilections. Tha originator was either Mr. Haskins or Mr. Stith, each claiming during a long life the distinction of having made the first stew and dying without a proper adjustment of the controversy. While made everywhere in the habitable globe, it is seldom made properly. It was introduced in Paris by Judge John T. Mason of Virginia. Only in Brunswick county is this stew so appetizing, so piquant in the seasoning to be found in all its perfection. To this remark of tha writer made to a gentleman in the far south ha replies, "The egotism of a Virginian suggests perfection in all things there, and the slow pace of the state nmple time to arrive at it." The recipe is as follows: One of three kinds of meat is used—lamb, chicken or squirrel. If chicken, it is first parboiled, cut up as if to fry, the outer skin removed, then put on in hot water—n plenty to cover it—a large onion cut fine, n large slice of middling meat cut fine, black and red pepper in abundance and salt. After cooking until the bones can be extracted, and hot water ndded if not enough corn cut off the cob and tomatoes chopped fine are added, with half n pound of butter, more pepper and salt. Before serving add stale light breadcrumbs. Never add Irish potatoes or butter beans or any vegetable save corn and tomatoes. Serva in a tureen. It should be the consistency of thick soup and very highly seasoned. It is considered one of the finest of stews and has a national reputation.—Richmond Times.

"Americanisms."

"Fired out," commonly supposed to be an "Americanism," has been traced home to Shakespeare. In one of his sonnets he says:

Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

"Say," as an exclamation to attract attention to the beginning of a remark, is common enough and not very elegant. At least so thought a schoolteacher who resolved to break his pupils of the habit of using it. A bright one qnoted, however, this from "The Star Spangled Banner:"

Oh, say, can you see?

If the American people sing "say!" in the national hymn, say, why not say "Say?"

As to Bow Legs.

A bow legged man usually possesses more than ordinary strength. Why? Because his legs in supporting great weight can bend in ona direction only, whereas the man with straight legs is inclined to be wabbly. Such being the case, why should not a knock kneed man be stronger than a bow legged one? His knees, being braced against each other, ought to be mora steadfast than legs bending outward. Yet wa all know that the knock kneed man generally goes into consumption and is at all times weaker than his bow legged brother.—New York Press.

Optimistic Sure.

Newberry—Is Sanford of an optimistic temperament? Baldwin — I should say he is. I hava known him to go into a restaurant without a cent in his pocket, order a dozen oysters and feel satisfied that he could pay his bill with a pearl.—Life.

Just Playing Possum.

"So you are going to retira from politics?"

"Yes," said the municipal boss, "I'm going to retire. But I'm not going to sleep so soundly that I can't be awakened."

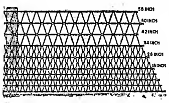
Men ought not to investigate things from words, but words from things.—Myson.

HOG FENCING

Do You Need Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb bottom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.

General Hardware

Red Lake Falls - - - - - Minnesota

When You Travel, Enjoy the Superior

DINING CAR SERVICE

of through Northern Pacific traias. A dainty breakfast, tasty lunch, or delightful dinner prepared by a skilled chef and throughly will served, will round out and vary the pleasure of your trip. The bill-of-fare is varied and attractive—the viands appetizing—the car attractive and easy riding

"Get Your Meal on the Train"

Through dining cars on all transcontinental trains. Cafe Car Service on "Lake Superior Limited" between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Head of the Lakes.

For full information see

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

NORTHERN PACIFIC
YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

Northern Pacific Railway

A. M. CLELAND,
General Passenger Agent
St. Paul, Minn.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

*HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.*

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather. the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains

Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

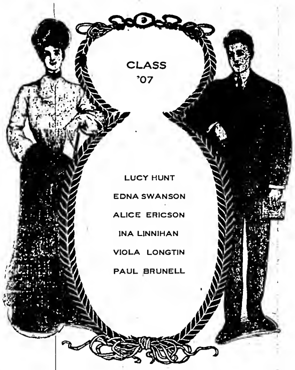
Grand View Hotel

Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

Some Graduation Needs



FOR your graduate costume we have just the materials you need—a handsome line of plain White goods, at a variety of prices that brings a white dress within the reach of all. A large line of Laces, Embroideries and Trimmings. We have especially prepared for you, for everybody according to their pocket books. For graduate gifts you will find a large variety of useful and handsome articles. A useful article is always appreciated. Also a complete line of white gloves, hosiery and underwear, corsets, handkerchiefs, fans, white waists, notions, men's furnishings, dress shirts, neckwear, hats, shoes, gloves, collars and cuffs, suit cases, umbrellas. We will be glad to show you.

Garceau & Zaiser

The Busy Store Red Lake Falls, Minn,

THE LOCAL FIELD

ITEMS OF INTEREST DURING THE WEEK

E. L. Quist Sundayed at Thief River.

S. L. Lewis was in St. Hilaire last Monday.

S. M. Sivertson spent last night in Crookston.

E. M. Hoff of St. Hilaire, was in the city Monday.

W. M. Hughes was a caller from Crookston Monday.

Damon's Colored Musical Company. Opera house, June 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Germo visited in Crookston Saturday.

A. Liligren and wife, of St. Paul, were in the city Monday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Miss Ella Hanson visited with her parents at Fertile Sunday.

P. E. Smidesang, of Wylie, was a county seat caller Tuesday.

G. H. White, of Wadena, transacted business here Monday.

C. N. Bourdon went to Waubun Monday for an extended stay.

A new coat of paint adds much to the appearance of the city hall.

E. M. Stanton, Jr., of Thief River Falls was in the city last Friday.

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Barber E. A. Nelson transacted business at Thief River Monday.

Martin McAndrews, of St. Hilaire, was a county seat caller yesterday.

R. Fortier, a prominent farmer of Gentilly, was in the city yesterday.

Dr. Argue made his regular professional visit to St. Hilaire yesterday.

S. L. Lewis has moved into the Beniot house on Champagne avenue.

Ernest Buse transacted business at Grand Forks and Crookston last week.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

WANTED

Information regarding good farm that is for sale and which can be bought of owner. No agents need answer. Wish to hear from owner only willing to close his own deal and save buyer paying big commission and fancy price to some agent. Would also like to hear of good small business for sale by owner.

Address—INFORMATION DEPARTMENT
Locator Publishing Co. Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Minnie Gerlach visited at Thief River between trains Tuesday.

Miss Mary Lamb spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in Moorhead.

A very social dancing party was given in the K. P. hall last Monday evening.

Attorney F. A. Grady attended to professional business at St. Hilaire yesterday.

Ed Whaley came down from St. Hilaire and spent Wednesday evening in the city.

W. A. Schreiter attended to matters of business in Thief River Falls on Monday.

Pat Martin of Crookston is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Theo. LaBissoniere.

L. C. Simons went to the Twin Cities Monday evening on an extended business tour.

Fresh fancy cookies, a big stock just received at Freund's. Call in and see them.

Atty. G. T. Morken, of Crookston, spent Tuesday in the city attending to legal matters.

Court Commissioner S. T. Johnson, of Thief River Falls, spent Monday night in the city.

Miss Ella Krueger commenced a three months term of school in Garnes last Monday.

Ed Regan and family attended the funeral of Mr. Regan's father, held in Crookston on Tuesday.

K. J. Ike, of the Ike Music house of Crookston, was in the city yesterday, on business for his company.

G. A. Kankel is right in line with a seasonable base ball ad in today's Gazette on this page. Read it.

Mrs. C. W. Johnson went to Crookston last Thursday to visit relatives. She returned Monday morning.

Gilbert and George Bray visited with Crookston friends and relatives from Friday last until Monday.

Damon's Colored Musical company at the Metropolitan opera house, in this city. Tuesday evening, June 4.

Mrs. August Grimm arrived yesterday from Vickburg, Michigan, and will visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schoenaur, and other relatives in this vicinity

Miss May Lee returned to Crookston Monday, concluding a week's visit here with her friend, Miss Elida Peterson.

Eugene Dempsey, from the eastern border of the reservation, was in the city Tuesday on business at the court house.

Damon's Colored Musical company, with a cast of 12 members, will show at the opera house on Tuesday evening, June 4.

August Morin returned to North Dakota Saturday to resume his contract work after attending to business matters here.

Misses Alice Coughlin, Laura Detert, Lee Healy and H. W. Anderson attended the music festival at Grand Forks last Saturday.

Read the change of ad for the Big Store. It dwelleth on suits for the men and boys and patent oxfords for the ladies this week.

M. O. Sortedahl went to Fergus Falls last Thursday to attend to some of his land interests there that needed his attention.

Miss May Hamel and friend, Miss Mabel Hanson, of Grafton, N. Dak., spent Monday in the city visiting with Miss Lillian Buse.

Mrs. M. H. Thielen, of Drayton, N. D., and Miss Kate Martin of Crookston are spending the week at the Theo. LaBissoniere home.

J. E. Murray, with the Miller Furnace company of Milwaukee, was in the city a few days this week in the interest of his company.

Mrs. Christ Eickhoff returned to her home at Crookston last Friday after an enjoyable visit here with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Zaiser.

Miss Loretta Smith, of Bemidji, is spending the week in the city as a guest at the home of her brother, Electrician Smith, and family.

Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, June 7. At Grand View hotel. Remember the date if your eyes trouble you.

The tennis court on the lots south of Zaiser's livery barn is being plowed and will be disced and dragged this week. It will be ready for use in about two weeks.

The recital given last Monday evening by the music class of Sister Cecilia was largely attended. Each number of the program showed careful preparation and reflects great credit upon the work of the Sister and her pupils.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

Miss Mabel Hannay of St. Hilaire, was a companion of Miss Mary Lamb, from here, for a visit at Miss Lamb's home at Moorhead last Sunday.

Rev. Herbert W. Knox, the pastor of the Presbyterian church, will return tomorrow and will preach morning and evening on Sunday, May 26th.

Rev. Aastad of Thief River Falls, conducted services in the Norwegian Lutheran church Monday evening returning to his home Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Edward Raycraft, nee Miss Lillian Belair, arrived in the city this morning from Two Harbors, and will make an extended visit with relatives and friends.

The Busy Store has a seasonable ad this week. It caters for the commencement trade. A glance at the ad and then the store would satisfy any prospective purchaser.

J. B. Armstrong returned Saturday from his trip to the eastern cities. Jim would have been home sooner but stopped off at Minneapolis to take in the convention of the Knights of Pythias, and had a royal time.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls for the week ending May 18, '07: Miss Leah Patnode, Spurr Seotaas and S. McMahon (5).—E. F. Marshall, Postmistress.

The Reichel building, next to the postoffice, which caught fire last winter, is being fitted up and remodeled and will be used by the ladies for serving meals during tournament time.

E. Chattel and a crew of men left yesterday for British Columbia, where Mr. Chattel has a contract for grading on the road of the Canadian Pacific railway. They expect to be absent all summer.

An orchestra composed of Frank Freund, Paul Berthon, J. L. Tracy, Lee Healy, Harry Healy, Clem Brunelle and A. L. Brunelle will go to Thief River tomorrow to furnish music for a dance at the Antlers club.

Sam E. Hunt and E. H. Gerlach, two popular "knights of the grip" and whose homes are in this city, were here calling on the trade Monday.

Ed Moran went to South St. Paul with a carload of stock Saturday. He returned yesterday morning. While in the cities he called on S. A. Swanson and he reports that he will be coming home in a day or two.

Joseph Brohmann, who recently disposed of his farm in Lambert township to Louis Sieff, moved into town last Saturday and will make Red Lake Falls his future place of abode. He will reside in the Sieff residence.

The Percheron stallion, Fred, weight 1700, will stand the season at Guerin Bros. barn. We also have a high grade Jack which will serve at our barn during the season. Anyone wishing horses castrated should give us a call. 31-4 —Guerin Bros.

John A. Pokezwinski went to Moorhead last evening where he was subpoened as a witness in a case against the N. P. railroad. He expects to be gone until Saturday, providing, however, if there is a ball game here Sunday. If not, he has been called to throw a game at Olso and wont be home until Monday.

Ozier Dubuc, the clerk at the Grand View hotel, had a narrow escape from being very seriously injured yesterday afternoon, while hauling manure from the barn back of the hotel to the dump grounds at the old saw mill site. In going down the hill on north Main street, the dashboard broke away, he plunging headlong onto the tongue and the horses became frightened and started to run away, throwing Mr. Dubuc to the ground, the wagon passing over him. The team turned in between Borcher's saloon and Pirath's land office, the wagon striking a corner of the latter building. "Baldy" as he is called, fell on his side and bruised it besides sustaining injuries in the left leg necessitating the use of crutches. His place at the Grand View will be filled by Albert Lizee.

Mrs. H. E. Ives came down from St. Hilaire Monday evening and attended the recital given by Sister Cecilia's music class. She returned Tuesday morning.

Ed Trombly has purchased the LaBissoniere house on Champagne avenue, formerly occupied by S. L. Lewis, and moved his household goods there on Monday.

Lee Healy launched his gasoline boat in the Clearwater river this week. Some very nice rides will be had this summer and it is a wonder that there are not more of them.

Z. Bray of Brooks was in the city Tuesday, calling on his brother, Ed. Mr. Bray announces that Brooks will celebrate St. John's day, June 24th, in a right royal manner. A full account of the particulars will be given later.

The interior of Frank Freund's confectionery store and ice cream parlors has been painted and papered during the week and presents a very neat appearance. Frank intends making his ice cream parlors one of the best and most up-to-date in the north country this season.

One of the most pleasant social functions of the season was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. LaBissoniere last Thursday evening, when 16 invited guests assembled to participate in the evening's amusements. Cinch was played and Harry Healy's knowledge of that game enabled him to carry off the honors of first prize, a tiny pair of souvenir boxing gloves. In the second contest rebus words were used for "Sweets for the Sweet" and Miss Mollie Allard's knowledge of this won for her the prize, a little Indian club filled with candy. A dainty luncheon was served and the party broke up at 12 o'clock. Those present were Misses Lillian Buse, Rose Harren, Etta Gareeau, Alice Boyd, Ella Hanson, Mary Lamb, Kate Berthieume, Mollie Allard and Messrs. Harry Healy, Lee Healy, Joe Karren, Will Ericson, N. M. Watson, Norman Schreiter, Noel Delorme and Clem Brunelle.

All We Ask of You

Is a Look

If our clothing does not appeal to you do not buy. Our Kuppenheimer and Xtra Good line clothes are so much superior to other lines that they deserve your attention.

$15 to $25

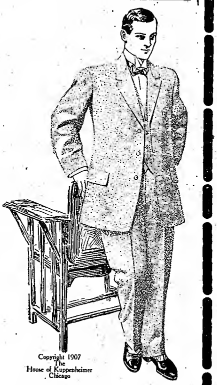
We show another line at

$5.00 to $12.50

that are the finest medium priced clothing ever shown in the city.

Ladies' Patent Oxfords--a new line--
$1.75 to $3.50

The Big Store ...
Theo. LaBissoniere, Proprietor



PLAY BALL!

HARRY HEALY TO BAT

G. A. KANKEL ON DECK

with a full line of base ball goods for the young boy up to the professional player. All the regulation league balls and other base ball paraphernalia is found at our store. Also a full stock of Hog Wire Fencing, Barb Wire, Hoes and Rakes ....

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON, AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A Pe[illegible]ation Concerning the True Order of Marriage.

W[illegible] matters of theology and con[illegible] [illegible] were being debated in Box [illegible] the little bent man down in [illegible] house to the left, in his strug[illegible] himself, was tightening the [illegible] of his fate about him. In his [illegible] mind he had formed one great [illegible]. He believed that a reve[illegible] had come to him. It seemed [illegible] upon him as the culmination [illegible] the days of his distress. He [illegible] now that he had felt it years [illegible] when he first met the wife of [illegible] Pench, the gaunt, gray wom[illegible] [illegible] along the dusty road; and [illegible] when he had found the imbecile [illegible] upon his tormentors. A hundred times it had quickened within him. And it had gained in force [illegible] until to-day, when it was overwhelming him. Now that his [illegible] was wasted, it seemed that his [illegible] could see far.

The great discovery was that the [illegible] upon celestial marriage [illegible] Joseph Smith had been "from [illegible] a trick of Satan to corrupt [illegible]. Not only did it flatly contra[illegible] earlier revelations, but the very [illegible] Mormon itself declared again [illegible] that polygamy was wicked [illegible] Joseph had been duped by the [illegible] of darkness, and all Israel had [illegible] in consequence. Upon the [illegible] plates delivered to him, con[illegible] the divine source of which [illegible] could be no doubt, this order of [illegible] had been repeatedly con[illegible] and forbidden. But as to [illegible] revelation which sanctioned it [illegible] could rightly be doubt, for had not Joseph himself once warned them that some revelations are from God, [illegible] from men, and some from the [illegible] Either the Book of Mormon [illegible] inspired, or the revelation [illegible] from God, since they were [illegible] in opposition.

[illegible] to him with the effect of a [illegible] light, yet seemed to endow [illegible] a new vigor, so that he felt [illegible] and eager to be up, to spread [illegible] abroad. Some remnant of [illegible] fire of inspiration flamed up [illegible] him as he lay on the hard bed [illegible] little room with the summer [illegible] floating in and the out-of-doors [illegible] woman's voice calling a [illegible] off, the lowing of cattle, the [illegible] rhythmic whetting of a scythe [illegible] the echoing stroke of an ax, the [illegible] fluting of a robin—all coming to him a little muted, as if he were no longer in the world.

He [illegible] upon his elbow, glowing with the flush of old memories when his heart had been perfect with the Lord, when he had wrought miracles in the face of the people; when he had besought Heaven fearlessly for [illegible] of its favor; when he had dreamed of being a pillar of fire to his people in their march across the desert, and another Lion of the Lord to fight their just battles. The little bent man of sorrows had again become the lute of the Holy Ghost.

He remembered the day was Saturday, and he began at once to word the phrases in which he would tell his revelation on the morrow. He knew that this must be done tactfully, in spite of its divine source. It would be a momentous thing to the people and to the priesthood. It was conceivable, indeed, that members of the latter might dispute it and argue with him, or even denounce him for a [illegible]. But only at first; the thing was too simply true to be long questioned. In any event, his duty was plain, with righteousness as the girdle of his loins he must go forth on the morrow and magnify his office in the sight of Heaven.

When Prudence came softly in to him like a cool breath of fragrance from the canyon he smiled up to her with a fullness of delight she had never seen in his face before.

There was a new light in her own [illegible] new decisions presaged, a new [illegible] imperfectly suppressed. He stroked her hand as she sat beside him on the bed, wondering if she had at last learned her own secret. But she became grave and was diverted from her own affairs when she observed him more closely.

"Why, you're sick—you're burning up with fever! You must be covered up at once and have sage tea."

He laughed at her, a free, full laugh, such as she had never heard from him in all the years.

"It's no fever, child. It's new life come to me. I'm strong again. My face burns, but it must be the fire of health. I have a work given to me—God has not wholly put me aside."

"But I believe you are sick. Your hands are so hot, and your eyes look so unnatural. You must let me—"

"Now, now—haven't I learned to tell sickness from the glow of a holy purpose?"

"You're sure you are well?"

"Better than for 15 years."

She let herself be convinced for the moment.

"Then please tell me something. Must a man who comes into our faith, if he is baptized rightly, also marry more than one wife if he is to be saved? Can't he be sure of his glory with one if he loves her—oh, very, very much?"

He was moved at first to answer her out of the fullness of his heart, telling her of the wonderful new revelation. But there came the impulse to guard it jealously in his own breast a little longer, to glory secretly in it; half-fearful, too, that some virtue would go out of it should he impart it too soon to another.

"Why do you want to know?"

"Ruel Follett would join our church if he didn't have to marry more than one wife. If he loved some one very much, I'm afraid he would find it hard to marry another girl—oh, he simply couldn't—no matter how pretty she was. He never could do it." Here she pulled one of the ribbons from her broad hat. She gave a little exclamation of relief as if she had really meant to detach it.

"Tell him to wait a little."

"That's what I did tell him, but it seems hardly right to let him join believing that is necessary. I think some one ought to find out that one wife is all God wants a man ever to have, and to tell Mr. Follett so very plainly. His mind is really open to truth, and you know he might do something reckless—he shouldn't be made to wait too long."

"I'm Afraid He'd Find It Hard to Marry Another Girl—He Simply Couldn't."

"Tell him to wait till to-morrow. I shall speak of this in meeting then. It will be all right—all right, dear. Everything will be all right!"

"Only I am sure you are sick, in spite of what you say. I know how to prove it, too—can you eat?"

"I'm too busy thinking of great things to be hungry."

"There—you would be hungry if you were well."

"I can't tell you how well I am, and as for food—our Elder Brother has been feeding me all day with the breath of truth. Such wonderful new things the Lord has shown me!"

"But you must not get up. Lie still and we will nurse you."

He refused the food she brought him, and refused Lorena's sage tea. He was not to be cajoled into treating as sickness the first real happiness he had felt for years. He lay still until his little room grew shadowy in the dusk, filled with a great reviving hope that the Lord had raised a new prophet to lead Israel out of bondage.

As the night fell, however, the shadows of the room began to trouble him as of old, and he found himself growing hotter and hotter until he burned and gasped, and the room seemed about to stifle him. He arose from the bed, wondering that his feet should be so heavy and clumsy, and his knees so weak, when he felt otherwise so strong. His head, too, felt large, and there rang in his ears a singing of incessant quick beats. He made his way to the door, where he heard the voices of Prudence and Follett. It was good to feel the cool night air upon his hot face, and he reassured Prudence, who chided him for leaving his bed.

"When you hear me discourse to-morrow you will see how wrong you were about my being sick," he said. But she saw that he supported himself carefully from the doorway along the wall to the near-by chair, and that he sank into it with every sign of weakness. His eyes, however, were aglow with his secret, and he sat nodding his head over it in a lively way. "Brigham was right," he said, "when he declared that any of us might receive revelations from on high; even the least of us—only we are apt to be deaf to the whispered words until the Lord has scourged us. I have been deaf a long time, but my ears are at last unstopped—who is it coming, dear?"

A tall figure, vague in the dusk, was walking briskly up the path that led in from the road. It proved to be the Wild Ram of the Mountains, freshened by the look of rectitude that the razor gave to his face each Saturday night.

"Evening, Brother Rae—evening, you young folks. Thank you, I will take a chair. You feeling a bit more able than usual, Brother Rae?"

"Much better, Brother Seth. I shall be at the meeting to-morrow."

"Glad to hear it, that's right good—you ain't been out for so long. And we want to have a rousing time, too."

"Only we're afraid he has a fever, instead of being so well," said Prudence. "He hasn't eaten a thing all day."

"Well, he never did overeat himself, that I knew of," said the bishop. "Not eating ain't any sign with him. Now it would be with me. I never believed in fasting the flesh. The Spirit of the Lord ain't ever so close to me as after I've had a good meal of victuals—meat and potatoes and plenty of good sop and a couple of pieces of pie. Then I can unbutton my vest and jest set and set and hear the promptings of the Lord God of Hosts. I know some men ain't that way, but there's the time when I beautify my inheritance in Zion the purtiest. And I'm mighty glad Brother Joel can turn out to-morrow. Of course you heard the news?"

"What news, Brother Seth?"

"Brother Brigham gets here at 11 o'clock from New Harmony."

"Brother Brigham coming?"

"We're getting the bowery ready down to the square to-night so's to have services out of doors."

"He's coming to-morrow?" The words came both from Prudence and her father.

"Of course he's coming. Ben Hadley brought word over. They'll have a turkey dinner at Beil Wardle's house and then services at two."

The flushed little man with the revelation felt himself grow suddenly cold. He had thought it would be easy to launch his new truth in Amalon and let the news be carried to Brigham. To get up in the very presence of him, in the full gaze of those cold blue eyes, was another matter.

"But it's early for him. He doesn't usually come until after conference, after it's got cooler."

The bishop took on the air of a man who does not care to tell quite all that he knows.

"Yes; I suspicion some one's been sending tales to him about a certain young woman's carryings on down here."

He looked sharply at Prudence, who looked at the ground, and felt grateful for the dusk. Follett looked hard at them both and was plainly interested. The bishop spoke again.

"I ain't got no license to say so, but having done that young woman proud by engaging himself to marry her, he might 'a' got annoyed if any one had 'a' told him she was being waited on by a handsome young Gentile, gallivantin' off to canyons day after day—holding hands, too, more than once. Oh, I ain't saying anything. Young blood is young blood; mine ain't always been old, and I never blamed the young, but, of course, the needs of the Kingdom is a different matter. Well, I'll have to be getting along now. We're going to put up some of the people at our house, and I've got to fix to bed mother down in the wagon-box again, I reckon. I'll say you'll be with us to-morrow, then, Brother Joel?"

The little bent man's voice had lost much of its life.

"Yes, Brother Seth, if I am able."

"Well, I hope you are." He arose and looked at the sky. "Looks as if we might have some falling weather. They say it's been moisting quite a bit up Cedar way. Well—good night, all!"

When he was gone the matter of his visit was not referred to. With some constraint they talked a little while of other things. But as soon as the two men were alone for the night, Follett turned to him, almost fiercely.

"Say, now, what did that old goat-whiskered loon mean by his hintings about Prudence?"

The little man was troubled.

"Well, the fact is, Brigham has meant to marry her."

"You don't mean you'd have let him? Say, I'd hate to feel sorry for holding off on you like I have!"

"No, no, don't think that of me."

"Well, what were you going to do?"

"I hardly knew."

"You better find out."

"I know it—I did find out, to-day. I know, and it will be all right. Trust me. I lost my faith for a moment just now when I heard Brother Brigham was coming to-morrow; but I see how it is—the Lord has wished to prove me. Now there is all the more reason why I should not flinch. You will see that I shall make it all right to-morrow."

"Well, the time's about up. I've been here over two months now, just because you were so kind of helpless. And one of our wagon-trains will be along here about next Monday. Say, she wouldn't ever have married him, would she?"

"No, she refused at once; she refused to consider it at all."

He was burning again with his fever, and there was something in his eagerness that seemed to overcome Follett's indignation.

"Well, let it go till to-morrow, then. And you try to get some rest now. That's what I'm going to do."

But the little bent man, flushed though he was, felt cold from the night air, and, piling more logs on the fire, he drew his chair close in front of it.

As often as Follett wakened through the night he saw him sitting there, sometimes reading what looked like a little old Bible, sometimes speaking aloud as if seeking to memorize a passage.

The last Follett remembered to have heard was something he seemed to be reading from the little book: "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

He fell asleep again with a feeling of pity for the little man.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

A Procession, a Pursuit and a Capture.

Follett awoke to find himself superfluous. The women were rushing excitedly through their housework in order to be at hand when the procession of Brigham and his suite should march in. Of Joel Rae he caught but a glimpse through the door of his little room, the face flushed that had a long time been sallow and bloodless. When the door had closed he could hear the voice now strong again. He seemed to be, as during the night, rehearsing something he meant to say. And later it was plain that he prayed, though he heard nothing more than the high pleading of the voice.

Follett would not have minded these things, but Prudence was gone, and no one could tell him where. From Christina, of the rock-bound speech, he blasted the items that she was wearing "a dress all new" and "a red-ribboned hat." Lorena, too, with all her willingness of speech, knew nothing definite.

"All I know is she fixed herself up like she was going to an evening ball or party. I wish to the lands I'd kep' my complexion the way she does hern. And she had on her best lawn that her pa got her in Salt Lake, the one with the little blue figures in it. She does look sweeter than honey on a rag in a store dress, and that Leghorn hat with the red bow, though what she wanted to start so early for I don't know. The procession can't be along yet, but she might have gone down to march with them, or to help decorate the bowery. I know when I was her age I was always a great hand for getting ready long before any one come, when my mother was making a company for me, putting up my waterfall and curling my bean-catchers on a hot pipestem. But, land! I ain't no more time to talk with you."

Down the main road he hesitated. To the right he could see where the green mouth of the canyon invited; but to the left lay the village, where Prudence doubtless was. He would find her and bring her away. For Follett was determined to toe the mark himself now.

In the one street of Amalon there was the usual Sabbath hush; but above this was an air of dignified festivity. The village in its Sunday best homespun, with here and there a suit of store goods, was holding its breath. In the bowery a few workers, under the supervision of Bishop Wright, were adding the last touches of decoration. It was a spot of pleasant green in the dusty square—a roof of spruce boughs, with evergreens and flowers garnishing the posts, and a bank of flowers and fruit back of the speaker's stand.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ON THE GREEN DIAMOND

"Rube" Waddell

Rube Waddell, the erstwhile actor and eccentric pitcher of the Philadelphia American league club, was recently suspended from duty for 30 days. The suspension is contingent upon good behavior, and unless the Rube mends his ways he will air his heels on the players' bench in innocuous inactivity a much longer period. Manager Mack said that Rube had a habit of staying out late at night and was warned several times, and as he did not change his habits he thought it was time something was done.

Queerest of Baseball Parks at Saginaw, Mich.

Field Laid Out in an Ex-Lumber Yard Has Diamond Like a Jumping Jack.

They have the most wonderful ball park in the country at Saginaw, Mich. Originally the field was a lumber yard and it is not much better to-day, the sod having been worn away in spots, allowing sawdust to percolate through.

Billy Regan, the Grand Rapids player who was with Jackson in the Southern Michigan league this year, tells of his first experience on the grounds.

Regan's attention was attracted to something unusual when he was on second. The batter hit a slow grounder toward third and the pitcher and third sacker started for the ball. About the time the latter was ready to pick up the sphere the earth seemed to move from under his feet, a cloud of dust struck him fairly in the eyes and the ball rolled to the left field.

Another time when on the field Regan kept jumping up and down around the third bag, but was abruptly called down by the pitcher, who yelled, "Don't you see you are jostling me off the rubber and I can't pitch until you keep still?"

A little later in the game Regan was at bat and on an adverse decision by the umpire the Saginaw team came running in to object in a body.

A strange sight greeted Regan's eyes. The park seemed to swim before him, rolled like the swell of Lake Erie after a storm and little spurts of dust came shooting up all over the infield.

"It's an earthquake," screamed the Toledo lad, and he made ready to make a hasty exit, but the laughter of his fellow players quieted him down and he pinched himself to make sure it wasn't a dream.

"I haven't been drinking," remarked Regan to the catcher. "What's the matter with this bloooming park, anyway?"

"Why," replied the backstop, "the field is built on an old lumber yard and there are a lot of boards just under the surface. Every time you step on one end you tilt up the other end. This throws up the dirt and when the pitcher yelled at you a little while ago you were on one end and he on the other of a plank and you were bounding him around."

AMONG THE MINORS

Offa Neal, the Louisville third sacker, is leading the hitters in the American association.

Schneiberg, the pitcher turned over to Milwaukee by Detroit this spring, is making good.

Lansing has signed George Derby of Detroit.

The Dayton club has released Infielder Gates and Outfielder Denney.

The Altoona club has sold Catcher Slattery to the Johnstown club.

The Poughkeepsie club of the Hudson River league has signed Third Baseman Creighton Shelton of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Dutch Players Lead on Cleveland Ball Team

Germans Have a Majority of Seven to Four Over Irish—Ten Nationalities Represented.

The Germans have the Irishmen beaten seven to four on the Naps, but, at that, there are more Celts in the aggregation than there was a year ago. In addition, there are a few who have some Irish blood in them, but who have to be classified as English.

Bill Bernhard, Glenn Liebhardt, Jake Thielman, Heinie Berger, Elmer Flick and Harry Bay compose the brigade from the "Vaderland," the Irish squad consisting of Bill Bradley, Joe Birmingham, Pete O'Brien and George Stovall. "Cotton" Turner is a Dutchman.

Robert Bruce Rhoades has two colleagues to whom he can say "Hoot mon" this year. "Bunk" Congalton and Bill Hinchman pleading guilty to being full-blooded Scots. Hinchman was supposed to be a German, but he says, despite his name, his ancestors came from the land of the thistle.

Of the three catchers, Wakefield is an Irish-American, while Harry Bemis comes from good old English stock. "Nig" Clark, however, is the real American of the bunch, haivng Indian blood in his veins.

It has often been stated that Joss and Hess were also Germans, but such is a mistake, the journalist pitcher being a Swiss, while Otto Hess is descended from the vikings, Sweden being the native land of his ancestors.

Inasmuch as Manager Lajoie is a Frenchman, there are really ten nationalities represented on the Cleveland roster.

AMERICAN LEAGUE NOTES

Welday will be the White Sox utility man all season.

Kleinow is catching well for Clark Griffith and seems out for a good year.

George Stone got a 100-pound sack of flour for a home run he made at St. Louis.

Criger is the Criger of old. He catches as effectively as he did before he was ill.

They say in St. Louis that Harry Howell is the only pitcher on whom McAleer can rely.

Laporte, the Yankee's third baseman, uses about the heaviest bat in the American league.

Perrine, Washington's new shortstop, greatly resembles Elberfield, of New York, in acton.

Pitcher Tom Hughes, of Washington, believes this will be his banner year in baseball.

Sam Crawford and Topsy Hartsel hit the hardest of any visitors at the New York American grounds.

The New York Club has released pitchers Hughes and Castleton to Montreal and Atlanta respectively.

Although his knee is not giving him any trouble, Jimmy Collins is wearing a bandage as precaution.

Danny Hoffman is now leading the New York Highlanders at the bat, having regained his batting eye.

Still Normandy's Heroine.

One of the favorite postal cards offered for sale to tourists by shop keepers of Rouen, Normandy, shows a modern feminine compatriot of Joan of Arc dressed and posed to represent the great French heroine spinning in her thatched roofed cottage at Domremy.

We Want Your Cream.

Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Socrates was henpecked, but no woman can prove that he might not, if he had possessed a happy home, have been a greater philosopher than he was.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
CURES RHEUMATISM
BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE
DIABETES
discontinued the use of our package. The public may rely of imitations. Sold only in Good House Painters

will quickly tell you to buy

Masury's House Paints

If they have been using Masury's House Paints they will insist upon them because they know them to be superior in lasting and preservative qualities to all other paints. They are Pure Linseed Oil Paints and have withstood all possible tests of endurance for sixty-five years. They are manufactured only by

JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

Perfect Womanhood

The greatest menace to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from some derangement of the feminine organs.

Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their health, barely in time to save their lives.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headache, bearing-down sensations, nervousness, irregularities or the "blues," she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as the great woman's remedy for woman's ills, made only of roots and herbs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

It cures Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and all Organic Diseases, and is invaluable in the Change of Life. It dissolves and Expels Tumors at an early stage. Subdues Faintness, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole female sysem. It is an excellent remedy for derangements of the Kidneys in either sex.

Here's something new and delicious!

Quaker Wheat Berries

A new way of preparing wheat for food.

Choice wheat, puffed and baked; ready-to-serve; crisp and toothsome.

The flavor is in it, not sprayed on it
Takes less cream; tastes better with less
All the strength of whole wheat
Wholesome; the more the better for children

Ask your grocer for it

Large package 10c

The Quaker Oats Company
CHICAGO

Furnish your table with cups, saucers and plates from the family size package of Quaker Oats.

He who relies on another's table is apt to dine late.—Italian.

Hides, Furs, Wool, Pelts, Etc.

To get full value, ship to the old reliable N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult to each other? —George Eliot.

For Prices on Poultry,

either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

Work faithfully, and you will put yourself in possession of a glorious and enlarging happiness.—Ruskin.

Krause's Cold Cure.

For cold in head, throat, chest or back. Best remedy for La Grippe. Druggists, 25c.

There never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing good that never could have been done before, and never can be again.—William Burleigh.

Ship Your Cream to Us.

The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Possessed.

Father—I wonder what's the matter with Nellie this evening? She acts like one possessed.

Sister—She probably is. I noticed a new ring on her finger when she came downstairs.—Illustrated Bits.

U. S. Dip, Wash & Disinfectant

the best & cheapest. 1 Gal. makes 100 Gallons, Dip, wash or spray. 1 Gal. 75 cts., 3 Gals. $2.25, 5 Gals. $3.00. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Figures Seem Contradictory.

The United Kingdom, which is the largest importer in the world of cattle and sheep for slaughtering purposes, is oddly enough the largest exporter of horses for the same purpose.

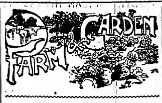
The inducements to adopt Nature's perfect Laxative, Garfield Tea, are many! It is made wholly of simple Herbs and is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Law; it overcomes constipation, regulates the liver and kidneys, purifies the blood and brings Good Health.

Worth Observing.

In a certain preparatory school in Washington an instructor one day made the statement that "every year a sheet of water 14 feet thick is raised to the clouds from the sea."

"At what time of the year does that occur, professor?" asked a freshman, "It must be a sight worth going a long way to see."—Harper's.

The ignorant are courageous.—Modern Greek.



END SCOOPS FOR WAGON BOX.

How a Convenient Attachment Can Be Easily Made.

A handy scoop board which can be attached to the rear end of any wagon box is shown herewith. The sketch shows very clearly how it is constructed. All that is necessary is to make a floor for the scoop six inches longer than the box is high, with width as illustrated.

Remove the end gate to wagon and attach the scoop board. This may be done by using small strap hinges with screws so that the scoop board can be removed when not desired, or it will be possible to put a bolt through the side of the scoop board at a point near B so as to form a pivot for the end.

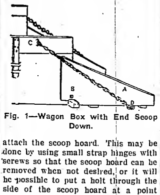


Fig. 1—Wagon Box with End Scoop Down.

Build the scoop board just wide enough so that the sides will come on the outside of the wagon box. In this way, says Prairie Farmer, it will serve the double purpose of holding the sides of the box together and keeping the corn from rolling off when lowering for scooping.

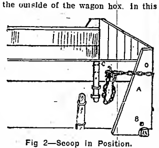

Fig 2—Scoop in Position.

Chain is fastened in the manner shown in Fig. 1 which also illustrates how the scoop board is fastened when lowered. Fig. 2 illustrates the method of fastening when it is drawn up in position.

It is best to have chain fastened in manner shown, and passing clear around under the scoop board to the large straps shown at D. This chain will give added support to the end piece.

SUCCESS WITH POLE BEANS.

Some Suggestions as to Cultivation by One Who Knows.

Lima beans will grow and do well in any fair garden or corn land, but will yield better and be more profitable if put on a good sandy loam, well drained and sloping a little toward the south.

We prepare the ground carefully, plowing, harrowing and dragging with plank drag to put land in good condition.

Then we set the poles three by three and one-half feet, widest apart east and west, for we cultivate only one way, through the widest spaces.

A pole six to seven feet is long enough. We set them before planting leaning poles to the north a little. In setting poles we use a sharp, round stake, driving it one foot into the ground then remove and put in pole as tight as possible.

The beans are planted if ground and weather are warm, about May 15, in latitude of central Illinois.

The large flat limas we plant by pressing each bean into the ground, eye downward, about one inch deep, planting six or eight beans in a circle around each pole. For smaller pole beans we make a place about two inches deep around each pole, then drop beans and cover with hoe.

We cultivate, hoe and keep clean until late in summer, sometimes helping vines take to the poles, says a writer in Farm and Home. Remember that all pole beans run the same way around the pole and if started in the other direction they will not grow.

Setting Strawberry Plants.

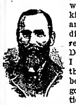
They should be set every 18 inches in rows three and one-half feet apart. Maintain clean cultivation until frost comes. When the ground is first frozen cover the plants with almost any litter, as free from weed seed as possible. Uncover in the spring after the frost is out and before the plants heat and mold. Leave the mulch between the rows until after picking is over. Immediately after the last picking mow the field and burn or haul off the litter and commence cultivation, and continue as before until frost comes. There is some tedious work connected with the renewing of the field for each succeeding crop, so that one must sit down to rest and refresh himself. The victory lies in the getting up and continuing again.

Early Sown Seed.

Seed sown early should be covered shallow and not rolled. That sowed in June should be covered deeper by rolling seed in row and loosening soil on top.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Profit by the Experience of One Who Has Found Relief.



James R. Keeler, retired farmer, of Fenner St., Cazenovia, N. Y., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered with my back and kidneys. I doctored and used many remedies without getting relief. Beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills, I found relief from the first box, and two boxes restored me to good, sound condition. My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can earnestly recommend them."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

WHAT MADE HIM DOUBTFUL.

Size of Commuter's Hat Caused Acquaintance to Worry.

A commuters on the D., L. & W. remarked to a friend the other morning, as they came into the city:

"Hawkins, of Stamford, is going to move into that new house next door to me. I know him very slightly, and I understand that you know him pretty well."

"Yes, I have known him for upward of 20 years."

"Well, what kind of a fellow is he, anyhow?" asked the commuter.

"A first-rate fellow, and in every way desirable. Why?"

"I just wanted to know, because I could never quite make up my mind about him, he wears such a small hat."—Philadelphia Ledger.

BABY'S ECZEMA GREW WORSE.

Hospitals and Doctors Could Not Relieve Him—But Cuticura Remedies a Speedy, Permanent Cure.

"Eczema appeared when our baby was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. C. F. Kara, 343 East 65th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

THOUGHT HE WAS WANTED.

Swede Returned According to Instructions on Envelope.

Christ Nelson, having been in this country only a few weeks, was slow in learning American customs, and especially the inscriptions on envelopes. One of his first acts after landing in Oregon was to take out naturalization papers. On the corner of the envelope, in which were contained the documents that made him an American citizen, were the words: "Return in five days."

"Wal, I be har," he said yesterday, as he shuffled up to the counter in the county clerk's office and spoke to Deputy Prasp.

"What do you want?" asked that official, carefully noting the embarrassed flush on the Swede's face.

"Wal, it say on this har envelope 'return in five days,' and time be up to-day, so I ban come round."

When assured that nobody wanted him, he turned with surprise and walked sadly away, not certain whether he was naturalized or not.—Portland Oregonian.

Cannon May Break Record.

Of the congressmen who have served since the foundation of this government, more than 12,000 individuals, only 34 have served 20 years or more. The longest service was that of John H. Ketcham, of New York, who served 33 years, and was a member when he died. Mr. Cannon, who comes next, has served 32 years. Since he is elected to the next congress he will, if he lives to the end of his term, take the first place in the list of veterans.—Youth's Companion.

CHANGE IN FOOD

Works Wonders in Health.

It is worth knowing that a change in food can cure dyspepsia. "I deem it my duty to let you know how Grape-Nuts food has cured me of indigestion.

"I had been troubled with it for years, until last year my doctor recommended Grape-Nuts food to be used every morning. I followed instructions and now I am entirely well.

"The whole family like Grape-Nuts, we use four packages a week. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you see fit."

The reason this lady was helped by the use of Grape-Nuts food, is that it is predigested by natural processes and therefore does not tax the stomach as the food she had been using; it also contains the elements required for building up the nervous system. If that part of the human body is in perfect working order, there can be no dyspepsia, for nervous energy represents the steam that drives the engine.

When the nervous system is run down, the machinery of the body works badly. Grape-Nuts food can be used by small children as well as adults. It is perfectly cooked and ready for instant use.

Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Anyone can dye with PUTNAM FADELESS DYES; no experience required; success guaranteed.

No man is a thousand descents from Adam.—Hooker.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Where might is master, justice is servant.—German.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.

Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

The spring poet usually writes his spring poems by the side of as good a fire as he can afford.

TEXAS GULF COAST LANDS.

No blizzards, no heat prostrations. Growing crops all year. Live Agts. wanted. THEO. F. KOCH, ST. PAUL, MINN.

Labor rids us of three great evils—tediousness, vice and poverty.—French.

FITS, St. Vitus Dance and all Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for Free $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Volume on Alpine Tunnels.

An Italian, G. B. Biadego, has written a book of over 1,200 pages on the Alpine tunnels.

Spring always brings into special favor Nature's blood purifier, Garfield Tea. It is made wholly of clean, sweet Herbs. It purifies the blood, cleanses the system, clears the complexion, eradicates disease and promotes Good Health. For young and old.

To reach port on the sea of life we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it, but we must sail and not drift or lie at anchor.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

One size smaller after using Allen's Foot-Ease. A certain cure for swollen, sweating, hot, aching feet. At all Druggists, 25c. Accept no substitute. Trial package FREE. Address A. S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Peat as Inexpensive Fuel.

Lieut. H. Ekelund, of Jonkoping, Sweden, claims to have made an important invention in fuel saving. According to his method, peat is used in the shape of a powder and is said to give sufficient heat to use steel in a furnace without the use of coal.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN,
Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Socrates was henpecked, but no woman can prove that he might not, if he had possessed a happy home, have been a greater philosopher than he was.

STOMACH ON STRIKE

SUCCESSFUL TONIC TREATMENT FOR INDIGESTION.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured This Woman and Have Cured Many Hundreds of Other Cases of Common Ailments

Loss of appetite, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, heavy dull headache and a dull, sluggish feeling—these are the symptoms of stomach trouble. They indicate that the stomach is on a strike; that it is no longer furnishing to the blood the full quota of nourishment that the body demands, hence every organ suffers.

There are two methods of treatment, the old one by which the stomach is humored by the use of predigested foods and artificial ferments, and the new one by which the stomach is toned up to do the work which nature intended of it. A recent cure by the tonic treatment is that of Mrs. Mary Stackpole, of 81 Liberty street, Lowell, Mass. She says:

"I suffered constantly for years from stomach trouble and terrible backaches and was confined to my bed the greater part of three years. I was under the care of our family physician most of the time, but did not seem to get better.

"I was completely run-down and was not able to do my work about the house. My blood was impure and my complexion pale. I suffered from flashes of heat, followed suddenly by chills. I had awful headaches, which lasted from three to four days. I could get but little rest at night, as my sleep was broken and fitful. As a result I lost several pounds in weight and became very nervous.

"I was in a wretched condition when I heard about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I started to take the pills at once and began to gain in weight and health. I was encouraged by this to keep on until I was cured. My friends and neighbors often remark what a changed woman I am and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These wonderful pills are useful in a wide range of diseases such as anaemia, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, nervous headaches, and even locomotor ataxia and partial paralysis.

The great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills lies in the fact that they actually make new blood and this carries health and strength to every portion of the body. The stomach is toned up, the nerves are strengthened, every organ is stimulated to do its work.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm.

Is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once. 50c.
Ely Bros., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

LIVE STOCK AND MISCELLANEOUS ELECTROTYPES

In great variety for sale at the lowest prices by A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO., 73 W. Adams St., Chicago

If afflicted with sore eyes, use } Thompson's Eye Water

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr. SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food an

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SICK HEADACHE

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

FARMS THAT GROW "NO. 1 HARD" WHEAT

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

(Sixty-three Pounds to the Bushel). Are situated in the Canadian West where Homesteads of 160 acres can be obtained free by every settler willing and able to comply with the Homestead Regulations. During the present year a large portion of

New Wheat Growing Territory

HAS BEEN MADE ACCESSIBLE TO MARKETS BY THE RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION that has been pushed forward so vigorously by the three great railway companies.

For literature and particulars address SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION, Ottawa, Canada, or the following authorized Canadian Government Agent:

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Mention this paper.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

[illegible] must positively have good health [illegible] in proper condition. [illegible] by giving an all laxative [illegible] Ayer's Pills. A vegetable, sugar coated.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's
HAIR VIGOR.
AGUE CURE.
CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.

When in the City
stop at

PAUL'S HOTEL

Sample Room In Connection

Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.

House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.

Give Us A Call.

SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

DR. N. M. WATSON
Physician and Surgeon
Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON
Physician and Surgeon
Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.
DENTIST
Offices in LaBissoniere Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.
At St. Hilaire every Wednesday.

Thomas Germo, Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley
GERMO & FARLEY
Attorneys at-Law
Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA
REMEDY

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhoea.

It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of [illegible] colic and cholera morbus.

It is equally successful for summer diarrhoea and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.

When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now.
Price, 25c. Large Size, 50c.

TEXAS LANDS We own 200,000 acres of land in the PANHANDLE and VAN HORNE VALLEY, Texas, one of the most fertile valleys in the state. The Southern Pacific Railroad passes through the Van Horne Valley lands and the proposed line of the Santa Fe will run directly through our Panhandle tract. These lands are exceptionally well located for retail purposes. They were carefully selected, and, having purchased them some time ago, we can quote you prices and terms that are right. LAND AGENTS, ATTENTION!—Secure control of 10,000 acres of this land, which you can do by making a small payment down, and realize a profit of $50,000. Own your own lands. Don't sell on commission. TEXAS COLONIZATION CO., 601-5 Pioneer Press Bldg. St. Paul, Minn.

Pitcher's Castoria.

Additional Local...

Mrs. G. H. Samers departed for her home at Crookston last Saturday, concluding a pleasant week's visit with her sister, Mrs. Arthur Zaiser.

J. Leo Spillane returned to the city Monday from Minneapolis, where he had been for the past ten days, after disposing of his interest in the newspaper at Callaway.

Parties having spare rooms and beds to rent during the fire tournament will confer a favor on the committee by leaving word with J. A. Duffy or Geo. F. Hennings.

Mrs. L. C. Simons and son departed Tuesday evening for Granite Falls, Minn., for an extended visit with relatives. They were accompanied as far as Minneapolis by Mr. Simons.

Mrs. Borchers and children, of East Grand Forks, departed for their home Monday, after spending a pleasant week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Otto Zaiser in this city.

Pete Beauleau was an over-Sunday visitor with his parents and many friends in the city. He is taking a course in stenography and bookkeeping at the Union Commercial college at Grand Forks and is well pleased with his new work.

O. F. Hartman, of New York, the eastern representative of the Red Lake Falls Milling company, was in the city Friday, for the first time since entering their employ about two years ago. He was a guest at the home of J. J. Padden during his stay between trains.

Miss Pauline Nieland, of the Washington school corps, has been engaged to teach the A first and B second grades in the Central school at Grand Forks. The many friends of Miss Nieland will regret to see her depart but will wish her all kinds of success in broader fields.

E. Arneson, of the Arneson Mercantile company of East Grand Forks, was in the city Tuesday transacting business. He departed for Middle River yesterday morning and came back in the evening to drive to Brooks, from which place he will go back to his home.

A. E. Schusser, the talented young editor of the Kelliher Journal, and who is also postmaster at Kelliher, was a visitor in the city Tuesday. Mr. Schusser, in addition to publishing a very bright and neatly gotten-up paper, is one of the best printers in the north country.—Bemidji Pioneer.

Deputy Dairy Inspector Joel G. Winkjer was in the city last Thursday enroute to Plummer and Lillo where he went to inspect the creameries at those points. Mr. Winkjer states that there will be about fifteen new creameries established this season in the northwestern part of the state.

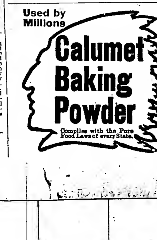
Miss Flora Eickhoff, one of the June brides, was guest of honor last evening at a china shower, given by Miss Stella Monroe, at her home on Broadway. She was the recipient of many beautiful pieces among them being a hand painted tea set. The evening was spent with games, the prize for the guessing game going to Miss Ida Clapp. There were about eighteen present.—Crookston Times.

George Gibeau, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gibeau, broke his collar bone last Saturday afternoon, while playing games in front of the Gibeau residence on Third street. The lad was running when he was grabbed by the coat from behind and was thrown on his side. Dr. Wilkinson was called and the fractured part was put in a cast. The boy is up and attending his school duties as if nothing had happened.

The board of directors of the Gentilly Farmers' Mutual Insurance company met at the city hall yesterday afternoon and adjusted the claim of Paul Cyr, for the loss of his house and furniture by fire about a month ago. The board was to have met on the 11th inst., at Gentilly but owing to the absence of some of the directors the meeting was adjourned and postponed until yesterday. Mr. Cyr carried between $600 and $700 insurance.

Get What You Ask For!

When you ask for Cascarets Candy Cathartic be sure you get them. Genuine tablets stamped C. C. C. Never sold in bulk. A substitutor is always a cheat and a fraud. Beware! All druggists. 10c.



Used by Millions
Calumet Baking Powder
Complies with the Pure Food Laws of every State.

INSPECT SAND PIT

Grand Forks Parties Inspect Sand Pit at Dorothy.

Alderman R. M. Carothers, Supt. Lunseth, of the water works company of Grand Forks and Walter Buehler, consulting engineer for Kettle River Quarries company of Minneapolis, were out in Dorothy yesterday morning, for the purpose of making an examination of the sand pit and other property owned by Grand Forks city. Last winter that city purchased an additional forty acres of land in the vicinity of Dorothy and the committee will look over the land thoroughly and will make a report as to the quantity and quality of the sand and also on the gravel situation.

Clean Up Notice

Notice is hereby given to the people of Red Lake Falls to clean up. All manure and rubbish to be hauled to city dumping grounds, at old saw mill site. All dead animals to be buried on the dumping grounds, and buried deep enough to prevent them being dug up by dogs. Everything should be cleaned up by June 1st, and the city given a clean appearance for the tournament.

—J. C. Wilkinson,
Health Officer.

THE APACHES.

This Tribe Holds the Record as Bad Indians.

Scarcely a tribe of our American Indians but what have engraved their record of crime and infamy high up on history's wall, yet above them all is the Apaches'.

From 1540 to 1853 New Spain and Mexico carried on a so called warfare with these people. The Apaches were vastly outnumbered by the Mexican soldiery, but what they lacked in numbers was more than made up in courage and craftiness. The Apache ever had a thorough contempt for the Mexican soldier, and in later years, when they were fighting with firearms as well as arrows, they would not waste cartridges on the Mexicans, but would kill them with arrows, spears and stones, saving their cartridges for other and more worthy foes.

When this southwest region became a part of the United States the Apaches were a serious problem with which we had to contend. Our government vacillated between a simpering peace policy and the other extreme, their extermination.

Their zone of wandering being intersected by the international boundary line further complicated matters. They would raid down into Mexico and then rush back with the plunder to our side of the line, out of reach of the pursuing soldiers. Next it would be a raid on the Arizona side and a flight into the wild mountains of Sonora. The Mexican government attempted to assist their miserable army by giving a scalp bounty, and for years they paid out their gold coin for Apache scalps. Scalp hunting became a recognized industry. The horror of this was that to the Mexican official all scalps looked alike, whether from the head of a hostile or a friendly Indian. The price was $100 for a man, $50 for a woman and $25 for a child. It is small wonder that the tribe sank deeper into savagery than ever when we stop to think that the men knew there was a price set on the scalps of their wives and children, and there was a horde of human fiends, white in color, but more savage than the savage himself, who were hunting them as they would a cougar of the mountains.—E. S. Curtis in Scribner's.

QUICKER THAN LIGHTNING.

Action of the Human Body Outstrips Everything In Motion.

"As quick as lightning" is a phrase colloquially used to express the maximum of rapidity, but, according to a well known scientist, electricity itself is outstripped by that old fashioned machine, the human body, by which it appears powers can, so to speak, be generated in the brain, transmitted through the nerves and developed in the muscles in an infinitesimal fraction of a second.

It is stated that a pianist in playing a presto of Mendelssohn played 5,595 notes in four minutes and three seconds. The striking of each of these, it has been estimated, involved two movements of the finger and possibly more.

Again, the movements of the wrist, elbows and arms can scarcely be less than one movement for each note. As twenty-four notes were played each second and each involves three movements we would have seventy-two voluntary movements per second.

Again, the place, the force, the time and the duration of each of these movements were controlled. All these motor reactions were conditioned upon a knowledge of the position of each finger of each hand before it was moved, while moving it, as well as of the auditory effect to force and pitch, all of which involves equally rapid sensory transmissions.

If we add to this the work of the memory in placing the notes in their proper position as well as the fact that the performer at the same time participates in the emotion the selection describes and feels the strength and weaknesses of the performance, we arrive at a truly bewildering network of impulses coursing along at inconceivably rapid rates.

Such estimates show, too, that we are capable of doing many things at once. The mind is not a unit, but is composed of higher and lower centers, the available fund of attention being distributed among them.—Pearson's Weekly.

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water caves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open wall. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (Pescado cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

The Italian Baby.

No infant receives a warmer welcome to the world or is more happily born than the Italian baby. No infant is the object of more caresses or is more fondly admired. Indeed, no matter how poor the mother and father may be, no matter how large the family, they have very merry times when another son or daughter comes to them. The neighbors are invited in, a feast is prepared, a gallon or two of cheap wine is procured, and the merriment sometimes lasts several days. The Italian considers there are only three great events in the life of man—namely, his birth, marriage and death. These three events never pass without a gorgeous and elaborate celebration. In this simple way they strive to carry out the tender life lesson: "When you were born you wept while those around you smiled. So live that when you die you alone may smile and those around you weep." And so they laugh and drink wine and sing, for they believe it will have an effect upon the life of the quivering form soon to take its place among them.—London Standard.

Machinery of Memory.

The machinery of memory was thus interestingly described by an authority on the brain: "The act of remembering something," he said, "involves a distinct change in the brain substance. The thing to be remembered is recorded by a little nerve cell. The first time the cell does its work an impression is made upon it. But that impression is apt to wear off unless the action of the cell is repeated, and the oftener this is the case the more fixed becomes the impression, or 'cell memory,' as it is called. Suppose that the work of this particular cell is to enable you to recognize a certain smell. If the impression is made but once, the cell may fail to retain it, but if it is repeated several times a lasting impression will be made, and you will recognize the particular odor when you meet with it again."

Southern Wit.

In the early days of the civil war, says Mrs. D. G. Wright in "A Southern Girl In '61," many northern senators were especially violent in their denunciations of the seceding states, occasionally much to the amusement of their listeners.

On one occasion a western senator ended a speech by declaring that were certain threatened events to occur he would "leave this country and join some other nation. Even the Comanches he would prefer to this government in such a case."

Senator Wigfall of Texas rose in answer and stated in a tone of grave remonstrance that he trusted the senator would consider well before he took such a step, "for the Comanches had already suffered too much from contact with the whites."

BASE BALL

Thief River Falls
vs.
Red Lake Falls

Sunday, May 26
Red Lake Falls

This is the first game of the season and a warm game is expected. Get Out And Root.

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS MILLING CO.

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway

Let Us Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..

BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.

Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats

Fish and Game in Season.

Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.

TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

MINNESOTA HISTORIC SOCIETY

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, MAY 30, 1907 . No 35

Minnesota Historical Society

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Makes the finest, lightest, best flavored biscuit, hot-breads, cake and pastry. Renders the food more digestible and wholesome.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

OLD DITCH MATTER UP

Farmers from the Town of Lambert, Hill River and Chester Appear Before Judge Watts

About twenty farmers from the towns of Chester, Lambert and Hill River were in Crookston Saturday, the largest number being from Lambert. The latter came in to protest against the construction of Judicial Ditch No. 7, which is now under way. They claim that the ditch will bring too much water from the lands above onto the farm lands of Lambert and will do a great deal of damage to those farms. They were represented by County Attorney Germo of Red Lake Falls. There were a number of farmers from Hill River and Chester also who came down to uphold the ditch. A long argument was held in Judge Watt's chambers Saturday morning and it was decided to continue the case until two weeks from today. This will give the farmers who are making the protest time to have a complete survey made and they will be able to give more accurate testimony as to the damage, if any, that will be done by the ditch. It was evident from the testimony taken Saturday that the Lost River into which the ditch will empty, will have to be deepened for some distance in order to handle the water of the new ditch.

SHERIFFS MUST PAY

Will Have to Take Prisoners to the State Prison at Their Own Expense.

Sheriffs who convey prisoners from their respective counties to the state prison from now on will have to do so at their own expense or "work" the counties to meet these bills which have heretofore been paid by the state.

As a result of an oversight on the part of those making up the state budget for the general appropriation bill enacted by the last legislature, no provision was made for a fund to meet the cost conveying prisoners to the penitentiary. The fund always provided heretofore has been $12,000 a year. There is now about $100 of this fiscal year. Before the beginning of the state's new year, Aug. 1, this amount will be used up and there will probably be a lot of pending claims. What sheriff's can do hereafter to get remunerated for their trips to the prison is probably a question they must adjust with their county governments.

The Percheron stallion, Fred, weight 1700, will stand the season at Guerin Bros. barn. We also have a high grade Jack which will serve at our barn during the season. Anyone wishing horses castrated should give us a call. 31-4 —Guerin Bros.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier

Red Lake Falls Minnesota

RED LAKE FALLS WINS

The Red Lake Falls Team Win Their First Game of the Season From Thief River

It was a puddin' (yes, no) and several side dishes for the local ball team last Sunday in the game against Thief River Falls.

The bunch of warriors from the hamlet north of St. Hilaire commenced arriving in town about 11 o'clock Sunday morning to play a game of base ball with Mr. J. J. Padden's colts. A cry was set up for a bon fire on the grounds but alas! it was found warm work for them to keep the home boys from scoring.

Thief River was first to bat. Pucks retired the side—not in the 1-2-3 order but it might just as well have been. Then the fireworks commenced. Sky rockets and Texas leaguers galore. Buse was first up. He singled to first. In running over the base he fell over Curran and got up the wrong way and was tagged out. Peterson followed with a little scratch hit down the third base line and beat it out. Pokezwinski started the racket again with a nice drive, landing Peterson on third with himself safe on second. Rube Healy continued the swatfest of wood against leather and laced a pretty one in the very same place as Puck's, in Lofkin's territory, scoring two runs. Healy scored on Erickson's roller to shortstop. In the second inning after letting McNiven go by the rest were easy money—getting the next three. Buse scored one for Red Lake Falls in their half. Thief River took a brace in the third after two men were out and a young roller passed between Buse's kicks on short. They scored two runs. This is the inning where Pucks won half his bet by getting Nason, Thief River's heavy hitter, on his staff. After Healy scored in the last of the third our boys went out in short order, getting the next three men. Thief River scored two in their half of the fourth, while Padden crossed the rubber for the locals in their half. This was all the runs we got—in fact all we needed. Thief River secured their last one in the seventh, with two down in the first of the ninth and a man on third, Schreiter is credited with an assist and Healy with a putout, catching the runner after two throws. The game ended 5 and 6 in favor of Red Lake Falls.

Following is a few statistics of the late unpleasantness for Thief River Falls:

R. L. F.—3 1 1 1 0 0 0 0 x—6
T. R. F.—0 0 2 2 0 0 1 0 0—5

Batteries, Pokezwinski and Schreiter; McNivens, Lofkina and Bergan. Struck out by Pokezwinski 8, by McNivens 2, by Lofkins 1. Richards umpire.

SNAPSHOTS.

"Pucks" won his bet. The way he put Nason on his staff wasn't a bit slow. He needed him just twice.

Erickson for the locals and Brush for Thief River were easily the star fielders of the day. "Bill" pulled down Nason's hit to left field that looked good enough to keep rolling until it reached Frank Mizen's tracks in the west part of town. Brush caught three that would have been good for two sacks, at least, on an ordinary still day.

McNiven was replaced by Lofkins in the sixth. Geo. Curran played tenth man from then on.

Thief River was represented with about thirty strong, besides the team.

It was a windy and cold day but notwithstanding all this, there was a good attendance.

Verne Healy plays his new position, that of first base, like an old timer, and he also sticks well.

It is said that Padden made the best "hit" during the game.

There was very little wrangling and both sides seemed well pleased—only, of course, we had the better end.

The Thief River delegation were a gentlemanly lot of fellows and it is hoped that we may have more games with them this season.

PROCLAMATION

In accordance with the usual custom, I desire to call attention to the observance of Memorial Day, May 30th. The observance of this day appeals strongly to the patriotism of all true American citizens, I therefore, as mayor of the city of Red Lake Falls, desire that the day be duly observed. The exercises will serve to instill in the minds of the rising generation what sacrifices were made for the sake of the country by the veterans who gave their all for its preservation. Now, therefore, I urge that there be general observance of Memorial day, May 30th. —J. A. DUFFY, Mayor.

THE COUNTY DADS MET

Board of County Commissioners Met in Special Session Monday and Tuesday.

Pursuant to a call by the county auditor the board of county commissioners met in special session at the office of County Auditor O'Brien on Monday and proceeded to get down to business.

The petition of Ole Eggen et. al, for a new school district on the reservation was granted and a day was set for hearing. The petition of Ole S. Breland et. al., was rejected owing to its illegality as to form.

There were seven other petitions of parties asking to be set off to other districts and all were granted.

The committee inspecting the extension of the Garnes ditch made their report and it was accepted, the contractor being paid in full and the bondsmen released.

The following appropriations were granted for road and bridge construction and improvement: Garaes $150, Mayfield $100, Polk Centre $200, Red Lake Falls township $50, Sanders $150, North $150, Rocksbury $200, Terrebonne $50, Red Lake Falls city $350.

The bid of the First State Bank for refunding $10,000 bonds was accepted.

A liquor license was granted to Alphonse Paquin of Lambert.

The treasurer's report and the report of the board of audit were accepted.

Auctioneer licenses were granted to Joseph Belair of this city and R. J. McKercher of St. Hilaire.

The board adjourned Tuesday forenoon after allowing several bills.

STUDY CLUB MEET

And Elect New Officers Last Week for Ensuing Year

The Study Club met at the home of Mrs. E. F. Marshall Tuesday evening of last week and elected a new set of officers for the ensuing year. The outcome of the election resulted as follows:

Mrs. E. F. Marshall, president.
Thomas Germo, vice-president.
Mrs. Thomas Germo, secretary.
L. C. Simons, treasurer.
Mrs. H. W. Knox, chairman program committee.

The program committee consists of three members and the two others will be selected by the chairman

Last year the club studied along the lines of English and American literature, finishing the English, and the coming year will study the American exclusively.

The ladies of the club are busily arranging for a banquet to be held in the near future. The date and place have not, as yet, been announced.

Clean Up Notice

Notice is hereby given to the people of Red Lake Falls to clean up. All manure and rubbish to be hauled to city dumping grounds, at old saw mill site. All dead animals to be buried on the dumping grounds, and buried deep enough to prevent them being dug up by dogs. Everything should be cleaned up by June 1st, and the city given a clean appearance for the tournament.

—J. C. Wilkinson,
Health Officer.

RECEIVED NEW STAMPS

A Special Series of Stamps Were Received at the Local Post Office Last Week

Postmistress Marshall announces that she has received a requisition of stamps to commemorate the founding of Jamestown in 1607. They were issued in April and will be sold to the public during the term of the Jamestown Exposition, up to November 30, 1907. They are of three denominations, 1-cent, 2-cent and 5-cent.

The 1-cent contains, in a semicircular frame, the portrait of Captain John Smith, taken from an old engraving. In the upper corners are medallions in relief in oval frames of Pocahontas and Powhatan; in the lower corners shields with the numeral 1; upon a scroll surmounding the protrait and conforming to the semi-circle, is the legend "Founding of Jamestown, 1607;" on the base, Captain John Smith, with the years of his birth and death, 1580-1631. In the semicircle above the head, are the words, "United States of America;" across the extreme top and bottom in white letters in black panels are the words. "Commemorative Series, 1907," and "Postage, One Cent."

The 2-cent stamp contains a picure depicting the landing of the adventurers at Jamestown in 1607. On one side is the tobacco plant, and on the other a stalk of Indian corn. Underneath on a scroll are the words, "Founding of Jamestown, 1607." In a curved panel over the picture in white letters are the words, "United States of America;" on the extreme top and bottom, in white letters on black ground, "Commemorative Series, 1907," and the words, "Postage, Two Cents." In each lower corner is a shield with the numeral 2.

The 5-cent stamp contains a protrait in an oval frame of Pocahontas. In a panel at the top in white letters are the words, "Postage, Five Cents." Under the protrait on a scroll, "Pocahontas," and the years of birth and death, 1595-1617. On either side of the protrait are shields, their bases resting on the lower panel, containing the numeral 5. Arising from behind these shields are scrolls, with the words, "Founding of Jamestown, 1607." In vertical panels on the right and on the left are the words, "Commemorative Series, 1907."

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

Arrangements For Observance of Memorial Day Is Completed.

In obedience to the promptings of a spirit of patriotism and devotion the people of this city will today pay their tribute of love and honor to the memory of those gallant martyrs who gave their lives that the Nation might live. Fitting and appropriate exercises will give outward expression of the reverence entertained by all for those heroic patriots who died in the defense of our country's flag in the darkest days of our Nation's history. But these exercises, touching and appropriate as they may be in their expression of devotion and honor, denote but a small part of the deep reverence, the sublime admiration all hold, not alone for the noble dead, but likewise for the equally noble living. The thousands who fell on the battle fields "gave" their lives; those who are living or have died since the dark days of the war offered their lives just as willing and as freely.

Close onto half a century has passed since the days of that terrible struggle wherein men's very soul's were tried in the crucible of suffering and sacrifice, and the ranks of the mighty thousands—mighty in point of numbers and in the deeds accomplished, but cruelly weak in the maimed bodies and all too generously hopelessly ruined constitutions—are thining at a fearful rate until but a few years will have elapsed before all will have been laid at rest beneath the sod. It is fitting, therefore, that while the few who are left remain with us that we join with them in spirit and in deed in their tribute to their dead comrades to the end that the spirit of patriotism of which their lives are beautiful monuments be perpetuated in the lives of those of the coming generation as well as in the lives of those of the present.

The exercises are well calculated to meet this purpose. The program arranged by the citizens committee will be held in the opera house as has heretofore been the custom. According to this program the procession will be formed on the Lafayette school grounds at 9:30 a. m. The members of the G. A. R. will be detailed to keep the line of march clear. They will march from the school grounds down Chicago avenue to Third street, thence to Main and north to the opera house. Following the veterans will come the band, who have kindly offered to furnish music for the exercises. The city officials, fire department, fraternal organizations and citizens will form the rest of the procession.

Following is the program of the exercises at the opera house:

Invocation	Rev. H. W. Knox
Song	Glee Club Quartette
Reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address	Miss Sigrud Anderson
Addresses by Thomas Germo and F. A Grady.
"America"	Audience

A Business Luxury

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity; and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.
Dudley & Creglow, Publishers
RED LAKE FALLS. MINN.

BRIEF REVIEW OF A WEEK'S EVENTS

RECORD OF THE MOST IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN ITEMIZED FORM.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS

Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Civilized World and Prepared for the Perusal of the Busy Man.

Train wreckers at West Glendale, Cal., pulled rails from under the Southern Pacific coast line flyer, killing two men and injuring 22 other persons.

Sleeper of Chesapeake & Ohio flyer was derailed in Kentucky. One killed, 20 injured.

Nicholas Murray Butler urged that the question of disarmament be avoided at the Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration and suggested instead that the restriction of further growth of great armies be advocated.

Presbyterian general assembly at Columbus, O., settled the temperance controversy by indorsing the Anti-Saloon league and forbidding committee on temperance to engage in political work.

Secretary Straus, in speech before Manufacturers' association, urged larger share for labor in prosperity and "drastic publicity" for corporations.

A Chicago & Alton train was narrowly saved by the station agent at Lemont from going through a bridge wrecked by the flood.

The National Manufacturers' association passed a resolution favoring tariff revision and more reciprocity treaties.

A New York diamond broker ran off with $250,000 worth of gems belonging to society people.

The president of the Illinois Medical association, in session at Rockford, scored the legislators for lightly treating laws wanted by the medical men.

Thirteen workhouse prisoners at Toledo overpowered a guard and escaped.

Secretary Cortelyou, in addressing postoffice officials, said he placed fitness and merit above party service as a recommendation for office.

President W. E. Corey, asked to vacate his job with the steel trust, dumped his stock in order to depress the market.

T. P. O'Connor, in an address to the United Irish League of Great Britain, declared that the defeat of the Irish bill will result in renewed efforts for the cause.

Evansville street car strikers lost their fight, the company being able to run all its cars.

Deposed school trustees of Chicago gained a partial victory when President Ritter declared a quorum present at a board meeting. Executive then sends in his resignation.

Henry C. Frick lost $30,000,000 in the recent stock slump, after an amazing career as a plunger, Wall street bears.

Railroad officials presented arguments before Gov. Deneen urging the repeal of the two-cent fare bill.

Two men attacked and murdered the 15-year-old daughter of a Long Island farmer and escaped.

Alleged agent of China disappeared from New York with gems valued at $250,000 and sent back pawn tickets.

Nineteen women, the first legislators of their sex ever to be elected in Europe, took their seat in the new Finnish diet, which assembled at Helsingfors.

Five lives were lost by the burning of the steamship Naomi during a trip from Grand Haven, Mich., to Milwaukee. Four stokers, imprisoned, died as the rescued passengers looked on. One passenger was burned fatally, the others being saved through heroic deeds performed by the crew.

Because they have been denied the privilege of bringing beer into the shops during working hours, and also because the company refused their demand that an unpopular foreman be removed, 250 men employed in the blacksmith shop of the Rogers locomotive works at Paterson, N. J., walked out.

Heavy frosts fell over the eastern half of Kentucky, damaging gardens, and is believed to have about completed the work of killing fruit.

Bank examiners refused to let a mysterious bank open at Philadelphia.

Pittsburg, angered by increase in the price of gas and by street car abuses, will ask the courts to annul grants to the utility company.

Dr. Harold N. Meyer, of Chicago, charges that certificates to practice medicine in Illinois can be purchased for cash.

Thomas A. Edison declared sleeping a bad habit fastened on us by our prehistoric ancestors and believes man will learn to do without it.

Operation of the universal suffrage law in Austria brought important changes and results in reconstruction of the lower house of parliament on new racial lines.

Mayor Busse formally demanded the resignations of 12 members of the Chicago board of education.

One man was killed, seven fatally injured and 19 others received minor hurts and bruises in a wreck on the Pan-Handle railroad at Holliday's Cove, W. Va., near Steubenville, O.

Five men were killed and four fatally injured at the Eliza furnace of the Jones & Laughlin steel company at Pittsburg.

The steam yacht Pantooset, one of the finest vessels in the New York Yacht club fleet, has been sold to the Cuban government, the price being about $270,000.

A cablegram from President Zelaya of Nicaragua, stating that a revolution broke out in Salvador was received by the Nicaraguan consul at New Orleans.

The National Association of Manufacturers will raise $1,500,000 to fight oppression of labor unions on both industrial and political affairs.

John Thompson Hargrave, former Methodist exhorter and Episcopal clergyman, was arrested at Richmond, Va., on a charge of swindling.

Howard Gould, his wife and many others must appear at hearing on scandal in New York police department.

Secretary Root says the world is growing better, that railroad and corporate abuses were once so common that nobody noticed them.

Rudolph Spreckels criticised Mayor Schmitz' committee of seven and the supervisors of San Francisco.

Secretary Root, speaking at Yale, said convictions of rebaters and exposures of financial operations like the Alton deal are signs of progress.

Fairbanks, Cannon and Knox are making bids for delegates in the east, and the presidential race, writes a correspondent, resolves itself into Taft against the field.

A great Irish convention at Dublin, led by John Redmond, unanimously rejected the British government's limited council bill and demanded complete home rule.

Fearing an increase in freight rates if the railroads are forced to carry passengers for two cents a mile, the National Association of Manufacturers, in session at New York, came out against compulsory fare reductions.

A negro and his mother were lynched and three other persons killed and seven injured in a fight in Georgia on account of the attempt of a negro, who escaped, to assault a white woman.

"Abe" Hummel, broken in spirit by the disgrace of being behind iron bars, collapsed physically at Blackwell, and was unable to assume the duties assigned to him at that prison.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church at Columbus, O., decided that $1,100,000 must be raised for home missions in the next year. Committee ruled that pastors must not be affiliated with the Anti-Saloon League in their official capacity.

A loophole for Standard Oil is shown in the contention that companies as well as individuals are immune from indictment where evidence has been given before the grand jury.

Steamer officials mistook August Belmont for a noted card sharp.

Following the assassination of three police officials at Odessa, Russia, serious rioting occurred. The Black Hundreds ran wild through the streets mercilessly beating people, particularly Jews; more than a hundred of whom were seriously injured soon after the disturbances began. The police remained passive spectators of the disorder. No arrests were made and the Black Hundreds continued their work of revenge unchecked.

Black Hundreds in Odessa renewed their attacks on the Jews, beating many before Governor General Kaulbers took control and put an end to the rioting.

The douma is eager to aid popular education and factions harmonized in debate on the subject.

A new plot is thought to exist among Russian officials to depose the czar.

The secretary of the interior approved the selection of 123,348 acres of land selected by the state of Colorado in lieu of school lands otherwise disposed of. The selected lands are in the Sterling district.

The navy department received a dispatch from Commander Tappan of the cruiser Tacoma, saying that Ensign A. T. Brishin, who was accidentally shot, is dead.

The furniture trust was punished by fines amounting to $13,000 while the promoter, Frederick Holbrook, was assessed $5,000 by Judge Landis in the United States court at Chicago.

J. C. Bartles, president of the Bartles Oil company, of St. Paul, and two merchants from Stillwater and St. James, Minn., took steps preliminary to formal proceedings against the Standard Oil company on charges of violating the law prohibiting discrimination in the price of oil sold.

Abe Hummel, the notorious New York divorce lawyer, began his prison sentence of one year, and after donning stripes was lodged in cell No. 23.

Another venire and adjournment of court is expected to be necessary before the Haywood jury can be completed.

Minnesota railways complain of a loss of revenue by the operation of the two-cent passenger law.

All union workmen on the new county building in Chicago may strike because bricklayers object to being paid in checks.

Russian police arrested 38 men in raid to stop promulgation of report of London congress' proceedings.

Senator Foraker denounced the statement of Ohio Chairman Brown as "rank, dictatorial and offensive bossism."

Counsel for W. D. Haywood, on trial at Boise, is investigating the record of Harry Orchard with a view to impeaching his testimony by showing that he lied.

Pleading guilty to rebating on coffee shipments, the Rock Island railroad paid a fine of $20,000 in New York city.

Complaint is filed by Minnesota merchants that the Standard Oil ignores the recent law passed by the state legislature.

The Thomas House, the leading hotel at Fairbury, Ill., burned to the ground with all the furnishings, making the loss over $10,000.

Superman, owned by James R. Keene, proves an easy winner of the $20,000 Brooklyn handicap at Gravesend.

The Montreal longshoremen's strike was settled on the terms of the steamship companies.

Rev. Franklin E. E. Hamilton, aged 41 years, pastor the Temple Street Methodist church, Boston, has been elected chancellor of the American university at Washington.

Ensign Alfred T. Brishin, of the navy, who was to have been court-martialed as a result of the difficulty at Santiago, Cuba, between local police and sailors of the Tacoma, shot himself through the lung there.

The twentieth annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians opened at Cleveland, O., with 190 delegates present. President Joseph Weber, of Cincinnati, declared against European musicians and the competition of army hands.

The Presbyterian general assembly, in session at Columbus, O., after a lively debate, adopted a report favoring changes in church government through the establishment of executive commissions.

District Attorney Jerome, of New York city, proposes an investigation of alleged police connection with the Howard Gould case.

W. E. Corey and his bride reached Plymouth, England, after remaining secluded during the voyage across the Atlantic.

The law reducing the price of gas from one dollar to 80 cents is unfair, as the companies are not earning excessive profits, and the reduction would be confiscatory, special master ruled in the New York city case. The city probably will appeal to the United States supreme court.

The Brotherhood Welfare association entertained 120 real tramps at a real banquet in a first-class hotel in Chicago.

Mayor Busse accepted the resignations of five school trustees and removed seven others, thus leaving Chicago practically without a board of education.

Mayor Schmitz, of San Francisco, alleged that Rudolph Spreckels and his associates hope to make millions from the graft inquiry, which they are backing, and asked for a change in trial judges.

Strike mobs continued to damage street cars and attacked the crews in Evansville, Ind., and the company officials prepared to ask for troops.

Gun fighters, alleged agents of mine owners, declared to be seeking to provoke street fights with witnesses for Haywood.

Gen. Kuroki visited the tomb of Gen. Grant in New York and placed a laurel wreath upon it.

Jailer Whitman frustrated a jail delivery in Chicago in which Murderer Charles Hansen planned to use nitroglycerin.

Gen. Sherman M. Bell declared trial of Haywood at Boise was "a farce, unfair, and un-American."

Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, reported to the president that the Standard Oil company, by accepting rebates and evading the law with its pipe lines, has throttled competition until it has gained a practical monopoly of the industry.

Junius B. Darby, a Chicago elevated motorman, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Mrs. Helga Anderson-Waskow, whom he had jilted.

The army and navy union has adopted resolutions favoring the re-establishment of the army canteen, or post exchange.

Miss Marian Maddux died at St. Joseph, Mo., from eating strawberries which had been chemically treated to ripen them.

Joseph H. Berry, one of Detroit's leading capitalists and a well known varnish manufacturer, died at his residence at Grosse Pointe, Mich. He was 68 years old.

The proprietor of a London west end music hall has just received from Evelyn Thaw a prompt rejection of his offer of an engagement at a weekly salary of three figures.

Special prayers for rain have been ordered in almost all the districts of Roumania in consequence of the abnormally prolonged drought. The harvest prospects are most discouraging, and widespread anxiety prevails.

After three hours' deliberation a jury at Council Bluffs, Iowa, returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Pat Crowe, charged with holding up and robbing two street cars nearly two years ago. Crowe was immediately set at liberty.

When the Anchor liner Astoria just arrived at New York from Glasgow, was about 1,000 miles east of Sandy Hook she passed through a field of over 20 icebergs. The bergs were all medium-sized and were scattered over a wide area.

Lawyer Abraham Hummel, of New York, is refused a certificate of reasonable doubt and ordered committed to the penitentiary to serve year's sentence for perjury.

Irish "home rule" bill raised a storm of protest in Ireland and the United league will hold a convention in Dublin to discuss the measure.

Rumors of a romance between Howard Gould and an actress heard in New York in connection with Mrs. Gould's suit for limited divorce.

President Roosevelt left Washington for a short vacation at his wife's country home near Pine Knot, Va.

FIENDS WRECK TRAIN

PACIFIC COAST FLYER MEETS DISASTER NEAR LOS ANGELES.

ONE KILLED; MANY HURT

Fishplates Connecting Rails Are Removed and Tracks Pulled Apart with Wires—$10,000 Reward Offered.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A fiendish train wrecking plot was perpetrated near here Wednesday that resulted in the death of one man and the injury of 22 persons, four of whom are dying.

Train No. 20, one of the Southern Pacific's coast line flyers, due here at nine o'clock Tuesday night, was hurled from the tracks on a trestle at West Glendale, ten miles north of here, at 12:30 a. m. Wednesday by the deliberate work of murderous train wreckers. Seven cars plunged off the trestle, while the train was making 40 miles an hour, falling 16 feet to the bottom of a gulch.

At the Southern Pacific general offices in this city notices were posted offering $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the wreck. The officials announced that they had no clew whatever.

In accomplishing the wreck of the train, which was the "Coast Line Limited," a devilish ingenuity was exercised. At a point on a trestle over the Arroyo Seco the fishplates and bolts of two connecting rails on the southbound track had been removed, and in the apertures whence the bolts were taken strands of heavy wire were fastened at the end of each rail.

From the appearance of the track after the wreck it was evident that some person hidden on a hillside close to the trestle had pulled the wire as the train approached and spread the rails outward toward the edge of the trestle.

END TEMPERANCE FIGHT.

Presbyterians Adopt Resolutions Approving Anti-Saloon League.

Columbus, O.—Following two hours of exciting debate, which, at times became acrimonious and verged upon personalities, the Presbyterian general assembly Wednesday at the close of one of the liveliest sessions in its history adopted without a dissenting vote resolutions declaring as its policy that the permanent committee on temperance shall not embark upon or interfere in political work and endorsing the American Anti-Saloon league as a "safe, sane and effective organization in the great cause of temperance," and pledging to it the fullest cooperation "consistent with the constitution of the church."

Illinois G. A. R. Met.

Decatur, Ill.—Six thousand visitors were in Decatur on account of the meeting of the department of Illinois Grand Army of the Republic and six affiliated organizations. The business sessions Wednesday were chiefly occupied with reports of officers. In the afternoon a parade was held, with 18 visiting posts and many bands and drum corps in line, 4,000 men in all. Col. A. C. Matthews, of Pittsfield, was elected department commander without opposition. Quincy was chosen as the next meeting place. Mrs. Anna B. Tuck, of Plymouth, was elected department commander of the Woman's Relief Corps and W. C. Creighton, of Champaign, was elected commander of the Sons of Veterans.

Jury Disagrees.

St. Paul, Minn.—A special to the Pioneer Press from Fargo, N. D., says: After being out more than 94 hours, the jury which has been trying Mrs. Laura Cramer, charged with ordering her son, a mere boy, to shoot and kill her husband, Fred Cramer, at Page, N. D., Feb. 14 last, disagreed late Wednesday afternoon. This is the longest time on record that a jury has remained out without reaching a verdict. Two other juries have disagreed while considering the case.

Schmitz Trial Begins.

San Francisco.—Three of the first 12 probationary jurors for the trial, subject to peremptory challenge, of Mayor Schmitz on the charge of extorting money from local French restaurateurs with the connivance and help of Abraham Ruef, were chosen Wednesday. The list of the remaining talesmen being practically exhausted, Judge Dunne issued a new venire of 20. It is thought that the trial will last about six weeks.

Lutherans in Session.

Sunbury, Pa.—The forty-third annual convention of the General Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church of the United States convened in Zion Lutheran church Wednesday night. All the incoming trains brought crowds of delegates and visitors and the various committees were kept busy assisting them to their respective places of entertainment.

Wheat Passes $1.05.

Chicago.—Amid the wildest scene yet presented on the Chicago Board of Trade at its opening Wednesday December wheat took the biggest jump in the present campaign. It soared 5¼ cents over the dollar mark at the very opening of the pit. The panic in the pit was almost terrifying to witness. The buying orders from all over the country were pouring in by the thousands and the prices of wheat for July and September, as well as for December, kept above the one dollar mark. No May wheat was sold.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

State Fair Attractions.

Hamline.—Dan Patch, the king of pacers; Sweet Marie, the queen of trotters, and an airship that will navigate the air are some of the attractions assured for the state fair this fall. A new feature of the Dan Patch exhibition will be a moving picture machine carried in an automobile in front of the pacer. If Dan keeps up his past record of breaking his previous record on the local track those who fail to see this exhibition will be given an opportunity later of seeing the wonderful horse make his mile on the canvas.

The race program for this fall will be the best in the history of the fair. A new feature this year will be the Northwestern futurity with a guaranteed stake of $5,000, of which $3,000 will be for three-year-old trotters and $2,000 for three-year-old pacers. The futurity will be open for foals of 1907 to race as three-year-old in 1910, that are foaled, owned, raised and trained in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, North or South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Nebraska, Wyoming, Oregon and Washington, Manitoba and the Canadian provinces west of Manitoba.

Arrangements also have been made for the appearance of a noted French aeronaut who will give exhibitions with his airship.

Insurance Figures.

Minneapolis.—A total of nearly $9,000,000 was spent by Minnesota residents for life insurance during 1906, according to the preliminary life report of the insurance department.

The report shows that during the year the level premium or old line companies wrote 36,643 policies aggregating $27,271,455. The number of policies in force at the end of the year were 171,209, with an aggregate value of $199,137,840. The losses incurred in the state were $1,828,799 and the premiums received amounted to $7,202,656.

The report shows that during the year the net mortality was only 77 per cent of the expected mortality.

For these same companies a "loading expense portion of premiums" is given as $129,947,754 and actual expenses paid $108,783,360. These figures are for business in all the states of companies doing business in this state.

The report on the assessment life and accident associations shows 19,424 policies written in the state during the year, aggregating $8,130,300, and 20,083 in force at the end of the year aggregating $3,130,300; and 20,083 in force at the end of the year aggregating $10,493,375. These companies received in premiums $163,185 and paid losses amounting to $61,987.

P. O. Burglary.

Mendota.—The vault and the safe doors of the postoffice were shattered with nitroglycerin by burglars at 3 o'clock in the morning and $750 in cash and stamps were stolen.

The postoffice forms part of the general store of E. Bernier & Sons. The safe blower got into the building through a rear window. The safe in which the money was deposited is inclosed in a large vault expressly built for the purpose of securing the funds of Uncle Sam. The thieves lined the door of the vault with nitroglycerin and blew off the door. They evidently thought the plunder was within, but they were confronted with a safe inside the vault. This also was charged and blown open.

Mr. Bernier says that the total amount taken was about $750 to $780. He says that about $80 in money and stamps belong to the government.

Murder at Tenstrike.

Tenstrike.—What later may prove to have been a cold-blooded murder has been unearthed at Tenstrike in the finding of the body of John Johnson in Gull lake.

Early in February John Johnson and Peter Matihison hired out to William Fellows to cut timber and they established their camp near the lake. The men were busily engaged for five or six weeks cutting logs on the Fellows claim, two miles from town.

At the time of the disappearance of Johnson, Matihison also disappeared, but two weeks later he returned for his clothes and money. He said that he had been sick in the hospital; that he and his partner were going to locate in the West, and that his partner had gone. Matihison has not been seen in this vicinity since.

NEWS NOTES.

Lewiston.—Ora Gibbs, thirty-eight years old, committed suicide by hanging himself in a shed on the farm. Coroner Steinbach found the deed to be due to mental derangement.

Mankato.—Christian Larson of North Mankato has failed in two lawsuits to recover an acre and a half of land that ought to be his, but which Dame Nature has appropriated through the waywardness of her agent, the Minnesota river.

Luverne.—At a meeting of the board of education a resolution was adopted suspending for the balance of the school year, eleven of the high school boys who are charged with "having spanked Supt. Haverson's anatomy in the process of initiating that gentleman into the Society of the Red Owls."

Plenty of Fish Eggs.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota game and fish commission has this spring broken the record of any game and fish department in the United States for the number of pike eggs collected in any one season, and expects to be able a little later to claim the national record for the largest number of pike fry ever raised in any one state during a season.

Samuel F. Fullerton, superintendent of fisheries, says the work of collecting pike eggs is now over; that the pike eggs collected at a conservative estimate number 280,300,000, and that estimating that only half of these will hatch, the game and fish commission will later have 140,150,000 pike fry for free distribution for restocking waters thruout the state.

Hanged Himself

Thief River Falls.—J. H. Werstlein, a cattle buyer of this city, hanged himself in his barn. He is believed to have been mentally deranged. He came into the house late in the afternoon, washed himself and, putting on his coat and hat, stepped out of the door, as his wife supposed, to go down town. This was the last seen of him alive. After the family had finished supper the wife sent one of the sons to look for his father. Going to the barn the son discovered his father's body hanging from a rafter in the hayloft. Werstlein was forty-seven years old and is survived by a widow and seven children, the youngest of whom is a baby of ten months.

Accidentally Shot.

Kelliher.—While out hunting in the woods near here, John A. Aamodt sat down on a log to read a letter. He rested his gun across his leg, the muzzle pointing toward his stomach. While absorbed in the contents of the latter Aamodt's foot came in contact with the trigger of the gun and it was discharged, the load of heavy shot tearing a gaping wound in his body. A passerby heard the report of the gun, came over and found him writhing in agony on the ground. He died before assistance could be reached.

Killed by Steam Shovel.

Moorhead.—Sivert Siverson, twenty-eight years old, was killed by a steam shovel with which he was working near Muskoda. The accident happened about midnight and owing to the darkness is not exactly known how it occurred. In some manner the man was caught between the big scoop of the shovel and the end of the machinery and as the scoop rose he was caught and crushed to death.

Homesteader Missing.

Spooner.—Henry Hunke, a young settler, formerly of Duluth, who has been living on his claim on the Rapid river near the Clementson postoffice, has disappeared. His brother, William Hunke, who was his neighbor, believes that the missing man was murdered. Henry Hunke has been a sufferer from tuberculosis and two years ago came to this part of the state from Duluth to take the outdoor cure.

Silver Fox Trapped.

Fosston.—The first silver fox trapped in Minnesota for many years was captured recently on the Red Lake reservation. The skin has been sent to Knute Rierson of this place, who will dispose of it. The skin is of good size and quality and at the current rate of quotations probably will bring $200.

NEWS NOTES.

Minneapolis.—Bandits scarcely 15 years old and well versed in the art of robbery from reading dime novels, held up Charles Haugen in an alley back of the Tribune building, robbing him of $6, his entire cash supply.

Duluth.—At a distance of two and a half miles southeast of Hibbing, A. B. Coales of Virginia and A. M. Miller, Jr., of Duluth have shown up what is described as the largest bessemer ore body that has been found in several years on the Mesaba range. The deposit is estimated at 10,000,000 tons.

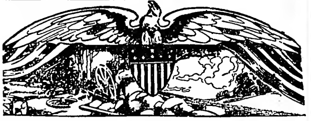
Red Lake Indian Agency.—John Morrison, Jr., has tendered his resignation as superintendent of the Cross Lake Indian school, which was established three years ago. Mr. Morrison leaves the service to engage in private business. His successor is Mr. Davis, an employe in the Indian service.

Rochester.—The dead body of an infant was found floating near a dam in the Zumbro river in North Rochester by two boys who were fishing. The body evidently had been in the water for several months, as it was in an advanced state of decomposition. No clue has been found as to the identity of the baby.

Belle Plaine.—To the little neighbor girl who sang to him as his life was ebbing away, and who devoted hours of her time to making him comfortable in his last days, James O. White has willed his entire estate. Miss Beatrice Stepaneck is the beneficiary, and the estate is valued at upwards of $10,000.

Washington.—A certificate to begin business with a capital of $25,000 was issued to the First National Bank of Biwabik.

Slayton.—By a vote of 102 to 18 Slayton voted $10,000 to build an addition to its schoolhouse.



Town's First Great Day of Decoration

Mr. Timothy Sullivan came down from Water Glen, Minn., and settled at Boomer, Okla., among the first comers, and the first thing he missed was the G. A. R. post. There were many other things that Boomer lacked, but the cheerful one-armed veteran did not mind these. They were merely bodily comforts and conveniences or the improvements of civilization, but the absence of a G. A. R. post struck him in his most salient spot. It hurt his one romantic vanity and injured him in his one cherished pride. He loved the G. A. R., and he loved the old flag, and his honest, cheerful, hard working soul lived from year to year in good natured unimportance to bask for one day in the deserved honor that was his on Decoration day. On that one day he had always been, at Water Glen, the proudest of the proud, as he marched at the head of the little procession to the resting place of the veterans of Kiowa county. His armless sleeve was none the less empty because he lost his arm in the Water Glen sawmill and not in battle. The arm, however lost, was a veteran arm, and had a bullet in it.

Not that he cared about the arm itself. It was a left one, and he had his pension, and his tastes were simple. He could have lived well enough in [illegible] county at Water Glen, but his friend Foley got the Oklahoma fever, and Sullivan went with him, taking a [illegible] claim in Boomer.

The first Decoration day at Boomer passed tamely for Timothy Sullivan. There was no band, no flag, no flowers, no minister to open the exercise, no exercises to be opened, not even a holiday. There were no schools to close. There was no town to speak of. There was not much of anything but stakes to mark the claims, tents, and a pump, but when the second Decoration day drew near Timothy Sullivan grumbled audibly.

"I've a mind to send home to Water Glen for my arm," said Sullivan. "'T could come in a box by the express company, and no harm done. 'Twould be a fine object lesson to the town of Boomer to have the arm of a soldier with a bullet of a rebel in it buried near by."

"'Twould so," Foley agreed, with as much enthusiasm as he could show while lighting his pipe. "'Twould so. 'Twould be the next best thing to having yourself buried here, Tim."

"Get me a pen, ink and paper," said Sullivan, "till I write for it."

He wrote this letter to his friend, Larry Casey, at Water Glen.

"Dig up and send me the left arm of me," he wrote, "by express, to be paid for at this end. 'Tis buried in the back yard of my old shanty, under the horseradish bed, in the big tin box. And I hope you are the same. Timothy Sullivan."

Larry Casey did the work well, and in due time a box arrived at Boomer. Sullivan did not open it, and he and Mike Foley buried it privately at the rear southwest corner of Sullivan's claim. They did not attempt nor even dream of anything ceremonial in the act. It was merely that Sullivan, as one might say, was getting himself together. No one likes to be scattered about the United States. They simply buried the box in the most conventional place and went about their business, which was principally doing nothing and waiting for Boomer town lots to rise in value.

But as Decoration day drew nearer Sullivan dwelt more regretfully upon the absence of memorial exercises. He felt a little delicate about himself proposing exercises to memorialize his own arm. It seemed a little like seeking to sing his own praises, and he felt a natural reticence about proposing a procession. He was glad, therefore, when Foley spoke of the idea as of one that had been fully decided upon. Foley opened the subject by saying:

"'Twill be hard to find flowers to decorate the arm on Decoration day, Tim. Missus Schwartz will lend the loan of her geranium plant, but there be no others, except we pick the wild ones off the prairie."

"Have ye spoke to any one else, Mike, of the procession, and all?" asked Sullivan, brightening up.

"Schwartz will be proud to belong to it," said Foley, "with his accordion. And the Chaykas will be in it, though for why they don't know, except 'tis a custom of their country, and them having took out their first papers. And the Rooshun Schmernoffs will contribute themselves and 11 of their kids, two being sick with the measles, or there would be 13. And Ole Olson is one of them that will do honor to the left arm of ye. Not one did I find to back out, Tim."

Foley, surprised at his own loquacity, puffed vigorously at his pipe and frowned.

"And all of them," he added, when he had got the pipe to burning normally again, "all of them would have ye be grand marshal of the day, Tim."

"I could borrow a sash ribbon off of one of the Schmernoff young ones," said Sullivan, and that was accepted by Foley as consent.

Decoration day was fresh and clear, and Tim Sullivan was early in the public square making his few arrangements for the day. The shanty and tent town known as Boomer was a sizzle of excitement. Schwartz was sitting in his doorway practicing on his accordion. The 11 Chayka children were having their faces washed. Ole Oleson was polishing the toes of his shoes, for there was not enough blacking in Boomer to go all the way round his large feet. At ten precisely the procession formed, with Schwartz at the head, and to the strains of the "Watch on the Rhine" marched once around the square. In front of Sullivan's they came to a halt, and the grand marshal of the day mounted his doorstep and faced them. At a signal from the grand marshal the band rendered the patriotic air "The Shoemaker Has My Slipper Lost" on the accordion, and then Sullivan took off his hat and made the address.

"Gentlemen and Mrs Chayka and kids," he said. "'Tis Decoration day, but I am no fancy speaker. I have to make the speech because I am the only veteran here but Schwartz, and he is a foreigner and don't count. We are going to decorate with these beautiful flowers." He pointed to the geranium that Mary Chayka was holding.

"With these beautiful flowers," he continued, "the resting place of part of one that fought to save the Union. 'Tis the left arm of him. And 'twas as brave a left as ever lived. I speak with knowledge, for I accompanied that same wherever it went in the war. Let us," he said, "give three cheers for it."

They gave three hearty cheers.

"In conclusion," said Sullivan, "before I go on with my speech I will say this much for it—it never took to its legs and run away, no matter how bad the fight was, and when 'twas shot with a rebel bullet it had to be carried off the field. Many's the time when its poor comrade was tired out it took the musket in its own hand. 'Twas a good arm, and no one knows it better than Timothy Sullivan, for 'twas my own, and the muscle on it was like a chunk of iron. I honor that arm," he declared earnestly, "and I honor the other one that still fills its sleeve, and I honor the two legs of me that tramped the many weary mile for the fine old flag, and I'm not ashamed of it."

Foley led the cheer that followed.

"Arms and legs!" said Sullivan, "and does any one say we should not decorate where they lie. In the war there was armies, and regiments, and companies, and squads, and a general over all. An in the soldier there do be the head for the general, and th' parts of him be the regiments and companies and squads, every part doing its duty for the flag the best it can, and one-tenth of a man that sticks up for the flag is more of a man any day than a dozen whole men that do not. Ye may be asking why do I come decorating me own arm, and am I full of vanity, like. Think shame, then, to think it! 'Tis but an arm, but 'tis the arm of an old soldier, and was it th' arm of any other soldier I would do the same. 'Tis the honor and memory of the grand old army I am thinking of. 'Tis but the part of a soldier ye come decorating to-day, but Tim Sullivan is getting old, and one of these days ye'll have the whole of him to decorate. Do so! Not for old Tim, but for the memory of all the boys that went to the front. 'Tis a grand country and free, and united, and we will now go to my backyard and decorate the place where rests the part of one that fought to keep it so."

He stepped to the ground, but the enthusiasm that had glowed on his face had departed. Here were no old comrades, the last three or four hardy survivors, to grasp his hand, but only alien faces, faces full of good will and faces that would be prompt to glow with patriotism should a new danger menace the republic, but still they were alien faces, but faintly grasping the grand meaning of this one day of the year. Sullivan steadied himself against the house.

"Go on home," he said; go on home! 'Tis kind of ye to be comin' out to humor an old man, but 'tis but an arm, anyhow. 'Tis but an arm and 'twould be wrong to spend the flowers on an arm that should be kept for a soldier. Go on home, and mebby, come next year, 'twill be a soldier's grave ye will have to decorate."

He sank down on the bench that stood beside his house, and the procession, understanding, went away. Only Foley remained.

"Are ye feelin' ill, Tim?" he asked anxiously.

"Ill!" said Sullivan, "Yes, ill, Mike! I feel they'll sure have a soldier to decorate next Decoration day. They'll not be disappointed next year, Mike."

"Sure, I hope they'll not be," said Foley, consolingly.—New York Herald.

"BIRD PARTY" IS PRETTY

Splendid Idea for Hostess Who Is Seeking Some Novelty for the Entertainment of Her Guests—Rhymes in Which Answers Are Cleverly Concealed.

One of the prettiest parties to be given this month is described here. The idea is not original with the hostess, but was given to her by a friend who also sent her the rhymes which I have copied for the benefit of all the department readers. The scheme is so clever that I am sure many a hostess will find it just the very thing she is looking for.

Each invitation will be decorated with birds, two of a kind, one to be sent to a man, the other to a woman, so partners or mates will be easily found when all have arrived. Vines, flowers in season, palms, ferns, and quantities of artificial flowers will transform the rooms into veritable bowers and cages containing canaries and parrots will enhance the woodland effect. Of course these will be borrowed and a number will be rented from a near-by store.

Stuffed birds, owls, etc., will perch upon branches of trees in a most realistic manner.

The place cards or favors are to be tiny nests filled with candy eggs, a little bird perched on the nest. Little booklets, with "Echoes from Birdland" painted on and a flock of birds decorating the cover, will contain the following rhymes, the hostess keeping the "key," which will be read after three-quarters of an hour, and a prize of a real live canary awarded to the person guessing the most; a toy bird rattle or whistle is to be the consolation prize.

A flash of sky on the wing.—(Bluebird.)

Oh! shall I call thee bird,
Or but a wandering voice?
Thy notes from household clocks are heard,
And children's ears rejoice.—(Cuckoo.)

King of the water, as of the air,
He dives and finds his prey.—(Kingfisher.)

Thy plaintive cry announces punishment.
And warns the luckless boy for whom 'tis sent.—(Whippoorwill.)

You introduce yourself throughout your song
And tell the world your brief old-fashioned name.—(Phoebe.)

"Bob White" you call
Along the marshy coast.
Speak not so loud
Or you will be on toast.—(Quail.)

Cooing 'neath the rafters,
Pouting sometimes, too,
Rippling like child laughter
All the winter through.—(Pigeon.)

An English emigrant, bird of the street,
So common that thou art not much liked at all,
Yet in the Good Book we are told
The Father He careth if one should but fall.—(Sparrow.)

Red-breasted harbinger of spring
We wait and hope to hear thee sing.
—(Robin.)

Yellow captive in a cage,
Silver notes thou giv'st as wage.
—(Canary.)

A flash of white upon the sea,
And yet 'tis not a sail,
A "little brother of the air"
Hath dared to ride the gale.
—(Seagull.)

Black robber of the corn fields, oh, beware,
The farmer can do other things than scare.—(Crow.)

We know how long ago
You frightened Mr. Poe—
Black prophet of adversity.—(Raven.)

Black-winged, in crimson thou art dressed,
Fine feathers make fine birds, it is confessed;
And none more fine than thou,
Oh, brilliant beauty of the bough.
—(Scarlet Tanger.)

Oh, singer famed by thousands, sweet the strain
That ripples from thy pulsing throat like rain.—(Nightingale.)

You imitate the foe who does you harm,
And so to the world give alarm.
—(Catbird.)

A symbol of perfect love
Sent from above.—(Dove.)

I supplicate
At heaven's gate,
And rest on wing
Where angels sing.—(Lark.)

I'm always offered a cracker,
And though I like it well,
I think some other viands
Would do me just as well.—(Parrot.)

An enormous pie is to be the centerpiece; around the rim there will be a circle of cunning little Japanese paper birds. The rhyme on each card attached to the ribbon leading to the places is as follows:

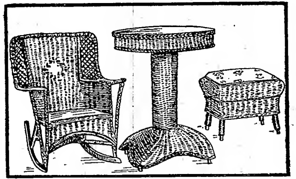
When the pie was opened
The birds began to sing!
That is where we'll fool you
For we'll not do any such thing.

When at the signal the ribbons are pulled each guest is to receive a card on which a Mexican feather bird is mounted. Any small favor will do though, if these are not obtainable.

The refreshments are to be chicken salad, sandwiches, ice cream in bird shapes, bird cookies and coffee.

MADAME MERRI

For the Summer Cottage



The cut illustrates some new designs in wicker and grass furniture, the first sketch showing a comfortable and well-shaped rocker in grass furniture painted an artistic green. The table depicted is convenient for the porch or living-room and has a sufficiently broad base to hold a lamp, a large fern bowl or any such ornament.

The little stool is both decorative and useful and the shapes may be had either in all wicker or with a cretonned cushioned top.

VEILS OF ALL KINDS

Queen of Them All Is One of Very Finely Woven Lace—Many Novelties Shown in Patterns.

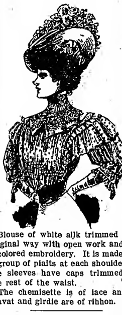
Again the veils are triumphant. Floating behind or draping from the chic hats of the year, they are like Peter Pan's shadow—quite indispensable to perfect happiness. The queen of 1907 in veils is of real lace, a finely woven lower border as pretty as a labor-loving lace weaver knew how to design it and then a surface sprinkled with the Brussels lace open dots and then an upper-edge of woven lace simpler than the lower edge. These tempting bits of finery begin at a yard in length and reach two yards. Any price at all may be paid, according to the quality of the lace weaving.

Next to this supreme veil are those of very fine Brussels net or another strong cobwebby lace with a sewn lace border. These come handsome and expensive, depending on the lace sewn on and the work in tucks or neatly stitched velvet or narrow satin ribbon.

Lace veils are draped on the small hats and fall from the large brims in becoming drapery. The milliner usually pins on a veil when she sells a hat and thus the proper style goes with the hat. Frequently a priceless veil is used to drape the crown of a fine straw hat, which is to be worn on informal occasions. White lace, cream and black are the regulation colors for stock veils. Brown, blue and pearl are the novelties which come to match costumes and these, too, are sold in exquisite quality and are too pretty to pass by.

The all-over pattern in veils is a novelty that goes only with a pretty face and high color. The all-over patterns left over from the lacemaking days of our grandmothers are to be treasured and when now and then one can be found at a high-class shop in imitation lace it is not to be despised, but should be picked up post haste.

WHITE SILK WAIST.



Blouse of white silk trimmed in an original way with open work and multi-colored embroidery. It is made with a group of plaits at each shoulder and the sleeves have caps trimmed like the rest of the waist.

The chemisette is of lace and the cravat and girdle are of ribbon.

In voile and similar sheer stuffs one finds many one-tone stripe designs, with stripes of varying width achieved in the weaving, or often with satin finished stripes. Lovely sheer voiles are shown, too, with big satin finished dots in self tone at rather wide intervals over the voile surface.

EGYPT'S NEW RULER

SIR ELDON GORST, BRITISH CONSUL IN NILE COUNTRY.

Succeeds Lord Cromer, Who Held the Post for Twenty Years—A Conservative, But Was Appointed by a Liberal Government.

London.—As the successor of Lord Cromer, the man who, for 20 years, has been the real ruler of Egypt, though nominally merely the British consul general there, Sir Eldon Gorst has a most difficult post to fill. Lord Cromer has been fittingly described as "the maker of modern Egypt." He found her almost ruined, her people desperate with suffering, her very existence in peril from the Dervishes; he leaves her in splendid prosperity, her population increasing in numbers and happiness, her finances established on a firm basis, her taxes lightened, her people freed from the tyrannies that so long oppressed them. To maintain such a huge standard of achievement and carry forward the work of Egyptian regeneration demands a statesman of the highest caliber.

Sir Eldon Gorst does not lack admirers who declare that he will prove the right man in the right place. He is the eldest son of a remarkably able man, Sir John Eldon Gorst, who is still living. He was named after his father long before, of course, it was known that he had inherited his father's brains. When his ability brought him a knighthood he dropped his first name that there might not be two Sir Johns in the family. But in Egypt everybody still speaks of him as "Johnnie" Gorst. He went there when 26 as an attache, and rose rapidly through the diplomatic grades. Great administrative talents and conspicuous social gifts commended him to Lord Cromer, and within an extraordinarily short time he had become under secretary to the ministry of finance, and again adviser to the ministry of the interior. "Adviser" in Egypt is a euphemism for the British official who is really the boss, but nominally the subordinate of the minister at the head of a department. He was financial adviser to the Egyptian government when, in 1903, he was summoned to London to assist the foreign office in the negotiations which resulted in the Anglo-French agreement that so largely contributed to giving England a free hand in Egypt. His services were rewarded by giving him one of the most responsible positions in the permanent civil service, that of under secretary of state for foreign affairs.

His selection as Lord Cromer's successor affords a significant illustration of the difference between English and American methods in making appointments of great responsibility and power. It was under a Conservative government that Sir Eldon won distinction and presumably he is a Conservative. Yet it is a Liberal government that makes him the new ruler of Egypt. The question of his politics is not taken into consideration. He is chosen for the task because he seems the man best fitted to fill the position.

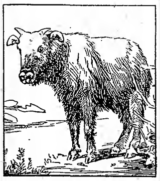
Sir Eldon knows all the ropes in Egypt, is personally acquainted with everybody who counts there and speaks Arabic and the native dialects fluently. Lord Cromer has wrought a marvelous work in Egypt. It may be doubted whether any single statesman has ever accomplished more striking results in any country. But it is his very success that renders all the more necessary, perhaps, a new and younger head to deal with the new conditions that result from that success. For Lord Cromer has created a nation—a nation which naturally wants to largely run itself. With these aspirations Lord Cromer has no sympathy. His ideal of Egyptian rule is that of a benign dictator. England is pledged not to reduce Egypt permanently to the condition of a protected Indian state. Sooner or later a beginning must be made with the work of teaching Egypt to rule itself. It is expected that Sir Eldon's administration will take the direction of paving the way for some form of constitutional government. It is a most difficult task requiring the utmost tact, firmness and judgment. Nothing would be more fatal than undue haste. Sir Eldon is 46. He has time in which to make for himself a name that will rival that of Lord Cromer. But should he succeed in setting Egypt on its own legs he will be exposed to the most scathing fire of hostile criticism while doing it. For many in England who most loudly proclaim their patriotism believe that it is only white races which are fitted for any measure of self-government.

SIR ELDON GORST.
(Successor to Lord Cromer as Ruler of Egypt.)

STRANGE ANIMAL OF FAR EAST.

Cross Between Ox and Antelope Found in Eastern Himalayas.

Chicago—The strange animal depicted in the illustration is scientifically known as the takin, and commonly is called the bull antelope of the Eastern Himalayas. He is a link between the ox and the antelope; and, according to Prof. Ray Lankester, there is nothing deceptive or misleading about the animal except its name, and this, after all, is only the name given to it, without intention to offend, by the natives of the Mishmi Hills on the northern frontier of Assam, whence the first specimen was obtained by Brian Hodgson 40 years ago from native hunters. It occurs also in the mountainous regions of western China, where a pale-colored variety of the species was discovered by Pere David, and in Thibet. The takin is not rare in the high mountainous regions where it occurs. Collecting at certain seasons in herds, it is said to seek protection in the high forests and to feed on grassy downs from which the snow is melted by the winter sun. It has rarely until to-day been shot by sportsmen on account of the political as well is physical difficulties presented to exploration in the country which it inhabits. The recent British expedition in Thibet resulted in some further expeditions across the frontier, and a few specimens of the takin have thus come to hand.



The Takin.

The scientific interest attaching to the takin depends on the fact that it furnishes one of the numerous links between the antelopes and the more familiar sheath-horned ruminants which we know as cattle (ox, buffalo, bison), sheep and goats.

The takin has in the adult broad tumid bases to the horns, which nearly meet in the middle line, and a curvature which is not unlike that presented by the horns of the gnu. There is, however, one northern cavicorn—the musk ox of the arctic circle—which in the general character of the horns and limbs, with large lateral hoofs, presents marked resemblance to the takin.

It is probable that the takin is an offshoot of the antelope stock which ultimately produced the musk ox, just as the chamois, the serow and the goral are probably remnants of another antelope line of ancestry which gave rise to the goats and sheep.

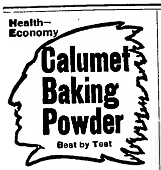
GATEWAY OF THE ALHAMBRA.

Famous Spanish Structure That Is Going to Ruin.

London.—The Alhambra, which is reported as rapidly goin to ruin, is one of the famous structures of the world, and, though mutilated and in decay, is said to be the best proof of the artistic character of the Moorish dominion in Spain. It stands on a hill north of Granda and is surrounded by a wall built of red brick. The structure was in times long past the fortified palace citadel of the Moorish kings, and all that remains is now grouped about two principal oblong courts, known as the Court of Blessing and the Court of Lions. In the latter is an arcade supported by 124 white marble columns. There is a network of smaller apartments, and all the surfaces are decorated with what has been built between 1248 and 1354, the first work having been done by King Mohammed Ibn-el-Ahmar. It was mutilated by Charles V. and Philip V., and was damaged by fire in 1890.

The Alhambra Gateway.

When you are on a visit, and the woman of the house makes you believe you are no trouble, that is tact, for, of course, you do make trouble.



Health—Economy

Calumet Baking Powder

Best by Test

Red Lake Falls Gazette

Published weekly. Thursday evening. entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

QUICKER THAN LIGHTNING.

Action of the Human Body Outstrips Everything In Motion.

"As quick as lightning" is a phrase colloquially used to express the maximum of rapidity, but, according to a well known scientist, electricity itself is outstripped by that old fashioned machine, the human body, by which it appears powers can, so to speak, be generated in the brain, transmitted through the nerves and developed in the muscles in an infinitesimal fraction of a second.

It is stated that a pianist in playing a presto of Mendelssohn played 5,595 notes in four minutes and three seconds. The striking of each of these, it has been estimated, involved two movements of the finger and possibly more.

Again, the movements of the wrist, elbows and arms can scarcely be less than one movement for each note. As twenty-four notes were played each second and each involves three movements we would have seventy-two voluntary movements per second.

Again, the place, the force, the time and the duration of each of these movements were controlled. All these motor reactions were conditioned upon a knowledge of the position of each finger of each hand before it was moved, while moving it, as well as of the auditory effect to force and pitch, all of which involves equally rapid sensory transmissions.

If we add to this the work of the memory in placing the notes in their proper position as well as the fact that the performer at the same time participates in the emotion the selection describes and feels the strength and weaknesses of the performance, we arrive at a truly bewildering network of impulses coursing along at inconceivably rapid rates.

Such estimates show, too, that we are capable of doing many things at once. The mind is not a unit, but is composed of higher and lower centers, the available fund of attention being distributed among them.—Pearson's Weekly.

CONTROL OF ENERGY.

Is It Possible For the Human Race to Avert Extinction?

The only conceivable way in which the human intelligence can ever succeed in averting the "procession of the great year" is not by postponing the issue, but by reversing the process. The question is this: While energy is being dissipated in accordance with the natural law, can we so manipulate things as to accumulate energy, making the unavailable available—notwithstanding the fact that cosmic processes seem to be essentially irreversible? Now there is assuredly no inherent reason why we should not accomplish this. It is true that hitherto all the atomic evolution that has been observed is atomic disintegration. We may speak now, indeed, of the analysis of the elements. But so it was, we may remember, that the older chemistry began, and yet analytic chemistry was the precursor of synthetic chemistry. We began by breaking up compounds, but now we can make them—can, indeed, make compounds hitherto unknown in nature. Similarly, it is more than probable that we shall ere long learn to achieve the synthesis of the elements as well as their analysis. No energy is ever lost. Even when the radium atom, itself the child of the uranium atom, breaks down and dissipates its energy, ending, it is supposed, as the dull atom of lead, the original energies are not destroyed. Why should they not be gathered up again and thus again become available? Are matter and energy to go on their way, ultimately destroying the human race? For myself, I incline to the view that victory will rest at last with "man's unconquerable mind."—C. W. Saleeby, F. R. S., in Harper's Magazine.

LIZARDS OF BARBADOS.

They Can Change Color and Drop Their Tails at Will.

The green lizards which swarm on every tree certainly have the hardest life of any creatures in Barbados, since their flesh is so delicate that everything eats them which can catch them. Cats, fowls, birds, monkeys and snakes all devour the poor lizards, which have only two methods of defending themselves, both very inadequate for the purpose. One is their power of changing their color, whereby they can appear bright green at one moment on the leaf of an aloe and then dark chocolate brown on a piece of damp earth. If this does not conceal them from their enemy they drop their tails. The caudal appendage jumps from the ground and makes a frantic dance all by itself, and if the pursuer is deluded into seizing it the lizard avails itself of the chance to escape and grow another tail.

For the rest the poor lizards are harmless things, with pathetic eyes, in which lurks an expression of weariness and disillusion, as though they were as old as the world itself and had found it all vanity and vexation of spirit. They are fond of plaintive music and will enter at the open windows when a piano is playing and sit listening and nodding their queer flat heads and looking out of those wistful eyes at the player till he or she, if of an imaginative temperament, might fancy she were playing to an audience of transmigrated souls.—Chambers' Journal.

Use McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee Every Day Because—

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always uniform in quality and properly blended and roasted.

You do not get good coffee one day and poor coffee the next.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps this coffee clean and fresh, protected from dust, dirt and foul odors. Each package is one pound full weight.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE GARCEAU & ZAISER

M. SKALA J. W. B. NIMESGREN

DIET DELUSIONS.

They Come Down to Us From the Old Barbarous Tribes.

Some diet delusions are of most modern date, while others are of most respectable antiquity. Among the latter is that very ancient survival, the notion that particular foods are "good" for particular things or effects.

This is an almost direct descendant of the notion, held with greater or less unanimity by nearly all savage and barbarous tribes, that the flesh or viscera of birds and animals possessing particular qualities will be likely to produce the same qualities in those who eat them.

Thus Nero used to banquet on nightingales' tongues in the hope of improving his voice, and the savage cut out and devoured the heart of the bear, the liver of the buffalo, etc., believing that the strength and courage of these animals would thereby be transferred to himself.

It is probable that the most gruesome of ancestral rites—cannibalism—was largely due to the same belief, although, of course, in Neanderthal days primitive man would have no more hesitancy about eating his enemy after he had killed him than he would in devouring a bear or a deer.

In fact, the early converts of the missionaries in the South Sea islands referred to their favorite dish as "long pig." Every known race has at some time been cannibal.—McClure's Magazine.

Magyar Music.

Of Magyar art music seems to have gained the widest admiration, and it is certain that musical executants of the first order, and in the case of Liszt of unique grandeur, have justified part of the expectations with which musical Europe has long looked upon Hungary. Magyar music can be likened to nothing more aptly than to the exclusively Hungarian river Theiss. Capricious and majestic, teeming with life and silting up for miles, surrounded by charming fioriture of water lilies and alder trees and suddenly again by poisonous marshes and swamps, such is the Theiss, such is Hungarian music—stirring, bewildering, unspeakably saddening, inexpressibly exhilarating. It is the music of rhapsodic souls, of intoxication, of the battlefield, of wild war dances after the victory. But, like the great river, it cannot be regulated. —Nineteenth Century.

Sunlight For All the Leaves.

The telegraph plant of India has a method all its own for catching the sunshine. Each of its leaves is composed of three leaflets. The larger terminal one erects itself during the day and turns sharply down at night, while the other two smaller leaflets move constantly day and night, describing complete circles with a peculiar jerking motion like the second hand of a watch. Occasionally they rest for a period and then go on again, thus bringing every part of every leaf to the full action of the sunlight.

Mere Trifles.

"Folks all well this morning, Tommy?" asked a friend of the family.

"Yes'm," replied Tommy.

"I am glad to hear it. The last time I heard from them your papa was suffering from rheumatic gout and your mamma had neuralgia."

"Oh, yes, they've still got 'em. I thought you meant wse any of us sick."

The Gentleman.

It is possible for every man to assume an elegant manner, but the true gentleman is nature's own nobleman, who never forgets to be polite to every one, and it is as easy to discern the assumed from the innate good breeding as it is to distinguish paste from diamonds.—Dickens.

The Test.

The Soulful Girl—What is the true test of poetry? The Poet—Well, if one can get a poem accepted that is written on both sides of the paper he may rest assured that it is a good thing.

Every man is valued in this world as he shows by his conduct that he wishes to be valued.—Bruyere.

The Osprey.

Allusion is often made, especially in fashion journals, to "osprey" feathers. Few words have been more loosely bandied about than this bird name. The Roman author Pliny's "ossifraga" (bone breaker) has been identified with the lammergeyer, a vulture that is reputed to break up bones too big for it to devour whole by dropping them from a height upon rocks. But both "ossifrage" and "osprey," a newer form, came to be applied to quite another bird, the fish hawk, which is now the true "osprey." Yet the "osprey" feathers—more properly egret feathers, or aigrettes—do not come from this bird, but from the egret, or lesser white heron.

With a Home.

The great millionaire looked up impatiently.

"Well," he said, "what is it?"

"I desire, sir," the young man faltered, "to marry your daughter, provided"—

The other frowned.

"Provided what?"

"Just provided," murmured the youth.

Vocabularies.

The English language, according to a German statistician who has made a study of the comparative wealth of languages, heads the list with the enormous vocabulary of 260,000 words; German comes next, with 80,000 words; then Italian, with 75,000; French, 30,000; Turkish, 22,500, and Spanish, 20,000.

PINK LEMONADE.

The Story of Its Introduction to the Circus Public.

"Old Peter Conklin, the clown," said a circus official, "was the first to give pink lemonade to the world.

"It dates back to 1857, when Conklin was traveling in the south with Jere Mabie's big show. Conklin had a dispute with Mabie and jumped the show down in Texas. I've had the story right from his own lips. He bought a couple of mules and an old covered wagon, some tubs, tartaric acid, a lemon, a bushel or two of peanuts and started in the refreshment business. He followed the circus with his wagon, and every time the tents were pitched he would mount a box and harangue the crowd with:

"Here is your ice cold lemonade,
Made in the shade.
Stick your finger in the glass;
It'll freeze fast.

"The lemonade sold splendidly, and he couldn't wait on the people fast enough. One day he was surrounded by a mob scrambling for 'the juice,' when his water supply ran out. There were no wells or springs at hand. He rushed into the big tent, but there was ne'er a drop of water to be had. In his excitement he invaded the dressing tent. Fannie Jamieson, the bareback rider, was wringing out a pair of pink tights, the aniline dye coloring the water a very pretty shade. Conklin didn't stop to ask any questions. He grabbed up the tub and ran. Into the tub he threw some acid and the property lemon and called out:

"'Come quickly. Buy some fine strawberry lemonade.'

"His sales were doubled that day, and since then no well regulated circus is without pink lemonade. However, we do not make it the same way now, and sometimes strawberries are used as well as lemons."—Exchange.

BRUNSWICK STEW.

A Gastronomic Triumph With a National Reputation.

This celebrated stew originated in Brunswick county, Va., from which it takes its name—a county most famous in antebellum days for its perfect cuisine and gastronomical predilections. The originator was either Mr. Haskins or Mr. Stith, each claiming during a long life the distinction of having made the first stew and dying without a proper adjustment of the controversy. While made everywhere in the habitable globe, it is seldom made properly. It was introduced in Paris by Judge John T. Mason of Virginia. Only in Brunswick county is this stew so appetizing, so piquant in the seasoning to be found in all its perfection. To this remark of the writer made to a gentleman in the far south he replies, "The egotism of a Virginian suggests perfection in all things there, and the slow pace of the state ample time to arrive at it." The recipe is as follows: One of three kinds of meat is used—lamb, chicken or squirrel. If chicken, it is first parboiled, cut up as if to fry, the outer skin removed, then put on in hot water—a-plenty to cover it—a large onion cut fine, a large slice of middling meat cut fine, black and red pepper in abundance and salt. After cooking until the bones can be extracted, and hot water added if not enough, corn cut off the cob and tomatoes chopped fine are added, with half a pound of butter, more pepper and salt. Before serving add stale light breadcrumbs. Never add Irish potatoes or butter beans or any vegetable save corn and tomatoes. Serve in a tureen. It should be the consistency of thick soup and very highly seasoned. It is considered one of the finest of stews and has a national reputation.—Richmond Times.

"Americanisms."

"Fired out," commonly supposed to be an "Americanism," has been traced home to Shakespeare. In one of his sonnets he says:

Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

"Say," as an exclamation to attract attention to the beginning of a remark, is common enough and not very elegant. At least so thought a school teacher who resolved to break his pupils of the habit of using it. A bright one quoted, however, this from "The Star Spangled Banner:"

Oh, say, can you see?

If the American people sing "say!" in the national hymn, say, why not say "Say?"

As to Bow Legs.

A bow legged man usually possesses more than ordinary strength. Why? Because his legs in supporting great weight can bend in one direction only, whereas the man with straight legs is inclined to be wabbly. Such being the case, why should not a knock kneed man be stronger than a bow legged one? His knees, being braced against each other, ought to be more steadfast than legs bending outward. Yet we all know that the knock kneed man generally goes into consumption and is at all times weaker than his bow legged brother.—New York Press.

Optimistic Sure.

Newberry—Is Sanford of an optimistic temperament? Baldwin—I should say he is. I have known him to go into a restaurant without a cent in his pocket, order a dozen oysters and feel satisfied that he could pay his bill with a pearl.—Life.

Just Playing Possum.

"So you are going to retire from politics?"

"Yes," said the municipal boss, "I'm going to retire. But I'm not going to sleep so soundly that I can't be awakened."

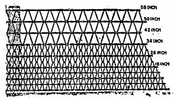
Men ought not to investigate things from words, but words from things.—Myson.

HOG FENCING

Do You Need Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb pottom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.

General Hardware

Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

When You Travel, Enjoy the Superior

DINING CAR SERVICE

of through Northern Pacific trains. A dainty breakfast, tasty lunch, or delightful dinner prepared by a skilled chef and throughly will served, will round out and vary the pleasure of your trip. The bill-of-fare is varied and attractive—the viands appetizing—the car attractive and easy riding

"Get Your Meal on the Train"

Through dining cars on all transcontinental trains. Cafe Car Service on "Lake Superior Limited" between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Head of the Lakes.

For full information see

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

NORTHERN PACIFIC YELLOWSTONE PARK LINE

Northern Pacific Railway

A. M. CLELAND, General Passenger Agent St. Paul, Minn.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS, SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING, WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER

MAIN STREET, - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains

Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel

Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.

RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

Summer Dress Materials

Resplendent here now. The prettiest Ginghams and Muslins are here. Lawns and Batistes, White Goods, Printed Wash Goods, Sheer Chiffons, and every other fabric dear to the hearts of women and the joyous spirit of summer---all inexpensive. Laces and Embroideries, too, for the summer season calls for these, and may be had here in great variety. Get a Standard Pattern. Use them together and you will get the best results. If you do, your summer wardrobe will reflect your taste and judgment. The cost will be less than your friends will think.

A Few Specials

Batiste Impreme A beautiful summer dress goods, flowered checked, dotted, Swiss, would make make a very neat street costume, at..... 25c

Zephrs In stripes, plaids, checks, polka dots, ranging in price from................ 12½c to 15c

Scotch Plaid Ginghams In blue, red green and tan, beautiful cloth for for children's dresses.............................. 12½c

White Goods In stripes, checks, plain, potted Swiss, plaids; we are making very low prices, from................ 6c to 50c

Call and see our line of Dress Goods aud get a Summer Quarterly Style Book.

Garceau & Zaiser

The Busy Store Red Lake Falls, Minn,

Thos. Germo was at Crookston Saturday, representing some Lambert farmers in their protest against the construction of Judicial Ditch No. 7, which is now under way. It is claimed that the ditch will bring too much water from the lands above onto the farm land in Lambert.

J. S. Hanson arrived in the city Tuesday from Bemidji and went to Red Lake Falls to transact business for the Crookston Lumber company. Mr. Hanson was connected with the local offices of the Crookston Lumber company a few years ago and is known here by a wide circle of friends.—Crookston Times.

John Patnode, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcil Patnode of Louisville town, died at the home of his parents last Monday morning at 6 o'clock. He had been a sufferer of that dread disease, consumption, for some time. At the time of his death he was 24 years of age. The funeral services was held Tuesday and interment were made in the cemetery west of town. A large number of friends paid tribute to the remains of one of their number.

Mrs. Arthur Zaiser went to Crookston last evening to be present at the wedding of her sister, Miss Flora Eickhoff, to J. Arthur Williams, of Grand Eorks, to take place, June the third. Miss Eickhoff is well known here, having visited in the city on several occasions, and her many friends will wish her much happiness. The young couple are planning on taking a wedding trip and will be "at home" after July 10 in Grand Forks.

Dr. F. F. Fletcher came over from Grand Forks Friday and spent Saturday and Monday in the city at Dr. Wilkinson's office attending to dental duties. The Gazette received a communication from the doctor to announce his coming but in some manner was misplaced, the people in the city being entirely unaware of his presence until they saw the genial doctor. However, next time, it won't occur, and the public will receive sufficient notice.

About twenty young boys and girls gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Toupin last Saturday evening: complimentary of Miss Dora Toupin's sixteenth birthday and spent a very pleasant evening. Games were played and the affair wound up with a dainty luncheon. Miss Dora was the recipient of a handsome souvenir spoon.

Miss Flora Eickhoff was honor guest at a parcel shower given Monday evening by Miss Mary Engstrom. The evening was pleasantly spent with games. Miss Thora Hagen winning the prize in the guessing game. Miss Eickhoff was the recipient of many pretty gifts appropriate to the occasion. There were about twelve guests present.—Crookston Times.

Dan Bray received injuries last Sunday evening that will lay him up for some time to come. While out riding with several companions on the Northside the team ran away and Dan fell out of the buggy landing on his left arm breaking it at the elbow. He was immediately taken back to town and Dr. Wilkinson called to set the injured member. He also received several other injuries on the face. He is getting along nicely at present.

It is learned from an authentic source that the elevator which the Red Lake Falls and Crookston Milling company lost by fire at Benoit station some years ago is to be rebuilt this summer and will be ready to receive the crop this fall. This will be good news to the farmers in that vicinity as it will mean a closer market for their grain this fall and will also mean strong competition for the elevator people which cannot help but result in good to the farmers.

Prosper Grandbois, for the past thirty years a resident of Lake Pleasant township, died at the city hospital in this city Monday, at the age of 88 years, of old age. Deceased came to this county in 1878 settling in what is now Lake Pleasant town. The town received its name from a lake on Mr. Grandbois' land. The funeral services were held yesterday from St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father Fayolle officiating, and the remains were interred in the cemetery east of the city. A large number of friends were present to pay respect to the last sad rites.

The first outdoor band concert of the season took place in the city hall square Tuesday evening and there was a large crowd out. Before the concert the band paraded the streets and played several good selections. The concert numbers were rendered with usual precision and under the the able direction of L. P. Berthon are maintaining the reputation established. Following the concert the band dispersed to the city hall where a few hours of rehearsal was had for the Memorial Day exercises.

A pleasant afternoon party was given yesterday at the K. of P. hall when Mesdames Tracy, Gaass and Wilkinson were the hostesses. The first pleasing event was a set of riddles, the answers being the names of some cloth. In this contest Mrs. Robert Bourdon was winner of the prize, a handsome souvenir pin cushion. It wat in the second event that the ladies were mystified as to its outcome. Each guest was required to bring a pen knife. A bottle was passed among them and later some corks. They were then instructed to cut tho corks to fit the bottle. In this contest Mrs. Wm. Harlow won the prize—a bottle of perfume. At the conclusion of the contests Miss Ina Linnihan recited and Miss Alice Erickson rendered several vocal solos, accompanied on the piano by Misses Wilson and Igna Hamry. Freund's orchestra also assisted in the musical program. Refreshments were served and at the close of this and the guests departed for their homes.

The Gazette will do your job work promptly.

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LOCAL FIELD

ITEMS OF INTEREST DURING THE WEEK

J. G. Weeks, of Thief River, was in the city Sunday.

Damon's Colored Musical Company. Opera house, June 4.

S. J. Larson, of Wylie, was in the city on business Tuesday.

CANDY—If it comes from SPILLANE'S it must be good.

Chas. W. Latta, of Plummer, was in the city on business Monday.

Joseph Helm transacted business at Crookston over Monday night.

Go to the Merchants State Bank for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

Dr. Langevin, of Crookston, was here Tuesday on professional matters.

Garceau & Zaiser shipped two carloads of potatoes to Grand Forks this week.

H. H. Zaiser went to Grand Forks yesterday morning returning in the evening.

J. B. Armstrong drove to Plummer Monday and from there took the Soo for the cities.

Fresh fancy cookies, a big stock just received at Freund's. Call in and see them.

Mrs. Fred Cyr went to Crookston last Saturday and visited with friends until Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Skarud departed today for an extended visit at their old home at Ada.

James Egan returned yesterday morning from a trip to North Dakota on land business.

M. O. Sortedahl went to Northwood, Iowa. last Thursday and expects to return tomorrow.

The finest line of candies and confectionery in the city can always be found at Freund's.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer Hall spent Sunday at Crookston, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Selvan Hall.

C. L. Hanson was a passenger for St. Hilaire Monday after spending Sunday in Crookston.

Freund's orchestra furnished music for the Antlers's club dance at Thief River last Friday night.

Deputy Dairy Inspector Winkjer was in the city Monday, attending to matters at the creamery.

Damon's Colored Musical company, with a cast of 12 members, will show at the opera house on Tuesday evening, June 4.

WANTED

Information regarding good farm that is for sale and which can be bought of owner. No agents need answer. Wish to hear from owner only willing to close his own deal and save buyer paying big commission and fancy price to some agent. Would also like to hear of good small business for sale by owner.

Address—INFORMATION DEPARTMENT
Locator Publishing Co. Minneapolis, Minn.

T. A. Momrak, a prominent farmer of the town of Gervais, was a pleasant caller at the Gazette office Monday.

Damon's Colored Musical company at the Metropolitan opera house, in this city. Tuesday evening, June 4.

Mrs. W. A. Schreiter went to Thief River Falls yesterday morning to visit with relatives and friends until Friday.

Mrs. C. W. Johnson went to Wylie Tuesday to visit at her home and to attend a meeting of the Ladies Aid society.

Mrs. John Draper arrived in the city Tuesday from Thief River Falls and will visit here for a time with old friends.

Verne Healy and H. H. Zaiser attended the dance given by the Antler's club at Thief River last Friday night.

Mrs. Chas. N. Bourdon returned Monday morning from Crookston, after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. H. E. Nesne.

Frank Jaen, of Brooks, was in the city Monday and dropped in The Gazette office and ordered the paper sent to him at Brooks.

Mrs. J. E. Argue departed Friday for Duluth, where she will visit for a week or ten days with her friend, Miss Laura Hollinshead.

John A. Rothsten, street commissioner of Plummer, was in town Tuesday on business at the court house with the county auditor.

A. H. Ackre, of Thief River, was tranacting business in the city Tuesday and spent a few pleasant hours at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Floan.

Dr. Spofford makes his next regular visit to Red Lake Falls, June 7. At Grand View hotel. Remember the date if your eyes trouble you.

T. F. Lowry, E. A. Mills and J. Laughlin went up the line to Greenbush in a special car Tuesday morning, returning to Crookston in the evening.

Miss Laura Lizee arrived home Saturday from Crookston, where she is attending the Crookston College. She returned to her studies Monday evening.

E. G. Storaasli arrived in the city yesterday where he is manager of the Globe Realty company. Mr. Storaasli says he has a nice business in the cities. He returned last evening.

J. Drew Marshall departed last Friday, via Plummer, for St. Paul. From St. Paul he was sent to Friend, Nebraska, where his company have a contract to install an electric light system. Mr. Marshall will manage the work.

L. C. Simons returned home yesterday morning from the cities. Mrs. Simons went on to Granite Falls and will visit there for a time before returning home.

Verne, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bronillet, is quite seriously ill with pneumonia. It is hoped that the little one will be restored to his natural health shortly.

Conductor James Byrnes, who has been running a passenger on the Duluth line out of Crookston, has began punching tickets on the Greenbush line. Conductor Clark will go back to the day run between Crookston and Barnesville.

Frank Brouillet returned Monday morning from Rochester, having been there for an affliction of the lip. Frank states that he is feeling well under the conditions. Anyhow he looks it with the nice beard he has grown during his absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. LaBissoniere departed last evening for Crookston, where Mrs. LaBissoniere will visit while Theo. is attending the initiation exercises of a class of Knights of Columbus at Fargo this evening. They expect to return tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Padden and L. D. Padden drove to Crookston last Friday afternoon. They returned in the evening accompanied by S. M. Sivertson. The roads between here and Crookston are in very fine condition, it is said the best for several years.

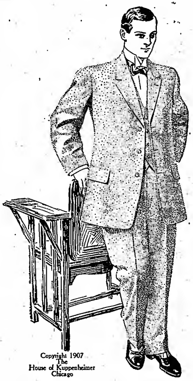
Mr. and Mrs. James H. Cross arrived in the city Saturday evening from Grand Forks, to spend Sunday with Mrs. Cross' parents. Mr and Mrs. P. E. Pirath. Mr. Cross is employed on The Press at Grand Forks. They returned to their home Monday.

Mrs. Tony LaBriere, of Drayton, N. D., and her cousin, Miss Mamie Regan, who have been in this city since the death of Mrs. LaBriere's father, Timothy Regan, left this morning for Red Lake Falls, where Mrs LaBriere will be a guest at the home of Miss Regan for a few days.—Crookston Times.

Theo Jacobson held an auction sale of his live stock and machinery last Tuesday on the farm he recently disposed of to C. E. Patterson, of Marshall, Minn., and yesterday he commenced hauling his household effects to the city to be shipped to Lyon county. He will take up his residence in Marshall.

John A. Pokezwinski returned Saturday from Moorhead, having testified in a case against the Northern Pacific railroad. About three months ago the plaintiff in the case, a Mrs. Mary Cummings, of Barnesville, was standing on the depot platform at Perham awaiting the arrival of a train, and when it came up the mail clerk threw out a pouch which struck her foot, causing such injuries that the member had to be amputated. She sued for $20,000 and got a verdict of $6,528.76.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.



Copyright 1907 The House of Kuppenheimer Chicago

All We Ask of You

Is a Look

If our clothing does not appeal to you do not buy. Our Kuppenheimer and Xtra Good line clothes are so much superior to other lines that they deserve your attention.

$15 to $25

We show another line at

$5.00 to $12.50

that are the finest medium priced clothing ever shown in the city.

Ladies' Patent Oxfords--a new line--
$1.75 to $3.50

The Big Store ...

Theo. LaBissoniere, Proprietor

PLAY BALL!

HARRY HEALY TO BAT

G. A. KANKEL ON DECK

with a full line of base ball goods for the young boy up to the professional player. All the regulation league balls and other base ball paraphernalia is found at our store. Also a full stock of Hog Wire Fencing, Barb Wire, Hoes and Rakes.......

New Hardware Store G. A. KANKEL Red Lake Falls, Minn.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST

BY HARRY LEON WILSON AUTHOR OF THE SPENDERS

COPYRIGHT 1903 BY LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHAPTER XXXIV.—Continued.

But Prudence was not there, and he wondered with dismay if she had joined the rest of the village and gone out to meet the prophet. He had seen the last of them going along the dusty road to the north, men and women and little children, hot, excited and eager. It did not seem like her to be among them, and yet except for those before him working about the bowery, and a few mothers with children in arms, the town was apparently deserted.

Even as he waited he heard the winding alarm of a bugle, and a scurrying of hacks in the dusty haze far up the road. The Wild Ram of the Mountains gave a few hoarse commands for the very final touches, called off his force from the now complete bowery, and a solitary Gentile was for the moment left to greet the oncoming procession.

Presently, however, from the dark interiors of the log houses came the mothers with babies, a few aged sires too feeble for the march, and such of the remaining housewives as could leave to a little time the dinners they were cooking. They made but a thin row along the little street, and Follett saw at once that Prudence was not among them. He must wait and see if she marched in the approaching procession.

And the mounted escort was coming into view, four abreast, captained by Elder Wardle, who, with a sash of red and gold slanted across his breast, was riding nervously, as his seat could be kept only by the most skilful horsemanship, a white mule that he was known to treat with [illegible] disrespect on days that were not great. Behind the martial Wardle was Peter Peterson, Peter Loud Peterson, and Peter Long Peter Peterson, the most martial looking men in Amalon after their leader; and then came a few more fours of prominent mounted Saints.

After this escort, separated by an interval that would let the dust settle a little, came the body of the procession. First a carriage containing the prophet, portly, strong-faced, easy of manner, as became a giant who felt kindly in his might. By his side was his wife, Amelia, the reigning favorite, who could play the piano and sing "Fair Bingen on the Rhine" with a dash that was said to be superb. Behind this float of honor came other carriages bearing the prophet's counsellors, the apostles, chief bishop, bishops generally, elders, priests and deacons, each taking precedence near the prophet's carriage by seniority of rank or ordination. Along the line of carriages were outriders, bearing proudly aloft the banners upon which suitable devices were printed:

"God Bless Brigham Young!"

"Hail to Zion's Chief!"

"The Lion of the Lord."

"Welcome to our Mouthpiece of God!"

Behind the last carriage came the citizens in procession, each detachment with its banner. The elderly brethren stepped briskly under "Fathers in Israel"; the elderly sisters gazed proudly aloft to "Mothers in Israel." Then came a company of young men whose banner announced them as "Defenders of Zion." They were followed by a company of maidens led by Matilda Wright, striving to be not too much elated, and whose banner bore the inscription, "Daughters of Zion." At the last came the children, openly set up by the occasion, and big-eyed with importance, the boy who carried their banner, "The Hope of Israel," going with wonderful rigidity, casting not so much as an eye either to right or left.

But Prudence had not been in this triumphal column, nor was she among any of the women who stood with children in their arms, or who rushed to the doors with sleeves rolled up and a long spoon or fork in their hands.

Then all at once a great inspiration came to Follett. When the last dusty little white-dressed girl had trudged solemnly by, and the head of the procession was already winding down the lane that led to Elder Wardle's place, he called himself a fool and turned back. He walked like a man who has suddenly remembered that which he should not have forgotten. And yet he had remembered nothing at all. He had only thought of a possibility, but one that became more plausible with every step; especially when he reached the Rae house and found it deserted. Whenever he thought of his stupidity, which was every score of steps, he would break into a little trot that made the willows along the creek on his left run into a yellowish green blur.

He was breathing hard by the time he had made the last ascent and stood in the cool shade of the comforting pines. He waited until his pulse became slower, wiping his forehead with the blue neckerchief which Prudence had suggested that she liked to see him wear in place of the one of scarlet. When he had cooled and calmed himself a little, he stepped lightly on. Around the big rock he went, over the "down timber" beyond it, up over the rise down which the waters tumbled, and then sharply to the right where their nook was, a call to her already on his lips.

But she was not there. He could see the place at a glance. Nothing below met his eye but the straight red trunks of the pines and the brown carpet beneath them. A jay posed his deep shining blue on a cluster of scarlet of sumac, and, cocking his crested head, screamed at him mockingly. The canyon's cool breath fanned him and the pine-tops sighed and sang. At first he was disheartened; but then his eyes caught a gleam of white and red under the pine, touched to movement by a low-swinging breeze.

It was her hat swaying where she had hung it on a broken bough of the tree she liked to lean against. And there was her book; not the Book of Mormon, but a secular, frivolous thing called "Leaflets of Memory, an Illuminated Annual for the Year 1847." It was lying on its face, open at the sentimental tale of "Anastasia." He put it down where she had left it. The canyon was narrow and she would hardly leave the waterside for the steep trail. She would be at the upper cascade or in the little park above it, or somewhere between. He crossed the stream, and there in the damp sand was the print of a small heel where she had made a long step from the last stone. He began to hurry again, clambering recklessly over boulders, or through the underbrush where the sides of the stream were steep. When the upper cascade came in sight his heart leaped, for there he caught the fleeting shimmer of a skirt and the gleam of a dark head.

He hurried on, and after a moment's climb had her in full view, standing on the ledge below which the big trout lay. There he saw her turn so that he would have sworn she looked at him. It seemed impossible that she had not seen him; but to his surprise she at once started up the stream, swiftly footing over the rough way, now a little step, now a free leap, grasping a willow to pull herself up an incline, then disappearing around a clump of cedars.

He redoubled his speed over the rocks. When she next came into view, still far ahead, he shouted long and loud. It was almost certain that she must hear; and yet she made no sign. She seemed even to speed ahead the faster for his hail.

Again he sprang forward to cover the distance between them, and again he shouted when the next view of her showed that he was gaining. This time he was sure she heard; but she did not look back, and she very plainly increased her speed.

For an instant he stood aghast at this discovery; then he laughed.

"Well if you want a race, you'll get it!"

He was off again along the rough bed of the stream. He shouted no more, but slowly increased the gain he had made upon her. Instead of losing time by climbing up over the bank, he splashed through the water at two places where the little stream was wide and shallow. Then at last he saw that he was closing in upon her. Soon he was near enough to see that she also knew it.

He began at that moment an extended course of marveling at the ways of woman. For now she had reached the edge of the little open park, and was placidly seating herself on a fallen tree in the grove of quaking aspens. He could not understand this change of manner. And when he reached the opening she again astounded him by greeting him with every manifestation of surprise, from the first nervous start to the pushing up of her dark brows.

"Why," she began, "how did you ever think of coming here?"

But he had twice hurried fruitlessly this hot morning and he was not again to be baffled. As he advanced toward her, she regarded him with some apprehension until he stopped a safe six feet away. She had noted certain lines of determination in his face.

"Now what's the use of pretending?—what did you run for?"

"I?—run?"

Again the curving black brows went up in frank surprise.

"Yes,—you run!"

He took a threatening step forward, and the brows promptly fell to a serious intentness of his face.

"What did you do it for?"

She stood up. "What did I do it for?—what did I do it for?"

But his eyes were searching her and she had to lower her own. Then she looked up again, and laughed nervously.

"I—I don't know—I couldn't help it." Again she laughed. "And why did you run? how did you think of coming here?"

"I'll tell you how, now I've caught you." He started toward her, but she was quickly backing away into the opening of the little park, still laughing.

"Look out for that blow-down back of you!" he called. In the second that she halted to turn and discover his trick he had caught her by the arm.

"There—I caught you fair—now what did you run for?"

"I couldn't help it." Her face was crimson. His own was pale under the tan. They could hear the beating of both their hearts. But with his capture made so boldly he was dumb, knowing not what to say.

The faintest pulling of the imprisoned arm aroused him.

"I'd 'a' followed you till Christmas come if you'd kept on. Clear over the divide and over the whole creation. I never would have given you up. I'm never going to."

He caught her other wrist and sought to draw her to him.

With head down she came, slowly, yielding yet resisting, with little shudders of terror that was yet a strange delight, with eyes that dared give him but one quick little look, half pleading and half fear. But then after a few tense seconds her struggles were all housed far within his arms; there was no longer play for the faintest of them; and she was strained until she felt her heart rush out to him as she had once felt it go to her dream of a single love,—with the utter abandon of the falling water beside them.

His voice came to her in a dull murmur, and the sound of the running water came, again like the muffled tinkling of little silver bells in the distance. Both his arms were strong about her, and now her own hands rose in rebellion to meet where the kerchief was knotted at the back of his neck, quite as the hands of the other woman had rebelliously flung down the scarf from the balcony. Then the brim of his hat came down over her hair, and her lips felt his kiss.

They stood so a long time, it seemed to them, in the high grass, amid the white-barked quaking aspens, while a little wind from the dark pines at their side, lowered now to a yearning softness, played over them. They were aroused at last by a squirrel that ran half-way down the trunk of a near-by spruce to bark indignantly at them, believing they menaced his winter's store of spruce cones piled at the foot of the tree. With rattle after rattle his alarm came, until he had the satisfaction of noting an effect.

The young man put the girl away from him to look upon her in the new light that enveloped them both, still holding her hands.

"There's one good thing about your marriages,—they marry you for eternity, don't they? That's for ever—only it isn't long enough, even so—not for me."

"I thought you were never coming."

"But you said"—he saw the futility of it, however, and kissed her instead.

"I was afraid of you all this summer," he said.

"I was afraid of you, too."

"You got over it yesterday all right."

"How?"

"You kissed me."

"Never—what an awful thing to say!"

"But you did—twice—don't you remember?"

"Oh, well, it doesn't matter. If I did it wasn't at all like—like—"

"Like that—"

"No—I didn't think anything about it."

"And now you'll never leave me, and I'll never leave you."

They sat on the fallen tree.

"And to think of that old—"

"Oh, don't talk of it. That's why I ran off here—so I couldn't hear anything about it until he went away."

"Why didn't you tell me you were coming?"

"I didn't think you were so stupid."

"How was I to know where you were coming?"

But now she was reminded of something.

"Tell me one thing—did you ever know a little short, fat girl, a blonde that you liked very much?"

"Never!"

"Then what did you talk so much about her for yesterday if you didn't? You'd speak of her every time."

"I didn't think you were so stupid."

"Well, I can't see—"

"You don't need to—we'll call it even."

And so the talk went until the sun had fallen for an hour and they knew it was time to go below.

"We will go to the meeting together," she said, "and then father shall tell Brigham,—tell him—"

"That you're going to marry me. Why don't you say it?"

"That I'm going to marry you, and be your only wife." She nestled under his arm again.

"For time and eternity—that's the way your church puts it."

Then, not knowing it, they took their last walk down the pine-hung glade. Many times he picked her lightly up to carry her over rough places and was loth to put her down,—having, in truth, to be bribed thereto.

"I Never Would Have Given You Up— I'm Never Going To."

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Rise and Fall of a Bent Little Prophet.

Down in the village the various dinners of ceremony to the visiting officials were over. An hour had followed of decent rest and informal chat between the visitors and their hosts, touching impartially on matters of general interest; on irrigation, the gift of tongues, the season's crop of peaches, the pouring out of the Spirit abroad, the best mixture of sheep-dip; on many matters not unpleasing to the practical-minded Deity reigning over them.

Then the entire populace of Amalon, in its Sunday best of "valley tan" or store-goods, flocked to the little square and sat expectantly on the benches under the green roof of the bowery, ready to absorb the droppings of the sanctuary.

In due time came Brigham, strolling between Elder Wardle and Bishop Wright, bland, affable, and benignant. On the platform about him sat his Counsellors, the more distinguished of his suite, and the local dignitaries of the Church.

Among these came the little bent man with an unwonted color in his face, coming in absorbed in thought, shaking hands even with Brigham with something of abstraction in his manner. Prudence and Follett came late, finding seats at the back next to a generous row of the Mrs. Seth Wright.

When they had settled into their seats, the Wild Ram of the Mountains arose and invoked a blessing on those present and upon those who had gone behind the veil; adding a petition that Brigham be increased in his basket and in his store, in wives, flocks, and herds, and in the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

They sang another hymn, and when that was done, the little bent man arose and came hesitatingly forward to the baize-covered table that served as a pulpit. As President of the Stake it was his office to welcome the visitors, and this he did.

There were whisperings in the audience when his appearance was noted. It was the first time he had been seen by many of them in weeks. They whispered that he was failing.

The words of official welcome spoken, he began his discourse; but in a timid, shuffling manner so unlike his old self that still others whispered of his evident illness. Inside he burned with his purpose, but, with all his resolves, the presence of Brigham left him unnerved. He began by referring to their many adversities since the day when they had first knelt to entreat the mercy of God upon the land. Then he spoke of revelations.

"You must all have had revelations, because they have come even to me. Perhaps you were deaf to the voice, as I have been. Perhaps you have trusted too readily in some revelation that came years ago, supposedly from God—in truth, from the Devil. Perhaps you have been deaf to later revelations meant to warn you of the other's falseness."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Dyeing is as easy as washing when PUTNAM FADELESS DYES are used. Ask your druggist.

An easy way to get money is to inherit it.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

What reason could not avoid has often been cured by delay.—Seneca.

Ship Your Cream to Us.
The largest Creamery in the Northwest. Milton Dairy Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Most people seem to enjoy coming out of a church more than they do going in.

We Want Your Cream.
Write to-day for tags and prices. North Star Creamery Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Any woman can make a dollar go so far that her husband will never see it again.

We Pay Top Price for Cream.
Cash every day. Write for prices and tags. Miller & Holmes, St. Paul, Minn.

No, Cordelia, a man doesn't necessarily have paint in his eyes when he is color blind.

U. S. Dip, Wash and Disinfectant
the best & cheapest. 1 Gal. makes 100 Gallons, Dip, wash or spray. 1 Gal. 75 cts., 3 Gals. $2.25, 5 Gals. $3.00. Write for 32-page booklet, Stock Growers' Enemies. It's free. N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

It may not be possible for a young man to measure life; but it is possible to say, I am resolved to put life to its noblest and best use.

To improve the general health, take Garfield Tea daily for a time; it purifies the blood, eradicates rheumatism and many chronic ailments, and keeps the health good. Garfield Tea is made of herbs; it is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Garfield Tea Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The rich man's son is called a prig if he walks in the way of the righteous, and he is denounced as a degenerate if he endeavors to put his father's money into circulation.

Famous Book Free.
Every reader of this paper can get free of charge one of Dr. Coffee's famous books which tells of a new method by which persons afflicted with Deafness, Head Noises, Sore Eyes, Failing Sight from any cause, can cure themselves at home at small expense.
Write a letter immediately to Dr. W. O. Coffee, 360 Century Bldg., Des Moines, Ia.

The people of Colorado are so confident that publicity pays large dividends that they are going to spend a fund in advertising the state's resources.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

It's tough even on the six-footer when he has one foot in the grave.

When You Want Pure White Lead, Get It

Probably there is no other article of commerce subjected to so much adulteration and misrepresentation as White Lead.

Out of 18 brands of "White Lead" recently analyzed by the Government Agricultural Experiment Station of North Dakota, 5 contained absolutely no White Lead, 5 less than 15% of White Lead, and only 3 over 90% of White Lead.

There is, however, a way to be certain of the purity and genuineness of the White Lead you buy, and that is to see that the keg you buy bears the Dutch Boy trade mark. This trade mark is a positive guarantee of absolutely Pure White Lead made by the Old Dutch Process.

SEND FOR BOOK
"A Talk on Paint," gives valuable information on the paint subject. Sent free upon request.

All lead packed in 1907 bears this mark.

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY
in whichever of the following cities is nearest you:
New York, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia [John T. Lewis & Bros. Co.]; Pittsburgh [National Lead & Oil Co.]

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Corned Beef

is a mild cured and perfectly cooked corned Beef, and carefully packed in Libby's Great White Kitchens. It is prepared as carefully as you would make it in your own kitchen.

It has the characteristics and delicious flavor of the right kind of corned beef.

For Quick Serving.—Libby's Corned Beef, cut into thin slices, arranged on a platter and garnished with Libby's Chow Chow makes a tempting dish for luncheon, dinner or supper.

Ask your grocer for Libby's and insist upon getting Libby's

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

LIVE STOCK AND MISCELLANEOUS ELECTROTYPES
In great variety for sale at the lowest prices by A. N. KELLOGG NEWSPAPER CO., 73 W. Adams St., Chicago

DEFIANCE STARCH—16 ounces to the package—other starches only 12 ounces—same price and "DEFIANCE" IS SUPERIOR QUALITY.

Tired Nervous Women Make Unhappy Homes

MRS. NELLIE MAKHAM

MRS. GEO. A. JAMES

A nervous irritable woman, often on the verge of hysterics, is a source of misery to everyone who comes under her influence, and unhappy and miserable herself.

Such women not only drive husbands from home but are wholly unfit to govern children.

The ills of women act like a fire brand upon the nerves, consequently seven-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, the "blues", sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some organic derangement.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness alternating with extreme irritability? Do you suffer from pains in the abdominal region, backache, bearing-down pains, nervous dyspepsia, sleeplessness, and almost continually cross and snappy? If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous troubles of women than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Thousands and thousands of women can testify to this fact.

Mrs. Nellie Makham, of 151 Morgan St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:—

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was a wreck from nervous prostration. I suffered so I did not care what became of me, and my family despaired of my recovery. Physicians failed to help me. I was urged to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I want to tell you that it has entirely cured me. I think it is the finest medicine on earth and I am recommending it to all my friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. Geo. A. James, a life long resident of Fredonia, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was in a terribly run down condition and had nervous prostration caused by female trouble, in fact I had not been well since my children were born. This condition worked on my nerves and I was irritable and miserable. I had tried many remedies without getting much help but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me back to health and strength. It has also carried me safely through the Change of Life. I cannot too strongly recommend your medicine."

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to communicate promptly with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any medicine the world has ever known, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the laboratory at Lynn, Mass., which testify to its wonderful value.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; a Woman's Remedy for Women's Ills.

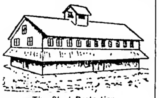
ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE
A Certain Cure for Tired, Hot, Aching Feet.
DO NOT ACCEPT A SUBSTITUTE.
This signature Allen S. Olmsted on every box.
For FREE Trial Package, Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

SHED PROTECTION FOR BARN.

Floor Joists Extended Six Feet Beyond Sides of Barn to Support Roof.

An Iowa correspondent sends a sketch of his method of attaching a shed roof to the side of his barn in such a way that it protects the doors and enables the owner to pass from one door to another without being obliged to expose himself unduly to severe weather, says Prairie Farmer. When the barn was built the correspondent says that he had the floor joists extended six feet on the outside of the barn so as to enable him to erect this shed roof, as shown in the illustration. Rafters were used to connect the outer end of this joist with the siding so as to permit a half pitch roof. He is well pleased with the plan.



The Shed Protection.

BETTER HIGHWAYS.

The Use of Tar and Oil in Road Improvement.

In all parts of the civilized world men are testing various materials that can be used in road improvement. In most countries the matter of road dust is something that excites the concern of people. It is one of the great inconveniences of living in the country. In the United States the country roads are all wide and all have more soil uncovered by verdure than in perhaps any other country. These wide roads give a large surface for dust production and in some localities the dust blows in clouds from the roads, till the verdure is anything but green. It gets into the houses and permeates every nook. To get rid of this nuisance is a task worthy of our best thought.

Some road experiments have been in progress in the neighborhood of Jackson, Tenn. Most of the tests were made on roads in the city, but some also on the neighboring country roads. The tar was applied during hot weather to the repaired, cleaned and thoroughly dried surfaces of roads in and near the city. The tar was kept at a temperature of 200 degrees while being conveyed over the roads in a tank wagon, from which it was distributed over the road surface by a hose with a special nozzle and spread evenly in a thin layer by laborers using stiff brooms. The tar was absorbed by the road in eight or ten hours, after which a light coat of sand or screenings was evenly spread over the surface and the road rolled by a steam roller. The average amount of tar used per square yard was 45 hundredths of a gallon. The labor cost less than one-tenth of a cent per square yard. These roads stood well for at least seven months, says Farmers' Review. The tar surrounded the stones and gravel and formed a hard surface about one to two inches in thickness.

In other places some experiments have been made with oil and tar, both of which are fairly good under right conditions. On the dusty country highway, however, the oil is too light for permanent results, but tar proves to be very effective wherever used.

BEANS AND CORN FEED.

It Makes an Excellent Combination to Feed the Pigs.

This is an excellent combination in pig feeding. Beans strong in protein and corn in fat. Young hogs thrive rapidly on such a combination. Prof. Shaw has this suggestion as to the preparation and feeding of beans. He says:

"Beans can be fed to swine only in the cooked form. The pig seems to be unable to utilize beans which are at all hard or firm, even though they have been boiled for some time, hence it is very essential that they be thoroughly cooked. To supply a single feed of half-cooked beans to a pen of hogs, robs them of their appetites and relish for their food, if indeed it does not put them off feed. The cooking should be conducted in an even more careful manner than it would be in preparing them for human food. It will materially shorten the cooking period and give better results, if the beans are soaked an hour or two, or better, over night, before the cooking proper is begun.

"Pails used should be rinsed after each feeding and especial care should be taken to clean the kettle or barrel after each cooking and not allow sour or moldy material to collect about the food receptacle. More than one case of supposed hog cholera has been traced to ignorant or careless neglect in allowing old swill to accumulate in a barrel instead of emptying the barrel each time before the new material is dumped into it."

Harrowing the Corn.

It won't hurt the corn to harrow it until it is three or four inches high, that is, if too much trash or corn stalks have not been left in the ground.

THE COWPEA.

Gives Heavy Yield of Fine Hay for Stock Feeding.

No field crop is increasing in popularity so fast in this locality as the cowpea, writes an Indiana correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer. This is on account of its profitableness in mixed farming and stock feeding, as well as in the fact that it is an excellent substitute for clover. Of late years, clover has not been as sure a crop as it was formerly. It is a difficult matter to secure a good stand. Even when a stand is secured, there is some sort of blight or insect pest that destroys the crop and this interferes with the farm rotation.

The increasing popularity of the cowpea is due to the fact that it gives a heavy yield of the very finest hay for stock feeding that can be produced upon the farm and at the same time is a soil renovator. It is grown very cheaply in a cowpea, wheat, grass and corn rotation. One good breaking of the land in spring is sufficient not only for the pea crop, but also for the wheat that should follow it. After the pea crop is exhausted the ground is loose and the only preparation necessary for wheat is to disk and drag down, this giving a perfect seedbed and splendid conditions to insure a paying crop of wheat.

The hay is relished by all kinds of farm stock, including swine and poultry, and comes nearer being a complete ration than any other crop that can be raised on the farm. One thing I notice is that the farmer who gives it a test is sure to adopt it somewhere in his regular rotation. It is a crop that has come to stay in this part of the country.

There is no hurry about starting the crop in spring. Land should be deeply and thoroughly plowed and worked down. Some time the latter part of May or first of June the seed is sown, about a bushel and a peck to the acre. It may be sown broadcast or with the drill. From 100 to 200 pounds of good fertilizer should be used per acre.

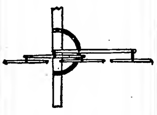
The time to harvest comes along the latter part of the summer when conditions are usually perfect for haymaking. The peas are cut when the seed pods are hard, if both hay and grain are desirable. If for hay alone, cut a week sooner. A rain will not injure the hay as it does clover. After it is cut, allow it to remain in the swath until cured and then move away. A longer time is required for curing properly than for clover hay, but it is much more valuable. It is almost indispensable in the dairy, and will reduce the expense of bran buying to the minimum. Some persons advise the sowing of oats with peas to hold them up, but this is not necessary or satisfactory.

It will pay to grow peas for pasture, for they come in when the grasses fail, either on account of drouth or overstocking. Those who have never given cowpeas a trial should give them a test this season and be convinced of the profitableness of the crop.

USING THREE HORSES.

How It Can Be Done by Use of an Offset Iron.

When three horses are used for heavy hauling, a double tongue is sometimes used. But for farm work, an offset iron may be put on the tongue of the wagon or almost any farm implement. The offset should be made of iron, two inches wide. The draw-hole in it should be ten or 12 inches from the tongue as shown in the cut. It is easily and cheaply made, says Farm and Home, and very quickly put on or taken off when one wants to change from two to three horses or back again.



The Offset on Wagon Pole.

FARM GLEANINGS.

It may seem unseasonable, but nature knows her business.

One thing we have always noticed: A good corn year nearly always has a dry spring for a starter.

There is no great loss without some small gain. If it is too cold for crops to do well we can console ourselves by thinking that the weeds are getting a set-back, too.

In a dry time it is always a good plan to get the seed down on solid ground. Planted in the loose ground left by the sub-soiler, it is apt to dry out if the weather continues dry. If the planter puts it down to the bottom it is pretty certain to come.

There is one thing becoming more certain every day. It is: A cow can no longer be kept at a profit when all she brings in is a calf each year. The price of stock cattle late years, together with the high price of land, is fast settling that question.

If hogs are kept in a dry pen they are either kept at a loss or else the bill for shorts is a big one. Shorts at $20 per ton are high in price compared with corn, but they must be fed in a dry pen or the hogs will be at a standstill. Corn alone will stunt any growing pig.

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was fading fast. My complexion got yellow and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

An Oversight.

When Chappie got up the other morning he wandered around his apartment in his pretty pink pajamas, the very picture of woe.

"What's the matter, sir?" inquired his valet.

"I don't know, Alphonse," he groaned; "I passed a most unhappy night."

Alphonse looked him over carefully.

"Oh, sir," he exclaimed, "I know what was the matter. The trousers of your pajamas were not creased. You must be more careful, sir. Those I had prepared for you were hanging across the foot of the bed."—The Bohemian.

ITCHING RASH 18 YEARS.

Girl's Rash Spread and Grew Worse Under Specialist's Care—Perfect Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"When my daughter was a baby she had a breaking out behind the ears. The doctor said that she would outgrow it, and it did get somewhat better until she was about fifteen years old, and after that she could get nothing that would drive it away. She was always applying something in the way of salves. It troubled her behind the knees, opposite the elbows, back of the neck and ears, under the chin, and then it got on the face. That was about three years ago. She took treatment with a specialist and seemed to get worse all the time. We were then advised to try the Cuticura Remedies, and now I don't see any breaking out. M. Curley, 11-19 Sixteenth St., Bay City, Mich., May 20, 1906."

The Money Devil.

"It's my candid opinion," he said, "that money is infested with seven devils, and I shouldn't wonder if 70 wouldn't be more correct. There is trouble and a world of worry in the very name of it! When I haven't got it, I'm worrying as to where I'll get it, and when I get it I worry about what to do with it; if I put it in the bank I worry because it don't grow fast enough, and if I spend it I worry because I got rid of it so soon; so you see, it's a world full o' trouble anyway you take it! The poor bless and curse it; the rich don't know what to do with it; there isn't a handful of happiness in a ton of it. Here comes a bill collector now, to get what little I haven't got. Stay here and entertain him while I climb to the roof!"—Atlanta Constitution.

NO KISSING IN CHURCH.

Galician Peasants Punished for Untimely Osculation.

Twenty Ruthenian peasants belonging to Ispas, in Galicia, have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment, from a week to a month, for kissing each other in church.

A feud has arisen between two parties in the town, and the priest preached a sermon in which he urged the peasants to make friends before they came to church again. They took him at his word, and on the following Sunday the two hostile parties marched up the church side by side, and kissed the altar. Then they solemnly shook hands and kissed one another on both cheeks in the Polish fashion to seal the reconciliation.

The kissing scene excited loud laughter among the members of the congregation, and the priest prosecuted the peasants for unseemly conduct in church. The court held that a church is no place for kissing and found the peasants guilty.

FIT THE GROCER

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

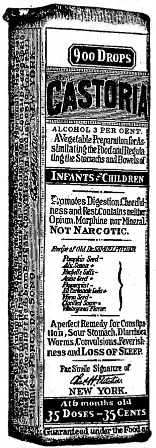
"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then I had no appetite for breakfast and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared and to-day I am all right. I would advise everyone affected in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee."

"There's a Reason," Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS AND CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr. SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food an

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. J. S. Alexander, of Omaha, Neb., says: "A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is, deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Sharp men know that cutting remarks do not pay.

Hides, Furs, Wool, Pelts, Etc.
To get full value, ship to the old reliable N. W. Hide & Fur Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

In relating his experiences a man usually poses as his own hero.

For Prices on Poultry,
either live or dressed, write R. E. Cobb, St. Paul, Minn.

The honor that is among thieves consists largely of fear.

Don't Sneeze Your Head Off.
Krause's Cold Capsules will cure you almost instantly. At all Druggists, 25c.

A paradox is a woman who thinks herself more lovely than the one of whom she is jealous.

To be on good terms with human nature, Be Well! Garfield Tea purifies the blood, eradicates disease, regulates the digestive organs and brings Good Health! Manufactured by Garfield Tea Co., Brooklyn, N. Y. Sold by druggists

Some people, after expressing the wish to do unto others as they would have others do unto them, let it go at that.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
CURES RHEUMATISM
BRIGHT'S DISEASE
BACKACHE
DIABETES

SICK HEADACHE
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Positively cured by these Little Pills.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.
SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature
Brent Good
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

Mica Axle Grease Helps the Wagon up the Hill
The load seems lighter—Wagon and team wear longer—You make more money, and have more time to make money, when wheels are greased with
Mica Axle Grease
—The longest wearing and most satisfactory lubricant in the world.
STANDARD OIL CO.
Incorporated

A Positive CURE FOR CATARRH
Ely's Cream Balm
is quickly absorbed.
Gives Relief at Once. 50c.
Ely Bros., 56 Warren St., N. Y.
ELY'S CREAM BALM FOR COLD IN HEAD CATARRH HAY FEVER HEADACHE TRADE MARK ELY BROS. NEW YORK

DEAFNESS CURED BY NEW DISCOVERY
"I have demonstrated that deafness can be cured."—Dr. Guy Clifford Powell.
The secret of how to use the mysterious and invisible nature forces for the cure of Deafness and Head Noises has at last been discovered by the famous Physician-Scientist, Dr. Guy Clifford Powell. Deafness and Head Noises disappear as if by magic under the use of this new and wonderful discovery. He will send all who suffer from Deafness and Head Noises full information how they can be cured, absolutely free, no matter how long they have been deaf, or what caused their deafness. This marvelous Treatment is so simple, natural and certain that you will wonder why it was not discovered before. Investigators are astonished and cured patients themselves marvel at the quick results. Any deaf person can have full information how to be cured quickly and cured to stay cured at home without investing a cent. Write to-day to Dr. Guy Clifford Powell, 784½ Bank Bldg., Peoria, Ill., and get full information of this new and wonderful discovery absolutely free.

PATENTS THERE'S MONEY IN SMALL INVENTIONS
as well as large. Send for free booklet. MILO B. STEVENS & CO., 900 14th Street, Washington, D. C. Branches at Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. Established 1864.
NO PATENT, NO FEE FOR OUR SERVICES

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Advice free. Terms low. Highest ref.

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicest.

Canadian Government Free Farms
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
Over 200,000 American farmers who have settled in Canada during the past few years testify to the fact that Canada is, beyond question, the greatest farming land in the world.
OVER NINETY MILLION BUSHELS
of wheat from the harvest of 1906 means good money to the farmers of Western Canada when the world has to be fed. Cattle Raising, Dairying and Mixed Farming are also profitable callings. Coal, wood and water in abundance; churches and schools convenient; markets easy of access. Taxes low.
For advice and information address the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or any authorized Canadian Government Agent, CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. Dak.; J. M. Machlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. Dakota; E. T. Holmes, 325 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Don't Build a Good House and then cover it with poor paint. Demand Masury's House Paints because they will preserve the woodwork against the inclemencies of weather and retain their original appearance for a longer period than any of the other paints so generally offered for sale.
Masury's House Paints have proved, after an experience of Sixty-five Years, that they are the best house paints you can buy. They have never failed to give complete satisfaction. They are guaranteed Pure Linseed Oil Paints. This is important. The way to know you are getting the best is to look for the name of
JOHN W. MASURY & SON
NEW YORK and CHICAGO

FREE To convince any woman that Paxtine Antiseptic will improve her health and do all we claim for it. We will send her absolutely free a large trial box of Paxtine with book of instructions and genuine testimonials. Send your name and address on a postal card.
PAXTINE cleanses and heals mucous membrane affections, such as nasal catarrh, pelvic catarrh and inflammation caused by feminine ills; sore eyes, sore throat and mouth, by direct local treatment. Its curative power over these troubles is extraordinary and gives immediate relief. Thousands of women are using and recommending it every day. 50 cents at druggists or by mail. Remember, however, IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT.
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

AFFECTS GOVERNMENT

Rise in Cost of Paper Felt in Post-office Department and Prices Are Increased

The increased cost of paper seems to affect the government as well as the public generally, and commencing July 1 the federal authorities will charge more for stamped envelopes, wrappers, etc. Business men can save the difference by placing their orders before that date for what may be needed in this respect in the transaction of their business.

No notice has yet been given of any advance in the price of stamps to the public.

The collectors are extremely anxious for the Jamestown stamps, and it looks as if the supply would soon be exhausted. The only denominations issued are one, two and five cents. The designer has placed considerable in small space.

Six Will Graduate

Announcements of the commencement exercises are being sent out this week. The exercises will be held at the opera house next Monday evening and the occasion is being looked forward to with a deal of interest by friends of the school. Following is the program:

(a) March......"Floating Along"
.......................Buffington
(b) Flower Song, "Tulips and and Pansies"......C. W. Bennet
Orchestra
Invocation.........................
Vocal Solo............A. Strelezki
"Happy Days"
Miss Pauline Nieland
Salutatory.................Oration
"Lest We Forget"
Alice L. Ericson
Oration ..."Pursuit of Happiness"
Paul T. Brunelle
Saxaphone Solo..........Maritano
"Grand Fantasia"
Mr. Leland Healy
Oration..............."Preparation"
Viola A. Longtin
Class History and Will, "By the Fireside"
Edna C. Swanson
Vocal Duet ....Smith
"O! That We Two are Maying"
Mesdames Marshall and Knox
Class Prophecy..............Poem
Ina M. Linnihan
Oration................Validictory
"The Last Leaf"
Lucy B. Hunt
Cornet Solo ....John Hartmann
"Grand Fantasia, Pretty Jane"
Mr. Clement Brunelle
Presentation of Diplomas......
......Prof. E. W. Chamberlain
Vocal Solo..............Selected
Mrs. Dr. Hendricks
Benediction.......................
Overture,................Solomon
"Reminiscences of the South"
Orchestra

Additional Local...

Manager J. L. Tracy of the band organization received word last week from R. C. Hogue, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, that he had jumped the contract to direct our band. He had written Mr. Tracy that he was coming and started from Des Moines, his home, bound for here, and undoubtedly fell into something on the journey. It will not put the band out much, however, as several other directors have been corresponded with and have expressed a willingness to come. In the meantime L. P. Berthon, of flute fame, will continue the good work.

When the Hair Falls

Then it's time to act! No time to study, to read, to experiment! You want to save your hair, and save it quickly, too! So make up your mind, this very minute that if your hair ever comes out you will use Ayer's Hair Vigor. It makes the scalp healthy. The hair stays in. It cannot do anything else. It's nature's way.

The best kind of a testimonial—"Sold for over sixty years."

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
Also manufacturers of
Ayer's SARSAPARILLA. PILLS. CHERRY PECTORAL.

Death of Little Mina Swanson.

Rhoda, Minn.,
May 26th, 1907.

Editor Gazette:

On the morning of May 17th, the angel of death called at our fireside and removed from our flock, the dearest in the fold, our beloved little Mina. Oh how sad. When thus we are called upon to part with our beloved ones, it is indeed hard, too hard indeed to know, and no one can imagine or realize how sore and painful such inflictions are until you have passed thru the ordeal, and been an eye witness to death's parting. Then, and not before, do we know what it is to suffer the loss of a friend or a loved one, the dearest in the fold. Little Mina was indeed one of God's little angels, though her mission on earth it was short, she decked it with childish love and sweetness to the very last moment, and her kind little acts will forever be remembered cherished and loved. Though it was a sad parting, we can scarcely now think of begrudging her of her sweet little heavenly joys. May her kind little spirit, always be with us, to help us and guide us to the heavenly home above, and away from this vale of sorrow and tears.

"Thus do we walk with her and keep unbroken
The bood which nature gives;
Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,
May reach her where she lives."

In bringing her little life chapter to a close, fond memories come again before one, and in the midst I can see her and seem to hear the echoes of her childish little prattles as of old, with little arms around my neck fondly clasped, time and again she did ask, "Papa, shall we go to heaven, too?" God has heard her little prayer, and she has journeyed on, now, may I so live and journey through the rest of my life, that when the summons come, that again, her sweet little prayer may be answered, in the sweetness of the Lord, I come,

W. A. Swanson.

POSTAGE ON PAPERS

The Gazette Will Come 50 Cents Higher to Canadian Subscribers.

The amendment made recently in the Postal Convention between Canada and the United States provides that on and after May 8th, 1907, the rate on newpapers and periodicals shall be 1c for each 4 oz. calculated on the weight of each paper and prepaid by means of stamps affixed. The rates on United States publications entering Canada are to be similarly rated.

Each copy of the Gazette mailed to its Canadian subscribers will cost one cent or 52 cents per year. The postage on a daily newspaper like the Minneapolis Journal would amount to eight or ten dollars a year sent thru the mails to a Canadian subscriber.

THE APACHES.

This Tribe Holds the Record as Bad Indians.

Scarcely a tribe of our American Indians but what have engraved their record of crime and infamy high up on history's wall, yet above them all is the Apaches'.

From 1540 to 1853 New Spain and Mexico carried on a so called warfare with these people. The Apaches were vastly outnumbered by the Mexican soldiery, but what they lacked in numbers was more than made up in courage and craftiness. The Apache ever had a thorough contempt for the Mexican soldier, and in later years, when they were fighting with firearms as well as arrows, they would not waste cartridges on the Mexicans, but would kill them with arrows, spears and stones, saving their cartridges for other and more worthy foes.

When this southwest region became a part of the United States the Apaches were a serious problem with which we had to contend. Our government vacillated between a simpering peace policy and the other extreme, their extermination.

Their zone of wandering being intersected by the international boundary line further complicated matters. They would raid down into Mexico and then rush back with the plunder to our side of the line, out of reach of the pursuing soldiers. Next it would be a raid on the Arizona side and a flight into the wild mountains of Sonora. The Mexican government attempted to assist their miserable army by giving a scalp bounty, and for years they paid out their gold coin for Apache scalps. Scalp hunting became a recognized industry. The horror of this was that to the Mexican official all scalps looked alike, whether from the head of a hostile or a friendly Indian. The price was $100 for a man, $50 for a woman and $25 for a child. It is small wonder that the tribe sank deeper into savagery than ever when we stop to think that the men knew there was a price set on the scalps of their wives and children, and there was a horde of human fiends, white in color, but more savage than the savage himself, who were hunting them as they would a cougar of the mountains.—E. S. Curtis in Scribner's.

A QUEER POKER GAME

IT WAS PLAYED BY TWO STOCKMEN IN A DENVER HOTEL.

The Turn That Came When the Fortunes of Both Men Were Piled on the Table—A Side Bet and a Card That Was Not Shown to the Board.

The old St. James hotel in Denver was one of the landmarks of the city for over a quarter of a century, and many famous sporting men were among its guests. Numerous stories are told of the "stiff" poker games that used to be played there in the late eighties and early nineties of the last century.

A game was played one night between two stockmen, a banker and a mining man. The story goes that the mining man and the banker played until they were "all in," leaving the two stockmen to battle it out. It came up to the "consolation" jack pot, and those who had lingered to see the finish were not disappointed when they expected something spectacular to take place. The stakes were running high, the ante being $500, with no betting limit. One of the stockmen opened for $2,500 and was promptly raised before the draw. Then there followed a series of raises and counter raises until the pot contained $11,600 before cards were drawn.

"Gi' me that one," blandly announced the man who had "seen" the last raise. The dealer slipped one card across the table, laid the deck down, relighted his neglected cigar and said unconcernedly, "I'll play these."

Then the betting commenced in earnest. The player had opened, and he led off with $2,500 as a "feeler." The dealer raised a like amount, and the other fellow followed suit. It was plain that one or the other of the men was going to lose his fortune. Checks were written, torn up and made out for larger amounts, and finally mortgage papers on real estate and cattle were passed into the pot. Finally one men said to the other:

"Say, Henry, I'm going to stay with you until everything I've got, right down to the clothes on my back, is represented on the table. Now, I'm in doubt as to some of my property holdings, so I'll make you a proposition. Give me until tonight (it was then 4 a. m.) to find out just where I stand and we'll play the hand out. Meantime let us seal up my hand in one envelope, yours in another and the deadwood in still another. We'll leave the three envelopes in the office safe, to be delivered to both of us together."

The other player agreed, and envelopes and sealing wax were sent for. The hands and remaining cards in the deck were duly sealed and deposited as per arrangement.

Meantime friends of the two players endeavored to get the men together on some sort of compromise proposition, knowing full well that neither could afford to bank his entire fortune on a poker hand, leaving his family destitute, but both men were obdurate and would listen to no proposition to split the pot. An interested and expectant group gathered in the lobby about 8 o'clock in the evening, among them being the man who had opened the pot. They talked together in a friendly manner, speculating upon what would happen when the man who went to look up his assets returned. While they were talking he walked in.

"Well, Henry, I'm ready to resume our little argument," he announced in a matter of fact tone. Then the crowd repaired to the room where the game had been played. The man announced that he had $33,000 to "play back." Securities and certified checks representing this amount were piled on the table. Then, and not until then, did either of the men show signs of nervousness. The opener had drawn a check for $33,000 and started to tear it out of the book when the other man said in a slow, deliberate voice:

"Looks a little strong for either of us, doesn't it, Henry?"

"Well," rejoined the other man, toying with the check, "what would you consider a fair proposition at this stage of the game?"

"It's not gambling, I know," said the other, "but if you want to split the pot and"—

"She's split," calmly announced the man who had opened for $2,500. The currency, gold, checks, mortgage papers and securities were equally divided. Not a word was spoken. Silently the men who opened took up the envelopes, tore them open and laid the two hands on the table, faces downward.

"Bet you a cigar I had you beat," he bantered.

"You're called," said the other, turning over four cards, jacks and sixes. The opener also turned over four cards. They were jacks and sixes.

"I'll bet you," said the dealer, "a thousand dollars that I've still got you beat."

The other man peeped at a corner of his buried card, toyed a moment with a stack of currency and shoved $1,000 to the center. Then, without waiting for the man he had called to show his hole card, he turned up a four spot. The dealer looked at it, smiled, touched the bell and put his hand in the deck. He never told what the other card was.—Denver Times.

Lights of London.

A farmer who visited London for the first time was walking along Oxford street, filling his pipe, when a matchboy came up to him with the usual "Lights, sir?" The farmer took a box from the boy, extracted a match, lit his pipe and handed the box back to the astonished lad, passing on with the remark, "Lor, what a wunnerful place Lunnon is, to be sure!"

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water coves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open well. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (Pescedo cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

The Italian Baby.

No infant receives a warmer welcome to the world or is more happily born than the Italian baby. No infant is the object of more caresses or is more fondly admired. Indeed, no matter how poor the mother and father may be, no matter how large the family, they have very merry times when another son or daughter comes to them. The neighbors are invited in, a feast is prepared, a gallon or two of cheap wine is procured, and the merriment sometimes lasts several days. The Italian considers there are only three great events in the life of man—namely, his birth, marriage and death. These three events never pass without a gorgeous and elaborate celebration. In this simple way they strive to carry out the tender life lesson: "When you were born you wept while those around you smiled. So live that when you die you alone may smile and those around you weep." And so they laugh and drink wine and sing, for they believe it will have an effect upon the life of the quivering form soon to take its place among them.—London Standard.

Machinery of Memory.

The machinery of memory was thus interestingly described by an authority on the brain: "The act of remembering something," he said, "involves a distinct change in the brain substance. The thing to be remembered is recorded by a little nerve cell. The first time the cell does its work an impression is made upon it. But that impression is apt to wear off unless the action of the cell is repeated, and the oftener this is the case the more fixed becomes the impression, or 'cell memory,' as it is called. Suppose that the work of this particular cell is to enable you to recognize a certain smell. If the impression is made but once, the cell may fail to retain it, but if it is repeated several times a lasting impression will be made, and you will recognize the particular odor when you meet with it again."

Southern Wit.

In the early days of the civil war, says Mrs. D. G. Wright in "A Southern Girl In '61," many northern senators were especially violent in their denunciations of the seceding states, occasionally much to the amusement of their listeners.

On one occasion a western senator ended a speech by declaring that were certain threatened events to occur he would "leave this country and join some other nation. Even the Comanches he would prefer to this government in such a case."

Senator Wigfall of Texas rose in answer and stated in a tone of grave remonstrance that he trusted the senator would consider well before he took such a step, "for the Comanches had already suffered too much from contact with the whites."

Mascot
"A Pure Flour."
Sweet Pure and Wholesome.

It's All The What

That's Fit To Eat..

That's why "MASCOT" flour is so hard to beat.

Don't take our word for it, but try a sample order and be convinced that it is the best flour on the market today. We have been testing flour for years and have never found a brand that come so near our idea of the best. The quality is always uniform and it is equally good for bread, pastry and cake. Try it and see.

RED LAKE FALLS
MILLING CO.

BULLETIN
Great Northern Railway
Let Us
Help Plan Your Trip

We can furnish you complete and correct information through routes and fares, connections at transfer points; in fact everything necessary to know in making a journey to any point in the world by either rail or water, or both.

J. L. TRACY, Agent,
RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.
Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats
Fish and Game in Season.
Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.
Telephone 19. Red Lake Falls

CHAMBERLAIN'S
COLIC CHOLERA AND DIARRHŒA
REMEDY.

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhœa.

It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of cramp colic and cholera morbus.

It is equally successful for summer diarrhœa and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.

When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.

Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now.
Price, 25c. Large Size, 50c.

When in the City
stop at
PAUL'S
HOTEL
Sample Room In Connection
Rates $1 to $1.50 per day. Free 'Bus to all Trains.
☞ House is heated by furnace throughout, and everything kept up in first-class shape.
Give Us A Call.
SIMON PAUL, Proprietor.

DR. N. M. WATSON
Physician and Surgeon
Graduate of McGill University, Montreal.
Office over First State Bank.
RED LAKE FALLS. MINN.

DR. J. C. WILKINSON
Physician and Surgeon
Office in Kaus Block, over A. L. Reichert's Drug Store. Night calls from residence.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

J. E. ARGUE, D. M. D.
DENTIST
Offices in LaBissoniere Block. Office hours, 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m.
At St Hilaire every Wednesday.

Thomas Germo, Co. Att'y. Fred L. Farley
GERMO & FARLEY
Attorneys at-Law
Office over Bank of Red Lake Falls. Telephone No. 47 Collections attended to.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN.

Last Mountain Valley Lands We own thousands of acres of Choice Selected Lands in this district, which is right in the heart of the Great Wheat Plains of Saskatchewan. The richness of the soil in this district is shown in the reports to the Government which give an average of 26¼ bushels of wheat to the acre for 1906. The great development of this part of Western Canada has brought about the competition of 3 railways. Ample timber for fuel and fencing. Send 15c for beautiful, new souvenir book, entitled "The Lake and the Land of the Last Mountain Valley." Also 20th Century Atlas of Canada sent with souvenir book. Write to-day. Maps, descriptive matter, etc., on request.
WM. PEARSON CO. LTD.
Northern Bank Building, Winnipeg, Canada.

Pitcher's Castoria.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE.

Vol. 24. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, JUNE 6, 1907 No 36

TWO BALL GAMES

Red Lake Falls Plays Twice and Loses Same Number in the Past Week.

The local base ball team has played two games of ball during the past week, and on both occasions has received a drubbing, although not very badly beaten.

The first game was with Thief River Falls on the diamond of the up river burg Sunday, and nearly a hundred fans accompanied the team to the north end baliwick to see the game.

The week previous the Thief River team played here and were beaten by a score of 6 to 5. They expressed themselves as being well pleased with their treatment here, and the entire team conceded that a square deal had been given them in all cases.

However, the fans of the up-river town were not satisfied, and using our friend Bagley, of the Press, as a catspaw, insinuated all manners of crookedness on the part of Red Lake Falls and made a solemn vow that when the Red Lakers invaded the north end park there would be a change in tune, etc., and freely predicted that they would win—if not legitimately, why——?

The game was called early in the afternoon, and for the first four innings was as pretty a contest of ball as was ever witnessed anywhere, despite the fact that Red Lake Falls was playing against ten men. Along in the middle of the game the continual nagging and rotten decisions of his "umps" got some of the local players "up in the air" figuratively speaking, and before the fireworks ceased six Thief Riverites crossed home plate. Harry Healy went in the box after that and the boys steadied down to work and kept the tenth man from allowing Thief River any more runs. Red Lake Falls scored three runs during the game, making the final score 6 to 3 in favor of Thief River Falls.

The locals have no kick coming, any more than they were given several (we might say numerous) very rank decisions at the hands of the umpire, but as Thief River Falls was determined to win at all hazards the boys here feel satisfied.

There is talk of the "rubber" of the series being played at St. Hilaire at some date in the near future.

The second game of the week was played on the home grounds yesterday afternoon between the Crookston club and the locals, and while the score was close, 7 to 8 in favor of Crookston, it does not tell half the story. The game was really a "comedy of errors" from start to finish, and the Red Lake Falls team played the leading part in the comedy. There were some very good plays made on both sides, as well as some decidedly rank ones, and the details are really too horrible to repeat here. Several times during the game the locals threw the thing deliberately away by bad mistakes and while the Crookston boys played very fair ball, yet the locals should have won out handily. In the last inning the score was 8 to 4 in Crookston's favor when Red Lake Falls came to bat, and by good hitting and sensational base running three scores were made, and Harry Healy was caught at home after having stolen way around from first. He made a great slide but the crowd was so near that he couldn't see the catcher and he was nabbed by a narrow margin, ending the game with Crookston leading by one run. The contest was entirely free from rag chewing or dissension of any sort, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators, although at times the groans at the rank errors could be heard a mile.

The score by innings was as follows:

Crookston—1 0 2 0 1 0 1 1 2—8.
R. L. F.—0 3 0 0 1 0 0 0 3—7.

Louis Seiff, George Bender and R. H. Bourdon left last evening for Billings, Montana, and expect to put in the summer there.

JULIUS

PLETH

THE LAND MAN

Has closed another deal. I have secured the entire stock of Berthon & Armstrong of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, consisting of which I will close out in the Kaus Building, opposite First State Bank.

$8000 Worth of Clothing, Furnishings, Hats, Caps and Shoes..............

I have decided to give the public generally the best, biggest, and without a doubt the grandest money-saving sale ever inaugurated within a hundred miles. A bargain event that will be remembered, and one not likely to be imitated or attempted by anyone soon again. I have been able to retain Mr. Armstrong's services during the entire duration of the sale, thus giving the public a strong guarantee of courteous treatment and most honorable dealings. This sale will excel all previous sales in point of genuine money-saving possibilities, as Berthon & Armstrong have a reputation of carrying nothing but high grade, dependable merchandise and most of the stock having been bought this spring. I AM KNOWN TO DO AS I SAY

So WAIT! WAIT! WAIT! Till

Saturday, June 8th

Everything for Men, Youth and Boys cut down at and below the cost of manufacturing. Don't spend a dollar for wearing apparel until you see for yourself the truth of this unmatchable sale.

"WONDERFUL"

Will be the only word to truly express the mighty money-saving opportunity of this big sale.

Sale continues until every article is sold......

REGAN TRANSFERRED.

Roadmaster Regan of Great Northern Goes To Moorhead.

E. J. Regan, assistant roadmaster of the northern division of the Great Northern railroad, who has had charge of the work on this line for several years past, has been transferred to Moorhead and left Monday for that place to assume his new duties. J. A. Gibson, who has been assistant at Moorhead takes Mr. Regan's place here.

Mr. Regan has lived here with his family for the past two years, and during this time has made many friends among the people of this city. He is one of the best railroad men in the business, and during the past severe winter kept this part of the Great Northern system open, when nearly every other branch and main line was entirely tied up. He has been with the Great Northern practically all of the time for the past twenty seven years and stands high in the opinion of the officers of that company. His new work is in the nature of a substantial promotion, as he will have charge of the work from Crookston to Breckenridge, an important line. His family will remain here most of the summer. The Courier joins with the people in the wish that Ed may continue to prosper.

Obituary.

Alexis Grandbois, who died Tuesday of last week, was born at St. Anne, Canada, and was eighty-seven years of age at the time of his death He came to the United States when a young man and lived in various places in the east and west, settling down finally in Lake Pleasant township, twenty-eight years ago. Here he lived until a few years back when he went to Gervais, with his son Treffle, finally coming to town three years ago and remaining here until the time of his death. He leaves two sons, Treffle who resides in Gervais, and Prosper, a resident at the old home in Canada; several grandchildren also reside in this neighborhood. The old gentleman had always enjoyed good health and his death was caused by a general breakdown due to old age. The funeral was held from St. Joseph's last Wednesday the remains being laid at rest in the Catholic cemetery, east of town.

NEW LEADER HERE.

H. G. Maxwell, of New York City In Charge of Band.

H. G. Maxwell, an experienced band and orchestra leader and director from New York city, arrived here Saturday morning to assume the leadership of the local band organization, having been engaged last week by Manager Tracy.

Mr. Maxwell comes recommended as a first-class man in all respects, and at Tuesday evening's rehearsel took hold of the work like an old hand at the business. He plays both cornet and clarinet, and while he will not do much playing and will give his time to directing, yet he is able to help out when needed.

Mr. Maxwell is pleased with conditions as he finds them, and sees no reason why the Red Lake Falls concert band can't easily sustain their well-earned reputation as the prize band of the valley.

Pitcher's Castoria.

J. O. GJERBERG DEAD.

Old Resident Passes Away Yesterday Morning.

J. O. Gjerberg, an old and highly respected resident of Red Lake Falls died at his home on the north side yesterday morning after a lingering illness with catarrh of the stomach.

Mr. Gjerberg had been confined to his home for several months past, but prior to that time had attended regularly to his duties as janitor at the court house, although his health had failed rapidly for several years past.

Mr. Gjerberg was born in Norway Sept. 12, 1836, being nearly seventy one years of age. He was married forty-eight years ago to Miss Julia Solberg, and in 1882 they came to America, settling in Polk county, removing later to a farm near this city. They came into town sixteen years ago, and when Red Lake was set off from Polk county Mr. Gjerbeug was appointed janitor at the court house, a position he held with all the faithfulness of an honest servant up until the time his illness compelled him to retire from active work a few months ago.

Deceased leaves a wife and four children to mourn him, one son, John, and one daughter, Mrs. H. Kriel, reside here, a son resides in Washington and his eldest daughter is still in Norway. Besides these Mr. Gjerberg leaves seven brothers and sisters behind. He was the oldest of a family of eight children, and his is the first death to occur among them.

Mr. Gjerberg was of a kind and generous nature, and his life was filled with good deeds towards his fellowmen. No task was too great for him to undertake when it meant an accommodation for a friend, and today in Red Lake Falls there is a general sorrow that the familiar figure and pleasant voice of friend Gjerberg will be forever absent henceforth.

The funeral services will be held from the family home at 10 o'clock Friday morning, conducted by Rev. H. W. Knox, of the Presbyterian church. The remains will be laid at rest in the cemetery east of town.

The Junior Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Junior class of the Red Lake Falls high school occurred at the I. O. O. F. hall last evening, when the class of 1908 feasted and feted their advanced class mates, who had just completed the high school course.

The banquet was an elaborate one the menu being served in several courses. Between courses appropriate toasts were given, Leland Healy officiating as master of the ceremonies. Eight members of the class of '09 assisted as waiters. The local orchestra was present and discoursed sweet music while the banquet was in progress, and altogether the evening was one of great enjoyment to those present.

By the big ad on the first page of today's paper it will be seen that Julius Pleth, the popular Plummer land man, has bought out the clothing store of Berthon and Armstrong of this city and will close the same out in the Kaus building at cost price. Mr. Armstrong will remain with Mr. Pleth until the stock is sold out. Julius is a hustler and the people here know of no one they would rather see succeed Jim and Paul than the same Pleth. He intends to close out the stock at once and the people will get some rare bargains while they last.

KNOX WILL LEAVE

Presbyterian Pastor Has Been Offered Fine Field at Green Bay, Wisconsin.

Rev. Herbert W. Knox who has been pastor of the Presbyterian church for three years past, has been called by the church at Green Bay, Wisconsin, and has signified his willingness to accept, provided the Presbytery sees fit to release him.

The meeting of the Adams Presbytery will be held at Crookston, on the 17th inst, when the matter of Rev. Knox's resignation will be taken up, and as the new field means so much in advancement to Rev. Knox, it is very probable that he will be released.

Green Bay is a city twenty-five thousand people, beautifully located and is at present growing rapidly. The Presbyterians have an elegant church and manse there, and the new field offers a fine opportunity for Mr. Knox.

The people here are loath to see him leave, as he has been eminently successful in his church work at Red Lake Falls, but they feel that inasmuch as he will be greatly benefitted by the change, they can not reasonably expect to keep him here.

Rev. Knox expects to leave for Green Bay about July 1st, providing arrangements can be completed so that he can get away at that time.

CONSOLIDATE SCHOOLS

Graded School Advantages Given Rural Pupils at No Added Expense.

The question of rural school consolidation is being discussed at almost every meeting of school men. The plan is growing in favor wherever it has been tried. It is claimed for the plan that greater educational advantages is given the pupils and that the added expense is very light, if any, after the plan has been put in operation. The The plan has been in operation in Iowa and in other states, and in several cases in southern Minnesota, and is meeting with success. There are several localities in Red Lake county where the consolidated school plan might be operated very successfully. The plan was discussed at the recent state meeting of county superintendents held at St. Cloud. The Journal-Press says:

One of the interesting subjects taken up at the recent convention of the county superintendents was the consolidation of two or more school districts. The idea is to consolidate the school districts so that instead of having a small one-room school, semi-graded or even graded schools can be installed. According to the present system the rural schools have but one room and one teacher must teach seven or eight grades at once. If the districts are brought together there will be more pupils for each school and consequently more money to pay for the expenses. Two or three teachers can be employed and it is believed that more attention will be given to the pupils attending. At the present time there are only two or three instances of consolidated districts in the state. Supt. Howard of Olmstead county reported that there are two or three cases of this kind in his county. He reports that the new system is meeting with great success and the taxpayers would not change back to the old system even if the expense were smaller. He states that when the pupils live very far from the schools omnibusses are used to convey them to the school and home again.

In some sections of the state the plan is meeting with opposition. Many of the farmers object because of the method of conveying the pupils. This is only true, however, in some sections. The school men stated at the convention that they would take the matter up with the people.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dadley & Creglow, Publishers

RED LAKE FALLS. MINN.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES FOR THE BUSY MAN

MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK TOLD IN CONDENSED FORM.

ROUND ABOUT THE WORLD

Complete Review of Happenings of Greatest Interest from All Parts of the Globe—Latest Home and Foreign Items.

Actions against Klaw & Erlanger for damages for injuries and loss of life in the Iroquois fire were dismissed in New York court because the plaintiffs' attorneys delayed in preparing their cases.

Indiana supreme court ruled that the liquor traffic is lawful and constitutional unless prohibited by the state, the decision reversing lower courts. Right of cities to restrict the traffic to certain areas also is upheld.

The New York senate, under spur of Gov. Hughes, passed a bill in the interest of W. R. Hearst, providing for a recount of the New York mayoralty vote in 1905.

Dr. Long has written to the president, citing proof of the truth of his animal stories and demanding a public apology.

Wealthy clubwomen, of Rockford, Ill., aided the escape from a hospital of a mother accused of murdering one of her twin babies, an automobile being provided for a wild dash to the train.

Mrs. Delia E. Dalrymple, of Worcester, Mass., whose husband, a preacher, fled to Chicago, has made public a letter written by a young woman confessing her relations with the minister.

Floyd Pegg, cowboy, arrived at Washington on horseback, covering the distance from Chicago to the capital on a pony.

Thomas D. Jordan, former controller of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was indicted at New York for forgery.

A friend said Howard Gould would reply to wife's charges; chose to fight case before giving wife $4,000,000.

Uprising in China gains in strength and inhabitants flee to Swatow, a fortified coast town, for protection.

The loss of valuable art treasure from a church at Perugia, Italy, is laid to an American.

Discrimination against the blue jacket of the navy has led to complaint to naval secretary, Jamestown exposition management claiming it has no jurisdiction.

Attack on Japs in San Francisco may be settled by cabinet's explanation that the strike was responsible.

Chief Dinan, of San Francisco, is charged by Prosecutor Heney with approaching graft witnesses and possible jurors.

Employes of the Chicago South Side traction lines decide to withdraw their wage demands and vote to accept two cents increase voluntarily offered by the company. Action means general peace among traction interests.

President Roosevelt left Washington Tuesday to attend Mrs. McKinley's funeral and to speak at Indianapolis and Lansing.

Mayor McClellan, of New York, disapproved the utilities bill on the ground that it confers too great powers on commissioners. The measure will be repassed by the legislature without his signature.

No summer weather is in sight, declares the weather bureau at Washington; frost conditions are general and snow falls as far south as Texas.

Herman LeRoy, a prisoner at Fort Sheridan, escaped his guard and later was shot and killed by two negro troopers.

The supreme court of the United States handed down several important decisions before adjourning until October 14.

In the senate inquiry into the Brownsville, Tex., riot one army officer flatly contradicted the testimony of another.

According to a ruling of the supreme court West Virginia must pay a proportion of the Virginia debt incurred before the separation of the state.

One hundred thousand railway employes may lose positions through general retrenchment order caused by lack of business.

Wonderful operation of putting capsule in eye restored sight to Miss Carrie Leidlein, of Saginaw, Mich., blind for 33 years.

Serious revolt aiming at overthrow of dynasty has started in Canton and neighboring provinces in China; foreigners have narrow escapes.

The admiralty court at Hamburg has decided that the wreck of the Hamburg-American line steamer Prinzessin Victoria Luico near Kingston, Jamaica, December 16, was due to Capt. Brunswig's mistake. The captain committed suicide at the time of the wreck.

Fearing loss to South Chicago of the Illinois Steel mills, Senator Clark will urge a measure which if adopted will make an inducement to the corporation to retain its plant as at present.

A conservative tariff revision was advocated by manufacturers of St. Louis, Mo., and Indianapolis, Ind.

A heavy snowstorm from Sault Ste. Marie to Ootario tied up shipping and damages Michigan farmers. Severe weather is reported in many other sections.

Plan of Hindu rebels against Great Britain was to call on Japs for aid, according to information from Lahore.

The king and queen of Norway were enthusiastically greeted by French officials and people in Paris.

The funeral of Theodore Tilton was held in Paris with simple ceremonies.

President Cabrera, of Guatemala, to avert war with Mexico may spare lives of men accused of plotting against him.

Widespread rain has aided Russian wheat and is boon to famine district.

The orthodoxy of half a century ago is about gone and the change is for the better, Dr. Borden P. Bowne, of the Methodist Theological seminary, says in an address to Cincinnati ministers.

President Roosevelt and a party were caught in a storm while horseback riding to Mount Vernon and returned to Washington drenched and mud bespattered.

Charges are made in New York that post office employes, on the order of an inspector, tampered with the mail of Mrs. Howard Gould.

Police of a score of cities are searching for a Chicagoan and two others believed to have been involved in the murder of the New York priest whose body was found in a trunk. Arrest of a man in Chicago failed to throw light on the mystery.

Attorneys for plaintiffs in actions for personal damages and loss of life in the Iroquois theater fire ask the United States circuit court in New York to postpone the trials until the October term of court. Defendants will ask that the cases be dismissed if plaintiffs are not ready at calling in June.

Gov. Deneen signed the two-cent passenger fare bill, with the statement that he believes it will cause much litigation. He also signed the bills legalizing railway mergers in 1882 and removing the present bond limitation of the sanitary district.

Defense in Haywood murder case claimed Sheriff Hodgins is endeavoring to pack the jury.

Homer E. Grafton, acquitted by court martial of murder charge in the Philippines and convicted for same affair by civil court, was freed by high tribunal.

The treasury is alarmed by Wall street's latest made to order "panic" for speculative purposes; west now financial center and is loaning money in New York.

British premier will announce the government's programme for the Irish bill, and is then expected to drop it. Ireland will revive the bitter struggle against the government.

Principal corporations of the United States, numbering 320, will disburse in interest and dividends in the month of June the sum of $70,000,000, according to a report from New York.

Mrs. William McKinley died at Canton after many years of invalidism and sorrow, death being hastened by a recent stroke of paralysis.

Archbishop Ireland, in Memorial day speech, decried ignoble peace and glorified a just war.

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clements advocated prison term for railroad jugglers.

May Irwin was wedded to Kurt Eisfeldt, her manager, at the star's summer home in the Thousand Islands.

After five years of waiting the government is said to be ready to take action against coal trust.

Overthrow of the Chinese government is said to have been aim of J. Edward Boeck, wanted in New York.

A man claiming to be a mining engineer from Mexico was arrested at New York on charge of larceny of $3,000.

Harry D. Sellers, aged 20, member of an old and wealthy Pittsburg family, was found dead in his bedroom in his residence, 1422 Wightman street, Squirrel hill. The family claims the death of young Sellers was an accident, but it is believed he committed suicide, and the coroner is making an investigation.

John Redmond said the death of the Irish council bill cleared the way for home rule campaign.

Japanese in Tokio are reported not to be worked up over the latest outrage in San Francisco.

District Attorney Jerome declared New York is morally a model for other cities.

The body of a murdered New York priest was found in a trunk in a rooming house as security for a rent bill. Police are searching for two men who occupied the room. Chicagoan is said to be trunk owner.

The ringing of the farm dinner gong by a pet collie saved the family of William Beattie, a farmer near Oxford, Pa., from being burned to death. The fire began in one of the back rooms and the dog grasped the bell cord. Neighbors, hearing the noise, ran to the rescue.

Giacomo Puccini has definitely decided to compose the music of an opera based on the life of Marie Antoinette, the libretto of which will be prepared by Illike Schumenn.

Bands of armed rebels tried to capture Ambato and Latacunga, in Ecuador, but were surprised and disarmed by a detachment of troops from Latacunga. Revolutionary movements are reported in almost all parts of the country.

Philip Schwartz, known as the "Duke of Shantytown," who is under indictment at Cincinnati for murder in the first degree for shooting Policeman Satters, paid $650 to the widow. Mrs. Satters had sued for $10,000, claiming that was the value of her husband's service to his family. The $650 was a compromise.

Ernest Doll, five years old, shot and killed his mother, Mrs. Frank Doll, at their home in Airville, Pa. A shotgun was left standing in the room and the boy, who had seen his father load the weapon, did the same during his mother's absence. As his mother returned the boy turned the weapon upon her and pulled the trigger, killing her instantly.

The Belgian, Van Houvaert, won the Bordeaux-Paris bicycle race, his time being 19:39:27.

H. C. Frick denied as absurd the story that he is to erect a $5,000,000 art academy in Pittsburg in rivalry to Carnegie's gift.

Several hundred strikers at Buenos Ayres attacked a refrigerating and meat-packing factory in which they had been employed. They were repulsed by soldiers and police after a fight in which four persons were killed and many wounded.

Charles F. Grotefend, former paying teller of the Washington National bank, St. Louis, who fled to Sweden last year, short $3,000 in his accounts, was brought back to St. Louis.

Sixty thousand persons celebrated the centenary of primitive Methodism with services on the lonely Mow Cop mountain at Hanley, England. The meeting lasted from early morning till late at night.

"Citizen of St. Paul" filed complaint with the commerce commission accusing the Pullman company of discriminating against occupants of upper berths.

Abe Hummel admits that he often warned Mrs. Gould that she was being followed by detectives, but did not know they were connected with police.

Liang-Hsun, Chinese charge d'affaires and consul general to Mexico, has received word from Sir Chen Tung Liang Cheng, Chinese minister to the United States and Mexico, of the recall of the latter to Peking.

The San Francisco grand jury returned 89 indictments against Mayor Schmitz, Abe Ruef and officials of the street railway and other companies.

Pupils of St. Louis high school have been ordered to keep their trousers down and stop wearing loud socks.

Attorneys closed argument in the preliminary fight to compel an accounting by trustees of Mrs. Eddy.

A plot to kill the German emperor was foiled by the Berlin police. Thirty-five Russian anarchist students were arrested.

An American named Lourie Reynold was killed in the forest of St. Germain, France, by being thrown from his horse.

Eight persons were killed and 40 wounded in an Austrian election riot.

Police Captain McLaughlin, of New York, accused of aiding the Gould divorce case, resigned from the force.

Senator Pettus says the senate is acting without power in investigating the Brownsville affair.

A great demonstration of the Ulster unionists unanimously condemned Mr. Birrell's Irish bill, which was characterized as "settling nothing and unsettling everything."

John Burroughs defends President Roosevelt from the criticisms of Rev. William J. Long, whom he terms an upstart writer.

The action of President Cabrera of Guatemala in sentencing 19 alleged conspirators to death again arouses Mexico.

The Mohonk conference on arbitration decided not to recommend international disarmament to The Hague conference.

Famine kills 14,000 in eastern Russia, and 250,000 in one province are being fed at soup houses.

London socialists welcomed their brethren from Russia. Englishmen are urged not to loan money in Russia.

Chicago labor leaders plan a great demonstration July 4 to publicly spurn socialism and anarchy.

W. F. Walker, absconding treasurer of a New Britain, Conn., savings bank, was, it has been learned, a passenger on the steamship Doris on her last voyage to the Orient. He is reported to have landed at a Chinese port and disappeared

Rev. Joseph Easter, a Dunkard preacher, was called out of his house in Carroll county, Virginia, and shot dead. He would have been an important witness in pending cases of illegal liquor selling.

Bank Commissioner Smock was notified of the failure of the State bank of Manitou, Okla., capital $10,000.

During the term of the supreme court of the United States which began last October and closed May 27, 438 cases were disposed of.

Father James Hayes, of Liverpool, died at Rome. He was appointed last September assistant general of the congregation of the Society of Jesus for the Anglo-Saxons.

Joseph Barteck, aged 80 years, committed suicide at Eastport, N. Y., hanging himself to a rafter in a shed near his house. Before he ended his life he wrote this note: "The Lord would not kill me, so I killed myself."

Miss Achha Clark, a native of Baltimore, reputed to be worth several million dollars, died at Bellingham, Wash., aged 90 years. She owned property in every Pacific coast city. Miss Clark was the first woman to cross the plains to California in '49.

King Carlos has conferred the title of baron on A. Patterson, manager in Portugal of the business of the Standard Oil company, in recognition of his personal effort to develop commercial relations between Portugal and the United States.

Ex-Judge Hargis was acquitted of the Cockrill murder in famous feud case at Lexington, Ky.

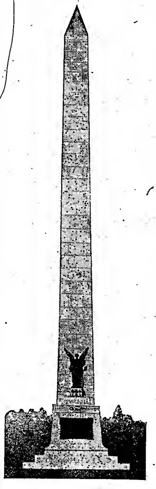
Railroad Gazette in New York declares that the United States Steel corporation, actuated by greed for profits, deliberately turns out imperfect rails, which break and cost many human lives.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered in the Gopher State

The Vicksburg Shaft.

Vicksburg, Miss.—Fully 2,000 people clustered around the Minnesota circle in the Vicksburg National Military park to witness the sixth dedication of a state memorial, the event being the unveiling of the imposing granite obelisk that stands 90 feet upon its base, placed here in commemoration of the Minnesota soldiers who fought here during the war.



Governor Johnson and General Hubbard of Minnesota and Governor Vardaman of Mississippi delivered addresses. The monument was unveiled by Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Vardaman.

Never Touched Him.

St. Paul.—Elmer Hodgins, fourteen years old, residing at Gladstone, miraculously escaped death beneath the wheels of a freight train at the Osgood Blodgett plant, East Seventh street. He is employed at the plant and was sitting on a platform near the tracks when he lost his balance and fell between the rails of a spur track just as a string of box cars was being backed past the platform.

Young Hodgins fell directly in front of the cars, three of which passed over him before the train could be brought to a stop. The train was uncoupled and the rescuers expecting to find a mangled corpse picked up Hodgins very much alive and only slightly scatched. He had fallen directly in the center of the track and the cars had passed over him without touching his body.

Boy Lost.

Solway.—John, the three-year-old son of William Shepherd, disappeared from his home near this place and not a trace of him has been found. It is feared he has either perished from hunger and exposure or has been devoured by wild beasts. Hundreds of men and boys with dogs have scoured the country for miles around. The county officials have offered $100 reward for the return of the boy dead or alive.

Body Stops Engine

Hibbing.—The lifeless body of Joseph Pavovich, engineer at the Stevenson mine at Stevenson, was found wrapped about the shafting of his engine, which was stopped. It is presumed that his clothing caught in the gearing and his body drawn after it. The stopping of the engine caused an investigation to be made, which resulted in the finding of the body.

Girl Goes to Prison.

Minneapolis.—Estelle Swift, a pretty 20-year-old girl, was sentenced by Judge H. D. Dickinson to one year in state prison. She had pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree. The girl admitted that she had already served two sentences for grand larceny.

Town Wiped Out.

Mankato.—The recent burning of W. L. Hoover's store, house and barn wipes out the last building at old Nashville Center, southeast of here. A dozen years ago the place was a village of considerable importance. In recent years fires have been frequent and of peculiar destructiveness. This was the fifth fire that had occurred in the Hoover store. Two village halls have been burned, and every other business place has been wiped out, one after another. Mr. Hoover will not rebuild.

Drainage Fund Apportioned.

St. Paul.—Appropriations for state drainage work during the current year have been made by the state drainage board. The new law authorizes spending state money in two ways—on state ditches built on the assessment plan, and in state aid for county ditches. The following appropriations were made for state ditches:

Completion of Roseau river channel, $31,003.02; Kittson county, $10,000; Marshall county, Stranquist ditch, $2,500; Beltrami county, $2.143; Koochiching county, for ditches near International Falls and Northome, subject to investigation by the state engineer, $15,750; Itasca county, $6,000; St. Louis county, $10,000; Aitkin county, $500.

Engineer Ralph estimates that for every dollar the state spends on these ditches $2 will be paid in assessments by private land owners, so that the work will command three times as much money as the state appropriates.

The members of the commission will inspect the work on the Roseau river June 26 and 27.

Appropriations in aid of county drainage work were made as follows;

Aitkin county, for Mississippi river cutoff, $8,000 a year for two years.

Wilkin county, two ditches, $6,000.

Todd county, Long Prairie river ditch, $3,000; Wing river ditch, $3,000.

Wabasha county, Zumbro river cutoff, $3,000.

Norman county, $3,000.

Polk county, $3,000.

Traverse county, Misstinka river cutoff, $5,000.

Steele county, $5,000.

Nicollet county, Rush river ditch, $7,500.

Wadena county, Leaf river ditch, $2,000.

Engineer Ralph was instructed to investigate as to the proposed drainage of Heron Lake, in Jackson county, and two proposed ditches in Stevens county.

NEWS NOTES.

Ashville, N. C.—The National Library association in session here, decided to hold its next session in Minneapolis, Minn.

Minneapolis.—Joseph Cohen, a 12-year-old boy, fell from a log in the Mississippi river at the mouth of Minnehaha creek and was downed.

Melrose.—Thomas Rurke, a Great Northern engineer, while operating a steam shovel got his foot caught in the machinery. The foot was seriously crushed, resulting in the loss of three toes.

Moorhead.—The one-and-a-half-year-old child of Ole Ferder, foreman on the Benedict farm near here fell into the Buffalo river and was drowned. The body was recovered about half an hour after the child was missed.

Sauk Centre.—Bert Rice, twenty-two years old, was found dead in his brother's barn. He had been dead several hours. Circumstances indicate suicide, but no cause has been suggested. Rice was in perfect health.

St. Paul.—Errors and omissions in the gross earnings reports of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad for 1897 to 1905, the tax upon which amounted to $2,935, were reported to the state treasurer by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer.

Winona.—In United States court the jury returned a verdict of $7,750 in the suit of John Moore against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway for broken limbs caused by the breaking of a derrick on a car on which he was working.

Winona.—Pine creek farmers awoke one morning last week to find nearly all the dogs in the neighborhood killed and a horse valued at $175 so badly bitten that shooting was necessary. The cause was a large dog said to be afflicted with rabies, which had visited the vicinity in the night and which left before it could be overtaken.

Faribault.—Edwin Sherwin, a hardware merchant of Nerstrand, in the eastern part of Rice county, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. It is supposed that he committed the deed while in a fit of despondency over business trouble. He was in partnership with a brother who was in the store when the shot was fired, but in another part of the building.

Duluth.—Extensions of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road from Virginia to Duluth, seventy miles, is expected to be ready for business in 1907. The line will give a direct route from Winnipeg to Duluth by way of International Falls. The length of the road will be 170 miles. It has traffic relations with the Canadian Northern. Extensive terminals will be made at Duluth.

Owatonne.—At the annual boys' contest in declamation at Pillsbury academy, first place was won by Neal Kellogg of Milwaukee, and second by Harold Green of Dodge Center. In the young ladies contest, first place was won by Miss Helen Berrier of Flesher, and second by Miss Eve Hart of Browerville.

Winona.—Andrew Gazell was run down by a train, while picking up coal droppings near the depot of the St. Paul railroad. One foot was badly crushed and cut. He was taken to the hospital. Amputation of the foot at the ankle may be necessary.

Nothing I Ate Agreed With Me.

MRS. LENORA BODENHAMER.

Mrs. Lenora Bodenhamer, R. F. D. 1. Box 99, Kernersville, N. C., writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion for some time, and nothing that I ate agreed with me. I was very nervous and experienced a continual feeling of uneasiness and fear. I took medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good.

"I found in one of your Peruna books a description of my symptoms. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. He said I had catarrh of the stomach. I took Peruna and Manalin and followed his directions and can now say that I feel as well as I ever did.

"I hope that all who are afflicted with the same symptoms will take Peruna, as it has certainly cured me."

The above is only one of hundreds who have written similar letters to Dr. Hartman. Just one such case as this entitles Peruna to the candid consideration of every one similarly afflicted. If this be true of the testimony of one person what ought to be the testimony of hundreds, yes thousands, of honest, sincere people. We have in our files a great many other testimonials.

"Whiskers."

"Whiskers" was a word formerly used to designate the hair on the upper lip. Scott more than once speaks of "whiskers on the upper lip" and so does Defoe in "Robinson Crusoe." Johnson defined a "whisker" as the hair growing on the upper lip or cheek unshaven; a mustachio." It seems to have taken its name from a fancied resemblance to a small brush, to "whisk" properly meaning to sweep, and a "whisker" having been a particular kind of feather brush—also, in the slang at a former time, a switch or rod. In the seventeenth century a "whisker" signified among other things a brazen lie, a "whopper."

A Benefactor.

"Why don't you do something for literature and art?" "I have done something for them," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "My corporations have helped magazine writers and illustrators more than anything else that ever happened."

Supplied.

"Don't you want to get a talking machine for your home?" "Thanks; I have a wife at home now."—N. Y. Herald.

PALE, WEAK PEOPLE

MADE STRONG AND ENERGETIC BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

General Breakdown Caused by Deficient Blood Quickly Corrected by This Tonic Remedy.

A feeling of general weakness, poor appetite, loss of breath after the slightest exercise and broken sleep are some of the symptoms of general debility. You may think that they have no relation to each other and that you will worry along, hoping all the time to feel better soon. This is a mistake, for every one of the symptoms is caused by bad blood, which must be made pure and new before health will be restored again. A tonic treatment is necessary and for this purpose there is no better remedy than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. J. G. Havey, of 95 Willow St., Chelsea, Mass., says: "I was sick for a number of years from general debility and indigestion. I was never free from stomach trouble and my nerves were so shattered that the least excitement unfitted me for any serious work. My sleep was restless on account of terrible pains in the small of my back. These pains would sometimes last for a month or two. My sight grew weak, there seeming to be a blur constantly before my eyes. I couldn't concentrate my mind on my work, and the attempt to do so completely exhausted me.

"I was finally forced to give up a position I had held for twenty-eight years. After trying several medicines without help, I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and gave them a trial. They made me feel so much better and so much stronger that I started in business for myself here in Chelsea. I have never had a return of my former sickness and cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as an excellent nerve and blood tonic."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have long been recognized as an excellent tonic remedy in cases of indigestion and general debility, where the stomach and other organs of the body are weakened and disordered simply through lack of proper nourishment. They have also been especially successful in curing anaemia, rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers.

A pamphlet on "Diseases of the Blood" and a copy of our diet book will be sent free on request to anyone interested.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

ON THE GREEN DIAMOND

Edward A. Walsh

Star "Spit-Ball" Pitcher of the Chicago American League Team.

"Big Frank" Bowerman a Veteran on the Diamond

Much of Credit for Development of Christy Mathewson Due to Giants' Catcher.

A shining example of the benefits of outdoor life is Frank Bowerman, baseball player in the good old summer time and muskrat hunter in the winter time. At present Mr. Bowerman is covering himself with a mantle of glory and a batting average of fine texture. He may be seen first-basing or catching wherever the New York Giants play.

"Big Frank" is not so old as men go, but in point of baseball service he is a veteran. Stars rise and fall, "phenoms" come and go, but the Michigan farmer bobs up every season. He is getting to be almost as much of a fixture as George Van Haltren was. A lot of young "fans" used to think that Van Haltren invented baseball. Bowerman has done a long stretch in New York. He went there from Pittsburg some seven or eight years ago.

The value of playing the game with all one's might is a good way to become popular in baseball. Nobody ever accused Bowerman of not working hard enough or of shirking any of his duties. His hands are gnarled and twisted with wounds he received while officiating behind the bat, but he never remained out of the game a minute longer than was necessary. He does everything as well as he knows how. He hits the ball with all his might, and he throws just as hard. Catching a ball is no child's play when he heaves it.

Bowerman has been the close friend and associate of Christy Mathewson for years. Up till two years ago he caught all of Mathewson's games. To him is due much of the credit for developing this wonderful pitcher. It may not be generally known that Bowerman is one of the best baseball scholars in the big leagues. You can not talk to him on the subject of baseball very long without discovering that he has studied the game a great deal. He knows what to do with the ball when he gets it and seldom makes an error in judgment.

His good nature and that well known grin help to make Bowerman popular with baseball patrons. They know he always tries hard.

In the old days Bowerman had the reputation of being a "bad actor" on the ball field, but there is no player who gets into less trouble than he. He makes his kicks, but knows how to keep his head, and the umpires seldom bother him.

Off the field Bowerman is a quiet person who can converse intelligently on any subject. He is very fond of home life, and when the Giants are in the west he always manages to run up to his farm near Romeo, Mich., to spend a day with his wife and children. City life is not attractive to him. He never tarries in New York a day longer than necessary. His chief pleasure is found in hunting and trapping in the Michigan forests.

The "Fans'" Paradise.

The Baseball Fiend lay on his bed,
  His life was nearly ended,
While to his knees, with bended head,
  The minister descended.

"Now," quoth the Fiend, "ask not for me
  A seat 'mid sainted creatures;
Above, as here, content I'll be
  To sit among the bleachers.

Peculiarity of Minors in the Major Leagues

Former Left-Hand Hitters Nearly Always Hit to Right Field in Fast Company.

"Every spring, while on our training trips, I have noticed many peculiarities of the minor league ball players," says Clark Griffith.

"I have noticed that whenever a player who in the minors was a pronounced left-hand hitter struck the major league, he became unable to hit anywhere but right field, and this continued even after he returned to the small fry. Now, there is a reason for this, and I think that I have figured it out.

"In the minor leagues, where each club has about one good pitcher, while the others are only ordinary, the batsman gets a toe hold and takes a full swing at the ball meeting it before it is upon him, with the result that he pulls it into left field. Now, in the major leagues the youngster finds himself up against first-class twirlers day in and day out, with the result that if be takes his long swing he probably does not touch the ball at all, or hits it into right field, because they have more speed and quicker shoots on the ball. The result is that he shortens his hold on the stock, and in order not to be fooled by any quick break the ball may make, hits later, with the result that if he meets the ball it goes toward right field.

"Major league clubs employ scouts to go through the minor leagues in search of material. It is my judgment that not enough time is taken to look over this material. A fellow watches a player in two or three games and then either brands him ripe for the majors or unfit for anything but the minors. Now, it is my opinion that many a lemon has broken into fast company, and many a good player has been kept in the minors as a result of this hurry to size up players."

AMONG THE MINORS

The Louisville club has released Catcher Lou Dillon.

Schnelberg, the pitcher turned over to Milwaukee by Detroit this spring, is making good.

The Haverhill club has released Third Baseman Patrick Ginley.

The Baltimore club has signed Catcher Tom Dillon, of Newark, N. J.

Third Baseman Jack Frost has been released by the Sioux City club, of the Western league.

President Lucas has appointed John Priest, of Massachusetts, a Northwestern league umpire.

The St. Louis club has traded Pitcher Carl Druhot to Altoona for Pitcher Charles Shields.

The Vicksburg club, of the Cotton States league, has released Pitcher Jones, and signed Outfielder Cary, of Detroit.

The Cincinnati club has released Frank Leary, the "spit ball" pitcher, to the Harrisburg club, of the Tri-State league.

The Springfield club, of the Central league, has sold Pitcher Charles Alberts to the Zanesville club, of the P.-O.-M. league.

Leo Sage, the big pitcher of the Milwaukee club, has been sold to the Oshkosh club, of the Wisconsin league.

THREE PRETTY ENTERTAINMENTS

Recipe Luncheon Recently Given Has the Merit of Originality—Ruby Wedding Anniversary Not Often Celebrated—Good Luck Party as Farewell to Traveler Just Leaving.

At a recent luncheon given by an ingenious hostess who always manages to give an original turn to all her affairs each guest was asked to bring a favorite recipe written out carefully on the sheet of paper enclosed. These papers were collected by the hostess. After the dessert and before rising from the table slips of paper and pencils were passed; the ladies were asked to write down the odds and ends left in their ice boxes after dinner. These slips were collected and passed again so that each one received another's paper. They were then required to write a menu or a recipe from the list of articles on that paper. When all had finished they were read aloud, and the one whose menu received the most votes as being the best was awarded the budget of recipes which had been brought by the guests. Being on uniform sheets the hostess had slipped them into a pretty portfolio marked "Our Favorite Recipes." Each lady inscribed her name therein and in some instances an appropriate quotation.

A Good Luck Party.

This unique evening was arranged for a young woman who was leaving for an extended trip. The invitations were bordered with pen and ink sketch of horseshoes, wishbones and four-leaf clovers. A card ornamented with a row of horseshoes was enclosed in each invitation and the request to write in rhyme a sentiment for the departing friend. Gilt, silver and green emblems of good luck were conspicuous throughout the rooms and tiny gilt horseshoes were tied to baby ribbon making showers. These were suspended from gas jets and over the dining-room table.

One effective bit of decoration was the screen in the dining-room. It was covered completely with pink and white clover blossoms. A flat floral horseshoe was the table centerpiece. The doilies under the side dishes and candlesticks were four-leaf clovers cut from green paper. Horseshoes formed from small flowers surrounded the place plates and even the table was in form of this symbol of good luck. The cookies were cut with a clover form and in the center of each was a gilded chicken wishbone.

Gilded wishbones tied with colored ribbons were matched to find partners for refreshments and afterwards there was a funny contest to see who could make the best doll from a wishbone. Japanese dollheads, crepe paper, bits of ribbon and lace with paste was provided. Then there was a hunt for four-leaf clovers. These had been cut out of bright green glace paper and hidden in all sorts of places. For the man who found the most there was a clover stickpin, and a wishbone of gold for the lady.

The toasts written by the guests were read at the table and then each one was asked to relate the best piece of luck they had ever had. On departing the hostess presented a brand new unused "good luck" penny to each one.

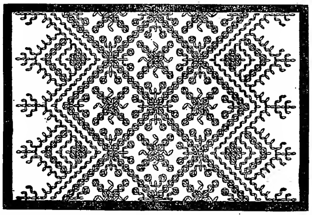
The Ruby Wedding.

In the list of wedding anniversaries there is a skip generally from the "silver" to the "golden." However, I believe that some people must celebrate the fortieth anniversary, which is the ruby wedding, as there have been several requests for a description of this function. As I have never personally attended such an affair I would be very glad to hear of any unique features known to the readers of the department.

Of course there is the lovely red Bohemian glass that would be appropriate for one or two gifts, but no housekeeper wants much of it. Rubies are beyond the pocketbooks of the average guests. Red roses and carnations would be the decoration with red candles. Seems to me that the thirtieth anniversary is celebrated as the "pearl" wedding. If any one has witnessed such an affair, please let us hear about it.

MADAME MERRI.

Border: Italian Stitch



This is a very distinct and pretty pattern that may be worked with ingrain cotton or washing silk. Many articles may be ornamented with such a pattern, for instance, ends of sideboard cloths, towel covers, stripes for bedspreads alternated with strips of lace, etc. Linen, canvas, or some material the threads of which can easily be counted, should be used for the foundation.

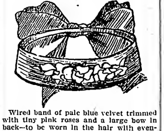
FOR THE COMPLEXION

Pure Water and Plenty of It Is One of the First Necessities for a Clear Skin.

It is not too much to say that unless she will drink enough water and take it as she should no woman can have a good complexion.

It serves to flush and clear the whole system and will carry off impurities at a rate to save a visit to a physician.

This may seem like an exaggeration, but it is not, and the theory is easily understood.



Wired band of pale blue velvet trimmed with tiny pink roses and a large bow in back—to be worn in the hair with evening gowns.

The stomach will not contain a large amount of water and as the liquid is sent from the body it does scavanger work in taking off germs or matter that may cause illness.

Every person should drink at least two quarts of water a day. One may take more if desired, and there is no danger of its being fattening if drank as it should be, not with meals but between them.

If one will have patience to masticate food properly no water will be required with it and the gastric juices will do their work well. Few individuals, however, are content with this and to them the less liquid of any kind you absorb with your food the better, if you are striving to keep down flesh.

It is obvious that the water treatment is to be used at odd times, as it were. Iced water in quantities is not to be approved. If with the meals one wishes cold liquids they should not cause harm if only a sip or two be taken at a time. But when drinking a glassful at once, as the treatment requires, the temperature should never be lower than a chill. This is refreshing and is not unhygienic.

Begin the day by taking a glassful of hot or cold water. It should not all be poured down the throat at once; neither should it be sipped, for the quantity should go into the stomach at once that it may be ejected soon.

Occasionally some person raises the objection that hot water in the morning makes one ill. This is most unlikely to happen if the water is hot; tepid water is decidedly nauseating.

If, however, there is the slightest reluctance to taking hot water. cold may be substituted, and to a glassful in the morning add a pinch of powdered charcoal. This is excellent for the stomach. A similar glassful should be taken on going to bed. The rest of the two quarts may be drunk whenever one wishes.

It is a good thing to take a glassful at a time and none later than half an hour before a meal or earlier than half an hour before eating. Otherwise it is likely to interfere with digestion.

When water is to be drunk daily in this quantity one can not be too particular to have it pure.

For those who can afford them there are bottled spring waters, but the city water may be made wholly hygienic by boiling and then cooling it, placing in glass jars and keeping next to the ice.

Curls matching the hair to be sewed under the hat.

These water bottles should be scalded without fail once a week in strong soda water to keep them fresh.

TOGA FOR STEPHENSON

WISCONSIN SOLONS FINALLY ELECT A SENATOR.

Successor to Spooner Is Well-Supplied with Worldly Goods—Served Three Terms in Congress—Sketch of His Career.

Madison, Wis.—Isaac Stephenson of Marinette, multi-millionaire, and prominent in political and financial circles of Wisconsin for more than half a century, has been elected United States senator to fill the unexpired term of John C. Spooner, which ends in March, 1909, after a prolonged deadlock.

The new senator is nearly 78 years old and most of his life he has spent in Wisconsin. He knows the Badger state from its peak in Lake Superior to its base in lower Lake Michigan. He knows its people, their families in many instances, and their histories.

Mr. Stephenson is no tyro in matters legislative. He served three terms in the lower house of congress, beginning in 1882, and gained during that time a thorough knowledge of what one needs to be and not to be if he would represent his state well and successfully. He lived several years at the Ebbett house in Washington, and used to come in close contact daily with the late William McKinley, who as a representative from Ohio put up for years at the same ancient hostelry.

Senator Stephenson is a many-sided man. He is a banker, a lumberman, a promoter of great industries, a farmer, a yachtsman, a fisherman, a devotee of out-of-doors sports such as horse racing, and a philosophical man of affairs. He believes in churches, though not himself a member of any denomination. He has contributed thousands of dollars to Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist and other religious societies. He has built new church edifices and bought belfray chimes galore.

The bulk of Mr. Stephenson's fortune of $10,000,000 was made in lumber. He was one of the pioneers in the upper lake region to assail the virgin forests with ax and saw and to ship the manufactured product in sailing boats from Marinette, Escanaba, Flat Rock, Menominee and other centers of sawmill industry to the great port of Chicago.

Mr. Stephenson was born June 18, 1829, in York county, near the city of Fredericton, N. B. His father was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and his mother was a native of England.

Of rugged health and able to meet all sorts of hardship, young Stephenson at 18 was a six-footer and over. He could handle a cant-hook, peavey and pike pole with any experienced logging boss on the Menominee or Escanaba rivers, and that was something. When 21 years old Stephenson was bossing logging crews. In summer he sailed the lakes and carried board, lath and shingles to Chicago in schooners and luggers. In the summer of 1853 he had a controlling interest in the Schooner Cleopatra, which was lost that year in a fearful gale a mile or so off of Chicago. In 1848 he accompanied Jefferson Sinclair and Daniel Wells to the first public sale of land in the northern peninsula and assisted in purchasing large tracts for a nominal cost. Later these lands produced millions in money for their owners.

ISAAC STEPHENSON.
(Wisconsin Man Who Will Fill Unexpired Term of Senator Spooner.)

In 1858, when only 29 years of age, he bought a quarter interest in the mill owner by the N. L. Ludington company, a corporation still in existence. This was the basis of his great fortune, for within ten years he had made over half a million dollars, and was in sight of several millions more.

Mr. Stephenson is the largest stockholder in the Stephenson National bank of Marinette. He owns several large farms, among them being one near Marinette, another seven miles north and up river, and a third of 900 acres near Kenosha. Mr. Stephenson with others own the big paper mills bordering the river at Marinette. The Marinette Croesus also has extensive possessions in the far west and in the Canadian country. He owns a steam barge and several smaller boats and also a trim steam yacht, the Boniza.

PEACEFUL AFRICANS.

The Moundans Carry Farming Tools Instead of Warlike Weapons.

New York.—That the native African is not always and invariably a poor, half-naked brute has been proved by the reports and photographs brought back to France by the "Moll Mission," an expedition sent to the French Congo about 18 months ago for the purpose of determining some unsettled boundary questions. South of Lake Chad Commandant Moll discovered a peaceful race of agriculturists and shepherds, intelligent and hospital, ripe for civilization, living in pastoral simplicity. Everything about the Moundans is picturesque and interesting. They are a vigorous and handsome race, and very brave, but, contrary to the almost universal practice of the Africans in regions where white rule has not been established, they never carry arms. On the contrary, the implement oftenest seen in their hands is a hoe.

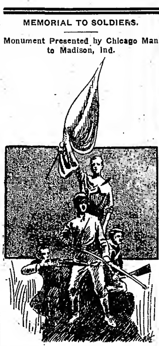
African Village of Lere.

Nevertheless, they appear to have descended from warlike ancestors, and were probably driven southward from their original mountain home by some conquering chief. Reminiscences of this past may be seen in their semi-military architecture, which does not resemble that of any of the neighboring peoples. At a little distance one of their villages looks like a fortified city.

The Moundan village, of which Lere is an excellent type, is inclosed by a series of round towers connected by walls from two or three metres in height. Inside, parallel to the inclosing walls, is a circle of cupolas, each one pierced with a single hole. These are the granaries, the most important buildings of the town. They are erected on piles supported on great stones, which places them beyond the reach of termites and rodents, as well as of dampness, and the only entrance is through the hole in the vaulted roof. Between the outer wall and the granaries are the homes of the people, while the residence of the chief faces the entrance.

MEMORIAL TO SOLDIERS.

Monument Presented by Chicago Man to Madison, Ind.



Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Madison, Ind.—The accompanying illustration is a picture of the soldiers' and sailors' monument given to the city by George Middleton of Chicago. It will cost when completed $10,000. Mr. Middleton was a member of the Third Indiana cavalry and he has taken this method of remembering his dead comrades.

The four figures represent three private soldiers and a sailor, of the four different branches of the service—infantry, artillery, cavalry and navy. The figure of the cavalryman, standing, drawing a saber, is seven feet high. The sailor, holding the flag aloft, is also seven feet high, and the others in the kneeling positions, in the act of firing, are in proportion. The granite base will be 12 feet high, and the bronze cast, from the base to the top of the flag, about the same height, making a total of 25 feet.

The sculptor is Sigvald Asbjornsen. The monument will be ready for dedication about September 1.

Think Cave was Outlaws' Lair.

Workmen blasting rock for ballast on the side of Turkey mountain, about five miles south of Tulsa, on the Midland Valley, discovered what is believed will turn out to be one of the largest caves in the country. On the wall to the right near the entrance was transcribed "J. A. Cox, 1864." Cox was the leader of a notorious band of outlaws in the early days of the territory, and it is thought that this cave was the lair of his gang.—Kansas City Journal.

LET OPPORTUNITY FIND YOU AT HOME

and ready when she knocks at your door. An account at a good bank is always helpful in attracting the attention of opportunity. The amount of your bank balance is material, yet not so much so as the fact that you have a balance, that you give good care to your account, that you handle your financial affairs in a systematic manner and the habits you will form in building the account to such proportions as will enable you to make satisfactory and profitable investments.

We would like to have every man, every woman, every child in this vicinity open an account with us it would mean a better town and a more prosperous community. Come in and talk with us about it.

Merchants State Bank
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier
Red Lake Falls Minnesota

A Business Luxury

We Make Farm Loans

A Checking Account

is indeed a business necessity: and he who tries to get along without one is at great disadvantage. It is not required that a person should have a large bulk of business in order to open an account.

Business men, farmers, women and young men are running checking accounts with us. If you haven't an account with us now come in and get started.

We Accept Any Amount Large or Small

Deposit as often as you like—and check when you please.

We Make Farm Loans

FIRST STATE BANK
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

.. The Falls Meat Market ..
BLAKE & GROSHONG, Props.
Fresh, Salt and Smoked Meats
Fish and Game in Season.
Highest Prics Paid foa Furs and Hides.
TELEPHONE 19. RED LAKE FALLS

Use McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee Every Day Because—

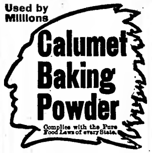
McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is always uniform in quality and properly blended and roasted.

You do not get good coffee one day and poor coffee the next.

The handy air-tight package and the glazing of pure sugar keeps this coffee clean and fresh, protected from dust, dirt and foul odors. Each package is one pound full weight.

McLaughlin's XXXX Coffee is Sold by

THEO LaBISSONIERE GARCEAU & ZAISER
M. SKALA J. W. B. NIMESGREN



Used by Millions
Calumet Baking Powder
Complies with the Pure Food Laws of every State.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

Published weekly, Thursday evening, entered as second-class matter in the post office at Red Lake Falls.

Official Paper of Red Lake County.

Official Paper of Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

WHAT ABOUT THE SIMPSONS?

The Minneapolis Journal has been running an article asking "where should the Simpsons go," and in reply received a bunch of answers from different parts of the country, including many from this neighborhood.

In the Journal several weeks back Mr. J. Q. Simpson stated that he had retired from business in the mill city and had some $12,000 to invest in business somewhere in the Northwest. There are several conditions attached to Mr. Simpon's letter however. He stated that he was a man with a family of growing children, and aside from a place where he could invest his capital where it would briag returns, he desired to locate where he could make a home where his children could be brought up right, and where he might be glad to settle down for good and all.

Replies to Mr. Simpson's letter were sent in from all parts of the Northwest, townsmen uniting in letters setting forth the advantages of their respective localities. One of the best replies was from Ed. L. Healy, of this city and instead of attempting to tell on its own book why the Simpsons should come to Red Lake Falls, THE GAZETTE prints Mr. Healy's letter in full as it was printed in last Sunday's Journal:

Red Lake Falls, Minn., May 18—I note your letter to The Journal, the best paper in the Twin cities, saying that you have $12,000 that you want to invest, and wonder where is the best place.

Now, Mr. Simpson, Minneapolis a great big city, is it not? What has made it so? Its water powers, with its broad-guaged men have made Minneapolis the manufacturing city it is today.

Now we have the water power power and I will inclose you a cut of it. The photo from which this cut is made was taken on the last day of December, 1905, midwinter. So you can see that with this dam, 300 feet long and a 500 barrel flouring mill, and another dam in the city nearly as large with a larger flour mill, is a good starter for the future manufacturing city of Northwestern Minnesota.

Our city is the county seat of Red Lake county, of about 2,500 inhabtants and located in the midst of one of the richest farming couutries in this grand old state. We have about a dozen creameries and cheese factories in the country.

Lands are a very good investment in a countty like ours, and especially so near RedLake Falls. Again I could show you a business consisting of general merchandising, in which a half interest could be bought that would bring a large annual income.

We haye elegant school advntages, as well as churches. Our city is very orderly, not an arrest having been made in 1907, for disorderly conduct. Red Lake Falls is noted for the health of its people.

Your children would grow up robust and happy, and you would be pleased with this beautiful city, nestling as it does among the hills at the junction of the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers.

The scenery is grand and you can pick out a home in our city, on the one side out on the smooth prairie or on the other, in the groves of of oak and poplar on an elevation overlooking the sparkling waters of the Clearwater, ninety feet below or yet in the center of the city on, the banks of the stream at a lower level. Red Lake Falls is worth looking over and we invite you to visit us before selecting your future home.

—Ed. L. Healy.

If there are any who think Mr. Healy has overlooked any good points why the Simpsons should come to Red Lake Falls, THE GAZETTE would be pleased to receive their opinions for publication.

Go to the Merchaats State Baak for Farm loans. Rate 7 percent.

THE AMERICAN FLAG

An Address to the People of the United States by National Patriotic Instructor.

Friday, June 14th, will be the one hundred thirtieth anniversary of the birth of the flag of the United States. The flag was designed for a nation of thirteen colonies, stretched like a belt along the Atlantic coast, made up of less than three millions of people, without common traditions or language, drawn together only by common danger from savages within and oppression without, which threatened their existence and liberties. That flag now waves over a great nation, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Lakes, from the Atlantic to beyond the Pacific sea, and inhabited by nearly ninety millions of people who speak a common language.

Our flag is now—in form—the oldest flag of civilized nations. The resolution by congress for the adoption of the Stars and Stripes on June the 14th, 1777, was as follows: "Resolved, That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The design of this flag is credited to George Washington and in part was taken from his family coat of arms. Such is the origin of a flag dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created free and equal." Let us honor the natal day of our national flag—displaying it from our public buildings, schools and homes in recognition of this memorable day.

The men of the Grand Army of the Republic, who preserved the nation in the greatest war of modern times, and made vital the Declaration of our fathers, call upon all who live under the flag to recognize this day by patriotic observances in schools and—on the Sunday preceding—in churches. To this end we suggest that the governor of every state by proclamation announce the day and promote its recognition; that the press scatter this call as seeds of patriotism broadcast over the land. Such recognition will nourish the greatness of our nation, inculcate noble citizenship, the principles of civil liberty, and be an object lesson to the new generations that have come up on the state since the civil war.

—Warren Lee Goss,
National Patriotic Inst'tor, G. A. R.

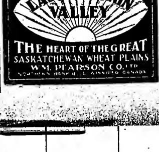
POSTMASTERS RAISED

Red Lake Falls Office Will Pay $1,600 Per Year After the First of July.

Third Assistant Postmaster General Hitchcock has announced changes in salaries of the presidential postmasters in Minnesota based on receipts at their respective postoffices for the four quarters ending March 31st and to become effective July 1st. Most of the increases are for $100, the only $200 raise in the northern part of the state being at Bemidji, where the postmaster will receive $2400 instead of $2200 as heretofore. Red Lake Falls will hereafter pay 1,600 instead of $1,500. Following are the offices in the northern part of the state which will pay an increase of $100 on next year's salary, and the new salary:

Aitkin $1800, Akeley $1600, Hibbing $2500, Alexandria $2100, Lake Park $1300, Bagley $1200, McIntosh $1200, Blackduck $1500, Bovey $1,400, Crookston $2700, East Grand Forks $1800, Eveleth $2200, Red Lake Falls $1600, Fertile $1200, Frazee $1300, Roseau $1200, Grand Rapids $1900, Staples $1800, Stephen $1300, Thief River Falls $2000, Warren $1700, Wadena $1900, Walker $1100.

Large amount of money to loan on farms.—Simons & Co.

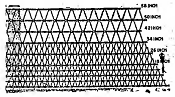


HOG FENCING

Do You Need Any Hog Fencing

If you do we want to show you our Ellwood-Diamond Mesh Fencing—26 inches high with barb bottom. This is the standard hog fence and is made of extra heavy galvanized wire.

Every Rod of Ellwood Fence is Guaranteed.



We have other styles of Hog and Field Fencing, also a complete stock of Poultry Netting in the following widths: 2 ft., 2½ ft., 3 ft., 4 ft., 5 ft., 6 ft. We have Barb Wire, both black and galvanized, in genuine Glidden and Waukegan patterns, which we are selling at very low prices.

Hunt Hardware Co.
General Hardware
Red Lake Falls - - - - Minnesota

When You Travel, Enjoy the Superior

DINING CAR SERVICE

of through Northern Pacific trains. A dainty breakfast, tasty lunch, or delightful dinner prepared by a skilled chef and throughly will served, will round out and vary the pleasure of your trip. The bill-of-fare is varied and attractive—the viands appetizing—the car attractive and easy riding

"Get Your Meal on the Train"

Through dining cars on all transcontinental trains. Cafe Car Service on "Lake Superior Limited" between Minneapolis and St. Paul and Head of the Lakes.

For full information see

F. A. MIZEN, Local Agent
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Northern Pacific Railway

A. M. CLELAND,
General Passenger Agent
St. Paul, Minn.

Old Reliable Harness Shop

Carries constantly on hand a complete stock of everything pertaining to the business such as

HARNESS,
SADDLERY, HORSE CLOTHING,
WHIPS, ETC.

We make a specialty of hand-made work, and use California oak-tanned leather, the best leather made.

L. A. KAUFER
MAIN STREET, - - - - - - OPPOSITE BRICK BLOCK.

Electric Lighted Throughout Free 'Bus Meets all Trains
Sample Room in Connection
LEADING BAR OF THE CITY

Grand View Hotel
Most Up-to-date Hotel in the City

W. H. KRUEGER, Prop.
RED LAKE FALLS, MINN

Summer Dress Materials

Resplendent here now. The prettiest Ginghams and Muslins are here. Lawns and Batistes, White Goods, Printed Wash Goods, Sheer Chiffons, and every other fabric dear to the hearts of women and the joyous spirit of summer---all inexpensive. Laces and Embroideries, too, for the summer season calls for these, and may be had here in great variety. Get a Standard Pattern. Use them together and you will get the best results. If you do, your summer wardrobe will reflect your taste and judgment. The cost will be less than your friends will think.

A Few Specials

Batiste Impreme A beautiful summer dress goods, flowered checked, dotted. Swiss, would make make a very neat street costume, at..... 25c

Zephrs In stripes, plaids, checks, polka dots, ranging in price from.................. 12½c to 15c

Scotch Plaid Ginghams In blue, red green and tan, beautiful cloth for for children's dresses.............................. 12½c

White Goods In stripes, checks, plain, potted Swiss, plaids; we are making very low prices, from.................. 6c to 50c

Call and see our line of Dress Goods aud get a Summer Quarterly Style Book.

Garceau & Zaiser

The Busy Store Red Lake Falls, Minn,

Joseph Paradis was a visitor at East Grand Forks Tuesday, attending to some business matters.

N. J. St. Aubin and family expect to move to Crookston within the next few few weeks. Mr. St. Aubin wil' work in the O'Brien hardware there.

Miss Osina Kaasa, of Northwood, North Dakota, arrived here Saturday and is taking the place of her sister, Miss Gina, as stenographer in the real estate office of V. M. Highinbotham while Gina is visiting with her parents at Northwood.

Fred Richards left last evening for Hamilton, Montana, where he has a good position in view and will remain during the summer. Ned Taylor, a former Red Lake Falls boy is located at Hamilton and is doing well.

The officers of the Presbyterian church met last evening with the pastor and took up the matter of Mr. Knox's resignation. They will endeavor to secure a pastor to take hold of the work here and expect to have regular Sunday services as usual during the summer mouths.

The Misses Alyce Boyd, Mollie Allard, Lillian Buse, Albina Lemieux, Etta Hennemuth, Etta Garceau, Ellen Brady, Mayme Erickson, Gertie Hennemuth will entertain some two hundred guests at the Metropolitan opera house next Wednesday evening, June 18. Dancing will be the feature of the evening and a thoroughly enjoyable time is looked forward to.

Banns were published at St. Mary's church last Sunday for the marriage of Charles J. Kruse and Miss Margaret Weiland. two north side young people, which will occur at St. Mary's next Tuesday, the 11th inst. Mr. Kruse is an old resident here and has many friends among the people. The bride-to-be recently moved here, but is spoken of as a charming young lady, and a fitting companion to the man of her choice.

Tuesday afternoon occured the wedding of Miss Winnifred Herren to Mr. Harry Purdy, both of Thief River Falls at that place. The wedding was one of the social events of Thief River Falls, and a large number of friends of the couple were in attendance. Mr. Purdy is an engineer on the Soo road and Miss Herron is the daughter of prominent people of that place. Father Adolph performed the ceremony. The happy couple left last night on the Soo for Winnipeg where they will visit for some time after which they will go east for an extended honeymoon trip.

Auctioneer Belair, Clerk Toupin, and several others from here were out to the Prudhomme home Tuesday, attending the big auction sale. This sale was one of the biggest ever held in southern Red Lake county, and was attended by a large crowd of people. Between sixteen and seventeen hundred dollars worth of property was sold, and everything put up brought a good price. Mr. Prudhomme will move to Red Lake Falls within a short time to take charge of the City Hotel property which he recently purchased.

A special train bearing a party of "big guns" of the Great Northern road, went through here Sunday night on the north trip and back again early Monday morning. They were on a tour inspection of the Great Northern system and had a fully equipped train. In the party were H. P. McGuigan, second vice-president; J. E. Ward, general manager; J. M. Robinson, and D. E. Legan, division freight agents; T. E. Lowry, division superintendent: M. Laughlin, roadmaster; E. A. Mills, master carpenter, and several other prominent railroad officials.

Warren Register: Roseau is playing in hard luck. It is positively stated by those who are in position to secure inside information that the Great Northern will not this year extend its Greenbush line through Badger and Roseau to Warroad. This news will sorely disappoint the Roseau people, as they had been hoping for years for railroad connection with the rest of the country and it certainly seemed that their hopes were to be realized this year. No reason is given for the Great Northern's apparently sudden determination to do no building beyond Greenbush in 1907. The people might use the new railroad grade up there for wagon road if it is smooth enough.

THE LOCAL FIELD

ITEMS OF INTEREST DURING THE WEEK

$50,000.00 to loan on farms at lowest rate of interest. Call at the First State Bank, Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Frank Laplante spent Sunday at Crookston.

Lew Padden visited at Thief River Falls Tuesday.

Albert Lizee was a Crookston vistor over Tuesday night.

Register of Deeds Quist spent Sunday at Thief River Falls.

S. M. Sivertson was a Crookston visitor last Thursday evening.

Julius Pleth and Joe Morisette were in from Plummer Tuesday.

Mrs. J. E. Argue returned home Monday from a ten days' visit with friends at Duluth.

Miss Alice Hanson, of Fertile, was a guest of here sister, Elene, Monday and Tuesday.

Hon. Marcus Johnson spent several days here this week, looking after his interests.

Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Floan and children spent Sunday with Thief River Falls friends.

Dr. J. E. Argue went to St. Hilaire yesterday on his regular weekly professional visit.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kankel spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Kankel at Terrebonne.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Germo and Miss Willson spent Monday with friends at Thief River Falls.

Mrs. H. N. Johnson was a guest of friends at Duluth several days of last week returning Monday.

Miss Lulu Fletcher is expected home from Ely this week to spend the summer with her parents here.

James Egan left Tuesday evening to spend a few days at North Dakota points looking after his real estate interests.

Miss Lou Green returned to her home in Equality Tuesday, after having spent the past school year in the city.

Miss Thea Eickhoff, of Grand Forks is a guest at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Arthur Zaiser, here this week.

A. C. Rasmussen, of Thief River Falls, was a guest at the homa of his cousin, Sheriff Nelson, Monday and Tuesday.

Miss Mayma Erickson will arrive home the latter part of this weak from Fergus Falls, to remain here for the summer.

WANTED

Information regarding good farm that is for sale and which can be bought of owner. No agents need answer. Wish to hear from owner only willing to close his own deal and save buyer paying big commission and fancy price to some agent. Would also like to hear of good small business for sale by owner.

Address INFORMATION DEPARTMENT Locator Publishing Co. Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Skaurud went down to Ada last Thursday evening and spent several days with relatives and friends there.

The Damon company failed to put in an appearance this week and did not show at the Metropolitan, Tuesday night as they were advertised.

E. A. Moran went down to the cities Saturday with a car of fat cattle returning home Tuesday. Ed has been doing a lot of business in the cattle line this spring.

J. R. Patnode, Joe Schusser and several others from here, who were employed on the Red Lake river drive, have returned home, having got the logs safe at their destination.

Mrs. Dr. Hendrickson, of Fertile, who rendered several vocal selections at the commencement exercises Monday evening, was a guest of Miss Elene Hanson, while in the city.

Theo. Schmitz, of the Red Lake Falls brickyard, shipped out several cars of brick during the past few weeks. Tuesday he shipped one to Bemidji and has orders for considerablo more for that point.

C. A. Greenleaf, travelling auditor for the Robertson Lumber company, was here last week and checked up the accounts of local agent Crompe. As usual he found everything in ship shape at the local yard.

The teachers in the city schools have al returned to their homes, this week to spend the summer vacations. Miss Hanson went to Fertile; Miss Lamb, to Moorhead; Miss Coughlin to St. Cloud: Miss Trudo, to Sauk Rapids.

Mrs. William Findeisen went to Winona last Thursday and will this week attend the commencement exercises of the Winona Normal school. Her daughter, Miss Maude, graduates this year, and will return home with Mrs. Findeisen next week.

Miss Martha Altstadt returned home Monday from Loman, Itasca county, where she has been teaching school for the past nine months. Miss Martha gave very good satisfaction in her school work over there, and expects to return to that neighborhood again this fall.

Miss Lorraine Longtin came over from Oberon, North Dakota, Monday to attend the commencement exercises at the opera house that evening. Miss Lorraine is teaching out there and her duties compelled her to return to that place Tuesday night.

Hubert Cardinal, one of Lake Pleasents foremost farmers, is hauling out material this week for the erection of a fine new residence on his farm. He will make other extensive improvements on the place this spring and will have one of the finest homes in the country when he gets through.

Mrs. L. A. Nelson went up to Thief River Falls Saturday and remained with relatives until Monday. She was accompanied home by Mrs. J. J. Rollis and daughter Mabel, who are spending the week here.

Carl Krueger came over from Antlers, North Dakota, Monday, and and will remain here until after the firemen's tournament two weeks hence. Carl is well pleased with his Dakota home, but likes to get back here occasianally.

Fruend's orchestra went out to Plummer Saturday evening and played for a big dance there that night. Fruend's bunch of music makers are always in demand, and whenever a good orchestra is wanted these boys are called upon.

Henry W. Anderson went down down to St. Paul Saturday evening to spend a week with his parents and friends there, and incidently to buy a quantity of new goods for his store here. Miss Lillian Buse is in charge of his place while Andy is away.

